DOROTHY DIX

Girl Loves Married Man She Stopped Him Drinking

DEAR MISS DIX: My problem begins like so many others—"I fell in love with a married man in my office"—but I think there is truly a different angle to my case. The man was married only two months when I met him, yet was so unhappy that he spent most of his evenings drinking. His wife refused to leave her old neighborhood to move into a beautiful home he had built for her, and when he insisted on the move, she refused to do anything to fix up the house inside. About a year later his wife became a mother, yet, due to home conditions, he was drinking quite heavily. I pulled him out of this, and for six months he hasn't had a drink. There has been no affair between us. I know I love him, but I don't know now he feels toward me. If I go away, he'll take to drinking again. What shall I do?

LUCILLE K.

ANSWER: You are not in a particularly enviable role. You are being used as a support by a man who hasn't the stamina to face his problems without some outside stimulus. If his marriage failed after so short a period as two months, there certainly must have been some indication, during the courting period, that he and the girl were incompatible. My guess is that he married her as the line of least resistance, just as he is now relying on you to keep him away from liquor which, in its turn, proved the easiest way out.

The man's wife may have many shortcomings, like most young brides. Artificial means of escape provide no solution and the man has done nothing but surrender to the first available source of comfort. That he's a charming companion isn't strange; most men of his type are. He is not a person of strength of character nor dependability, which are what most women want in a life companion. If you are skirting the fringe of this matrimonial mess with any idea of ultimately marrying the man, I strongly advise against it —unless, of course, you are prepared henceforth to shoulder all moral and emotional responsibilities for him.

DEAR MISS DIX: After being a widower for several years, I have become interested in a woman my own age. At first, she seemed to return my interest but lately she has grown indifferent. How can I find out what has made her change, and rekindle her affection?

ANDREW K.

ANSWER: Tell her you've noticed the change and ask the reason for it. However, I doubt if you can do anything to regain her interest and I strongly urge that you turn your energies to finding another congenial companion.

◇ ◇ ◇

DEAR MISS DIX: I am very much in love with Jerry, who is six years my senior. He is kind, considerate and affectionate. He has been married three times and so have I. I'd marry him in a minute if he'd ask me, but apparently my temper is the drawback. How can I curb it and prove worthy of him?

◇ ◇ ◇

ANSWER: I bet your temper is what broke up your three previous marriages and I think you're pretty optimistic to think you can make a go of a fourth. At 30, you are old enough to learn to overcome a weakness and you had better make the attempt before marrying Jerry. His three marital failures indicate that as matrimonial material he's no prize. I hate to be discouraging, but the "Happiness Ahead" signs are notably absent from your road to romance.

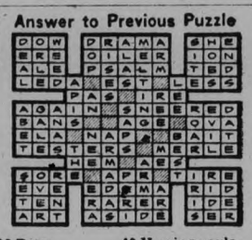
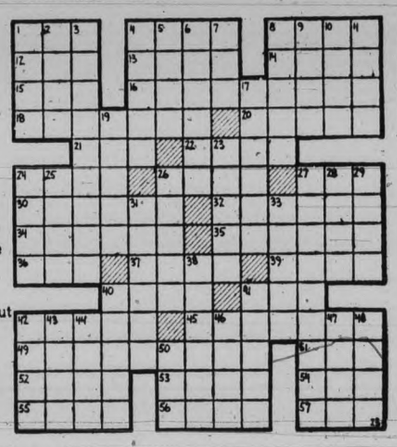
Answer to Previous Puzzle





MARY MOORE SAYS:

Offer Summer Succotash On Special-Purpose Menu

You know from my past declamations that I would never suggest that you cut down your meat consumption. But I do say increase your cheese consumption, for it is one of the purest and most concentrated of all proteins It is less expensive than meat (I'm talking of averages) and a rise in the consumption of cheese by Canadians could quite conceivably take care of our surplus production of cheese.

Wouldn't it be fun, while you are steadying your own household budget and eating food that is good and good for you, to know that you helped balance Canada's budget too? Wouldn't Mr. Abbott be pleased. Think of how the dairly farmers would chuckle with glee.

Hans, on the television the other night, made right before our eyes, Cheese Croquettes, and since it is now public property, and since Bruce, our neighbor (Eleanor's husband) like a busy bee copied down every step of the recipe so that both he and I could make it —I am giving it to you.

Cheese Croquettes, Tomato Sauce, Summer Succotash, Candied Sweets, Tossed Green Salad, Deep Apple Pie, Tea or Coffee.

CHEESE CROQUETTES

Over medium heat in large frying-pan melt 4 tablespoons butter, then stir in 5 tablespoons flour and allow this to become tinged with brown a little while you constantly stir. Add Slowly 1½ cups hot milk and stir this until thick, but do not ever let it boil. Add salt and pepper to taste. Add ½ lb. grated cheddar cheese (Hans used nippy and I like that too) but use mild cheese if you prefer. Stir and mix, but do not boil. Add 3 egg yolks, stirring. That should take 10 minutes. Spread this in a shallow buttered pan, cover with wax paper and chill— preferably overnight. It is now so firm it may be cut. Cut into pieces large enough that when you roll in flour. Dip a in fine breadcrumbs. When you have 5 made drop these into hot fat at 380 deg Fahr. and cook about 1½ minutes or until golden all over. Fry remaining croquettes, keeping the first ones hot. Serve as soon as possible with Tomato Sauce: To 2 cups tomatoes (fresh or canned) add ¼ cup water, 2 each cloves, allspice berries, pepper berries, ¼ bay leaf, large sprig parsley, 1 slice onion and cook together 15 minutes. Strain. Melt 3 tablespoons butter and lightly brown 5 tablespoons flour in it and add 1 teaspoon each salt and sugar and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Stir in the strained tomato stock until thick. This is a good all-purpose sauce on fish, poached eggs and other cheese dishes.

Summer Succotash is, as you know, fresh corn cut from cob and simmered for about 5 minutes in cream — just enough to prevent burning: it is then added to quick-cooked fresh baby limas. In the winter canned kernel corn and frozen baby limas may be used.

DEEP APPLE PIE

Duchess, Melba, Astrachan, Gravenstein are excellent for this. Wipe, quarter, core, pare and slice apples into buttered baking dish or very deep pie plate filling it very full. Sprinkle with 2/3 cup sugar. (Some cooks insist on using 1 cup sugar but this completely submerges the apple flavor.) Sprinkle with cinnamon and nutmeg and about 2 teaspoons lemon juice. If you make this in the winter and apples are dry you may have to add 2 or 3 tablespoons water. Place narrow strip of pastry around edge of dish. Moisten it on top. Place sheet of pastry over, pressing edges down. Score centre to allow steam to escape. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 35 to 40 minutes.

CAVALIER—In loving memory of our darling, Jane Cavalier, who was killed six years ago, September 23, 1946.

Of a darling whose worth can never be told,
Alone unseen, she stands by our sides
And whispers, don't grieve, death cannot divide.
Deep in our hearts her memory is kept
Of one we loved and cannot forget.
And though the years may be many or few,
We will always be thinking dear Janie of you.

Que. Merchants End City Tour

The 50-odd French-speaking businessmen from Montreal, who have been touring the city for the past three days were overwhelmed at the hospitality and friendship they found during their visit. They left the city today at noon.

During their three-day stay they toured the Canadian General Electric plant, the Outboard Marine, Western Clock Company, Peterborough Canoe and the Lift Lock.

Their biggest impression of the city was the large number of older men still on the job. In other cities there were mostly young men working in factories. All in all they thought Peterborough was a great city and one of the cleanest they have ever visited. They hoped that some of Peterborough's businessmen would decide to come to Montreal, for they would like to return the hospitality shown them.

Besides visiting the cities various industries they managed to get a days fishing and golfing in Tuesday and some of them were taken on a tour of Stony Lake and thought it was "almost as nice as Quebec."

This is the 10th year that they have taken these trips and during that time they have visited Ottawa, Detroit, Windsor, Quebec, Toronto and many other cities in the province.

Election Fails Break Deadlock

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — Danes who voted in Tuesday's election found today they had failed to break a political deadlock and give the country a stable, one-party government.

Prime minister Erik Erikson's Conservatives, who operated a shaky coalition with the Farmer's party after last April's "stop-gap" election, found their combined strength still behind that of the Social Democrats, who again captured the largest number of seats in the Foleting, though they lacked an over-all majority.

Subject to recount of official revision, the state of the new single-chamber Parliament will be: Social Democrats 74; Farmer's party 42; Conservatives 30; Radicals 14; Communists 8; Single-Tax party 6; German party 1.

Hans Hedtoft, Social leader, demanded today that Erikson's coalition resign and let him form a government. But Heftoft will also need the support of other parties if he is to govern. He has only two seats more than the coalition.

CAIRO (Reuters) — British and Egyptian representatives discussing the future of the Suez canal base today held a two-hour meeting at the home of Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, the chief British negotiator.

There was no indication of what progress is being made toward settlement of Egypt's demand that the British withdraw their 80,000-strong garrison from the base.

Ethel Waters Has New Show

By TED FARAH

NEW YORK (AP) — That aging but still majestic entertainer, Ethel Waters, referring to herself as a "senile delinquent," has returned to Broadway in a one-woman show.

If her voice, in the 22 songs and monologues she essays, isn't what it was in 1933 when she trumpeted Harold Arlen's fine blues chantey "Stormy Weather" at Manhattan's Cotton Club, her personality and dramatic power have greater impact.

Miss Waters, with her now mountainous figure, big smile and endearing personality, injects heaps of character into a mischievous bad-girl ballad called, "Ain't Gonna Sin No More."

Her show, called "At Home With Ethel Waters," reflects the highlights of her singing career since her 'teens—during the First World War—when she began touring Negro vaudeville houses of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Tennessee and other states.

With only a piano accompaniment, and four changes of costume, she holds the stage for most of two hours.

Strikers Would Like Keep Arena Operating

TIMMINS (CP) — A union which has struck five district mines said today it wants to keep the $1,000,000 McIntyre arena operating. The arena workers are in the bargaining unit for the big McIntyre mine, one of those strikebound.

The Porcupine mineworkers union, a local of the United Steel workers of America (CIO-CCL), sent a letter to Ted Lister, manager of the arena, suggesting a meeting to discuss the matter.

One midway operator was quoted as saying: "We don't care if we never come back."

JAILED BY NAGUIB—Former premiers of Egypt, Ibranhim Abd El Hadi (left) and Mustafa El Nahas (right), and at least 12 others have been jailed or placed under house arrest in Cairo. Ridout Pleased With Progress Of Subdivision

George Ridout of Toronto, president of Westbrook Realty Company, and directors meeting here Tuesday expressed satisfaction with the progress of their housing subdivison, Westmount Gardens, comprising the property they bought from Hugh Stewart.

One of their recent decisons was the demolition of the big barn of the former Hilltop Farm that was used by Mr. Stewart in the housing of his thoroughbred horses. Previously owned for many years by Toronto Savings and Loan Company, this landmark on the west side of the city will be in the process of dismantling next week. Several outer wooden buildings are already being razed.

The company had considered conversion of the barn into a modern four-unit apartment house, but whatever the extent of improvement the representatives of Westbrook Company concluded that it would always retain the outlines of its original appearance.

Even as an apartment it would look like a barn, and would be a detriment to the housing plans for Westmount Gardens.

REGISTERS PLAN

W. M. Bowes, planning consultant with the company, registered today the subdivision plan as finally revised and approved by the directors yesterday.

Annexation of the township property by the city is set for a consent meeting here on Nov. 2 of the Ontario Municipal Board.

"Directors are gratified by the progress of this new westside development," Mr. Bowes said today. "They affirmed their appreciation of the co-operation they have received from the city council and its several departments, from the Council of North Monaghan and from the city's Board of Education.

"Construction of the trunk sewer south from Weller St. to Clonsilla Ave., is likely to be under way early in October. That is the assurance we have received from the city authorities."

TWO HOMES STARTED

Two houses are under construction in Westmount Gardens, and we expect 25 to be begun and in progress this fall. As an evidence of the interest in the property, a Peterborough builder has an option to buy 90 lots. It is possible that this option may be taken up today. But, that is not dedinite."

The area for annexation is within the bounds of the farm bought by Westbrook Realty from Mr. Stewart. Details have been agreed upon by city and township councils, Mr. Bowes said, "and on that basis the annexation requires only the consent of the Ontario Municipal Board."

He began negotiations with the city council last winter as representative of Westbrook Realty.

"There were times when headway with preliminaries seemed a little slow, but we recognized the course subdivision approval has to take. So, the directors are quite happy about the present stage of development."

'As we promised the city, the company removed the roadblock at the west end of Weller St., opening the way to traffic out Weller St. to Wallis Drive."

Douro Farmer Vice-President Of Ont. Plowmen

As indicated in the program of the international plowing match at Cobourg, Howard A. Quinn of Douro township is first vice-president of its sponsoring institution, the Ontario Plowmen's Association.

The international match is now only two weeks away, Tuesday to Friday, October 6 to 9.

It is likely that the Ontario Plowmen will follow their custom in annual elections by promoting the executive members, thereby moving the first vice-president to the chair.

Mr. Quinn was appointed a director in 1941, succeeding from this district Senator J. J. Duffus, now on the honorary list. That was the year the OPA was held near Peterborough.

HOWARD QUINN

"I have a feeling that more people than ever from our district are going to see this year's match some time during the week," Mr. Quinn said today. "Apart from the plowing, there is a great demonstration of machinery and various other implements of agriculture and homes. That feature will be bigger than ever. The match is only a short drive from Peterborough. Part of its site is the farm of the Northumberland and Durham counties home.

"I hope we get good weather. The soil down there is rather heavy in some spots. Rain would make considerable mud. The Association is providing all the necessary conveniences for the public."

Mr. Quinn's interest in plowing matches began at home with Peterborough Plowmen's Association, whose match this season is being merged with the show at Cobourg. He had been attending some of the conventions of the Ontario association, and when the vacancy occurred he was nominated and was elected to the board of directors, 12 or 13 years ago.

Norwood Pastor New President Of Ministerial

NORWOOD — (ENS) — The Rev. W. J. Bingham of Norwood Baptist church was elected president of the Campbellford and district ministerial on Monday. The meeting held in the Free Methodist parsonage, Warkworth, was attended by the clergy of the district. The Rev. R. G. Newman was re-elected secretary with a vote of thanks for the splendid work he has done for the organization. A vote of thanks was also tendered the retiring president, Dr. D. M. Smith of Campbellford for the very efficient guidance in the past year. The treasurer is the Rev. A. L. Sisco of Warkworth.

Two new members were welcomed by the president, Rev. J. R. Wheeler and Mr. Fred Rogers. The meeting unanimously agreed with the action of the president in sending condolences to Mrs. Vanderburgh and family, when the Rev. F. G. Vanderburgh was killed in a motor accident.

The Rev. T. Kennedy of Warkworth gave an able paper on the Epistle to the Colossians.

A discussion period followed in which several of the provoked questions were talked on freely by most of the members.

PROGRAM DRAFTED

A very profitable year was anticipated as the programme for the 1953-54 season was drafted and approved as follows. The October meeting at the Baptist parsonage, Norwood, with devotions by Rev. H. K. Wright and the study of Thessolonians by Rev. R. G. Newman. November meeting at the United Church parsonage, Campbellford, devotions to be lead by Rev. J. R. Wheeler of Roseneath and the study of Romans by Rev. G. Kemp.

The December meeting at the Seymour parsonage, Campbellford, devotions conducted by Rev. N. Cole and the study of the book of Hebrews by the Rev. W. J. Bingham. The January meeting at the Presbyterian Manse, Norwood, with Capt. Baker conducting the devotions, and the Rev. R. D. Duncanson giving the paper on Ephesians. The February meeting at the United Church parsonage in Hastings. Devotions to be conducted by the Rev. Mr. Howson, with the Rev. W. G. Fletcher giving the paper on First Timothy. The March meeting at the United Church parsonage, Havelock, devotions to be conducted by Rev. W. Stevenson, and the study of Philippians by the Rev. G. Leno. The April meeting at the United Church parsonage, Warkworth, with Dr. Smith conducting the devotional period, and the Rev. G. Whitehorne giving the paper on First Corinthians. The May meeting to be held at the United Church parsonage, Norwood, Rev. N. A. Bosko conducting the devotional period, and the Rev. A. E. Toombs giving the study period on Second Corinthians.

After the business, study, and discussion a very delicious lunch was served by the host, the Rev. and Mrs. G. Kemp, to whom a very hearty vote of thanks was tendered for their fine hospitality and most generous luncheon. The meeting was closed with prayer.

Would Continue Death By Hanging

By JOHN DUDMAN

LONDON (Reuters) — Convicted murderers will continue to suffer death by hanging rather than electrocution or the gas chamber if the government accepts the recommendations of a specially appointed commission to study capital punishment.

The commission, which made a four-year study, suggested today that execution by lethal injection, though at present unacceptable, be examined as a future alternative.

Its 300,000-word report also recommended that the government raise the age limit for the death penalty from 18 to 21, but found no grounds for exempting women from execution.

The 11-member panel was set up to study conditions of execution and prison life for long-term convicts, and was instructed to offer no recommendations on the merits of keeping the death penalty itself.

FEAR CRIME WAVE

Nevertheless it put forward the view that abolition of the death penalty might be followed by a crime wave, not necessarily permanent. The commission said the prospect of execution seemed more effective than any other form of punishment in discouraging prospective murderers.

The panel was set up by the Labor government after the question of capital punishment blew up into a major political storm in 1948. During a seven-week period that year Britain abolished the death penalty and five murderers escaped the gallows, getting life imprisonment instead.

Capital punishment returned when the House of Lords overwhelmingly rejected the bill, passed by the House of Commons by a slim margin.

Today's commission report will be considered by the government and may set off new debates in the House of Commons, recently stirred by labor allegations that truck-driver Timothy Evans may have gone to the gallows unjustly for slayings committed by John Christie, the Notting Hill murderer.

In their search for information, commission members witnessed an electrocution at Sing Sing prison, Ossining, N. Y., and a gas chamber execution in Nevada. They heard testimony from more than 100 experts in this country and travelled over Europe and the Commonwealth to compare execution methods and the treatment of mentally abnormal murderers abroad with those in Britain.

CLASH VIOLENTLY

While agreeing on most subjects, the members clashed violently on the question of raising the age limit for capital punishment, with six in favor and five against.

Those opposed to advancing the age limit said each case should be considered on its merits—maturity was not necessarily related to age, and each individual was different.

Those who won the day agreed that "the primary purpose of inflicting the death penalty is to deter others" but concluded: "When the life to be terminated is a young life, the feeling is inevitable that the infliction of the death penalty may be a premature and over-hasty measure."

South Africa Denies Aiken-Malan Interview

OTTAWA — Mrs. Kate Aitken, Toronto radio commentator, was accused today of having fabricated an account she has given at several public gatherings of an interview which she said she had with Prime Minister Malan of South Africa.

This accusation was made by Alexander W. Steward, information officer at the South African High Commissioner's office here. Mr. Steward said that in speeches at Timothy Eaton Memorial Church in Toronto, at St. Catharines and Kitchener, Mrs. Aitken had given details of an interview with Dr. Malan which she said she had in Chaptown.

Among other things, she was reported to have said that at Dr. Malan's invitation, she knelt down and prayed with him.

Any one checking on Mrs. Aitken's statements, said Mr. Steward, could "have been told that Dr. Malan had never set eyes on Mrs. Aitken and that her account of the interview was a fabrication from beginning to end."

"In the whole unfortunate history of postwar misrepresntation of South Africa abroad," said Mr. Steward, "there is no more significant case than that of Mrs. Aitken.

"The real significance of this case is not in the record it contains of what Mrs. Aitken said but in the indication it gives of the state of mind on South African affairs of the public to whom she spoke.

"The absurdity of her comment and the ridicule in which she indulged are a measure of the extent to which opinion has been poisoned against South Africa because there is no indication that her audience regarded what she said as either absurd or ridiculous."

Mr. Steward said that Mrs. Aitken's visit to South Africa early this year had lasted only a few days. Yet for several weeks afterward, she had passed on to Canadians "impressions and alleged facts" she had gathered in South Africa. Her speeches had been reported in Canadian papers and abroad, particularly in Israel.

She was reported, said Mr. Steward, as quoting Dr. Malan as saying the African natives didn't need houses, they could sleep under trees: that the natives should have no education but the whip; that every Jew in South Africa should be stripped of all he had and run out of the country, and that in the prayer he had said at the end of the interview, the Prime Minister had given God "a good briefing" as to what he should do in South Africa.

She had described Dr. Malan as determined and pig-headed, as being no hypocrite but sincere in his religion and thereby far more dangerous than Hitler or Mussolini.

"This grotesque picture of the Prime Minister of a friendly country and a country belonging to the same sisterhood of nations," said Mr. Steward, "was passed on to hundreds of thousands of Canadians with not the slightest suggestion that we are aware of that it should be regarded even with circumspection."

SAYS MALAN NOT HONEST

She visited South Africa in January, she said, and was granted an interview with Malan. On her return she prepared broadcast material and a public address and submitted them for approval to the South African High Commissioner's office in Ottawa.

"It is eight months later," she said, "and now comes this statement."

"When I came back," she continued, "I said Dr. Malan was honest. I wish I could say the same thing now."

Weakening Of Trade Could Be Disaster

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) Weakening of trade between Canada and the United Kingdom could mean disaster to the free world, Gordon Bowen, senior trade commissioner of the United Kingdom, said Tuesday night.

He said in a talk to civic and industrial leaders here that British purchases in Canada are limited by what Britain can afford. "We are trying to pay our own way," he said.

Canadian exports to Britain in 1952 were $746,000,000, and British exports to Canada $386,000,000.

Hero's Welcome As Dean Returns To U.S.

TRAVIS AFB, Calif. (AP)—Maj. Gen. William F. Dean came home Tuesday night, three years of Red captivity etched in his tired face and declared:

"I want you to get it out of your heads that I'm a hero—I'm not. I'm just a dog-faced soldier." And . . .

"I feel like a million dollars. I almost sent a challenge to Rocky Marciano," heavyweight boxing champion.

The tall, erect officer was given a hero's welcome as his plane landed at this huge air base 40 miles northeast of San Francisco under a brilliant moon.

HIGHEST DECORATION

Dean was awarded the Medal of Honor, highest U. S. military decoration for his valiant, last-ditch defence of Taejon—in 1950—in which he battled personally.

A stratocruiser brought Dean and seven other repatriated U.S. war prisoners into a reception of glaring television and news camera lights and the tenderness of reunion with his family.

The general had been out of the U. S. six years, in Japan and Korea.

A few feet further on, the general's daughter, Mrs. Joan Williams, flew into his open arms; then came others—19 relatives in all.

Dean said his plans are indefinite—that he is an army patient and must await word from medics before deciding.

Mayors Still Not Satisfied With Federal Tax Plan

By BOB JOYCE

MONTREAL (CP)—The mayors of Canada have decided to walk right back up Parliament Hill and tell the federal government they're no happier about the ban on taxation of federal property than they were a year ago.

And for good measure they'll also ask Ottawa once again to let them off paying the 10 per cent federal sales tax on municipal purchases.

The representatives of Canadian towns and cities, who also want a federal-municipal conference to tell their money troubles to, Tuesday agreed in principle with a draft report prepared by the executive of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities putting the federation's case for these demands. Only one delegate dissented.

PUT IT IN WRITING

Said the mayor of Portage la Prairie, Man., the Rev. H. L. Henderson: "I'll put my reasons in writing."

The mayors are attending the first International Municipal Congress sponsored jointly by the Canadian federation and the United States Conference of Mayors.

At their afternoon conference session the mayors disposed of some 27 resolutions, only eight of which were passed, the rest being dropped or referred back to the national executive.

Among resolutions carried was one urging the federal government to make it easier for Canadians to own their own homes by easing mortgage repayments under the National Housing Act.

The delegates also decided to strive for more uniformity in highway codes, and greater standardization of road signs, speed limits, and traffic laws.

U.S. SLUM CLEARANCE

Meamwhile, nine floors below them, some 350 United States mayors tackled the U. S. federal housing administrator about slum clearance, heard the civil aeronautics administrator from Washington tell them what size airports they should have, and listened to the secretary of the American Association of State Highways tab America's road network as "the cancer of our whole economic system."

The U. S. mayors then briskly passed nine resolutions and elected Mayor Thomas A. Burke of Cleveland to succeed Mayor Martin Kennelly of Chicago as president of their organization.

The Canadian federation's executive director, George S. Mooney of Montreal, explained that the federal government last year changed the law concerning exemption of crown property from city taxes after the federation had pressed it to lift the exemption. But all the government did was to modify it, so that a town or city got grants equal to the rates that would have been due on any federal property in excess of four per cent.

If the value of federal property in a community does not add up to more than four per cent, the town doesn't collect any money.

ASKED TO GIVE IT TEST

Mr. Mooney said federation officers saw the government a second time when the law was proposed, but were asked to give it a test. They agreed, but a year later they still weren't getting the revenue they thought was their due.

Speaking during the discussion, Mayor Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa said she thought what was good enough for the subject should be enough for the crown.

Mayor Henderson, dissenting, termed it "the weakest document" the federation had ever produced. What was needed was a Dominion-provincial-municipal conference to "rewrite the charter of municipal government in Canada."

Work Stoppages Cause High Loss Of Time

OTTAWA (CP)—Work stoppages caused more lost time and involved more workers during August than July, the labor department reported Tuesday. However, the number of strikes and lockouts were lower.

Preliminary figures show there were 17 strikes and lockouts, involving 8,598 workers with a loss of 92,760 man-days. In July, 73,486 days were lost with 7,396 workers in 30 stoppages.

In August last year there were 42 stoppages involving 15,039 workers and causing the loss of 202,395 days.

2 BIG STRIKES

Three-quarters of the men out in August were in three big disputes: Gold miners at Pamour, South Porcupine and Timmins, the gold and copper miners and smelter workers at Noranda, Que., and the truck drivers, warehousemen and helpers in southwestern Ontario.

Seven of August's 17 stoppages were settled by month-end.

Time lost in strikes and lockouts has been much less in the first eight months of this year than in the same period of 1952. This year 105 stoppages involved 28,505 workers and caused the loss of 376,684 days. Last year there were 170 stoppages involving 105,727 workers and losing 2,419,791 days.

Airman Dies

TORONTO (CP) — Sqdn. Ldr. Duncan Black, 61, died at his home in suburban Scarboro township Tuesday. He retired from the RCAF in 1945 as chief inspection officer attached to No. 6 repair depot at Trenton. He served with the Hudson straits topographical survey in 1937, was at Ottawa's Rockcliffe air station from 1928 to 1937, then was transferred to the aircraft inspection department at Fairchild aircraft in Montreal.

Veteran Bluenose Mariner Spent 77 Years With Ships

VANCOUVER (CP)—A veteran Bluenose mariner who has sailed in everything from a square-rigger to a sea-going post office is living in retirement at Kitsilano, a comfortable, residential district here that fronts on the sea.

Capt. H. S. Hilton, born at Yarmouth, N.S., will soon be 80. In his 77-year career—he went to sea aboard his father's full-rigged ship William of Yarmouth at 2½—he has built ships and sailed them. He has been cited for bravery, helped put down a mutiny, held a master's ticket in sail at 23, founded a shipping line, run a holiday resort, operated a floating post office and directed a home for old sailors.

Capt. Hilton rose high in his profession. He became a marine superintendent for Canadian National Steamships and commanded their crack passenger liner Lady Rodney in the West Indies service.

FOUNDED COMPANY

He also founded Harbor Navigation Co., Ltd., back in 1912, a short-haul passenger and freight service still operating out of Vancouver.

He was 10 years old, on a run to San Francisco, when he saw the crew mutiny and he helped the officers put down the insurrection.

After six years ashore Capt. Hilton went back to sea at 16, a cabin boy out of Saint John, N.B. He was bosun three years later, second mate at 21 and master at 23.

SAVED SCHOONER CREW

He was sailing as mate aboard the Bristol City Line's Exeter City, his first experience in steam, when he received a gold watch from the Canadian government for saving the crew of the dismasted schooner Clifton during a gale.

Capt. Hilton came to Vancouver in 1910 and went ashore. By 1911 he was back to sea, running a small line of vessels to nearby coastal points. This became Harbor Navigation Co., Ltd., which he sold out in 1919.

During his period in coastwise shipping, he held the lease on the famed Wigwam Inn resort and was master of the Burrard Inlet floating post office, believed the first in Canada.

He returned to the sea with the Canadian government merchant marine, forerunner of Canadian National Steamships.

Capt. Hilton treasures most a gold-headed cane presented by the Montreal harbor board for bringing the first ship into that port after the ice breakup, April 25, 1920.

Manslaughter Acquittal Given After 2-Hour Jury Deliberation

GUELPH (CP)—A jury that deliberated for more than two hours Tuesday night acquitted Leo Lobsinger, 39, of Mildmay, of manslaughter in the scuffle death last June of Herbert Berlett, 60-year-old automobile salesman.

Mr. Justice R. I. Ferguson of the Ontario Supreme Court told Lobsinger he is an "extremely fortunate man."

Earlier, Lobsinger's brother, Eldon, described events leading to the scuffle.

Crown attorney J. M. Kearns, outlining the crown's case to the jury, said a fight occurred between the accused man and Berlett at the Harriston home of Lobsinger's sister the night of June 27 and continued outside the house. He said Berlett was struck and either fell or was knocked down. Berlett's head struck the pavement and his skull was fractured.

Berlett died in an ambulance which was taking him to Toronto the next day.

Eldon Lobsinger said he and his brother stopped to chat with their sister, Mrs. Clayton Lang. He said they found Mrs. Lang drinking beer in an automobile outside her home with Berlett and another man.

GOING TO HAVE TALK

When the brothers, who had gone to a hotel and left for home about 10 p.m., saw Berlett's car parked in front of Mrs. Lang's home, Leo Lobsinger said he was going to have a talk with Berlett.

"I said 'don't bother', and he replied 'don't you think anything of your sister?'" Eldon Lobsinger testified.

A few minutes later, Eldon said, he heard a tinkle of glass. He said he found Leo had broken the window in the front porch door.

"My sister was in the porch and asked me to open the door," Eldon said. "I reached through and unlocked it.

"I waited upstairs for about 10 minutes and then heard a rumpus upstairs and went in. My sister was in the kitchen and I found Leo and Berlett lying on the floor upstairs scuffling.

"As I went up the stairs, Berlett came rushing down with Leo after him. When I got outside, Berlett was lying on his back on the pavement, with my brother about six feet away."

Seeks New Solutions For Old Problems

FONTAINEBLEAU, France (CP) Canada's Group Capt. Cyril (Cy) Cornblat, manpower boss at this Allied air headquarters, has to try to work out new solutions for old problems.

Cornblat, of Ottawa, recently succeeded another Canadian, Group Capt. Cavendish Carling-Kelly of Toronto, as director of manpower and organization at Allied Air Forces Central Europe, the most important air command under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Formerly director of RCA Forganization and establishment, Cornblat has orders from Air Chief Marshal Sir Basil Embry, AAFCE commander, to re-examine the entire command structure, and suggest changes in line with the new concept of being "strictly operational."

EFFICIENCY FACTOR

Embry inherited a substantial build-up in forces from former commander Gen. Lauris Norstad. Now Embry feels the time has come to concentrate on grooming available forces to a high pitch of combat readiness. As Cornblat says:

"Today we are concerned not only with how many gallons we have in the tanks but the effective combat mileage we could get to the gallon."

One is "national retention"—the NATO-born term which refers to the way each country rules its own roost below certain levels. By directive, AAFCE must be staffed 25 per cent apiece by France, Britain, and the United States and 8 1-3 per cent by Canada, Holland and Belgium.

DOESN'T WORK OUT

In practice it doesn't work out. Larger countries find it difficult to furnish qualified technicians, putting the pressure on the smaller ones.

"We must keep the headquarters as international as we can," says Cornblat, "but still not paralyze its operation by leaving a critical post unmanned for want of the right nationality.

"We have different languages, different ideas and different ways of doing the same job. By pooling our knowledge, we get solutions best suited to an Allied air force. It's not the Canadian, French or American way—it's a mixture."

Requires 2,000,000 Barrels Of Oil To Fill Pipe Line

VANCOUVER (CP)—The feat of building 718 miles of pipeline over the mountains from Edmonton to Burnaby, B.C., was graphically described by D. L. Roberts, project manager of the Trans-Mountain Pipe Line.

Addressing a meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of Port Authorities, Mr. Roberts said it will require more than 2,000,000 barrels of oil just to fill the line.

"It means that $6,000,000 worth of oil must be pumped in just to get the first drop into Vancouver," he said. "It will take 30 days from the time the oil enters the pipe at Edmonton until it reaches the tank farm at Burnaby."

He warned however, that Vancouver should not expect to become a great oil-exporting port as soon as crude begins to pour in from Alberta through the line in 1954.

He said competitive position of Alberta crude is considerably poorer than two years ago when tanker rates were extremely high. The well-head price in Alberta had now been increased by 26 cents a barrel and tanker rates had fallen all over the world.

As a result it was cheaper to bring oil all the way from the Middle East, where costs are low, than to deliver it from Vancouver to North American markets.

World's Biggest Daily Has 4,500,000 Circulation

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—A tabloid newspaper called the Daily Mirror has the world's biggest daily circulation. Here are a few facts about it:

The paper received 3,758,441 letters in 10 years. (Its daily sale exceeds 4,500,000 and is going up).

When launched in 1903 it was intended for "gentlewomen." Sales slumped from 250,000 to 25,000 in three months. Today the Mirror is still aimed at women but nobody would say its approach is gentle.

In fact, it is a tough, breezy, arrogant, confiding sheet, revelling in its own admitted vulgarity, specializing in mass appeal through pictorial cheesecake, sledgehammer headlines and comic strips that are just that. Its famous cartoon character, Jane, a young woman easily separated from her clothes, was a wartime favorite of Canadian soldiers in Britain.

The Mirror celebrates its 50th anniversary in November and to mark the occasion its editorial director, Hugh Cudlipp, has written a book called "Publish and Be Damned!" It traces the paper's fascinating history from the unpromising beginnings to the "revolution" in the '30s when the editors turned to human interest, sex and crime.

"The plan which these young men evolved," he writes, "was simply this—to get under the readers' skins and stay there. They were all, in their way, lay psychologists. Most had come from working-class or middle-class families; they really knew and had personally experienced the aspirations and setbacks, the joys and the heartaches of the millions of ordinary people they set out to entertain and instruct."

Carrying the idea farther book reviewer Maurice Richardson writes in the Observer that the Mirror is a significant phenomenon marking the latest phase "in the vast social-levelling process by which 95 per cent of the nation has become middle, or to be precise, lower-middle class in habits and ways of life."

The newspaper makes life seem gay and exciting to housewives, says Richardson. Its reader symbol is a bus conductor "who daydreams of dancing the samba with Princess Margaret."

The Mirror makes a point of aggressiveness. Its wartime attacks on the government were so bitter that Prime Minister Churchill intervened, and the government threatened to close the paper. But the Mirror rode out the storm.

Cudlipp also tells about the pranks of Harry Guy Bartholomew, one-time director, whose favorite trick was creeping up behind an editor and pasting him with a plank. Unsuspecting visitors swooned at the sight, but the plank was made of balsa wood and did no damage.

At a luncheon this month Randolph Churchill, the prime min-

Asking Canada To Provide More Aid For Asia Quickly

St. Laurent Tells U.S. To Carry Her Share of Burden

By BOB JOYCE

MONTREAL (CP)—Canada has told the United States she'll do her part to end the world dollar shortage and prevent depression, but it's up to the U.S. to carry the main burden. Prime Minister St. Laurent said Wednesday night all countries—buyers and sellers—have a contribution to make, but "the largest contribution will have to come from the United States." Canadians don't intend to shirk their responsibilities, he told the International Municipal Congress, but "Americans are the leaders of the free world with all that that implies."

The meeting, attended also by R. Douglas Stuart, new U. S. ambassador to Canada, marked the official closing of the congress held jointly by Canadian and U. S. mayors.

DEPRESSION DANGER

Speaking at the University of Montreal in French and in English, the prime minister said Canadians, who sell more than half their exports to the U. S., know that if they can't keep trade high enough there "is bound to be unemployment, unrest, and, if it goes far enough, a depression with all its evil consequences both social and political."

"A man's mind is much more receptive to communistic theories and ideas," he said, "if he feels his own society does not give him a chance to look after his legitimate material needs."

Canadians didn't want special treatment from the U. S., but they would like to know where they stand.

Canada was asking "for as free trade with the United States as can reasonably be achieved without upsetting your economy or ours."

MOSTLY SYMPATHETIC

Most U. S. officials, he found, were sympathetic to Canada's views, but there were people on both sides of the border "who seem to think trade can be turned on and off like the water behind a tap to suit the conveniences of a particular moment and a particular group."

Dealing with the dollar shortage the prime minister said he believed the U. S. could save its taxpayers money by encouraging other nations to sell their goods in the U. S. and Canada.

"They would be helped substantially to do that," he said, "if their exporters could be sure of the interpretations that will be put on customs and other import regulations."

"Another helpful factor—as we in Canada well know—would be the investment of more dollar capital in certain overseas dollar shortage areas."

TREMENDOUS FUTURE

Ambassador Stuart, in a brief speech replying to the prime minister's first public welcome, said he believed Canada faced a "tremendous future," and that there would never be any insoluble difficulties between the two countries.

Earlier George S. Mooney, executive director of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, was awarded the distinguished service award of the U. S. Conference of Mayors "in recognition of his faithful work in government.

50-50 Chance Beria Escaped Gouzenko Says

TORONTO (CP)—Igor Gouzenko, the Russian embassy cipher clerk whose disclosures touched off the 1946 spy hunt in Canada, says he thinks Lavrenti Beria may have escaped from the Soviet Union—but only if he fled before the Russians tried to arrest him.

Gouzenko's views on Beria flight stories that have come recently from Washington, Madrid and other places are given in a copyright story in today's Toronto Telegram.

"Let's not delude ourselves," Gouzenko told Allan Kent, Telegram reporter. "No one escapes after arrest in Russia—and certainly not the powerful No. 2 man in the Soviet hierarchy, the chief of Soviet secret police, after he has been branded 'the paid agent of a foreign power.'

"Such a man could not escape after arrest, unless it was with the connivance and under the direction of the supreme authorities including (premier) Malenkov himself. ...

"But before arrest, Beria could have escaped. . . .

"And there's more than a suggestion that he did, in the strange phrasing of the Kremlin's announcement implying his arrest.

"The announcement did not refer to the arrest of Beria, but very carefully referred only to the fact that his case had been turned over to the supreme court.

"The usual pattern for such announcements is to say that a man has been arrested and jailed, and —usually—has confessed."

Gouzenko, still in hiding "somewhere in Canada" seven years after he fled the Russian embassy in Ottawa and sought Canadian asylum, said there is a "very, very slim" possibility Malenkov may have arranged for Beria to escape so Beria could become another Trotsky.

"Trotsky's escape served Stalin well, or at least he turned it to advantage," said Gouzenko. "With Trotsky, the deviationist, still alive as a refugee, Stalin could blame almost any internal difficulty on the machinations of the Trotskyites and could justify almost any action in the name of security against their schemes."

Gouzenko said he estimates the chances are 50-50 that Beria got away before his Russian government colleagues turned on him, "but he's not likely to be volunteering Soviet secrets to the West."

More likely, he would have gone into seclusion somewhere to plot his own battle with Malenkov in the struggle for control of the Soviet Union, Gouzenko said.

Palace Denies Princess' Visit

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace today denied all knowledge of a report that Princess Margaret plans to visit Canada and the United States next summer.

An official palace spokesman said he "definitely will not confirm such a report." He added that palace sources knew nothing of any plans for a trip abroad by the Princess.

At Ottawa, government officials said they had received no information about any possible visit of Princess Margaret to Canada next summer.

U.S. Overconfident Of Atomic Lead

CHICAGO (AP) — An atomic scientist asserted Wednesday that the United States has been "overconfident" of its leadership in the atomic field.

Dr. David R. Inglis, senior physicist of the Argonne national laboratory, near Chicago, said the U.S. "must get over the idea that we are way ahead" in atomic development.

"Our security and foreign policies are based on the idea that we are way ahead in that field. Both should be recast. It's time the American people knew the real score," Inglis said.

Inglis, who worked on the original U.S. atomic bomb, spoke at a meeting of the headline club of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity.

Inglis urged a freer exchange of information on atomic energy with Britain. He said the government's reticence to disclose its atomic know-how "has forced our British allies to start on the long road from the start. This was a mistake."

Investigation Ordered Into Plant Explosion

TONAWANDA, N. Y. (AP)—The district attorney ordered an investigation opened today in a series of explosions that killed at least 10 workmen, injured 27 persons and blew a peroxide plant into rubble.

Fearing the death toll from Wednesday's blasts might run as high as 12, searchers today probed the ruins of the one-storey brick building for more bodies. Ten were recovered Wednesday, but it was reported that 12 men had been in the building.

Mental Illness Has Become Greatest Health Problem

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister Martin today said mental illness in its various forms "has become one of Canada's most formidable health problems."

He said in a prepared address at the opening of the annual meeting of the advisory committee on mental health that "we must redouble our efforts to come to grips with this serious threat to the nation's health."

Mr. Martin said there are nearly 60,000 patients in Canadian mental hospitals and "other thousands suffering from less serious mental or emotional disorders. . . ."

Provincial health departments had developed considerable programs to combat mental illness and some provincial mental institutions "now are recognized as models of their kind on this continent."

GOOD RESEARCH

Effective work in training and research also was being done by universities.

"The federal government recognized the magnitude of the problem by earmarking its largest single health grant — now totalling more than $6,000,000 a year—for work in this field."

Mr. Martin suggested that the meeting, being attended by provincial and federal health officials, representatives of various universities and the Canadian Mental Health Association, should consider two problems.

The first was the problem of the mental defective. Considerable progress had been made in care and treatment of mentally ill but "very little has yet been done about children and adults who are mentally deficient."

"The second problem . . . is the desirability of making more extensive use of voluntary effort in the mental health field. Many private groups are willing and anxious to undertake public service projects of one kind and another.

"For example, a service club might take on the furnishing of a child guidance clinic. Work of this kind not only provides opportunities for service but leads to greater public interest and understanding of our problems."

U.S. Offers Give Plane To Owners

Suspending Offer To Pay $50,000 During Peace Talks

WASHINGTON (AP)— The United States today offered to return to its "rightful owner" the MiG-15 jet plane flown into American lines by a North Korean pilot.

At the same time the Far East command withdrew for the duration of peace talks the offer to pay $50,000 for MiGs delivered to the West.

The statement by Gen. Mark Clark, UN commander, had nothing to say directly about payment to the Korean pilot who delivered the first MiG last week. Defence department officials, however, noted that there was nothing in the Clark statement to make it retroactive. On that basis the Korean would get his money—$50,000 for the plane plus another $50,000 bonus as the first to take up the U. S. offer.

CLARK'S STATEMENT

Clark's statement, released simultaneously here and in Tokyo, said:

"The traditional policy of the United States of America to grant asylum to those seeking freedom remains unchanged.

"However, during this period of armistice discussions the offer by the Far East command on 27 April, 1953, to award $50,000 for undamaged MiGs brought to our side is withdrawn.

"When the rightful ownership of the MiG that recently landed at Kimpo has been established we will offer to turn it over to that owner."

The statement raised a question whether the MiG would be brought to the United States, as the air force had previously indicated would be done.

House Burned Two Fatalities

MONCTON (CP)—Two persons, and possibly a third, were burned to death today when fire burned through a frame dwelling at Parkton, on the city's outskirts.

The bodies were still in the hot debris two hours after the fire was brought under control. Police said they were not sure whether there were two or three bodies.

Police identified the victims tentatively as Edward Saulnier and his wife. If there was a third victim, they said, it might be Edward Gallant, who owned the house.

A New Brunswick forest service tanker and Moncton's street flusher hauled water from the nearest hydrant for the pumpers.

Cause of the blaze is unknown.

This was the third serious fire in the Maritimes in the last two weeks. On Sept. 15 five young children perished in a blaze at Sydney Mines. A $150,000 outbreak raced through a Yarmouth, N. S., business block earlier this week but no lives were lost.

Time Running Out To Beat Reds Strong Warning

TORONTO (CP)—R. G. Nik Savell, Canada's Colombo plan administrator, today appealed to the Western powers, including Canada, to provide more aid for free Asia and warned that time is running out in the fight between communism and freedom in that turbulent continent. "We must make up our minds whether we intend to control our own destiny or whether we do not," Mr. Cavell said in a speech prepared for delivery before the Canadian Exporters' Association.

Earlier civilizations had been overrun by barbarians simply because, at a critical moment, the civilized people "were not big enough to see the next step and take it. It could be the same with us."

DIFFERENT METHODS

Two big Asiatic powers, India and China, were developing side by side, both facing similar problems but tackling them through diametrically-opposed policies.

India is trying to develop on "democratic and constitutional" lines, while China is following the "ruthless Russian pattern," Mr. Cavell said.

"The rest of Asia is watching."

The West should rally to India's support, because China "can use methods in her totalitarian state which India cannot and will not want to use."

"We must remember that is one phase of our own fight for freedom and give all the help we can."

STOP-GAP PLANS

Mr. Cavell administers Canada's $25,000,000-a-year contribution to the Colombo plan, a six-year, $5,000,000,000 Commonwealth program to build the economy of South and Southeast Asia. The U. S. also is helping this area build new industries, irrigation systems, railways and canals.

But these aid programs are "but stop-gaps," said Mr. Cavell. "Today they are important, but if these nations are to make real progress, means must be found whereby they can attract capital; they must get into the swim of world trade."

The potential mineral and other wealth of Asia is "colossal," said Mr. Cavell. The free Asian countries have what they need for progress—except capital and the all-important technical education.

"That we can assist them to get as we are already trying to do on a small scale."

There was no easy road to freedom from want and disease, but the people of Asia "will not wait forever."

Britain Urges Step-By-Step Russ Negotiation

By STANLEY JOHNSON

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) Britain today welcomed apparent moderation of Russian policy since Stalin's death and called on the Soviet Union to agree to step-by-step negotiation of east-west quarrels.

Agreement on individual issues such as Germany and Korea, Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd told the UN General Assembly, would "maintain some momentum behind the improvement."

Lloyd paid tribute to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles for his "temperate and statesmanlike" exposition of U. S. views in a speech here last week.

Netherlands Foreign Minister J. M. A. H. Luns also called on Russia to negotiate directly on Korea, Germany and Austria and said such parleys could achieve more important results than the current debates in the assembly.

PARTIAL SETTLEMENT

Lloyd said: "We believe it to be a mistake to assume that nothing can be settled with Soviet Russia unless and until everything is settled. A settlement of two or three of our difficulties would be an important gain to every peace loving country.

"One matter on which we are very ready to try to make progress is Germany."

To this end, he urged the Kremlin to accept the invitation extended by the United States, Britain and France for a foreign ministers' conference on Germany at

Urges UN Talks Be Private

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—L. B. Pearson Wednesday urged United Nations diplomats to settle more of their problems by private diplomatic negotiations away from the eyes of newspapermen and lenses.

Canada's external affairs minister told the UN General Assembly that intensive news coverage of delicate negotiations often hinders them and said "open diplomacy now tends to become frozen diplomacy."

"The United Nations," Pearson said, "should have a private as well as a public face. There should be opportunities here for other than public appearances. A television panel discussion can be instructive and entertaining, but it is no substitute for direct consultation.

"It is, of course, essential that all free peoples should know and understand the great issues of policy. . . but it is not essential, indeed it is often harmful, for the negotiations of policy always to be conducted in glass houses which are often too tempting a target for brickbats."

Want Ottawa Increase Civil Defence Aid

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's mayors today passed a resolution calling on the federal government to provide more aid for civil defence, and offering to match Ottawa's contribution if the provinces will not put up the money.

The mayors, attending the closing conference session of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, elected Mayor Donald Mackay of Calgary president for 1954-55.

The civil defence resolution said the CD program is "inadequate" as some provinces "are reluctant to share costs." Municipal CD projects now are financed half and half by the federal and provincial governments provided they have first been approved by the provinces. If the province withholds approval, the cities get no federal funds.

AMENDMENT INSERTED

The resolution, in its original form, besides asking the federal government to carry a greater share of civil defence costs, proposed that cities be permitted to put up the other half of the money required, if the province did not want to provide funds.

After certain members had objected that the resolution by-passed the provinces, an amendment was inserted providing that cities only make up the province's contribution with the endorsement of the province.

There was no disagreement however about the federal government bearing more of the cost of civil defence.

Cabinet Holds Meeting To Discuss Plans

OTTAWA (CP)—The cabinet met today for the fourth time since the election to discuss the government's legislative plans for the new session of Parliament opening Nov. 12.

"We will be considering the accumulation of routine matters that must be dealt with before the opening of the new session," Prime Minister St. Laurent told reporters shortly before the meeting started.

The prime minister said he did not expect to make any announcements following the meeting.

One of the most important matters the cabinet is expected to consider is the application of Canadian Pacific Airlines for a licence to operate scheduled air cargo flights from Montreal and Toronto to Vancouver, via The Pas, Man., and Edmonton. The cabinet's decision on the application is expected to be announced soon.

Stealing Russian Plane Easy Way To Make Fortune

WASHINGTON (AP)—For a hefty slice of take-home pay, you can't beat flying a Russian plane into a United Nations airport. The 22-year-old North Korean lieutenant who did it, bringing a MiG-15 to an airstrip near Seoul, picks up the $100,000 reward the United States government had offered anyone who first delivered a Russian plane.

Let's take a look at what that $100,000 means:

The internal revenue people have said it is tax free, even if the pilot should go to the U.S., since it was income earned outside the United States.

Furthermore, in answer to a question, they figured out that anyone in the United States who is single, with no dependents, would have to earn $940,550 in a year to have $100,000 left after federal taxes.

HEAVILY TAXED

"Of course," said the income tax man, "he probably would be nicked by state taxes, and maybe by city taxes. He undoubtedly would have to make well over a million dollars."

The income tax people don't announce figures on personal income, but it's a safe bet that not many 22-year-olds make a million a year.

In 1950, for example, the highest salary reported was the $626,300 paid by General Motors to Charles E. Wilson, now secretary of defence. This, of course, was before

Gives Advice About Bears

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—If you meet a bear, says wildlife expert Reg Windsor of the Ontario department of lands and forests, turn quietly around and walk the other way. The bear will do the same.

Mr. Windsor was giving a tip to residents of Port Arthur and Fort William where the worst influx of hungry bears in 12 years has led many mothers to keep their children indoors.

There have been five reports of bears within the city limits and Steve Halushka, a farmer, killed one with an ax.

Mr. Windsor said the bears were boldly looking for food because a late frost last spring killed berry bush blossoms.

He warned residents to be careful of wounded bears, which will turn on an attacker. A treed bear, he said, is the safest to kill—once up, the bruin will not come down.

Mr. Windsor is a relative of Stan Windsor, conservation officer of Dept. of Lands and Forests in Peterborough. He was born in Apsley and worked with Capt. Carson, former district head of the Fish and Game. He went to Lindsay and then to Port Arthur.

French Launch Mop-Up Drive

HANOI, Indo-China (AP) — French Union troops supported by planes and armored and naval units at dawn launched a big mop-up action against the Communist-led Vietminh's "Ambush Capital" in the Red river delta, 30 miles southeast of Hanoi.

The French high command announced that "several battalions," possibly 5,000 troops, were driving against several Vietminh units which for a long time have been troublesome to the French within the vital defence bastion of the delta.

They have principally operated around the town of Huygen, along the Red river where frequent enemy ambushes of French patrols has earned the sector the nickname "Ambush Capital."

Ferryboat Passengers Landed On Main Street

LYNMOUTH, England (Reuters) Ferryboat passengers were landed in the main street instead of at the regular pier here today after a 40-foot spring tide burst over the temporary sea wall.

4,000,000 Italians Strike For Higher Pay

ROME (Reuters)—Industrial production in Italy came to a halt today as 4,000,000 workers downed tools for 24 hours to back a demand for higher basic pay.

Christian-Democrat, Social-Democrat and Communist-led labor unions, in a rare show of unity, ordered the stoppage. In addition to seeking a higher wage scale they are protesting against recent widespread dismissals in industry.

Farm workers will stage a one-day strike Oct. 5.

Labor unions said today's strike was just a warning to managements. They predicted a wave of labor unrest disrupting the economic life of the country unless employers meet their demands.

The employers claim that the vast additional sums needed would throw the country's whole economy out of gear.

Thinks Revision Needed

Canadian Parliamentary System Outdated

WINNIPEG (CP)—J. A. Corry, vice-principal of Queen's University, said Wednesday the Canadian parliamentary system is out of date and in need of revision.

Professor Corry is in Winnipeg for a meeting of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation board of governors. He was speaking to a meeting of the Winnipeg branch of the Queen's alumni association.

He said the volume and variety of business conducted by the federal government is increasing year by year and has left parliamentary procedure and the individual member behind.

"The government hires an army of specialized civil servants who formulate much of the policy," he said. "But the government has too few experts among its elected representatives."

This is no fault of today's member of Parliament. Standards of intelligence and education among MPs are getting higher all the time. It just means that government is becoming harder and harder to understand.

As a cure for the ills Mr. Corry suggests reconstruction of the parliamentary system of standing committees and further limitations on debate in the House of Commons.

Today's system of standing committees is poorly organized, he said. Some committees seldom sit, some do not sit at all.

NEED 15 COMMITTEES

Needed is a group of 15 or 20 standing committees which could sit through the five-year term of Parliament instead of for one session as they do now.

With committees of this kind members of all four parties in the House could become experts on specific phases of government. This would lead to more intelligent debate on many issues.

He said there was a committee of this type on external affairs and its operations were extremely successful.

With shorter debates, more business could be carried out in less time in sessions. Mr. Corry pointed out that reform was promised by Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent in a campaign speech in Vancouver and the government may soon take some step to revamp the system.

Seven standing committees have investigated the question since 1944 and the last four haven't even bothered to bring in a report, he said.

AFL Prepares To Step Up Political Activity

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The AFL today sounded a call for stepped-up political activity after hearing a message from President Eisenhower that Taft-Hartley law is essentially sound.

AFL leaders seemed to take this to mean Eisenhower's administration intends to retain most major features of the union-criticized labor relations law.

Eisenhower's message, read to AFL convention delegates by Vice-President Richard Nixon, promised he will recommend T - H amendments to Congress next January to correct "a number of defects."

WANT ACTION

James L. McDevitt, director of the AFL's labor league for political education, in a report prepared for delegates said "let's go home from this convention and get the people we represent in action now."

Eisenhower's message did not spell out what labor law changes he has in mind.

He said the general aims are to "remedy defects which cause concern on the part of working men and women over possible results and uses of the act to their detriment," to improve the law's administration, allow "healthy growth" of unions, and lessen "government interference" in labor relations.

The convention was to hear addresses today from State Secretary Dulles and Welfare Secretary Oveta Culp Hobby as well as from former president Truman.

Truman was to speak at convention memorial services for the late AFL president William Green.

Will Demand WageGuarantee

DETROIT (AP)—CIO president Walter P. Reuther said Wednesday that his auto workers' union doesn't "intend to sign any new contracts" that dont' provide for a guaranteed annual wage.

Reuther told members of the state bar of Michigan:

"We like the way corporation executives get so much pay a year. We'd like the same guaranteed annual wage for the workers. We will sign contracts, when they open again, only after we get the annual wage."

All major auto industry contracts run until mid-1955. Reuther previously had indicated the guaranteed annual wage would be in the auto workers' major objective when negotiations roll around again.

Blasts In Buffalo Plant Leave 10 Dead, 27 Injured

TONAWANDA, N.Y. (AP)—At least 10 men were killed Wednesday as a series of four explosions blew to bits a chemical plant building here and rocked the northern suburbs of Buffalo. Twenty-seven persons were injured. The 10th body was recovered early Wednesday evening.

Police Chief Elmer C. Mang said he understood there were 12 men in the building when the first blast ripped it apart. The cause was not determined, but it was believed the explosive was liquid hydrogen.

TANK EXPLOSIONS

Authorities said they believed the explosions were in chemical storage tanks. Damage was expected to run into millions of dollars.

The first two victims identified were Charles Hoy Jr., about 26, a chemical worker, and John Sick, a research chemist.

Some bodies were torn apart by the blasts. Two bodies were found 75 feet away from the two-story brick structure.

The explosions were heard as far away as six miles. They followed each other at intervals over a period of 25 minutes, shattering windows in nearby buildings and showering debris over several blocks in every direction.

Harry Hiebert, 25, a resident of the housing project, said he was 25 yards away and was knocked down by the first blast.

"I saw a big flash of flame and thousands of boards flying through the air," he said.

Prices Mostly Down In Light Trading

TORONTO (CP)—Prices were mostly down in light early afternoon stock market trading today.

Industrials were down about three-quarters of a point on the exchange's index, base metals and western oils were slightly down and golds showed a slight gain. Golds, the only risers, made slight gains in all groups.

Industrials, the principal losers, lost most in liquors and manufactures. Refining oils, foods, utilities, and textiles were weak. Agricultures and miscellaneous industries showed some strength.

Uraniums and Bathurst - area base metals had a majority of small losses with Gunnar and Brilund hardest hit. The few gains were in pennies.

Base metals showed an impressive list of small losses led by Consolidated Smelters and Cassiar. Seniors were mixed but juniors had a large majority of losers.

Western oils losses were led by Great Plains, down 25 cents, and Canada Southern, down 20 cents.

No Beria News In Newspapers

MADRID, Spain (Reuters) — Spaniards today sought in vain in the pages of the Madrid newspaper ABC for further details of its report that Lavrenti Beria, ousted Soviet interior minister, had escaped to Spain.

A note on Page 1 said: "See Page 19 for new and exclusive details of the Beria case." But not a line of Beria appeared on Page 19 or anywhere else in today's paper.

The report of Beria's flight to Spain, where he was said to be in contact already with U. S. investigators, was splashed Wednesday by ABC. Both Spanish government and United States embassy officials professed "no knowledge" of the case.

Wednesday's story had not been cleared by the government censor. Radio stations picked it up but other newspapers, presumably under instructions, left it alone.

Deletion of today's advertised story indicated the censor had stopped ABC developing its original report.

Canadian Sales Up But Deficit Rises

ST. ANDREWS, N. B. (CP)—Canadian sales to the United States increased by $75,000,000 during the first six months of this year, the deputy consul-general of Canada and trade commissioner in New York said here Wednesday.

In the same time, however, Canada piled up a trade-balance deficit with the U.S. of more than $420,000,000, Arthur E. Bryan told the 10-province trade and industry council.

Canadian sales to the U.S. to the end of June totalled $1,188,000,000 for an average increase of about $12,000,000 a month over last year, Mr. Bryan said.

But Canadians bought more than $220,000,000 worth of U.S. goods than in the first six months of last year, spending about $37,000,000 more each month in the U.S. than last year.

Hint Helicopter For Malton

TORONTO (CP)—Malton airport may have a helicopter service to replace the time-wasting 17-mile drive from Toronto.

Passengers arriving late for Trans-Canada Airlines flights last year caused delay of 100 flights. City traffic engineer Robert Burton is reported studying the matter after Defence Minister Brooke Claxton apologized Sunday night for arriving slightly late before an audience.

He said: "It took longer for me to get here from the airport than it did to get from Montreal to Toronto."

In heavy traffic airport limousines occasionally exceed the one hour and 40 minutes for the Montreal-Toronto flight.

Vote On Strike In Port Hope

PORT HOPE. — Workers at the Port Hope Sanitary Co. are voting today on "appropriate action" pending a conciliation board report.

Union officials implied that "appropriate action" would be a strike if the board's report was not—in their eyes, at least— a fair one. The vote started at noon and was to end at 6 p.m.

The 350 workers affected are members of Local 4115 of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL). Principal request is for a 20-cents-an-hour wage increase to bring basic rates to $1.35 an hour.

Further requests have been made concerning holidays and other welfare matters.

Meeting of the conciliation board was held Tuesday in Belleville, and it will be at least a week before its report or reports will be made public.

Union officials say they will strike only if all other means of reaching a settlement are exhausted. So far, they say, the company (which makes bathtubs, washbasins, etc.) has offered nothing.

Immediate Action Necessary–Millard

TORONTO (CP)—C. H. Millard, national director of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), said today immediate action by the management of Hollinger gold mines in Timmins is necessary if a strike there is to be averted.

Union headquarters here said no strike deadline has been set but that the Hollinger situation is "tense."

Mr. Millard said Hollinger officials have rejected a first request from the union for top-level negotiations and that a reply to a second request now is being awaited. Both requests, the union said, were sent to Jules Timmins, Hollinger president.

Britain Urges

Lugano, Switzerland, Oct. 15, He insisted, however, that the conference deal primarily with setting up free elections throughout East and West Germany—a view which the Soviet Union has previously rejected.

Lloyd previously had told the assembly in procedural discussions that Britain was against reopening debate now on the Communist Chinese demands for an expanded "round - table" peace conference with four Asian countries and Russia included as neutrals.

Russia's Andrei Vishinsky fought hard early in the week to get the assembly to reconsider the stand it took in August that the conference should be a two-sided parley with only belligerents representing the UN. He failed, but is expected to try again to force a debate on the Chinese demands.

SHOULD ACCEPT SUGGESTION

Lloyd, in a prelude to today's statement of British policy, said the Red Chinese and North Koreans should accept the suggestion of chief U. S. delegate Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., that the peace conference itself determine whether any "neutrals" be invited.

Britain also had indicated previously that she thought any debate on Korean political questions should be delayed in the assembly until the United States, as spokesman for South Korea and the 16 Allies with troops in Korea, could get the peace conference arrangements effected.

The whole tenor of Britain's statements in the UN during the debates has indicated that the British-American breach, caused by U. S. opposition to India as a peace conference member, has been repaired.

The two Allies also are sticking together in support of Turkey for the security council seat which Greece will yield at the end of its two-year term in December.

The Philippines came out late Wedesday with a surprise announcement that they were a candidate for the council and that the Arab-Asian group of 15 countries—whose support Turkey had been counting on—would back them to keep an Asian country in the council. Pakistan is also bowing out in December, with New Zealand due to be elected to fill what is regarded as a British Commonwealth chair.

Hamilton Store Clock May Be Gift To YW

An old fashioned clock of the Hamilton store may take on a new interest in life at the Y.W.C.A. It was a gift to Joe Lancashire, just to get rid of it. But, he rather fancies himself as a clock-fixer, so it would seem, even to reviving this relic of time that is gone beyond local memory. This one stopped counting off the hours of business so long ago in the now vanishing grocery shop that no one has any recollection of its active days.

Instead of letting some one else try a job of rejuvenation and salvage, Mr. Lancashire carried off the clock in the hope of making it tick again, and as an antique gift to the "YW".

Penitentiary Term In Cottage Thefts

LINDSAY (ENS)—Thomas Jillings, Toronto, was sentenced in Huntsville police court to three and a half years in penitentiary on 39 charges of breaking, entering and theft from cottages in the Whitney Huntsville, Minden, Haliburton, Bancroft and Kingston areas during the past summer.

Jillings was arrested near Dorset by OPP officers. His car was filled with loot from several thefts in the Haliburton county area. Most of the loot was identified.

Plan $50,000 Drive For Headquarters

TORONTO (CP)—The National Federation of Home and School Associations plans a campaign to raise $50,000 for a permanent headquarters here. The drive will start Oct. 1.

"Home and School in Canada has about 200,000 members," said Henry Lemasurier, chairman of the Toronto campaign committee, at a meeting Wednesday night. "with such a large membership, our national objective will mean only 25 cents a member."

Shipping Fails To Break Lull

MONTREAL (CP)—Shipping on Canada's inland waterways has failed so far to snap out of the usual summer lull, harbor officials said here today.

They said the world grain markets are responsible for what they termed "an unusual season." The bulk of inland cargoes is grain, which usually moves swiftly to foreign ports.

However, so much grain has been shipped overseas that storage space is limited and ocean shipping has slumped.

Of the companies reporting that year, 317 executives had salaries of $100,000 or more, but they then had to pay their taxes.

The internal revenue man said, the way he heard it, the plane was worth $300,000 or $400,000, so he figures it was a bargain quite aside from its scientific worth.

GOOD IDEA

"But I keep thinking about that $100,000, without taxes," he said. "You know, how about sneaking into Russia, stealing a plane, flying it back and picking up $100,000 ourselves?"

There is just one little gimmick. The offer was $50,000 a plane, plus a $50,000 bonus for the first Red flier to deliver one. But even $50,000, tax free, is not to be jeered at.

Meeting To Consider Conciliation Report

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) has called a meeting for Friday to consider a conciliation board report on a contract dispute with Upper Canada Mines Limited, a junior gold producer.

Attending the meeting will be Pat Burke, the union's area supervisor, and William Mahoney, assistant national director.

The board's majority report recommended a reduction in the working week from 48 to 44 hours without loss in take-home pay, a check-off of union dues and an amended vacation plan. The company nominee opposed the recommendations in a minority report.

Alex Harris, mine spokesman, said today the management is "contemplating no action until the report is studied."

Mine Strike Threat Remains

TIMMINS (CP)—The threat of a strike at the Hollinger gold mine continues to hang over this northern mining town where employees of five other gold producers already are idle.

Mayor J. W. Spooner plans to discuss the situation with Labor Minister Daley in Toronto in an effort to end the strike outbreak which is crippling the economy of this community of 30,000.

Sport and recreation have also taken a setback as a result of the strike. Picketing of the big McIntyre arena by unionists who went on strike at McIntyre mine Tuesday led the arena management to announce the combined rink and community centre will be closed and locked.

A few families have started to drift southward, fearing economic calamity in this 40-year-old town if the mines decide to defy the striking United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) and close down indefinitely.

Already closed by the strike are McIntyre, Broulan Reef, Preston East Dome, Hallnor and Delnite mines. Some employees of Broulan Reef have returned to work since the union called the strike there July 11.

Love Letters Will Help Convict Youth

UPPER SANDUSKY, O. (AP)—Law officers have found love letters they say will help prove 19-year-old Roy Schinagle cold-bloodedly murdered his co-ed sweetheart.

Sheriff Dean McAllister carried his investigations from Wyandot county to a room in Cleveland where he said he found two letters to Cynthia Pfiel, 19-year-old White Plains, N. Y., girl whose body was found mutilated beyond recognition last Thursday night.

McAllister said he would use one of them at Schinagle's trial in an attempt to prove he planned the murder.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer quoted a policeman as saying Schinagle wrote Cynthia inviting her to Delaware, where the Mayfield Heights (O.) youth was preparing for the fall term at Ohio Wesleyan University.

TOLD NOT TO TELL

The Plain Dealer's source said Schinagle told the girl to meet him secretly and not to tell anyone she was pregnant.

Meanwhile, prosecutor Harold Roth was planning to file first-degree murder charges against the youth who police say signed a nine-page confession.

The confession is reported to tell how the boy strangled his bride-to-be in a shack on the football field at Ohio Wesleyan University, beat her with a pipe and tore 17 gashes in her face before dumping her in a patch of woods near here.

Won't Intervene In Naval Clash

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) — The commander of the U. S. 7th Fleet said today the United States would not become involved if British and Chinese Nationalist naval units should clash off the coast of Red China.

"We would not enter into it," Vice-Admiral Joseph J. Clark told a press conference.

Clark, who commands the U. S. fleet which guards Formosa, refused to comment directly on efforts of the Nationalist navy to block shipments to Communist China.

The United Nations, he explained, has imposed an embargo and it was a matter for the U. N.

Nationalist gunboats have seized some British freighters headed for China, and it has been reported that Royal Navy warships would escort coastal freighters.

Clark has been here three days conferring with Nationalist military leaders and watching the biggest combined manoeuvres staged by Chiang Kai-shek's forces on Formosa.

Canada Now Facing Period Of Adjustment, Not Depression

CALGARY (CP)—Canada is not facing a depression. She faces, instead, a period of adjustment and consolidation. Money is going to become tighter. Demands for loans will move upward.

These are the opinions of A. C. Ashforth of Toronto, vice-president and general manager of the Dominion Bank of Canada, which he expressed in an interview here while on a western tour of the bank's branches.

It is likely, Mr. Ashforth said, that the number of new housing starts will fall off. There would be a levelling off in defence expenditures. There would be fewer capital investments for new plants and equipment. There would be greater competition and a smaller profit margin.

But this did not mean a depression.

NOT SAME THING

"I do not regard a depression and a recession as the same thing," the banking executive said. "A depression suggests a marked drop in business activity; a recession suggests a mild dip." No drastic drop in employment and national income was in prospect for Canada.

"The facts that have brought business to its present high levels seem to have spent themselves," Mr. Ashforth said.

The rate of savings continued high, but demand for credit was rising faster. Bank loans were going up faster than deposits. If credit was to continue to expand, savings would have to increase still further.

PROVIDES BACKLOG

While an increase of deposits provided a backlog for expenditures should individual earnings drop, the rapid expansion of consumer credit was giving financiers concern. Canadian consumers had more than tripled their mortgage debt since 1945.

"If the present rate of credit expansion should continue for six months, I would be concerned," Mr. Ashforth said.

"The increase in credit sales is taking place at a time when personal incomes are at the highest level in history. Consumer credit outstanding is rising at a much more rapid rate than income. This cannot continue indefinitely."

This increase in consumer credit increased the vulnerability to a collapse in consumer spending.

Hereafter, Mr. Ashforth forecast, the consumer will call the tune. The seller's market was over.

"The shift to a consumer's market will not be without its benefits. A seller's market breeds inefficiency and high costs. Anything that makes business review its operations with a view to eliminating wasteful practice will be beneficial."

Miss H. Richardson

Funeral services for Harriet Richardson were held at the Comstock funeral home on Tuesday. Miss Richardson died on Monday at her home, 541 Homewood Ave.

Pallbearers were J. Sharpe, William Sharpe, William Corneil, Claude Cornwell, B. Smith and E. Beattie. The Rev. Gordon S. Maxwell officiated, and burial was in Little Lake Cemetery.

Haymes Weds Rita Hayworth

The 34-year-old actress and her crooner, 35, will recite vows each has said three times before in a civil ceremony at the Sands Hotel.

The unpretentious rites will be quite a contrast to the screen star's lavish French wedding to Prince Aly Khan in 1949. Miss Hayworth will not even have a new wedding gown. She said she would wear a blue linen straight dress which she has worn before.

Only guests invited are business and legal associates of the couple. The only relatives on hand will be the bride's two daughters.

Damage was reported to be "not extensive."

The spokesman said normal traffic would be resumed "within a few hours."

OSTEND, Belgium (Reuters)—An air-sea search for eight Britons aboard a 60-foot cabin cruiser was called off today when they were located in this Belgian port. The U.S. air force sent a helicopter to help the hunt after the 26-ton cruiser was reported in trouble in the English Channel. She reached here safely Wednesday.

Why This Anonymity?

The special medal commemorating the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth is intended for people who have assisted at the Coronation itself or at the celebrations to which the Coronation gave rise. Ten thousand of these medals will be distributed, or have already been distributed, to Canadians; 800 of them go to the men and women who went to London to march in the great Coronation parade; all Canadians who appear in the official table of precedence—of whom there must be several thousand—also receive it. And the remaining medals are to be given to Canadians who are nominated for this honour by a number of Canadian organizations.

* * *

Yes, but what organizations? We see no sign that their names are to be made public. And who are the recipients to be? Nothing has been said about publishing a list of their names, and the medals are not, it appears, to be presented in any public way; our understanding of the matter is that the recipients will get them by mail.

* * *

This seems a depressing, hole-and-corner way of giving an award to which Her Majesty presumably attaches some significance. Why are we not told who is to have the medal? And when is it to be worn? And what does it look like? And does it carry any prestige with it? Or is it something which the recipients will put in a drawer and forget, unless they happen to be soldiers, who occasionally have opportunities to wear medals which have been given to them?

* * *

The whole business of the Coronation Medal seems silly. It is awarded wholesale; ten thousand medals will make quite a weight in the hold of any ship. It is awarded to a great many people by right of the position they hold, and all but a few of them already possess vastly more distinguished decorations. Those that are left over are distributed without much care and without any ceremony. Surely it would be better to have no medal at all than to treat a medal like this?

Urbanity In Politics

Some surprise has been expressed because the Prime Minister of the Irish Republic, Mr. Eamon de Valera, was a luncheon guest recently of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, Sir Winston Churchill. Because they are in strong political disagreement, many people think it odd that they should be able to tolerate one another over a luncheon table. But we are not astonished; on the contrary, we are pleased that it is so. It is a sign of a high degree of civilization when men refuse to carry political animosities into private affairs.

Politics is the art of government, and government exists to assure us of an orderly conduct of private life. It must be clear to anyone that, the Irish people being what they are, Mr. de Valera could not have retained their confidence and loyalty for many years unless he were a man of distinguished abilities and fine personal qualities. He has held his place not as a tyrant, supported by bullies and spies, but as the elected head of a state which could replace him with another man if it chose to do so. Undoubtedly two men of the stamp of de Valera and Winston Churchill have much to say to one another which has nothing to do with politics.

Urbanity, courtesy and restraint in politics is one of the special glories of the democratic peoples. It is a recognition that politics is not the whole of life, but serves a higher end of peace and decency. The luncheon engagement of de Valera and Churchill gives a pattern to political behaviour everywhere: men who can fight like tigers over the conference table can nevertheless get on admirably at the dining table.

No Pencil Sharpener For Mr. Hope

When the Prince of Wales School opened its doors in the early twenties, a short man with an English tongue was installed in the basement room which was the first full public school manual training class in town. He came directly from industry into teaching and ruled the lower region of the school with an eye as sharp and a strap as tough as any of the tools in the place. This was Albert Hope, before whom gangling youths twice his size would quake, yet for whom all his pupils large and small had respect. For Mr. Hope was an old-fashioned craftsman with wood and chisels and planes, and had an enthusiasm for boys. He taught them how to behave in his class and how to behave with tools. One acquired admiration for both.

Like many other good teachers Mr. Hope had his oddities, and a volatile temper. His scorn would be roused by a lad who dared to use a 2-H pencil sharpened in a pencil-sharpening machine. God provided wood chisels for sharpening draughtsmen's pencils. Self-respecting workmen pointed their pencils by hand.

Apart from his teaching, his work for his church, the militia and the Boy Scouts, Mr. Hope was remarkable in the presence of his five sons, all quick-growing, as distinctively tall as the father was short. His recent death removes from the Peterborough scene a well-known character.

Death Of A Great Commentator

Canadian radio lost a great commentator when Dr. H. L. Stewart died in Halifax on Monday. During the war thousands of us listened to Dr. Stewart's sane, calm, informed opinions about military and political matters with a special degree of attention; his manner, and experience of his broadcasts, assured us that he was not concerned with impressing us, with getting a better job for himself, with acquiring prestige or government recognition, but only with untangling the jumble of news from Europe and Asia, and trying to make sense out of what often seemed utterly senseless.

Sometimes we wished that the CBC would make greater use of Dr. Stewart, but it appears to be a CBC policy that no commentator may become so popular that the Corporation is unduly obliged to him; there is wisdom in this, and it protects us from the kind of commentator-worship which prevails in some sections of the U.S.A. But Dr. Stewart's explanations and opinions were of a kind which raised him far above the CBC's other war commentators, good as some of them were. Everything he said stamped him as a professor of philosophy; there was balance and wisdom in all. And, incidentally, he convinced many people who hold it as gospel that all philosophers are idle dreamers, and that all professors are remote from worldly affairs, that they were wrong.

Cabinet Recourse To Resources

There is justification for the Ottawa Journal's complaint that the Department of National Resources and Development is being used injudiciously as a training post for junior Cabinet ministers. We talk of Canada's great natural resources as our golden stake in the future, and their development as the mainspring of Canadian prosperity. Yet the department of government which has oversight of these resources and presumably should be planning for their careful exploitation is constantly being passed from the hands of one junior minister to another in climbs up the ministerial ladder.

Mr. R. H. Winters, having proved himself in the Department of Resources, is given what is apparently a more important post—Public Works. That department is made even more important and Resources less important than before because Mr. Winters is taking with him into his new post the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the Trans-Canada highway. Another former branch of Public Works, the National Film Board, has been transferred to the Department of Citizenship, presided over by Mr. Walter Harris.

The Department which the new junior Minister, Mr. Jean Lesage, inherits is therefore truncated, yet it remains significant, for its responsibility includes a big engineering and water resources Branch, the national parks, the wildlife service, forestry, the administration of the Yukon and Northwest territories and the Canadian Travel Bureau. Its significance will become immediately more penetrating should the country's economy slump and active, government-initiated development of the resources be necessary to give the country a fillip.

The Whole Story?

Like us, many readers will have puzzled over a news report from Niagara Falls which told that last Saturday a woman lost her legs in an accident; she was standing against a railing, looking at the Horseshoe Falls, when a car jumped the curb and crushed her; the driver says that he intended to step on his brake, but his foot slipped, and hit the accelerator; the police said that no charge would be laid against him.

We do not thirst for vengeance against the driver. So far as can be told, he was as much a victim of Fate as the injured woman. But is this the whole story—a momentary miscalculation, resulting in a terrible injury, the results of which will be life-long? We suppose that enquiry and restitution can go no further. We suppose that at every moment, in everybody's life, there are possible, though improbable, dangers. Yet it affronts our sense of justice that such things can happen, without apparent reason, and without recompense for the injured person.

THE AMERICAN SCENE

17 Millionaires And A Plumber

By ALASTAIR BUCHAN

SINCE the death on September 8 of Mr. Justice Vinson, President Eisenhower has been looking for a new Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. All appointments to the Supreme Court are made by the President, and normally he chooses men from the political party to which he belongs. (Mr. Vinson— no profound political thinker, but a fair-minded man of liberal instincts, and known as a rather average Democratic politician until he went to the Supreme Court— was an old friend of President Truman, who appointed him in 1946). So because of the long rule of the Democrats, the court is at present composed of seven Democrats and only one Republican.

It is, therefore, certain that President Eisenhower will nominate a Republican as Chief Justice; and the most likely candidate is at present Mr. Earl Warren, who has been Governor of the State of California for some years, and who was a contender for the Republican nomination as Presidential candidate last year. Other names have been mentioned, and in normal circumstances the President often appoints the Attorney-General, to a vacancy in the Supreme Court But the present Attorney-General Mr. Herbert Brownell, is generally considered to be doing an indispensable job of reorganising and reforming the Department of Justice, and is probably too valuable as a political adviser to the President to be spared.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE'S office is not really comparable to any legal position in the British Commonwealth. He has none of the power over the organisation of the legal system which the Lord Chief Justice possesses in Britain, nor need he have the judicial experience. Mr. Warren, for instance, has never served on any bench. Moreover, the Chief Justice is only Primus inter pares with the other eight Justices of the Supreme Court.

But he does occupy a position of great influence, both in the court and in the country as a whole, for he is second only to the President and the Vice-President among the officers of the Republic.

ALTHOUGH the American Constitution was framed with the intention of creating a rigid division of authority between the executive, legislative and judicial agencies of government, the Supreme Court has come to have considerably more power and influence than that of a mere court of revision. Its power to interpret the Constitution, and to invalidate acts of Congress, inescapably gives it considerable power to influence the policy and philosophy of government; and because Supreme Court justices seem to live for ever— Oliver Wendell Holmes was more than ninety years old when he retired— the court is often out of sympathy with the aims of the Administration which is in power. Thus, in the early days of President Roosevelt's "New Deal" policy, the court invalidated many of the President's radical measures, and he was not able to obtain a majority of men who shared his ideas until the beginning of his third term of office.

At present the court is divided evenly between "conservatives" and "liberals," and the political philosophy of the man whom President Eisenhower appoints as Chief Justice could shift the balance decisively. There are a number of cases to be heard by the court, notably one about the question of racial segregation in the schools (which in effect means Southern schools) and another about the Federal Government's title to submerged oil-bearing lands outside coastal waters, which are of the first importance to the future development of America. If Mr. Warren is appointed Chief Justice —and the more one thinks about it, the harder it is to resist his claims to the job — it is probable that the "liberal" wing of the court will be strengthened, since he has always shown himself to be considerably more progressive, in the rather shallow fashion that the perpetual Californian sunlight imposes on her native sons, than most of the other Republican leaders.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER has also to appoint a Secretary of Labour, following the recent resignation of Mr. Martin Durkin, the head of the Plumbers' Union, who had held his Labour Secretaryship since January.

Mr. Durkin was the only Democrat in the Eisenhower Cabinet; he was co-opted for the job, somewhat to his amazement, and to the considerable astonishment of the professional Republican politicians, after Mr. Brownell, now the Attorney-General, and who was originally President Eisenhower's appointments adviser, had been unable to find anyone within the Republican ranks who was acceptable to organized labour.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE UNITED STATES Department of Labour is not a very important part of the Government; it has, for instance, nothing like the range of function assigned to the British Ministry of Labour, since wage negotiations, the enforcement of fair employment practices, and other labour problems are assigned to separate agencies, reporting direct to the White House. Its main function, apart from the gathering of labour statistics, is the administration of the Taft-Hartley Act, which bears the same relation to labour problems in America as the Trades Disputes Act did in Britain. It was Mr. Durkin's failure to get the Administration to amend the Act —which limits the strike powers of organised labour—which led to his resignation. Mr. Durkin handled his decison well, and made it clear that it was not wickedness but inertia on the part of the Administration and the Republican Congress which had occasioned his resignation. The result is that it will be difficult for the Republicans to attack Mr. Durkin's behaviour, while it will now be easy for the Democrats to attack the Administration on their labour policy.

ANOTHER problem confronts the President. Mr. Durkin was not only the representative of labour in a Cabinet composed chiefly of businessmen— "seventeen millionaires and a plumber" was the original description of that Cabinet— but he was also the only Roman Catholic. Now the Catholics, with a church membership of about twenty-seven million out of an estimated church-going population of about eighty-six million, form the strongest and best-organised church group in the United States. While it is acknowledged that the strength of militant anti-Papalism in the South and South-West makes it certain that no Papist will ever be elected President of the United States, no American political leader can dispense with the active support of at least one Catholic member of the Cabinet.

The consequence is that either the new Chief Justice or the new Secretary of Labour has got to be a Catholic, so that the area of choice is very much limited. It is apparent that President Eisenhower is not finding it so much fun being President of the United States as he originally supposed it would be.

THE LAST FORTNIGHT, was not a happy one for the Republicans. In addition to the affair of Mr. Durkin there was the revelation that one of President Eisenhower's assistants tried, during last year's election campaign, to obtain business for a California engineering firm on the basis of inside knowledge about the Navy's rocket development programme, for a "four per cent. commission" on the business they obtained. He has since been exposed by a Congressional committee, but the episode has given great delight to the Democrats, who partly lost last year's election because of the substantiated instances in which political officials appointed by the Truman administration had used their position to obtain "'five per cent." commissions on Government contracts. The five percenters were a big issue in last year's campaign, and the introduction of the "four percenter" in a Government pledged to cleaning out the mess in Washington has created excellent opportunities for good, clean fun. Herblock, the cartoonist of the "Washington Post", who ranks second only to Britain's Low as a political satirist, had a cartoon last week of the Democratic donkey entering the office of an angry looking Republican elephant with the words "Well, Well— Deflation, Eh?"

A FRIEND OF MINE who has been on a tour of the deep South— the country beloved of writers like William Faulkner and Erskine Caldwell — came back enraptured with the small town of Port Gibson, Missouri. There are nine churches in one street — the South takes, and always has taken, every religion except Catholicism seriously. But the most striking of the nine—perhaps the most striking in the world, except Saint Sophia, in Constantinople— is the First Presbyterian Church of Port Gibson. This church is nearly a hundred years old, it was built well before the Civil War, and has a separate gallery for slaves.

Its central chandelier has as its centrepiece an equestrian statue of General Robert E. Lee, the great Southern Military Leader, which came off a steamboat of the same name which used to be one of the fastest and most famous boats on the Mississippi River.

But instead of a spire this church has an enormous hand, sixteen feet high with a six-foot index finger pointing toward the sky. This remarkable piece of ecclesiastical architecture is apparently a tribute to the Rev. Zebulon Butler, one of the great Fundamentalist preachers of the old Gulf Society, which excelled in Fundamentalism. As the Mayor of Port Gibson, who is proud of the finger-pointing spire, says to inquirers: "Dr. Butler was a man who depicted the fiery furnaces of Hell in terms scorching enough to make even the most imaginative sinner quiver, and that is why we remember him by his most appropriate gesture."

THE MEEK INHERIT THE EARTH

Politics And Our Natural Resources

(OTTAWA JOURNAL)

ABOUT the cabinet changes which Prime Minister St. Laurent made on Thursday there is one thing definitely wrong. It is that the Department of Resources and Development has again been treated not as the great and vital branch of government which it should be, but as a sort of training ground for young Cabinet ministers.

Natural resources, our forests, our waterfalls, the wealth of our northland, the deposits of ores and minerals under our vast rich earth— in these, in how we develop and conserve them, rest much of our future. Yet in the past two decades there has been no Cabinet continuity in the Federal administration of natural resources; the department has been treated as a junior department, as a sort of "poor farm" of the ministry.

Mr. Lesage, a young Quebec City lawyer, is Mr. Winters' successor. Mr. Lesage, for all we know, may be a potential Laurier, Duplessis and St. Laurent all rolled into one, but what at the moment can be his equipment to admister the vast domain of Canada's natural resources, or what can be his equipment to administer them for a long time to come?

Mr. Lesage will not even have the benefit of the advice of a deputy minister experienced in the department, for Major-General Young has been transferred with Mr. Winters to Public Works. The new deputy, Mr. Gordon Robertson, is unquestionably one of the ablest young men in the government service and we rejoice in his promotion for it is "the merit system" working at its best. But however quickly and well Mr. Robertson will learn his job the fact remains that Mr. St. Laurent has suddenly put two new men at the top of a department that is as wide as the nation and whose concern must be considerably with the unknowns and vagaries of future and development.

It is a measure of the high faith Mr. St. Laurent has in both these men that he has given us this combination— and particularly upon Mr. Robertson must fall great responsibility— but we cannot evade the feeling that their abilities could have been made available to us in some different combination.

Signs Of The Times

(Saturday Night)

When the orthodox "Keep Off" signs failed to stop people from trampling the academic lawns, the University of Maine puts its best brains to work devising new and more effective slogans. The savants sweated and produced two: "Your Feet Are Killing Me," "I Vont to Be a Lawn." But for our money, the best effort in this line has been produced by officials of the new Mount Sinai Hospital in Toronto. The sign on the lawn there reads: "Danger— New Blades."

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Thou hast dealt well with thy servant, O Lord, according to thy word. Teach me good judgement and knowledge for I have believed thy commandments. (Ps. 119: 65, 66.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgement. (John 7: 24.)

✧ ✧ ✧

There is therfore now on condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit . . . For if we live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live . . . For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. (Rom. 8: 1, 13, 18, 19).

✧ ✧ ✧

Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call yet upon him while he is near . . . For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. (Isa. 55: 6, 8, 9.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Sing unto the Lord, all the earth; shew forth from day to day his salvation. Declare his glory among the heathen; his marvellous works among all nations . . . Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name: bring an offering, and come before him: worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness. (I Chron. 16:23, 24, 29.)

TOY TESTERS

Sir: I notice in your paper a report that the Canadian Association of Consumers are coming to our rescue and setting up a Toy Testing Committee. A little late don't you think?

Why, down our way we have Toy Testers that have been on the job for years; we have at least one in every home Testing Toys long before junior can get his hands on them and sometimes long after.

Shucks! Next thing you know they will be telling us how much track to buy and with whose Piggie bank.

JOHN VICTOR.

OLD PETERBOROUGH PITCHER

Sir: I received a copy of How Time Flies from your newspaper of 30 years ago from Mrs. Warman of your city and I want to say it brings back memories of the early twenties when I pitched for Charlie Curtis and his Maple Leaf team. I would like to extend greetings to all my old team mates and all my old friends in Peterborough. I intend to drop in and see them as soon as I possibly can.

If any of my friends would care to correspond with me I would be only too glad to answer their letters.

GROWTH OF LITTLE FRITZY—A CAUTIONARY CARTOON

FROM HEAD T OTOE Compound Colors are bringing a richer, brighter look to all kinds of apparel. This worsted suit, felt hat and topcoat show this new trend.

Compound Colors Liven Fall Apparel For Men

Two or more shades subtly blended add visual appeal.

There's a new visual vim and verve in the new fall fabrics that Esquire has called Compound Colors. This vital new fashion is several color tones blended, compounded, intermingled in one fabric that creates a new tone-on-tone effect. All types of apparel have this fresh, rich look which opens up an entirely new fashion vista of great appeal.

In the same way that a scientist compounds a formula, mills are compounding a variety of color casts and shades in fabrics. The results are unusual effects which are a far cry from the conventional monotones. For example, two shades of grey with red and blue create a descriptive cast totally different from the conventional grey. Similarly, brown and tan tones are woven together with green and rust to create an individual over-all effect. Two shades of blue with red and grey add description to bluish casts.

These new Compound Colors are apparent in a variety of fabrics such as wool, cotton, silk in the natural fibres, as well as the man-mades such as Dacron, Orlon, nylon, Acrilan, Vicara, and in blends of various types. Patterns lend concrete expression to Compound Colors in many different kinds of designs as checks, plaids and Nubby Touch surface weaves in slubs, nubs and splashes. The blended tones are subtle. They are not merely single colors but several multiples of shades mixed into compound effects with varying undertones and overtones.

A FRESH STYLE INTEREST

From head to toe, apparel of all descriptions take on a new life with Compound Color tones. In headwear, Compound Colored felts in greys, tans, blues and greens create a new style interest in hats. These felt bodies are further enhanced by brushed and roughed-up finishes that bring out the color values in the felt. Blended tone tweed, silk and felt hat bands further accent the Compound Colors of the hat body.

In sport shirts, heather effects of two and more colors often add a new richness without the need for pattern. In neckwear, multiple colored stripes, checks and plaids all show the influence of Compound Colored styling. In hose, bright argyles have a tone-on-tone effect.

Rich Touches Of Fur

Newest costume suits are luxuriously enhanced by rich touches of fur! Real or like-real fur vests shine softly from beneath curved, loose jackets.

Men Approve 2-Way Look

This Fall, the business man will make a refreshing departure from the "uniformity" that has all too often marked his appearance in seasons past. He'll go urban or suburban at will, and enjoy a "change of pace" from day to day or from week to week.

In his urban guise, he'll choose dark rich worsteds, flannels or cashmeres for his business suits, generally with solid colors, fine stripings or patterns. In his accessories, he'll favor the round collared shirt, quiet neckwear, decorative waistcoats. Very likely he'll wear a velour melton topcoat.

In his suburban mood, he'll favor an easy-going naturalness in his attire. He'll wear to the office comfortable tweeds that are cut loosely and easily. He'll favor a small shaped snap-brim or off-the-face hat, possibly a raglan sleeve topcoat with bal collar and grained leather shoes.

This trend to the "two-way look" adds an extra dimension to a man's wardrobe, gives welcome scope to the free expression of his individuality and his mood of the moment.

PETES TAKE MANN CUP THIRD YEAR IN A ROW

Trailermen Defeat Victoria In Fifth Game By 8-5 To Win Series Four To One

By DON GRANT, Examiner Staff Reporter

VICTORIA, B.C. — Peterborough, the home of the Mann Cup. That's the name Peterborough will be tagged with for the next year in the Canadian sports world, for Bob Thorpe's Trailermen for the third successive year won the cup, symbolic of supremacy in senior "A" lacrosse in the dominion. Playing masterful lacrosse, capable only of champions, the Trailermen turned back the challenge for the cup by Victoria Shamrocks, western Canada champions, Wednesday night 8-5 to take the best-of-seven series, the cup and championship, four games to one.

By winning the Mann Cup, the Trailermn became the first team since 1936 to win the Canadian championship three years in a row. In fact quite by co-incidence the Trailermen are the third team to win three cups in a row, Orillia taking triple wins in 1934-35-36 and VAC from Vancouver in the days (1911) when the Mann Cup was a challenge trophy between the east and the west in field lacrosse.

It took only one quarter, the first, for the Trailermen to bring the title again to Peterborough. Breaking quickly, taking nearly all the faceoff draws and grabbing nearly every loose ball, the Peterborough boys rolled up a 4-0 lead, completely crushing any hopes the Rocks and their fans had for Victoria's first Mann Cup in 34 years.

KEPT ON TOP

From therein, the Trailermen coasted, relying upon that lead which was whittled to 5-2 at halftime, then 5-4 early in the third quarter. But Rocks' fans didn't cheer their favorites long for the Trailermen galloped ahead by three goals, 7-4, by the end of the third. They were content to match the Rocks' goal for goal in the final 15 minutes.

Playing with only 11 players, the Trailermen with their experience, brawn and speed easily out-matched the younger Rocks. This was quite evident in the first and fourth quarters when they carefully knit passing networks throughout the Rocks' defence, never throwing away the ball.

On the other hand the Rocks showed their inexperience by taking unnecessary chances and inopportune shooting. Their plays usually backfired, often resulting with the Trailermen in possession of the ball. In that way the Peterborough team controlled play.

Possibly the Rocks' greatest weakness was their inability to come up with the ball from faceoff draws. Curly Mason, a past master in the art of faceoff drawing, was to take advantage of that weakness early in the game, giving the Trailermen possession of the ball and therefore the game control.

GOT LOOSE BALLS

The Trailermen also capitalized on the Rocks' inexperience at grabbing every available loose ball. Along with Harry Wipper, Roger Smith, Ross Powless, Don (Nip) O'Hearn and others, Mason was particularly effective on loose balls, especially in the first and second quarters when he picked up two directly in front of the Rocks' goal, scoring both times.

The Trailermen, as in the first two games, threw up a stiff defence, playing the zones and switching once or twice to man to man. This defence was so hard to crack that the Rocks in desperation were forced to attempt long shots for goals.

At the same time the Trailermen made the Victoria defence look like Swiss cheese, full of holes. Either with the fast break or slow, cautious passing plays, hunting for an opening, the Thorpe-coached titlists seeped through time after time to give Rocks' Jim Hetherington a busy and very disappointing night between the pipes.

In all fairness to the Rocks, they did manage to ruffle the champions several times and actually had them running the western game. With their hustle the Rocks caught the Trailermen off guard but they didn't catch Lloyd (Moon) Wootton, the starry Peterborough netminder, napping.

JAM-UP IN THE CORNER—Dootch Vitarelli, Trailermen's captain, is shown pinned in the corner of the Victoria arena by Jack Byford of the Shamrocks, while Kenny Croft (8) of the Petes attempts to pull the ball out into play. This action took place during the fourth game of the Mann Cup series when the easterners racked up a 13-4 victory to lead the series in games by 3-1.

STARRED AGAIN

The rotund jovial Wootton, always the Trailermen's mainstay, repeatedly outguessed Rocks' Whitey Severson, Jack Northup, Spud Morelli and Lew Landess on close-in shots. The Moon's brilliance pulled the Trailermen back to life, snuffing out the Rocks' chances of taking the lead.

Rocks lacked the sparkle of the four previous games. This was due to the absence of star Archie Browning who sat on the bench after breaking his finger for the second time in a month on Monday night. Severson and Landess were ineffective without Browning.

Rumors that Gord Folka and Sid Greenwood, the referees in the third game, would be back didn't materialize. The old reliables Bill Dickinson and Bill Wilkes were back and with ease handled the game. They quickly cooled hot tempers when play became rough.

Apparently the Rocks rabid fans fully expected the Trailermen to wrap up the series Wednesday for they stayed away from the Memorial Arena for the first time since the playoffs started in the west only a month ago. After filling the arena to capacity in the first four games, the fans numbered only 3,500 for the final game. Monday night's 13-4 shellacking of their favorites, made the home crowd realize who were going to be champions.

Taking a free ball from Ken Croft in the corner, Derry Davies blasted a short screen shot past Hetherington to open the scoring. Smith followed up a minute later when he sank a rebound after Rusty Slater shot. Mason then notched the third after taking a loose ball and backhanding it past Hetherington. Powless was gated for high-sticking Sarge Sammartino, who replaced Browning. While Powless was off, Slater finished a quick break with Mason with the fourth goal with 28 seconds left in the quarter.

MADE IT COUNT

Mason turned another loose ball into a goal in 44 seconds of the second quarter. Jack Byford set Norm Coates up for the Rocks' first goal and Coates rocketed in a long screen shot. Lou Nickle was penalized for wrap-checking Harry Irwin and then Landess followed for touching the ball in the Trailermen's goal area. After they came back, Northup climaxed a solo drive by beating Wootton from five feet out for the Rocks' second goal.

Left unchecked, Spud Morelli whipped a low shot past Wootton in the third. Duff McCaghey romped around the Trailermen goal crease before beating Wootton with a backhander making the score 5-4. But the Trailermen pulled ahead when Slater, after ragging the ball broke into the clear to score, and O'Hearn went around his check, Northup, for a 7-4 score. Morelli and Powless went off for pushing each other around.

Taking a pass from Tom Druce, Landess opened the fourth by scoring on a long screen shot. Bob Thorpe, on the game's best play, took a pass on the run from Davies, shooting and beating Hetherington without pausing a second in stride. Sammartino ended the series with a crease infraction penalty.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

Latest addition to the puck-playing senior "B" Petes is a high scoring forward named Eric (Doc) Prentice. A brother of Dean Prentice of New York Rangers, the Doc has had seven years pro ice experience, joining Toronto Leafs in 1943. He has seen service with Hershey, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia of the AHL and with Los Angeles and Fresno on the Pacific Coast. For the past three winters, he played in the NOHA with South Porcupine Porkies and Rouyn Flashes. Turned down an offer to go with Sault Ste. Marie seniors this season, preferring to play in Southern Ontario for Coach Eddie Redmond of the Petes. Slim and fast, the dark-haired Doc should be popular here and a high loop scorer. He is working in Peterborough.

The several new puckists the Petes have obtained, including playing coach Ed Redmond, should make the TPT-ers a potent pack in the Central Ontario senior "B" group race. The champ Kingston Goodyears will find this squad much tougher than a year ago, and we look for a lot more fans following their fortunes comes OHA playing time again. Belleville and Orillia will be back, as will Oshawa Truckmen—using Bowmanville for "home" ice—while Stouffville Clippers will join the group if they aren't accepted in a Toronto setup. That should be known shortly, and then a schedule can be drawn up.

PCVS Squads in Action

It's high school football time once more, two exhibition tilts slated for Saturday afternoon in Riverside Park. Junior and senior Toronto Humberside teams tangle with the PCVS squads, the junior game opening the twin bill at 1.15 p.m. All McQuarrie and Charlie Ward have been drilling the junior PCI-ers right along for the schedule opener, and will find this exhibition most useful. And Bev Goulding should get a better idea of his senior prospects in the later game. No doubt a lot of Collegiate followers will be anxious to see what the 1953 football season promises for their teams, too.

Football followers of the intermediate grid Orfuns are certainly seeing some smart play by the ORFU champs. They smeared Oshawa Raiders 34-0 here last eve in another great showing for their fifth win in a row. 'Twas the fourth reverse for Oshawa, and Coach Jack Wedley must be very envious indeed of the talent Tony Kotowski has up this way. Starry Bill Huntley accounted for 13 local points while Clive Naismith, Bus Jensen, Bev Grove and Jerry O'Reilly racked up five each, and Don Bark one. However, the whole squad had to work to set up these scores, and they did a whale of a job. Solid line, perfect plunging, trick plays, passes and hefty hoofs—yes, we think they'll make it No. 6 at the Ghosts' expense Saturday aft in Cobourg.

Hail, The Champions!

Congratulations to the Peterborough Trailermen on taking the coveted Mann Cup for the third straight year. Three times Canadian senior "A" lacrosse champions, they are monarchs of all they survey in the gutted-stick world. The 8-5 win for the Thorpe team over Victoria last night on the coast gave them the series by four games to one, meaning they have lost but one game in the last two cup series. A great team. A flight leaving there at 6.10 tonight could have them into Toronto at 6.30 a.m. Friday, but the TCA today was endeavoring to get them to leave on a later flight and arrive in Toronto about one p.m. tomorrow. That is likely what will happen and they are expected to arrive in Peterborough by seven tomorrow eve. They deserve a big welcome as Canadian champs three years in a row.

Husky Ross Powless, starry Indian forward who hails from down Brantford way, was voted most valuable player in this cup series, winning the Mike Kelly award—held last year by Lou Nickle and twice before that by Moon Wootton. Ross was Petes' high scorer in the OLA race and voted most valuable player on the club before he went west. Played a fine series in Victoria to earn this added honor. The genial 24-year-old played senior out there at the age of 17, then returning east to play junior, intermediate and senior in that orded in various centres before coming her three years ago. Works as a carpenter here but his wife and kids remained in Brantford this summer, owing to the housing shortage. Vancouver would like to get Ross, and we trust the Trailermen retain him for next season. A grand player.

Down Sports' Rialto

Orfuns have obtained big Bill Middleton, an Orillia lineman . . . Prince of Wales "B" intermediate soccer team downed the "A" crew of that school 3-1 in loop play . . . . Congrats to Wimp Borland's smart young Dodgers who won the PMBA bantam ball title this week . . . . Bell Telephone took a 13-12 win o'er Foresters last e'en to lead their best-of-five Civic Softball League finals by 2-0; they go again Friday at eight p.m. in the Bowl . . . . Dick Pearson rolled a hefty 385 single in the Major Bowling League this week . . . . Scots soccer club play Bowmanville all-stars at five Saturday in King Edward Park . . . . On Oct. 3, UEW as eastern league champs meet a city and district all-star team at three in King Edward, with an eastern loop officials' banquet at seven in the Alpha Club; teams will have representatives there . . . . Local bantam and peewee lacrossers are away for playoffs on Saturday . . . . Strikes us from accounts that Curly Mason played an all-round starry game for the Trailermen out west this year . . . . Only win of the set for Victoria was that disputed 8-7 one, and those refs didn't work another game . . . And now the city council's reception committee con proceed with that dinner for Peterborough sports, champions . . . . Enough said.

P of W Boys Win

Prince of Wales' intermediate "B" school soccer team defeated P. of W. "A" squad by 3-1 this week on two goals by Scholey and one by Kemp. The losers' marker was by Thompson.

Thorpe Team Celebrates Cup Triumph

(by Don Grant, Examiner Staff Reporter)

VICTORIA B.C.,—The whistle blew. The 3,500 people moaned. The Peterborough Trailermen jumped with joy, poured out of the players' bench and rushed Lloyd (Moon) Wootton standing in the Peterborough net. That whistle meant the third successive Mann Cup for the Trailermen; the moans meant that Victoria Shamrocks had again lost in their drive toward to Canadian senior Lacrosse championship, and the rush toward Wootton was the first Trailermen step in expressing their joy at becoming champions again.

The Trailermen grabbed their starry goalie, hugging and kissing him, then they began hugging and kissing each other. They were deliriously happy.

After a couple of minutes the Trailermen settled down and received the disappointed Shamrocks who had forgotten any ill will with the final blast of the whistle. Whitey Severson, Duff McCaghey, Arn Ferguson and the rest of the Rocks' roster passed from one Trailermen to another offering their congratulations.

Then came the big moment, the presentation of the Mann Cup.

James MacLeod of Owen Sound, the Canadian Lacrosse Association president, stepped forward with the trophy. He was received with a round of boos from the staunch Victoria fans who kept up the uproar until a Shamrock executive stepped to the microphone and said, "Mr. MacLeod has been one of the best CLA presidents." Immediately the boos changed to cheers.

Mr. MacLeod said that the Victoria fans were the fairest and most appreciative "until the last five minutes". He added that he found the officials and players of the Shamrock club true sportsmen.

A GREAT MACHINE

"Naturally they're disappointed but they have lost to one of the best and most efficient lacrosse machines in recent years." said Mr. MacLeod, adding "next year things may be different."

Then on behalf of the CLA, Mr. MacLeod presented the Mann Cup to the Trailermen captain, Dootch Vitarelli. The large arena was filled with cheers, whistles and clapping by the Rocks' fans as they recognized the Trailermen as Dominion champions.

After another presentation to Ross Powless as the most valuable player in the series, the Trailermen went through a round of pictures for Victoria and Peterborough newspapers before finally leaving the floor for the dressing room.

In there they once more began congratulating each other. Then again went before the flash bulbs and cameras as the various players and fans collected souvenirs of the championship.

After showering, the Trailermen went back to the Strathcona Hotel where they've been staying for the series to freshen up. They then left for a victory celebration, arranged by the Victoria Shamrocks.

Orfuns Win Again From Oshawa To Top ORFU Race

The Peterborough Orfuns rolled to their fifth straight ORFU intermediate "A" triumph in as many starts by downing Oshawa Red Raiders 34-0 here last night before a fair-sized football crowd. It was the fourth loss in a row for the Raiders. Orfuns kept ahead of the race with Cobourg next, followed by Oshawa and the Toronto Marauders, the latter two having yet to win a game. Orfuns go to Cobourg and Toronto to Oshawa this Saturday.

It was 17-0 for Tony Kotowski's crew here in the first quarter, 28-0 at the half, and they added a converted touchdown in the third. Oshawa pressed more in the last half and were close several times but gambled on wild passes to lose on downs as the strong Orfuns' line held.

A FINE PASS

After early plunges by Thomson, Huntley and Jensen, tall Clive Naismith pulled in a fine pass from Jim Milligan and tore 20 yards for a major, the convert missing. A runback by Berry, a long pass after running wide by Jensen to Naismith, and bucks by Thomson and Huntley set them up again, Jensen knifing the line for a major, which Bill Huntley converted. After Jerry McGillis' 40-yard kick runback, Bev Groves went over on a reverse for a touchdown, the convert missing. Jerry O'Reilly intercepted a Loreno pass later and Don Bark kicked to deadline.

After a short Krawec kick in the second frame, Huntley bucked for 14 and then tore through again for 16 yards to go over standing up, the convert failing. Penalties hurt Oshawa later on, and Orfuns drove once more on jaunts by Hank Russelle, Huntley, Groves and Langhorne, with Bill Huntley finally smashing his way over for a try, which he converted.

BERT INTERCEPTS

After a kicking exchange by Bark and Krawec in the third, Loreno passed to Hood, but Groves intercepted another pass. Russelle and Fowler led the parade back toward paydirt and Jerry O'Reilly took a long pass from Dave Langhorne to fall over the line, Huntley converting for the final point of the game. Loreno had a runback of 20, with Corner and Walsh also moving the sticks, but Jensen then intercepted a pass near the quarter's close.

Oshawa pressed to open the fourth but gambled on passes and lost on downs. Fowler bucked 20 but they kicked afterward, and Loreno plunged through for 25. Walsh got nine and Kaye took a short Loreno pass as they kept moving the yardsticks down the field. Once more they gambled on passes and lost on the third down. Fowler and Jim Conlin bucked well and later, after a kick, Kirkwood intercepted a pass. However, near the finish, Oshawa were rolling strongly again with Loreno, Krawec, Hood and Walsh sparking their attack. Orfuns weren't using all their first-stringers in the fourth.

The 1952 Canadian finalists looked sharp again in this game, some great blocking and tackling being seen on the line and the backfield mixing up plays effectively. Jim Milligan got away one beautiful pass before limping off with a sore legg. Don Bark was getting fine distance with his booting, and the plunging of Huntley and Thomson in particular, with later Russelle, Jensen, Fowler, Groves, O'Reilly and Jim Conlin reeling off yardage. The receiving of Naismith and O'Reilly for tries was first-rate, Dave Langhorne — a deceptive young back—pitching one honey, and Jensen another on a wide run.

Several of the Orfuns were smart on interceptions and recovered fumbles, and there were good runbacks seen, one especially by Jerry McGillis. Johnny Giardina did a neat kickoff chore all through. Oshawa battled hard and Loreno was brilliant, but they were well-beaten by the regulars and well held by the younger Orfun players.

Oshawa: Randle, Currie, Berger, Bergerson, Barrett, Hodgson, Kaye, Bouckley, Allison, C. Beaton, Krawec, Hammond, Duffy, Walsh, Pringle, Corner, Calder, Wood, Brydson, Thresh, Miles, Freeman, Loreno, A. Beaton, Murray, Masnik, Rorabeck, Acton.

Orfuns: Thomson, Hope, Jensen, Beatty, Huntley, Jim Conlin, Berry, Bark, Naismith, Russelle, Holman, Kirkwood, Beavis, Ouellette, Fowler, McIntyre, Howe, Newark, Milligan, Giardino, Trimm, Forrester, J. McGillis, Groves, D. McGillis, Berthelot, Brioux, Langhorne, O'Reilly.

Officials, D. Mumford, C. Fitzgizzon, A. McDougall.

Braves Beat Out Cardinals For 2-1 Victory

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

Robin Roberts is going to fall considerably short of some of the glowing predictions made for him early in the season, but the Philadelphia strong boy has still had quite a year. Contrary to some of the optimistic experts, Roberts didn't: 1. Win 30 games. 2. Pitch 400 innings. 3. Start every third day without a break. But with one more starting assignment to come before the season ends Sunday, the Phillies' right-hander is sure to:

1. Win 23 and possibly 24 games, as many or more than anybody else in either league.

2. Pitch more innings than any National Leaguer since Grover Cleveland Alexander in 1920, and more than anybody except Alexander in the league since 1907.

3. Start more games than any other pitcher in the league this year.

EDGES GIANTS

Roberts won his 23rd game Wednesday night, edging New York Giants 2-1 on six hits. It was his 40th start and his 33rd complete contest. For the 14th time this season he didn't walk a man.

Despite a weak month starting in early August, Roberts' control record has been phenomenal. He leads the league in strikeouts with 196 and has walked only 61 men, an average of less than one every five innings.

Roberts probably will start Sunday against the champion Brooklyn Dodgers. So far he's worked 340 innings, 10 more than last year. With another two innings there'll be nobody between him and Alexander on the workhorse list. Alexander pitched 389 innings in 1916, 388 in 1917 and 363 in 1920.

Another pretty fair pitcher, who turned in one of his usual excellent performances Wednesday night was Warren Spahn of Milwaukee Braves. He beat St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 for his 22nd victory.

The combination of Roberts and Spahn moved the Phillies and Cards into an exact tie for third place. Each club has three games to play.

YANKS VICTORIOUS

In other action Wednesday the pennant-winning New York Yankees defeated Philadelphia 3-1 and Cleveland clinched second place in the American League for the second straight year with an 8-3 verdict over Chicago. Larry Doby broke a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning with his 29th home run. Bob Lemon went the distance for his 21st victory.

Cincinnati nursed its hopes for a fifth-place finish with a 4-3 decision over Chicago Cubs. The Redlegs, assured of at least sixth, where they've finished the last three seasons, trail the fifth-place Giants by a game and a half.

Ed Lopat took a seven-inning world series workout against the Athletics and everybody on the Yankees was satisfied. He gave up a run, eight hits, walked no one and struck out four.

went on to clinch second place with an 8-3 decision over Chicago.

Expect Plenty Of Base Hits During Series

NEW YORK (AP) — There's bound to be plenty of base hits ringing around Yankee Stadium and Ebbets Field once the Yankee and Dodger outfielders set their world series batting sights.

In Jackie Robinson, Duke Snider and Carl Furillo the Dodgers boast one of the most formidable hitting outfields ever to perform in a series. Furillo currently leads the National League in batting with .344, Snider is runner-up at .337 and Robinson is sixth with .332.

Furillo, a consistent hitter all year, has been sidelined with a broken finger since Sept. 6, but is expected to be ready for action next Wednesday.

Although their over-all averages aren't as high as Brooklyn's outfielders, the Yankees also have a potent threesome in Gene Woodling, Mickey Mantle and Hank Bauer. Woodling is hitting .309, Bauer .305 and switch-hitting Mantle .301.

Royals Wallop Buffalo With 7-0 Lashing

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The only thing between Montreal's International League Royals baseball club and the Governors' Cup today is Rochester Red Wings—a tough obstacle no matter from which angle you look at the situation.

The Montreal - Rochester deal came about Wednesday night when the Royals shellacked Buffalo Bisons 7-0, eliminating them from the cup hunt 4-2.

The first game of the best-of-seven final series will be staged in Rochester tonight and manager Wally Alston of the Royals is expected to start lefty Ken Lehman, who won 13 games and lost nine during the regular season.

TO START RUPERT

The first two games of the series will be held in Rochester. The series then swings back to Montreal for three games with the remaining two contests, if necessary, at Rochester.

Wednesday night, Montreal's ace lefty, Tom LaSorda, who had a 17-8 record over the regular season, travelled the route, blanking the Bisons on four scattered hits.

Ross Powless Winner Of MVP Medal

(By Don Grant, Examiner Staff Reporter)

VICTORIA B.C.—Just as the Mann Cup returned to Peterborough for the third straight year Wednesday night, the Mike Kelly award did too, also for the third successive year. It's awarded annually to the player most valuable to his team during the Mann Cup series.

After his best year in the Peterborough Trailermen lineup, Ross Powless climaxed his 1953 playing career honors by winning he Kelly Trophy. He was selected by radio and newspaper men covering the series as the best player in the five games.

Last year when the Timbermen defeated Vancouver Pilseners in four straight games for the cup, Lou Nickle, sturdy defenceman, won the Kelly award. In the two previous series, the Trailermen's goalie, Lloyd (Moon) Wootton was voted top player in the Canadian championship games. Therefore with the award going to Powless this year it is the first time in four years that the award has gone to a forward.

This was the 13th time that the trophy has been presented and it gives the east a 7-6 edge on its possession during that time.

James McConihey of Vancouver, in presenting the award to Powless, said that it was presented by Gene Dopp, CLA secretary-treasurer, in memory of Kelly of whom he thought a great deal.

"It gives me great pleasure to see you with the medal." said the westerner.

FELT TOO GOOD

In answer to calls for a speech from the Rocks' fans, who cheered the young Mohawk youth as though he was a Shamrock, Powless could only muster, "I haven't much to say, I feel too good."

Powless went through a round of hugs and kisses once more by his teammates with whom he's very popular.

The newspapermen and radio announcers based their final decision on Powless's great two-way game and his sportsmanlike conduct throughout the five games.

He was the spark-plug on the Russ Slater-Curly Mason-Roger Smith line which produced about 70 per cent of the series' goals for the champions.

Just as he worked the ball up the floor Powless backchecked. He was always running, always reaching his destination, living up to his earlier distinction as the most valuable player on the Trailermen roster during the regular league schedule.

It was a close decision between Powless and Lloyd (Moon) Wootton, the Trailermen's stellar goaltender. Wootton also lived up to his reputation as Canada's best lacrosse goalie during the series.

A GREAT GOALIE

Wootton amazed the Shamrock fans with his movements in the goal and repeatedly earned their applause as he came up with brilliant saves on goal attempts by their favorites, Archie Browning, Whitey Severson, Jack Northup and Bill Bamford. Like Powless, he was admired for his goaltending abilities by the rabid Rock fans.

Next in line for the award were Russ Slater and Harry Wipper. The expert stickhandler and penalty-killer, Slater earned his position high up in the valued with his performances during the first, second and fifth games. Besides ragging the ball for minutes during penalties, Slater was also one of the Trailermen's top scorers.

Wipper also earned his place for his penalty-killing and his solo sweeps up the floor. He was a continual threat to any Rock attack, easily tying up any of their ball-carriers. The Whip also scored three important goals as he came through when a goal was really needed.

Incidentally the only other Kelly award winner in the arena Wednesday night besides Wootton, Nickle and Powless, was one of the referees, Bill Wilkes.

Swimmer, 21 Polio Victim In Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP)—A young Winnipeg swimmer who last year won the men's amateur two-mile swim at the Canadian National Exhibition is waging the toughest battle of his life today, far from any swimming pool.

Stricken with polio in July, Hart Devenney, Jr., 21, is in an iron lung trying to throw off the paralysis affecting most of his body.

Son of the provincial recreation director, Hart Devenney, Hart took naturally to sports. When he started swimming at the YMCA pool at nine, his ability was spotted by veteran coach A. H. (Pop) Sidwell.

CAPTAIN OF TEAM

In his first two years at the University of Manitoba, he was captain of the swimming team and set two records in competition. He made a bid for Canada's Olympic team but missed by a slight margin in time trials.

When he won the two-mile swim at the CNE, the city of Winnipeg presented him with a ring as a Canadian champion. Devenney said then he had no intention of turning professional but had his eye on the 1954 British Empire games in Vancouver.

Medical authorities, who have worked around his iron lung for more than two months, say he is living in hope and battling like a champion to regain his health.

Hal Grattan Patch Winner At Lindsay

LINDSAY (ENS)—Hal Grattan Patch, owned by Hie and Gordon of Cobourg, and driven by Jack Gordon, won both ends of the premier stake to take the $1,000 Dufferin Park purse at the opening day of the Lindsay Central Exhibition Wednesday.

The winner captured the first heat over Mac Volo, owned by S. Blewett, in 2.14 2-5, and the second after losing and regaining the lead to Beth Hanover, owned by Les Ireland in 2.13 1-4.

Mayor Charles Lamb new director of harness racing for the ORC presented the blanket to the winner after the second heat.

Six horses entered the race for three-year-old pacers and aged horses that had not won $3,000 at time of closing. Mac Volo won second, with a place finish in the first heat and fourth in the second. Country Lad, owned and driven by Garnet Kirkpatrick, took show position in both heats. Beth Hanover was fourth, Peter Van D owned by Wm. Sharpe, fifth, and Richard Grattan, owned by Orville Cunningham, sixth. The race was the feature of the opening day of the four-day exhibition. Two races, three heats each, will be run on the final days including the free-for-all on Saturday closing day.

Bell Telephone edged Foresters 13-12, Wednesday night at East City Bowl in the second hectic battle of their best-of-five final series for the Men's Civic Loop softball championship. It was a hard-fought game from start to finish; and though the Phonemen held the lead throughout, Ralph Parnell's men camped on the doorstep all the way; and narrowly missed victory in the ninth with a rally that fell shy one run of a tie.

Tall Bud Guerin took over the mound duties for Chum Gillespie's defending champs, opposing lefty Paul Maloney, and though hit hard at times, both twirlers pitched courageously for their respective teams with honors about even.

GOT SEVEN RUNS

Bell staged a seven run rally in the bottom of the third frame that shook Foresters defence to its foundations. Three costly errors with solid bingles this inning gave Bell a strong lead; but Foresters continued to battle hard in adversity and fortune smiled in the fourth when the big bats of Bobby Walling, Dave Quigley, Bill Stewart, Paul Maloney, and Art Tyndall smote the melon for five runs. Three more in the fifth put IOF back in the ball game and a battle royal ensued. Bell came on for three in their half and as many in the fifth; but the Parnell-coached pack scored a pair in the seventh when Art Jones hoisted the sphere over the right field fence with Downer aboard.

Foresters rallied for two more in the ninth as Schweir and Tyndall scored; but with two away, James tagged Hall attempting to score for the third out, on a close play. Minus their manager, currently under suspension following a run in with umpire Olmstead in Monday's game, Foresters played serious ball with good results and Friday's game should prove a thriller.

50 Players At Workout

GUELPH (CP)—Fifty players of Guelph Biltmores of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A series held a workout here Wednesday in preparation for their exhibition game Friday night with Toronto Marlboros.

The players learned that Bob Attersley, Oshawa Generals' top-notch forward, will play under Biltmore colors this year. Attersley was one of nine Oshawa players distributed evenly among the league when the Generals announced they would suspend operations for one year.

Coach Alf Pike will mould his team around a nucleus of holdovers: Bill McCreary, who played briefly for Marlboros last season; Chick Chalmers, Irvin Scott, Jim Holmes and George Whyte.

Dodgers Take PMBA Title Over East City

Dodgers won the PMBA bantam championship over East City by three games to one. Each team had earlier taken a win in the best-of-five bantam city finals, one game was tied, and another was halted by darkness. Wimp Borland's boys then captured both ends of a twin bill at the Bowl to take the title after a good season.

In the abbreviated first game, Allan Wade pitched no-hit ball in six frames, fanning seven and walking one, as his side won 8-1. They got two runs in the third inning and six in a big fifth, while the losers worked a walk, two steals by Clement and an out for a run in the third. McArthur had one hit in one and Patterson one for two, as Anthony allowed but two bingles, whiffing five but walking six. His support was shaky. Ralph Rowe, Bob Whitehill and Larry Griffin fielded well for the winners, who had no miscues, and Dinsdale and Paul were best for the losers, that team booting four.

ONE-SIDED TILT

The second game, also six innings, saw Dodgers roll to a 15-2 victory, Wade hurling four-hit ball and whiffing a dozen as he walked but three and had just one error behind him. Kimball at bat clouted two in three, Wayne Rowe got two in four, while Wade helped his cause with two for two. Gord McArthur hit safely once in one official try. Ralph Rowe and Jerry Kimball belted triples, as Wayne Rowe had two doubles, and Larry Griffin, Bob Whitehill, Al Wade and Gord McArthur one each. Doug Patterson and Kimball shone afield.

Foley gave six hits in one and two-third innings, Anthony three in one, and Moher four in three and a third. Foley fanned one and walked three, Anthony whiffed one and gave two free tickets, Moher striking out four and walking eight. East City booted five. Dinsdale and Tetlock each had two for two at bat, as Dorrington and Anthony went good defensively. Teams:

Chain Reaction May Be Horse Of The Year

TORONTO (CP)—Chain Reaction established himself as a strong candidate for Canada's "horse of the year" honors Wednesday when he won the 63rd running of the Breeders Stakes at Woodbine. His win boosted his season's earnings to more than $34,000.

In registering his ninth win in 14 starts this year, the brown three-year-old colt, owned by Mrs. Joseph Tomlinson of Oakville and Winnipeg, conceded seven pounds to three of his eight rivals.

Winter Lady, owned by Olive Armstrong, finished second—three lengths behind the winner—and E. P. Taylor's Lively Action was third. The winner, an odds-on favorite, paid $3.40 and ran the nine furlongs in 1.51 3-5.

The Dutchmen, farm club of Ottawa Rough Riders of the Big Four, extended their unbeaten string to four games Wednesday night with a 36-13 triumph over Brantford Redskins, last-place club in the league last year who have yet to win a game this season. It was the Redskins' fourth straight loss, and their second to Kitchener.

The victory gave Kitchener eight points, four more than the idle Sarnia Imperials and Toronto Balmy Beach, tied in the runner-up position. The Dutchmen hold victories over the Imperials and Beaches—20-16 over Sarnia and 24-14 over the Toronto club.

DIRECTS ATTACK

Playing coach Gerry Tuttle, from Kent, O., who handled Balmy Beach last year, directed the Dutchmen's attack, sending them into a 24-0 first-quarter lead and 36-3 going into the final quarter.

The 26-year-old import tossed four touchdown passes in the opening 15 minutes to sew up the game. The Redskins made it 24-3 at the half with a second-quarter field goal by Harry Harriston and Kitchener struck for two converted touchdowns in the third quarter.

Boris Kotoff intercepted a Kitchener pass and ran 35 yards for a Brantford touchdown in the fourth quarter and quarter Glenn Dawson tossed a touchdown strike to Stan Terejko late in the game to end the scoring.

John Mancos, a 23-year-old import who also comes from Kent, paced Kitchener scorers with three touchdowns and a single. Toronto-born Sully Ford went over for two and Nat Pagnan, a native of Guelph, scored one. Ron Tracey, who played two years with the University of Western Ontario Mustangs in the senior intercollegiate union, kicked five converts.

Barons Cut 12 Players From List Of Hopefuls

The 12 include Ray Cunningham of Cornwall, and Pete Kamula, Ian Cushenan and Hugh Barlow, all of Hamilton.

The Barons will play exhibition games in St. Catharines and Owen Sound before returning to Barrie for an exhibition game with Toronto Maple Leafs Oct. 6.

FACE FUTURE WITH MUSIC—A group of Chinese PoWs who refuse to return to their Communist homeland pass the time by playing improvised musical instruments. In line with the terms of the Korean truce, they will be turned over to the Indian troops, who are supervising prisoners who refuse repatriation.

Rocky Marciano Risks Crown Tonight

By MURRAY ROSE

The 26-year-old New Yorker firmly believes he beat Marciano—Rocky won a split decision—in their first meeting 3½ years ago and he is sure he is going to make it official in the ball park with some 32,000 fans looking on.

Despite the challenger's optimism there were only a few of the fight experts who believed the ex-collegian would be able to escape the numbing blows of the aggressive, powerful 29-year-old champion.

ODDS 4 TO 1

The odds were 4 to 1 that the undefeated Brockton blaster would win; 12 to 5 that LaStarza would be knocked out; 9 to 5 that Roland wouldn't finish 12 rounds and even money he wouldn't complete eight rounds. It was 8 to 1 that LaStarza wouldn't stop the durable Marciano.

There was only light wagering reported on the actual outcome itself. Most of the betting was concentrated on how many rounds the scrap would go.

Starting time for the outdoor bout is 10:30 p.m. EDT. There will be no television or broadcast into homes direct from ringside. A telecast will be beamed over a closed circuit to 45 theatres in 34 cities from coast to coast and some TV and radio stations plan brief summaries at the end of each round.

STICKS TO PREDICTION

With the weather man forecasting fair and warmer weather, president Jim Norris of the International Boxing Club stuck to his prediction that the fight would gross about $400,000. The IBC will collect a minimum of $100,000 from the theatre-cast, making a possible total of $500,000.

If the total reaches $500,000, Rocky, in for 42½ per cent, will receive about $170,000. LaStarza, who gets 17½ per cent, will collect about $70,000. Roland's previous highest purse was the $13,000 he earned when he dropped the controversial 10-rounder to Rocky in Madison Square Garden March 24, 1950—the turning point in the careers of both fighters.

LaStarza faces his big fight with complete confidence in himself and no thought of any immediate change in his occupation.

"I think I'm going to win. I always think I'm going to win a fight. It'll be a tough fight, but I don't know why I should be afraid."

Golden Gaels Hope to Climb Out of Cellar Position

By MURRAY KENNEDY

KINGSTON (CP) — A virtually-new team with unknown potentialities, Queen's University Golden Gaels this season hope to rise above last year's cellar-position in the Intercollegiate Football Union.

The Gaels were the hardest hit by graduations of any team. Coach Frank Tindall, who renewed a two-year contract after resigning earlier in the year, has the task of replacing 20 of last season's first team. They include intercollegiate all-star end, Tony Arnoldi, now with Toronto Balmy Beach of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

"The team is lighter this year," said Tindall, "but I hope a bit faster.

"With so many few faces on the practice field we aren't too sure just what we will come up with. Some of the boys look in fine shape and will certainly help us. A better idea of the club will be gained following the week-end exhibition game against the Beaches."

WILL MISS LANE

Tindall will miss another fine end besides Arnoldi, namely Ron Lane, speedster from Sudbury. All tackles but one, John McCombe, are gone, including John Varcoe, Jack McGee (with Beaches) and Stu Kennedy. Guards Vic Uzbalis, Pete Johnston and Walter Waddell have left through graduation or other reasons.

Centres Hank Sandlos and Don Buhner are gone. Missing also are quarterbacks Don Griffin and Emil Chrynuk, the latter one of the most promising players Tindall used last year.

Of eight backfielders Queen's had in 1952, only three will be back. Jack Sisson, Don Ball, Ken Atwood, Bill Gatfield, Brian Timmis, Bill Surphlis, Bob Bevan and John Sopinka have left. Sopinka, who turned up at fall training this year, departed for Toronto recently to take further studies in law.

REBUILDING JOB

From there Tindall has a complete rebuilding job, using some of the Queen's intermediates, last year's St. Lawrence champions, and new faces on the gridiron. Attracting favorable attention is Gary Schreider, 170-pound halfback from Toronto St. Michael's. Also showing well at practices is Don Marston from Fort William, trying out at end. He is six foot, six and eighs 200 pounds.

Notables from the intermediates are ends Keith Hawkins, Al Poutanen, Jack Zwirewick, 190-pound tackle and Olympics rower from Hamilton; Floyd Bajjaly, 225-pound lineman from Watertown, N. Y. Back with the Gaels after a year's absence is Gary Lewis, six-foot-two, 190-pounder from California. Lewis, captain of the team this year, will be regular centre, and is expected to carry most of the load on the Queen's defensive patterns.

Last year's record of two wins in seven league games didn't speak well for the Queen's team, but coach Tindall claims three of the losses, two to Toronto and one to McGill, could be blamed on inexperienced players.

"Every one of those games was lost as a direct result of mistakes by first-year men," Tindall said. "Even in our losses against Western, statistics show we were on a par with the Mustangs."

Queen's opens the season at home against McGill Redmen.

ROCKY ROAD TO PETES' GOAL—The above bit of action, shown in the fourth Mann Cup playoff Monday—which Petes won to give them a 3-1 series lead over Victoria—indicates that the western players found it a rocky road indeed to the Peterborough goal. Whitey Severson is shown on the attack with the ball but he is being checked closely all the way in by Petes' Dootch Vitarelli, while Goalie Moon Wootton awaits the outcome of the play.

BROADCAST BAN UPSET

NEW YORK (AP)—The International Boxing Club's ban on round-by-round broadcasts of tonight's Marciano-LaStarza fight was upset Wednesday by a small, foreign-language radio station here.

A court ruling gave station WOV the right to broadcast round-by-round in the past tense. No restriction was placed on its right to make such a broadcast from a rooftop overlooking the Polo Grounds fight scene or anywhere else outside the park.

In the light of the court ruling, the IBC withdrew its original ban on round-by-round, to permit a brief, past-tense summary at the end of each round. Few stations were expected to take advantage of it, however, at this late date.

IBC sold the rights to televise the heavyweight championship fight in 45 theatres in 34 cities outside of New York for $100,000. Then it tried to limit broadcasts to a 75-word summary after every three rounds.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, Wash., radio station KVAN went even further than WOV and planned to re-create the fight blow-by-blow with sound effects in open defiance of the IBC. The re-creation will be based on wire-service summaries of the fight.

TROY UPSETS SALA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Willie Troy, a promising young Washington middleweight, knocked out veteran Lee Sala of Pittsburgh Wednesday night in the fifth round of their nationally-televised fight.

At 158 Troy was outweighed by five pounds.

SCRIBES PICK ROCKY

NEW YORK (AP)—Thirty-three of 37 sports writers polled at fight headquarters Wednesday picked heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano to defeat Roland LaStarza in their title bout at the Polo Grounds tonight.

Of the 33 plumping for the 4-to-1 favorite, 29 predicted the Brockton, Mass., bomber would win by a knockout.

CANUCKS GET MacDOUGALL

MOOSE JAW (CP)—Ab MacDougall, veteran western Canadian hockey star, will handle Moose Jaw Canucks of the Western Junior Hockey League during the 1952-53 season, club president George Vogan announced Tuesday.

DREAM ROLLS ON

DELAWARE, O. (AP)—Newport Dream won the $12,800 Ohio Standard-bred Futurity in effortless fashion Wednesday to continue his domination of the United States two-year-old trotting competition.

In winning his 17th and 18th heat victories in 20 starts, Newport Dream boosted his earnings to $86,022—the most ever won by a two-year-old harness horse. He finished a good two lengths ahead each time with his miles clocked in 2:06 2-5 and 2:07 3-5.

NEW YORK (AP)—E. P. Taylor's Navy Page closed with a rush in the final quarter to win the 84th running of the Jerome Handicap—third oldest stakes race in the United States—at Belmont Park Wednesday. He returned $23.50 to straight bettors.

The son of War Admiral-Our Page overhauled George D. Widener's Scent, 30-to-1 long shot, outside the 16th pole and went on to score by half a length.

Third money was split between Brookmeade's First Aid and James Cox Brady's Landlocked, which finished 2¾ lengths back.

Navy Page earned $18,800 for his Toronto owner. It was the third victory for the horse in 13 starts, but only his first U.S. win.

SET RELAY RECORD

LONDON (AP)—A British quartet Wednesday night bettered the world record for the 6,000-metre relay with a time of 15 minutes, 27.2 seconds.

The British effort came several hours after a Hungarian quartet had lowered the world mark for the same relay in a race in Budapest against a Russian team.

The listed mark of 15:30.2 was established by a Swedish quartet in 1949.

LUNA GOES HIGH

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Pitcher Guillerjo (Memo) Luna of San Diego, Calif., the Pacific Coast League's earned-run leader, was acquired by St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday in a deal believed to involve a large amount of money.

The Cardinals announced they "paid cash, plus players acceptable to both clubs and to be named at a later date." Unofficial reports placed the cash sum involved at more than $75,000.

FIGHT DAMAGE SUIT

HAMILTON (CP)—Executives of Hamilton Tiger-Cats Wednesday decided to fight a $10,000 damage suit by Stan Heath, former Nevada University quarterback.

Club attorney John F. Reesor said: "I consider the club's position extremely sound and we intend to resist any action to the fullest extent."

Heath launched the suit against the Big Four football club Tuesday, charging he was "unjustly dismissed."

NEW WORLD AHEAD

OYSTER BAY, N.Y. (CP)—New-world yachts Wednesday swept the first four races to go one up on their old-world rivals in the international six-metre sailing competition.

The new world is represented by Canada and the United States; the old world by yachts from Switzerland, Britain, Italy, Belgium, Norway, and Sweden. Both Canadian yachts are owned by R. W. Newkirk of Toronto.

The Canada-U.S. team now has two wins as against one for Europe. Four wins are needed to take the cup.

CHESS MATCHES DRAWN

ZURICH (CP)—Five matches in the 14th round of the world championship chess challengers' tournament were drawn Wednesday—three in less than 20 moves.

As the 15-round tournament neared its end, Vassily Smyslov of Russia held first place by a full point over Samuel Reshevsky of the United States.

R. Pearson Rolls 385

T. C. Signorotti had high three of 897 and Dick Pearson top single of 385 this week in the Major Bowland UE tied in best single games ing League. Burtol's 3761 paced teams for pinnage, while Burtol with 1354. The loop is settling down early into a close race, and Dick Pearson came close to a perfect game with all strikes and two spares for his big one.

The 7-0 wins went to Burton, Paramount, Crowley, Lock, Godson and Boucher over Clements, E and B, Selkirk, Clapper, Bartley and Sherbrooke; the 5-2 victories were taken by Patterson, Johnson, UE, and McLeod over Hewitt, Curtis, Plaza and Revenoors. D and W won 4-3 from Silents, and Wonder took a 4-3 win from Edwards.

Good scores included: W. Howes 752, W. Harris (318) 818, J. Johnstone (320) 748, R. Pearson 746, F. Hurley 826, J. Dormer 769, G. Walton 725, W. Miller 715, H. Roberts 712, D. Abraham 840, A. Caccavella 767, M. Mackey 740, A. Griffin 710 and G. Pagett 777.

Open Training Camp

KITCHENER (CP) — Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen of the Ontario Hockey Association senior A series announced Wednesday that they will open training camp for the coming season at Guelph's Memorial Arena Friday night.

Dutchmen, winners of the Allan Cup last year, are expected to have 22 players trying out with them. Six have already signed. Kitchener has acquired playing rights to right-winger Sam Kennedy who led the loop with 48 goals last year while playing for Brantford.

Kennedy Surprises Leafs Leading Scorer To Date

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Teeder Kennedy, usually a slow starter in the Toronto Maple Leaf hockey training camp, is rolling like a ball of fire this season. The hard-working centre may be heading for his greatest season in his National Hockey League career.

After seven practice scrimmages Kennedy is the team's leading point scorer with four goals and four assists. What's more, his line, completed by Sid Smith at left wing and rookie Bob Bailey on right, is the top-scoring unit with 21 points.

Players think that Kennedy's added weight is the big reason for his improvement, giving him added strength. The Leafs' captain, who finished the season last year weighing 178 pounds, now is 185.

IN GOOD CONDITION

However, Kennedy, out much of last year's schedule with a shoulder injury, says the answer is condition.

Bailey is the real surprise package on the club. Purchased from Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League, the six-foot, 180 pound bruiser has been converted from a centre to a right-winger. His three goals and four assists are second only to Kennedy's total.

Gordie Hannigan replaced Howie Meeker, moving to right wing with Danny Lewicki and Ron Stewart. Meeker, who has been ailing ever since he injured his back in a game last year, aggravated the injury while tossing a medicine ball in a physical training session Tuesday and left for Toronto for a medical examination.

THE SUBURBAN INFLUENCE is expressed in a soft textured cheviot patch pocket suit and brushed felt hat.

Urban, Suburban Wear Gain

While most men may not realize it they have dual personalities when it comes to dress.

Today's business man has emerged from the stereotyped stuffed look. This has caused a wide divergence in the appearance of the business suit. More and more casually styled clothing is being worn to more offices by more men.

Yet in urban centres the trim dressy suit in dark colors follows the more formal Homburg. This results in two different appearances and a dual personality in dress. As a result, clothes styled for urban and suburban wear show large gains.

Sharkskin worsteds with small overcheck, dark worsteds, flannels and saxonies exemplify the trim town look. Soft textured Nubby Touch tweeds, colorful slubs, nubs and splashes with easy lines, patch pockets and centre vents exemplify suburban styling.

TO TOURISTS IN GERMANY it would seem there's a war going on, but in reality it's only NATO troops starting the Allied war games to prepare against any possible aggression. Pictures above show some of the troops in action during "Operation Monte Carlo." U.S. troops operating in the Frankfurt region were supported by more than 175,000 British, French and Belgian troops, who assaulted "Eastland" forces in the war games which were held near Giesden, not far from the Soviet border.

Adjourn Hearing On Application

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario labor relations board has adjourned a hearing on the application of Matthew A. Heeley of Thorold to prosecute Provincial Paper, Ltd., and the International Brotherhood of Pulp and Paper Workers (AFL-TLC) for unjust dismissal.

Testimony at Tuesday's hearing was that Mr. Heeley was hired by the paper company last March. The union has a closed-shop agreement requiring all employees to join within 15 days. Mr. Heeley said he applied for union membership but no action was taken on his application. At the end of 15 days he was fired.

H. B. Stevens, counsel for Mr. Heeley, said the company fired Mr. Heeley after receiving a letter from the union pointing out that he had not joined the union.

Board chairman Jacob Finkelman will set a date later for resuming the hearing.

Certain Reservations On Moral Rearmament

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — Hans Gottfurcht, assistant general secretary of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, said Wednesday that ICFTU had made "certain reservations" on the Moral Re-Armament movement in a recent report by general secretary J. H. Oldenbrock.

Gottfurcht denied reports that the ICFTU had "condemned" MRA as an organization.

"The report on the MRA was made because ICFTU, which has always observed the basic principle of religious neutrality, is concerned that the movement is interfering with trade unions.

"The MRA is trying to introduce its directives into factories. We believe that the movement should be prevented from encroaching upon trade union preserves."

Teachers Demand Own Salary Schedule

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario educationist warns that secondary education in the province will suffer "a disastrous blow" if secondary school teachers fail to win back their own salary schedule.

Dr. H. O. Barrett, newly-elected president, made the statement Tuesday at a meeting of district 7 of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation which reaffirmed demands that the Toronto board of education's new single salary schedule be thrown out.

The board set the single scale two years ago, abandoning an earlier scheme whereby secondary school teachers received a higher rate than public school teachers.

Canada Can Afford Build Seaway Herself

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Robert Saunders said Wednesday that Canada can well afford to build the St. Lawrence seaway herself and the Ontario hydro-electric power commission is ready to start work on the power phase as soon as agreement is reached with the United States.

Mr. Saunders, chairman of the commission, addressed a party of 300 delegates to the American Association of Port Authorities convention in Toronto who toured this area.

Mr. Saunders said U.S. consent to the seaway is not necessary for its construction and that he hopes for a U.S.-Canada treaty on the power project soon.

AAPA delegates inspected hydro-electric installations in this area.

Bagpipe Classified As Musical Instrument

Duff Roblin, Progressive Conservative member of the Manitoba legislature for Winnipeg South, is named in the 1953 listing of the Winnipeg Musicians Association under "bagpipes."

He said it wasn't a mistake, and explained:

"I was talking to a musician one day. He mentioned that he was in the union, and suddenly it hit me. I said 'I'll bet I can get in with my bagpipes,' and sure enough I did."

Laplante Sentenced To Be Hanged Jan. 8

MONTREAL (CP)—Robert Laplante, 37, was sentenced Wednesday to be hanged Jan. 8 for the pistol-slaying April 28 of taxi-driver Andre Leon Lorge.

Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure pronounced the death sentence after a Court of Queen's Bench jury had deliberated 24 minutes before finding Laplante guilty.

The 47-year-old Lorge was found in a gutter at the waterfront intersection of McGill and Wellington streets. He had been robbed of $8.

Also accused in the shooting is 19-year-old Guy Fisette who will go on trial for murder next Monday.

Utilities Magnate's Widow Mrs. Margaret Insull Dies

CHICAGO (CP)—Mrs. Margaret Insull, widow of the one-time public utilities magnate Samuel Insull, died Wednesday. She was 80.

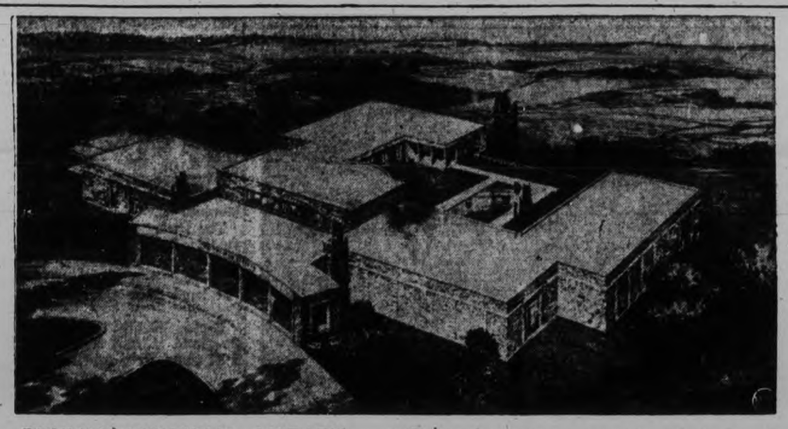
She followed her husband to Europe where he fled in 1932 when his financial empire collapsed. When he was arrested later, she returned and was with him during his court trials and acquittal on federal charges of mail fraud.

In 1937 they returned to Paris, where Insull died a year later.

Mrs. Insull, who is survived by a son, Samuel, Jr., an insurance broker, and a grandson, Samuel Insull III, had lived here since her husband's death.

At one of his trials Insull testified he was penniless. But at one time he had a fotrune estimated at $100,000,000 and the value of his companies was estimated at $400,000,000,000.

His brother, Martin, who also was charged with fraud in the Chicago case, was fishing in Orillia in 1935 when word came that he had been cleared of the fraud charge. The English-born financier had never taken out citizenship papers in the United States and was debarred from the U.S. for a year when he sought re-entry. He later decided to take up permanent residence in Canada and he died in Orillia in May, 1947.



TRUMAN MEMORIAL LIBRARY — Here is an artist's cnoception of the proposed Truman Library in Grandview, Mo. The library, which will hold most of President Truman's writings executed while he was in public office, is located on the old Truman farm, five miles south of Kansas City. President Truman donated 50 acres of land as the library site.

Identify Body Found Buried In Extra Coffin

FRONSAC, France (Reuters)—The body of a "beautiful blonde in an off-the-shoulder evening dress" found buried in a mysterious 13th coffin at this village near Bordeaux has turned out to be that of a 71-year-old woman who died in 1919.

But the "mystery of the 13th coffin" remains. For no one knows how this woman, identified Wednesday by police as Madame Ernestine Viaud, came to be buried in the tomb of the Dorneau family.

The mystery began two weeks ago when the Dorneau vault was opened for repairs and it was found the 12 late members of the family had an uninvited lodger.

Reports said the 13th coffin contained the body of a shapely blonde in an off-shoulder red evening dress and high-heeled black shoes.

Villagers promptly decided that she must be a beautiful young actress who had disappeared in Fronsac during the German occupation and was said to have been tortured and killed by Nazis.

Paid Advertising Advantages Stressed

VICTORIA (CP) — Paid advertising is the only truly effective medium to convey management's public relations message, Ridge Harlan told the American Association of Advertising Agencies convention here Wednesday.

Mr. Harlan, a member of the public relations department of Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborne Ltd., San Francisco, said such ads shouldn't be called "institutional."

"They are ads to sell ideas," he said. "They should sell ideas believably, humanly."

Mr. Harlan said other avenues of public relations were valuable, but could not be controlled as exactly as paid advertising.

Need More 'Characte rs' In Canada President Of Universi ty Tells Students

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto, said Wednesday that there are not enough "characters" in Canada.

He urged incoming students in an address at the fall opening of the university to develop "a critical spirit that can stand up against all the dreary platitudes and pallid insanities that assail us."

He said he was not praising eccentricity for its own sake—"although Canada could easily support some more 'characters.'

"Every day we are adjured through pictures, print and propaganda to pursue the same goals, admire the same people, enjoy the same pastimes, wear the same clothes and think the same thoughts. There are hundreds of clubs and societies—political, social, professional, industrial and even cultural—which tend to submerge the individual in the tide of conventional mediocrity.

"The most valuable member of society is the man or woman who has the capacity for dissent, who sets up a resistance to mass movements and mass ideas."

Employment Sets Record

OTTAWA (CP)—A record number of Canadians were working full time in August, the government reported Wednesday. The 4,820,000 working 35 hours or more showed an increase of 214,000 from a year earlier, the labor department and the bureau of statistics said in their monthly employment survey.

Order Two Men Before Assizes

SWEETSBURG, Que. (CP)—Two men have been ordered to appear before criminal assizes on a charge of theft of military huts in 1949 from the army camp at Farnham, Que. A third man was released.

Georges Couture and Rene Lusignan Tuesday were ordered for trial after Judge Patrick Delaney had taken under advisement evidence presented at their preliminary hearing Aug. 28. He said evidence against the two warranted trial.

However, he found evidence insufficient to commit for trial Raymond Chevalier. A fourth man, Real Angers, will appear next Tuesday to hear Judge Delaney's decision in his case. He faces similar charges in connection with the thefts.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER—It didn't take the Army long to ship Stephen Krawczyk, of Cleveland, Ohio, to foreign service during World War I, but it took them 35 years to award him the Silver Star for heroic action. It was so long ago that the 58-year-old former machine gunner can't remember just exactly what he did to get the medal, but he believes it has belatedly been presented for saving a wounded soldier's life.

Admit Statement By Accused At Murder Trial

GUELPH (CP)—A statement alleged to have been made by the accused man was admitted Wednesday at the murder trial of Jeffrey Robertson, 21, charged with the fatal shooting of his uncle, John Mackie, 48.

The statement, admitted by Mr. Justice R. I. Ferguson, said Mackie had been threatening Robertson and his step-father, Ross Overland, "at least once a week" for some time.

FIRED TWICE

The statement said Robertson grabbed a gun and fired twice at Mackie, but "I didn't mean to kill him."

Overland testified earlier that Mackie shouted at him during the quarrel: "I'll tear you apart and fill your son full of lead."

Overland said he later heard a shot and saw a .22 rifle in Robertson's hands.

"I jumped around the table, but there was a second shot before I got the gun."

Premier Douglas' Formula For Identifying Canadians

REGINA (CP)—Premier Douglas has come up with a formula for telling Canadians apart.

He produced it Tuesday in an address to members of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, feted at a government luncheon here while en route home from the national convention in Edmonton.

Maritimers, Mr. Douglas said, are rugged, sturdy men with "granite chins." He quoted a Maritime member of Parliament as saying that the Maritime provinces were the "finest place in the world". . . and that maritimers ate more fish than anyone else and "fish make brains."

The French-speaking Canadians have charm and grace and "have developed hospitality to a fine art."

CHOSEN PEOPLE

The people of Ontario are "God's chosen people and they know it."

As for the people of Manitoba, they always boasted that they were next door to Saskatchewan.

When you met a man from Saskatchewan at a convention, he dashed over, shook hands, and said: "I'm from Saskatchewan—but I'm not a CCFer."

"You know a man from Alberta 20 minutes and he tries to sell you some oil shares.

"The people of British Columbia look upon others with the pity of Adam and Eve looking at someone who wasn't born in the Garden of Eden."

Test Parking Meters

TORONTO (CP) — Civic works committee Wednesday night recommended to the city's board of control that four types of parking meters, including the Red Ball, be tested on city streets. Mayor Lamport's endorsement of the Red Ball touched off a controversy over selection of the meters. Opponents said they believed other types would be more suitable.

Doctor Convicted

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—A New Jersey doctor convicted Wednesday of leaving the scene of an auto accident near Grimsby was fined $263 or 28 days in jail. Dr. Herman Remsperber of Plainfield, N.J., paid the fine. He said he was so concerned to get back to the United States within the time allowed for his one-day visit that he did not give assistance to the injured man, John Kral, Sunday night.

COFFEE REVOLUTION

HITS BREAKFAST HABITS ACROSS COUNTRY

Thousands of families switch overnight as amazing new "instant" brings 100% real coffee enjoyment without brewing or messy grounds

WHO would have dreamed that the percolator, the dripolator, and other familiar coffee makers would vanish from thousands of Canadian breakfast tables almost overnight!

Yet it's happening! Particularly since an amazing new "instant" coffee by Chase & Sanborn started getting into people's homes.

Housewives tried it. They found the fragrant, pure-coffee granules of the new Instant Chase & Sanborn dissolved like magic the instant that water touched them. And the result was 100% real coffee by any test—flavor, color, body, and heart-cheering lift.

Many housewives have been accustomed to consider instant coffee as one for the occasional cup or for an emergency. Not this one. This superior "instant" plainly belongs whenever and wherever coffee is served.

And so to breakfast. It was inevitable. And how did the family take to this finer "instant" for breakfast? Just like a cat takes to 32% cream! So that's how the revolution started. Now new Instant Chase & Sanborn is the breakfast man's verdict on your morning brew!

Tedious Rituals Ended

It means that wives are resigning the time-honored rites of spooning out ground coffee, measuring the amount for the coffee-maker, pouring on the hot water or plugging in the percolator, checking the brewing time, mopping up the occasional spill, scooping out dismal grounds, and scouring a stained coffee pot.

Now they gratefully spend extra minutes in bed, knowing that coffee will be ready as fast as boiling water. And with new Instant Chase & Sanborn they know that every cup will give 100% real coffee satisfaction. No more suspense waiting for that

Unique New Process

Chase & Sanborn coffee scientists experimented until they had perfected a process that taps the rich, aromatic qualities of the roasted bean—carries the full rich flavor and invigorating qualities right through to your cup.

Fits Numerous Occasions

Now families with new Instant Chase & Sanborn find themselves enjoying coffee more often. An instant cup of flavorsome, invigorating coffee is just the thing after laundering, house-cleaning, or shopping. Perfect for entertaining.

Order Child Given To Father

TORONTO (CP)—The 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. John Steele and Allan Dinsdale Wednesday was ordered returned to the father in a hearing before Mr. Justice R. W. Treleaven.

Mrs. Steele, now married to a noted Toronto portrait photographer, faces a kidnapping charge, laid after the child was allegedly taken from the farm of her grandparents at nearby Meadowvale.

Stating that he was "gravely concerned" about the child's future and hated to see her "shoved" back and forth, Mr. Justice Treleaven ordered her returned to Mr. Dinsdale in compliance with a previous order by Mr. Justice D. P. J. Kelly.

Two motions were before the hearing. One would commit Mrs. Steele to jail for contempt of the earlier ruling.

The other motion, brought by Mrs. Steele, sought to set aside the ruling and regain custody of the child.

Labor Men Get Raise

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The AFL convention Wednesday voted $10,000 annual salary boosts for the labor organization's president, George Meany, and secretary-treasurer William Schnitzler. The convention adopted resolutions boosting Meany's salary from $25,000 to $35,000 and Schnitzler's from $23,000 to $33,000.

LOBLAW GROCETERIAS CO. LIMITED

Cashmere And Suede Give An Epitome Of Richness

Cashmere and suede embody the great group of soft, luxurious napped fabrics which are the epitome of richness. Soft as clouds, smooth as fur, resilient as feathers are these fashions with the Nap of Luxury. In every price range, from costliest cashmere and suede to pseudo-suedes and brushed cottons, a variety of new and interesting items is on the market. These include suede shoes, napped felt hats, fleecy gloves and cashmere-mix socks. Cashmere and suede also find their way into the most casual of clothing and the most elegant.

A navy blue cashmere topcoat is to men what a mink coat is to women. With elegant, straight-hanging fly-front closing, it is a dress coat for the man who has arrived.

Natural cashmere coats are the kind of big broad and handsome coats so many men like in camel hair, too. A favored model is double-breasted with hand picked edges and two-piece back belt and turn-back cuffs. Just looking at the man who wears this coat you know he has a country home and a silver cigar case.

Three button sport coats are designed in the softest cashmere, another example of Compound Colors in a luxury fabric. One model features grey, navy and white, all woven into a checked pattern with giant over-plaid.

In sleeveless sweaters, intarsia patterns are matched with cashmere and nylon blend socks. Tops among fashion leaders is an intarsia "wire" design favoring black wire against grey. Socks carry out pattern.

Long sleeve cashmere sweaters are designed in the classic shades of grey and beige, are warm and noted for their softness and casual air.

The traditional long sleeve polo shirt has now been designed in cashmere. For the epitome of high fashion, it can be worn with suede or doeskin slacks that are completely lined with silk twill. The front crease of the slacks is stitched, the pockets flapped. Around the waist can be worn a brown belt—suede.

Mufflers come in cashmere and in cashmere blends. Plaids and checks can be worn with solid color topcoats while plain mufflers look best with tweeds and cheviot coats.

This season suede also plays an important role. Jackets, shoes, waistcoats, sport caps and even slacks are shown in suede.

California designers have come up with high shades for their suede jackets. Some of the newer shades seen on the West Coast and working their way across the country are deep green, startling red tones, somber charcoal grey and mellow gold. Fawn beige is also typical of the new suede colors.

Imaginative styling gives suede zipper jackets and sport coats greater fashion interest. One pullover model jerkin features unusual side zipper. Not only do zippers add to the wearability of jackets but they also heighten the styling.

New pocket treatments are important in suede jackets. Stores are featuring four big patch pockets on their suede jackets. Another model has a wool knit collar which provides warmth and protects shirt collar from suede. This jacket has zip out fleece lining, making it very practical for cold weather.

A new treatment in sport hats is the bucket model designed especially for those lazy weekends in the country. These hats come in brown shades, harmonize with suede sport coats and cashmere sweaters. Another novel cap has a visor and strap with buckle. It's perfect when playing golf.

Tells WMS Of Chinese Work

COTTESLOE — The Cottesloe WMS held their fall thankoffering service in the church, Sunday evening, with Miss Greta Clark, a returned missionary from China, as the speaker.

The Rev. H. K. Wright was in charge of the service and Miss H. Tedford, on behalf of the WMS, introduced the speaker.

Miss Clark related many of her varied experiences of her life from the time she received her call to the last few years in China, before the Communists forced the missionaries out.

Miss Clark was in China under the Anglican Church. A friend of hers, Miss Hodge, a missionary of the United Church, was present in the audience. She too had spent many years in China.

Robeson Gets Prize

NEW YORK (AP)—Singer Paul Robeson, who got a $25,000 Stalin peace prize but was unable to get a passport to Moscow to receive it, was given the prize in ceremonies here Wednesday night. The presentation was made at the Hotel Theresa in Harlem by Howard Fast, author, who said the jury which awards the Stalin prizes in Moscow had communicated with him and asked him to present it.

Cyclist Killed

PERTH (CP)—Norman Norton, 11, riding on the rear seat of a motorcycle, was killed Wednesday night when the cycle crashed into the rear of a truck three miles south of here. Police said the motorcycle was driven by 15-year-old Glenn Moodie of Perth.

Special Land Rover Built For Royal Tour Of Australia

SYDNEY (AP)—Even a Queen has only two hands.

Visits of royalty take a lot of advance planning, and already Lt.-Gen. F. H. Berryman, director-general of the royal visit, has solved the problem of how the Queen can hold her skirts down, hold her hat on, hold onto the vehicle and still spare a hand to wave.

The special Rover will be built up at the back, above waist level; it will have a rail to hold. That will leave her the choice of waving or holding onto her hat, if it's a windy day.

"She chose a Land Rover in preference to a closed car because she wants to see—and be seen by—as many people as possible," the general explained.

Take the schedule. Berryman says it will be split-second—so precise it will even take into account the number of seconds it will take her to walk down the ramp from the royal plane to the ground.

The Queen will travel 14,450 miles during her visit, which will last from Feb. 3 through April 1. Eight hundred miles will be by train, 1,150 by ship around the coast and through the barrier reef, 2,500 miles by car—2,000 of them in cities—and 10,000 miles by air. The air mileage will be run up in 35 separate flights.

A special guard is being trained to make the trip, to see that all goes smoothly after landings and before takeoffs, and to make sure that no souvenir hunters or cranks get near it during a stop.

The Dakota also will be specially designed. It will have a private room for the Queen, a compartment with four seats where the Queen, her husband and their personal staff can sit; plus a small compartment back in the plane with a writing desk for the minister in charge and the director-general. A Royal Australian Air Force nursing sister will be a member of the crew.

But it will take more than one plane and one jeep to help the Queen see the country. Along with the Dakota will be a fleet of Bristol freighter aircraft. And some of the 115 or more other cars the entourage will use—mostly jeep and utility truck types—will be ferried between stops by the planes.

City Welcome Ready For Champs

Trailermen Due To Arrive Home Friday Evening

A parade down George Street and a civic reception at Miller Bowl are planned Friday evening for Peterborough's senior Canadian lacrosse champions.

The Trailermen, who won the Mann Cup by taking four of their five games in the championship series at Victoria when they defeated Victoria Shamrock 8-5 on Wednesday night, are expected to arrive in the city about 7.00 p.m. Friday.

The victorious team will fly from the British Columbia capital tonight and arrive at Malton airport shortly after noon Friday. A bus from Peterborough will pick up the players Friday afternoon.

After luncheon in Toronto, the team will be brought to Peterborough and will be met outside the city by open convertible cars. They will then be taken to the Armories where a parade will be marshalled.

PARADE.

Led by local bands, the parade will leave the Armouries about 7.00 p.m. and move slowly down George St. The champions will be identified by large name cards, carried by minor lacrosse players. All junior and PMLA players are asked to be at the Armories with sweaters and sticks at 6.45 p.m. They will report at the Armories to Jack Sackville.

The parade will go to Miller Bowl where the civic reception will begin about 7.30. The Mayor, members of city council and other prominent officials will be present to welcome the players, who will be introduced by George Ludgate.

The public have been invited to view the parade and attend the reception in Miller Bowl, where the official ceremony is expected to last about half an hour.

PICK CRESTS

Ald. Syd Black, chairman of city council's reception committee announced there would be a meeting of his committee in the city hall today at 4.00 p.m. to discuss the type of crests to be presented to members of championship teams from the city. This will include Ontario and Canadian championship teams, as well as the Ornamental swimming team, who won the North American championship this year.

Plans will also be discussed at the meeting for a dinner of champions to be held in November to honor all those eligible for the crests.

Stenographers Tell Lawyers Will Not Work Saturdays

Legal stenographers have issued an ultimatum to their employers, serving notice they will not work Saturday mornings. A spokesman of the group said this morning their decision will go into effect starting this week. Banded together in a group called the Peterborough Law Association Stenographers, approximately 40 employees unanimously resolved this week not to work Saturdays.

After a letter announcing the stenographers' intention was sent to lawyers in the city, the Peterborough Law Association called a meeting for this afternoon, the spokesman said.

The move brings to a head a situation which has been in the hands of the city's lawyers for some time. They had previously met to come to a decision on the matter and the proposal was turned down by a narrow margin.

Stenographers claim, however, the "general" feeling on the lawyers' part is that their employees should have Saturday mornings off.

At present they have Saturday afternoons off, and, during the summer, all day Saturday.

Only a few employers stand in the way of the extra time off, the spokesman pointed out.

Her contention was supported by a report that one of the lawyers had drafted the letter to the Peterborough Law Association for them.

W. C. Grant, president of the Law Association, said today he was "not at liberty" to comment but promised an announcement after his group had met.

New City Hall Compares With Best In Land

Peterborough's city hall can stand comparison with the best in the land — even Vancouver's towering municipal building.

This is the opinion of Carl Reeve, of Toronto, who visited Peterborough Tuesday evening when his firm, the T. Eaton Co., were hosts to the Canadian Postmasters' Association at a dinner in the Empress Hotel.

Mr. Reeve stayed over in Peterborough in order to see the city hall, Wednesday morning, with a group of seven others attending the convention. They were conducted on a tour of the building by Mayor Hugh Waddell. A group of about 30 from the convention toured city hall in the afternoon.

MORE COMPACT

"I thought the Vancouver city hall was a nice building but, for compactness this one can easily be compared with it." Mr. Reeve said. "I've never seen anything so compact and I've seen a lot of municipal buildings.

"One thing I particularly like about it,' he added. "You have not thought merely of present day needs. You've taken into consideration your needs for years to come."

J. N. Craig, chief superintendent of operations of the post office department, Ottawa, said it was as fine a municipal building as any he had seen "not only from a standpoint of beauty but from the functional standpoint as well.

"The location of park areas fore and aft particularly adds to its beauty," he said. "And the new post office certainly won't detract from your fine public buildings."

The entire group were particularly delighted with the map of the county in the terrazo floor just inside the main entrance.

Oct. 15 Closing Date For Most Game Fish

Speckled, brown and rainbow trout seasons closed on September 15.

Closing dates for lake trout and whitefish October 5; black bass, maskinonge October 15; pickerel October 15, except in Haliburton county, where the closing date for pickerel is December 31, 1953.

Fishing ceases for all species of fish on October 15, in all inland water of Durham, Northumberland, Peterborough, Victoria counties, Lake Scugog and both Upper and Lower Dalrymple Lakes.

Season for the taking of frogs closes midnight October 15.

J. M. Ferris President Of Postmasters

Campbellford's postmaster, J. M. Ferris, was elected president of the Ontario branch of the Canadian Postmasters' Association Wednesday at the closing session of the CPA conference.

Mr. Ferris, who has been acting president of the branch for part of the year, is also Dominion secretary-treasurer of the association.

J. A. Stickle, Batawa postmaster, was elected vice-president.

For the second time in the branch's history, a postmistress was elected to the executive, which is as follows: George Day, Rockwood; W. J. Barlow, Bonarlaw; A. D. Smith, Bluevale; L. A. Bromley, Grimsby; and Postmistress K. Matthewson, Clifford.

Postmasters George Day and L. A. Bromley, who had been nominees for president and vice-president, moved the election be made unanimous. A. M. Church, Sundridge, presided for the election, and scrutineers were inspectors W. E. Johnson, Toronto, and J. A. Flaherty, London.

Mr. Ferris thanked the conference and assured them they could count on him.

Time and place of the 1954 conference were left in the hands of the executive after invitations had been heard from Huntsville, St. Catharines, North Bay, Windsor and London. Round table discussions followed the election of officers.

Victim, 80 Names Man As Attacker

Leonard Taylor Faces Charge Of Robbery, Violence

Charles Smith, the 80-year-old pensioner who was slugged over the head and robbed last May 1, stood up in the witness box today and pointed at 21-year-old Leonard Taylor, of Curve Lake, as the man who entered the A. J. Hudson store in Lakefield and stood behind him just before he was knocked unconscious.

Taylor is charged with robbery with violence and is standing trial before Judge John de N. Kennedy in county criminal court.

The Crown alleges that Taylor is the man who entered the second-hand store where Smith was working alone and struck the elderly pensioner over the head with a hammer or a heavy spike. Smith received a badly-fractured skull and Dr. H. E. Gastle didn't think he would survive the injury.

"Have you any doubt that the man who came into the store and stood behind you is the same man who is in the dock?" asked Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw.

"I believe it is (the same man)" said Smith.

CAME INTO SHOP

Despite a searching cross-examination by Defence Counsel Edward Fanjoy, Smith maintained that he recognized Taylor as the Indian who had come into his shop on Queen St. the day before the assault and robbery. The first time Taylor was looking for a job.

On Friday morning the day of the attack, Smith had come into the shop, swept up and lit the fire, gone out to the post office and also paid a light bill, and then returned to the rear of the shop to do some work. He said he was sitting on a little stool with tools lying about on the floor. The hammer, he thought, was beside him as he prepared to do some drilling.

Smith heard the bell tinkle as a man walked in. He recognized the man as Taylor who had been in the store on Thursday.

"I said 'good morning or something like that. I didn't pay much attention to him; I thought he'd come in to get out of the rain . . . He went around behind me . . . I don't remember being hit . . . My mind's a blur until I was in hospital."

He said he wasn't sure when he learned the accused man's name was Taylor.

HAD ABOUT $50

Smith recalled that a woman had come into the store earlier in the morning to pay a bill. He said he had some $50 or so in a billfold that was in his back pocket. Probably anybody behind him could see the billfold, he said.

Crown evidence also disclosed that Taylor had a wallet with $31 in it the day after the robbery. On the day before the robbery a pool player noticed that he went to another Indian in the Goodall poolroom and got some money before finishing a game in which only 20 cents were at stake.

The Crown's inference was that Taylor had borrowed the money.

VICTIM, 80

Under-Powered Duck

Fishermen Cyril Lech and Jack Murray saw one of the cruel quirks of nature on Pigeon Creek Wednesday afternoon. It was a young marsh Bluebill duck trying to take off and get away from them. They saw it was only able to flap along with one wing, chased it, and finally succeeded in capturing it. The duck was hatched with only one wing—it had not been shot at by hunters, a close examination showed. Knowing it would never get away from its native swamp alive and would be either frozen in or killed by hawks, they killed the bird and brought it to town to show sceptical duck hunters.

Parking Lot For 800 Cars Planned By CGE

Parking space for 800 cars is planned by Canadian General Electric Company along the west side of Monaghan Road, and fronting the former home of Mayor Hugh F. Waddell.

Part of it is being groomed this week. Road material that was lifted in preparation for the paving of Monaghan Rd. was dumped conveniently over the fence where the Waddell property was low and swampy between the road and the screen of hardwood bush.

With the completion of the paving, attention has been turned to the prospective parking. This area will be extended, according to neighborhood reports, for the accommodation of 800 cars, and in that provision of space by the company much of the hardwood bush is likely to be sacrificed.

Some of the trees will be spared, it is said, but the screen of foliage that cut off view of the house from the road is likely to be missing when the clearance for the broader parking space is finished.

SHOULD BE CLEAR

The new pavement plus the CGE initiative in laying out more room for parking should keep Monaghan Rd. clear for traffic, including the bus service of two lines that pass that way. Employees' cars have made a practice of reducing Monaghan Rd. to a one-lane street in winter, a nuisance to the public and a menace to fenders and new paint. If the ground for 800 more cars is smoothed out across the way from the plant, it should clear the street, now a much travelled road, of files of employee cars.

The Waddell hardwoods are the last cluster of maple, oak, beech and birch left in the city. Their leaves are already undergoing the transformation of autumn in brief beauty of color. But, that bit of woods has outstayed its sylvan tolerance in a busy manufacturing community.

It is at least a cheerful expectation that some of those familiar trees will escape the axe or the McCulloch saw.

Cyclists Hurt Crash Into Side Of Car

Motorcycle Driver Suffers Severe Injuries To Head

Ronald Pavey, 17, of 255 Woodbine Ave., is in "very critical" condition today at Civic Hospital, following a motorcycle-car crash Wednesday night on Reid St. Pavey's motorcycle smashed into the side of a turning car and he suffered severe head injuries, cuts and bruises.

ALSO INJURED

Also in hospital as a result of the crash was Robert Clarkson, 16, of Buckhorn, a passenger on the motorcycle. He sustained head injuries but is in satisfactory condition today.

The car involved was driven by H. L. Reynolds, 49, of 817 Park St. South. He had been northbound on Reid St. and was turning left onto Aberdeen Ave., when the accident occurred.

According to the driver and his passengers, Beverly Reynolds, 23, same address, and Barbara Hoey, 18, of 747 Chesterfield St., the motorcycle just appeared from the north and crashed into the right side of their car.

Miss Hoey sustained bruises and shock in the accident but did not require hospital treatment.

LIGHT WAS DIM

Other witnesses driving behind the motorcycle, Melville Shannon of 508 Stewart St., and Albert Porter of Lakefield, told police the motorcycle's headlight was very dim.

PC William G. Scott who investigated the accident, estimated damage at $150 to the car and $200 to the motorcycle.

The accident occurred shortly after 11 o'clock.

Mrs. Margaret Knox

The funeral for Mrs. Margaret Knox, who died Sunday at Guelph, was conducted Tuesday at the Mather funeral home, Keene, by the Rev. H. B. Herrington of Keene United Church.

The service was attended by many friends and neighbors and there was a profusion of floral tributes.

Pallbearers were Jack MacFarlane, Samuel Comrie, David McIntyre, Ronald Knox, Carman Knox and Douglas Armstrong.

Burial was in Little Lake cemetery.

Roman soldiers carried with them a moistened piece of sponge to be used instead of a drinking vessel.

Manslaughter Charged

HAMILTON (CP)—A charge of manslaughter was laid Wednesday against Neil MacDonald, 48, following a coroner's inquest into the death four days ago of Mrs. Ethel Mulholland, 50, with whom police said he was living. At the inquest, conflicting testimony revolved around a drinking party attended by four of the witnesses.

Steal $30,000 Jewelry

NEW YORK (AP) — Jewelry worth $30,000 was reported stolen Wednesday from the Fifth Avenue apartment of Mr. and Mrs. George Armour. Armour is president of American Aniline Products, Inc. The Armours reported the jewelry, all insured, was taken while they were away from home.

GRADUATED CHEST STRIPES in Compound Colors give bold style treatment to this sport shirt in soft textured cotton which is also blended in a heather mixture.

Nubby Compound Colors Enrich Fall Sport Shirts

The seasonal shift in sport shirts becomes apparent in the colors and fabrics that dominate this part of the fall casual outfit. Tweed-like effects in cotton and in blends of man-made fibers give emphasis to the vari-colored ideas by the different tones of the nubs. Red or blue slubs liven the basic shades of grey or blue. Tan is a backdrop for rust and greenish tones of nubs. They all add up to Compound Colors, which mean the use of multiple colors.

Checks and plaids are very much in the sports shirt picture. The former run from medium to small-size checks in two or three-color combinations. The news about plaids is the new color relationships which are established. Brown and blue, for example, are used carefully and the result is a shirt that combines with a brown or a bluish tone sports jacket. Red and two shades of grey make up an important combination because the grey shade is in the family of Charcoal tones.

Varied types of fabrics add zest to the array of sport shirts. Cottons have brushed finishes and nubbed surfaces. Blends or Orlon and cotton or Orlon and wool are washable. Gabardine, probably one exception to the rule of textured surfaces, shows up in blends of tones as well as in solid colors. Knitted shirts include the cottons, man-made fibers and wool jersey. Knitted shirts generally carry different types of trimming at the collars or at the pockets.

The collars of sports shirts tend toward smaller dimensions. The importance of shorter points on shirts for businss wear has its effect upon selections of styles in sports shirts. The moderate spread collar is a model catching on in a widespread manner.

The need for sports shirts is becoming more numerous. In addition to weekend and after business-hours when sports shirts are combined with tweed or other jackets, more men are adopting the sport shirt with slacks and new soft leather footwear with wedge heels for TV viewing.

Omemee Scouts Win Swimming Badges

They were examined by Scouter Robertson of the 1st Lindsay Troop and Scouter John E. Joyce.

Tornado Hits France

ST. NAZAIRE, France (AP)—A tornado tore off roofs, wrecked barns and smashed carts in two villages of this western French region Tuesday night. No one was injured. The villages hit, each containing about 15 homes, were Le Bourg Jamais and Le Tahun. Some roofs were hurled 130 feet. Loaded carts were freakishly picked up and hurled about like straws.

THE VARIED ARRAY of colors, patterns and styles in Dacron suits add new fashion to functional appeal. While most men think of Dacron in connection with summer clothing, the fact is that this man-made fibre is now being worn all year round in suits. Men are notoriously hard on clothes, and Dacron is a fibre that can take it. Many men report that they have worn Dacron suits for weeks in varying climates ranging from humid and hot to cold and wet without the need for any pressing. Dacron retains pressed creases in trousers, yet resists creasing where it does not belong. Thus Dacron contains all the elements that capture the imagination in a functional way.

Children Given Swim Awards

LAKEFIELD (ENS)—Memorial Hall was well filled with children, parents and interested friends Monday evening when the Lakefield Branch, Canadian Red Cross Society held an open meeting and presented the Swimming and Water Safety awards won during the summer.

The president, Mrs. Albert O'Donnell presided and a short business meeting was held at which reports of the various conveners were given.

In reporting on the Swimming and Water Safety program, Mrs. A. R. Gariepy, convener, expressed her sincere appreciation for the splendid co-operation received from the committee working with her, Mrs. A. O'Donnell, Mrs. C. H. Hunter, Mrs. Roy Farrow and Mrs. J. W. Ridpath. Mrs. Robert McCracken who was in charge of First Aid supplies kept the equipment in excellent condition

Ronald Gould of Ottawa was hired as instructor and later a guard, Robert Pratt was added to the staff. Both young men did a very satisfactory job, as the results of the tests taken in August showed, when 66 children passed examination supervised by Mrs. Pansy Forbes of Peterborough.

In concluding her report, Mrs. Gariepy made the following recommendations: A life guard's chair, to be anchored where most necessary; permanent plans for assembling the catwalks; flood lighting of the beach; improvement to toilet facilities and more play equipment provided.

Mrs. Forbes of Peterborough, introduced by Mrs. O'Donnell, spoke to the children, congratulating them on their successful season and reminding them of how fortunate they were to have a Swimming and Water Safety program provided for them. She then read the Pledge used by children attending the Peterborough "Y".

Swimming awards were presented by, Mrs. W. W. Leonard to the beginners; Mrs. C. H. Hunter, the juniors; Mrs. Roy Farrow, the intermeriate; Art Kingdon, the Seniors and Mrs. Gariepy the Life Saving awards.

An excellent report was submitted by Ronald Gould, instructor, in which he made several suggestions to improve conditions in the future.

Films were then shown on Swimming and Water Safety Programs and also pictures taken by Mr. A. Sinclair of Peterborough of the Ornamental Swimmers while on their trip to California.

A. G. Buchanan moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Forbes, Mr. Sinclair and Mr. T. Crosby of The Lakefield Preparatory School who operated the projector.

Boys' Wear Is Styled For Miniature Men

Nobody today will object if boys decide to look like their fathers. Designers have fulfilled their wishes and come up with suits and sport coats similar in styling to those of the old man. These new styles are keyed to the Father and So ntrend which has been OK'd by Junior and Senior alike.

A veriety of compound colors and nubby textured fabrics, so successful in the men's field, highlights the boys' clothing for fall.

The single-breasted suit is favored in a wide variety of lighter colors and surface interest fabrics. Clothes for all age groups are styled with that grown-up look, featuring more natural shoulders, a centre vent in back and flaps on pockets.

For dressier occasions, the high school boy follows college fashion in choosing the Oxford grey flannel suit with change pocket. He's out front as a fashion leader with a repp silk waistcoat co-ordinated with the suit.

Even the two to six year old youngster can look like Dad with a long pant flannel suit or sport jacket and slacks.

In boys' fabrics, outstanding are the all-wool worsteds and the new miracle blends such as Dacron-wool; soft light colored flannels; tweed effects and surface interest weaves in both all-wool and blends. Plenty of color and pattern interest are combined in nubs, slubs, checks and overchecked designs in compounded effects.

Along with suits of all-wool, suits blending wool and man-made fibres have acquired new pattern and surface interest.

Even in outerwear, nubby fabrics are prominent for boys. Tweed Balmacaan topcoats and pile ulsters set the fashion pace. Outer jackets are designed in three colored check blended fabrics. Small weave tweed fabrics for topcoats give the youngster a cosmopolitan air.

Ties, mufflers, gloves, also are patterned after Dad's. Oxford cloth shirts with the new shorter point collars are being forn by the high school crowd. Sock patterns are also similar to Dad's with argyles popular among older boys.

SINGLE - BREASTED two-button suits has that grown-up look.

The suggested Rally Day program was followed, with a piano duet by Mrs. Stan Fife and Mrs. Max Scott.

Briton Explains Preference For Communism

PANMUNJOM (AP) — The lone Briton among more than 300 Allied prisoners of war who the Reds say refused repatriation was quoted tonight as saying the "result of our Western, capitalistic way of life is mud and blood."

The statement attributed to the Briton, whom the Reds identified as a marine, was released as the Reds delivered to Indian guards the United Nations prisoners of the Korean war who they say don't want to go home.

Censorship did not immediately permit use of his name.

The statement attributed to the Briton was handed to Allied news correspondents by Communist correspondent Wilfred Burchett of the Paris l'Humanite.

"I, like my American friends, am a very ordinary type of person," the statement said. "I like to listen to music, read good books, and I like my occasional pint of beer."

DENIED SIMPLE PLEASURE

"I like to see children playing and enjoying themselves. I love my mother, father and family. In fact, I am the sort of person you find walking about the streets of Britain, America or anywhere else. Not only do I want to enjoy these things but I like to see everyone else enjoying them, too.

"Perhaps that makes me an idealist, a humanist, a Communist or whatever you will. The sort of world I have been living in the past denies these simple pleasures to hundreds of millions of people. And the result of our Western, capitalistic way of life is the mud and blood, the orphans and widows and tortured people of Korea, of Viet Nam, Malaya and other countries."

The Briton was quoted as saying he was sure certain persons would pity him as a misfit or victim of Red indoctrination. But he said when it is discovered he and the Americans cannot be bribed, cajoled or menaced into returning, they will be painted as "renegades, Communist agents and doubtless we will swell the ever-increasing ranks of traitors."

Some thinking persons would ask:

"Why did they stay?"

The statement said it was to them that he was replying.

WANTS BETTER WORLD

"I am determined to play my small part in fighting for the better sort of world I believe in," the statement said.

The statement said the Briton enlisted in the marines for 12 years and still has five more to serve.

If he came home, "with my present political views on the world situation, I would be spending most of those five years in and out of jail and detention quarters."

The statement said the Briton hoped he could play "even a small part" in helping cement friendly relations between British and Chinese people.

Fancy Vests of Leather, Silk Add Style to Men's Dress

Back in the Gay Nineties grandpa was a two fisted guy with a handle bar moustache, watch fob and a vest. He had a way with the ladies and a way of dressing that the ladies loved.

His prototypes today emulate his charm but they have discarded the moustache and added the vest. Not so long ago every suit was made with a matching vest. Then the war came and the matching vest went into the discard. Now the fancy vest reappears to fill a need for a garment that joins fashion with function.

Actually, a vest serves a real need in the wardrobe of every man. The handy pockets to carry matches, cigarettes, lighters, are a practical necessity. And the fashion of pocket watches and fobs is strictly a masculine prerogative that is enjoying a renaissance as a result.

A large variety of colors, fabrics and styles are now offered men for every different type of outfit. The brocaded vest adds a touch of elegance to the dressy suit. The leather vest in a variety of colors adds dash to sports clothes. As a result, the fancy vest has risen in esteem to such a point that it is now a basic component of the well dressed man's wardrobe.

Bright solid colors in suedes, corduroys and silks add the proper touch of color to the flannel suit. Stripes, brocades and figured silks impart a touch of elegance to dressier town clothes. Lightweight linens, embroidered and linen weave effects offer color contrasts to light toned fall clothing.

Luxurious rayon velvets and reversibles in single and double breasted styles offer double versatility that is further skyrocketing the popularity of the fancy vest.

Part and parcel of the swing to the fancy vest is the wearing of pocket watches, watch chains, key chains and watch fobs. These too were popular in the Nineties.

So you don't need a moustache to wear a vest. You'll look manly without it.

Lobsters Have Big Interest In Court Case

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

LONDON (AP)—Millions of lobsters in the English channel have a direct interest in a case now before the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

The question, about a thousand years old now, is whether some bleak little islands, pin points on maps, belong to England or France.

The dispute, rarely bitter but a little irritation for centuries, involves ownership of the Ecrehouse islands, off the French coast northeast of the island of Jersey, and the Minquiers group, south of Jersey. Together they total about 96 square miles.

The lobsters, chief asset of the two tiny island groups, come in because the court's decision may determine whether they are the rightful prey of British or French fishermen. As far as the lobsters are concerned, it would seem best to hope for British rule. British fishermen toss back lobsters less than eight inches long. The French take them smaller.

NOT WORTH PLEBISCITE

Since only about 100 persons call either of the island groups home, it is hardly worth having a plebiscite. Actually, some of the more or less permanent inhabitants prefer the unsettled state of things. There always is uncertainty where taxes should be paid and many find it convenient to pay none at all.

But the fishing in adjacent waters, by Frenchmen who live on the mainland and Britons from he islands of Jersey and Guernsey, is of economic importance.

Also looming as a distant possibility is the dream of marine engineers of harnessing the phenomenal tides in the disputed region. Rises of 30 to 40 feet are common. Some engineers believe that a system of barriers between the islands and the French mainland could trap the tides to produce power from the ebb flow.

The first recorded owner of the disputed islands was Robert, son of William the Conqueror. The difficulty now is that it is pretty hard to establish the citizenship of Robert, who was a duke of Normandy when his father ruled England.

The moon is the closest celestial body to the earth, being only 240,000 miles away, or roughly 10 times the earth's circumference.

Barbaric Settings Keynote Of Costume Jewellery

The fragile and the feminine are not for Elsa Schiaparelli. Look for boldness, for form, the definite and the massive in the designed-in-Paris, made-in-America collection of costume jewelry.

The jewels are vivid and intense in color, barbaric in feeling. Fluted green stones are combined with pointed topaze in antique gold settings. Harlequin cabochons are mounted on rounded filagree domes, with fretwork suggestive of the Eiffel Tower. Strong reds, blacks, and multi-color iridis provide the startling color tones in this collection.

There is a tailored group in which the golden strands are cleverly woven, giving a wrapped effect that creates the illusion of flexibility and movement. Buckle and saddle shapes, bird cage outlines and tassels are but a few of the important forms the gold group takes.

Now, for the first time in the Schiaparelli Jewel collection, there are amusing self-adjustable rings, frankly fake, but decorative, with a patented arrangement that conveniently adjusts to the size of the wearer's finger. Bejeweled cuff links are considered important by Schiaparelli, now that men's shirts have been so enthusiastically adopted by women. She has designed such good looking cuff links for women that are so wearable, we wouldn't be a bit surprised to see a turn-about, and have the men borrow a fashion note from the women for a change.

Paved rinestones dramatize a smooth dotted chain with splendor and simplicity. Many of the rinestone necklaces have mobile units, enabling the sections to assume the most comfortable and flattering positions. This season's necklace looks smartest at the base of the throat, according to Schiap.

The complete ensemble in costume jewelry is presented here by necklace, earrings, bracelet and pin all to match, not to forget milady's ring and cuff links!

These pieces can only be purchased from the exclusive Schiaparelli rental outlets in America and at her boutique at 21 Place Vendome, Paris.

THIS SMART YOUNG WOMAN realizes that she does not need a completely new wardrobe to be right in step with fall fashions. Instead, she has taken the time to make an inventory of her present fall wardrobe (left), discarding a few items that are no longer serviceable. For the holdovers she selects accessories (centre) that give a fresh, new look. To dramatize her basic suit she chooses one of the very new fur helmets, a broad gold bracelet and a pearl choker. For a really high fashion note she chooses a lipstick and nail polish that blend with her costume's color. A final blotting of the lipstick (right) and she is beautifully groomed. And her budget is intact since her expenditures have been limited to make-up and accessories.

Well-Chosen Accessories Will Brighten Old Clothes

Careful wardrobe planning is indispensable to good grooming, and the ideal time to do that planning is now.

Many of the clothes you buy for fall are suitable for winter and early spring. So, by planning now, you will be set for the next several months.

Before you can plan your wardrobe's future you will have to investigate its past. It will be a big job, but it will also be a big help to your grooming and your pocketbook.

As with gardening, weeding is of prime importance. It really is not very economical to hang onto old clothes you seldom wear; they merely clutter your closet, add to your cleaning bills, and keep you from achieving a well-coordinated wardrobe.

So, the first step is go through all your fall and winter clothes to decide whether they belong in your current wardrobe. Are they still fresh looking, do they fit well, are they adaptable to the 1953-54 fashion picture?

Incidentally, when you have selected the cloths to be discarded, you might make your wardrobe weeding more worthwhile by sending the pile to a charitable organization.

Your planning begins when you have before you only those able to use. Select a suit or dress and plan a complete costume around it. Jot down your costume ideas, noting your have's and have-not's.

While you are considering one outfit you will want to keep your other clothes in mind so that ideas will come to you for several ensembles. You probably will find that you already own the bases of several up-to-the-minute costumes.

On the have-not side there may be a blouse or two; gloves, belts, scarves and costume jewelry. By being selective in purchasing them, you will be able to give the latest look to last year's clothes.

For added spark, you might consider buying some high-fashion nail enamel and lipstick in shades to highlight the colors that predominate in your wardrobe. This fall, some of these are: dry sherry, plum brandy and buttered rum.

Finally, you can plan the buying of big wardrobe items. Now that you know exactly what you have, you can make your selections wisely.

GRAY GOES FORMAL

The new gray for evening clothes is shown in crisp wool-mohair and in all-wool fabrics. Color varies from a chalk gray to a true charcoal tone. The shawl collar facing and trouser stripes are of dull satin, doing away with the sheen which has been in favor for some years.

SOFT TOUCH IN MUFFLERS

Soft cashmere or wool mufflers with self-fringe are smart in solid colors, bold plaids and neat houndstooth checks to add a touch of color contrast with hat and topcoat in the cooler days ahead.

NUBBY TOUCH CLICKING

Established as a smash success this spring and summer, the nubby touch really comes into its own for Fall in all manner of texture-interest fabrics and leathers, in everything from hats to shoes, from neckwear to jewelry.

Scientific MethodStained Linens Cleaned

Removing the stains that besmirch the family linens can be as easy as one-two-three, if you'll heed scientific advice.

He cautioned on a few points. If you badly stain wool or synthetic fabrics, let an expert take care of the removal.

Carbon tetrachloride can be used safely on colored or print fabrics, but other home stain removal agents are apt to react unfavorably on the dyes.

Most laundry aids and all stain removal agents should be kept out of the reach (and, in my home, out of sight) of children.

Most of the equipment needed for stain removal suggested by the expert you already have, except the oxalic acid. The list includes:

1. Concentrated soap solution made by mixing two or three tablespoons of your regular soap or synthetic detergent in a quart bottle of water.
2. Chlorine bleach.
3. Carbon tetrachloride (which is a standard cleaning fluid sold under many brand names).
4. Small bottle (two ounces is enough) 10 per cent oxalic acid solution which druggist mixes for you.
5. Earthenware crock, such as an old mixing bowl. Eye dropper and two or three wooden popsicle sticks.

Another ingredient he recommended, under its fancy chemical name of tri-sodium phosphate, most of us already have as the cleansing powder used for walls, woodwork and linoleum.

Here's the one-two-three procedure for removing stains from white household linens.

1. Four to six-hour soaking period in alkaline solution made by adding two tablespoons trisodium phosphate to a gallon of water. Don't soak in washing machine. Use laundry tub or unchipped enamel pan or crock.

Before soaking oil-based stains (lipstick, candle wax, salad dressing) hold spot over crock and squirt on a little carbon tet with the eye dropper to dissolve grease.

Gently scrape off gooey blobs of food or wax with wooden stick. Sponge fresh blood stains with concentrated soap solution. After soaking, wash in regular way.

2. After washing, inspect for stains that need further attention. Hold stain over crock, use eye dropper to squirt on little oxalic acid solution. This erases many dye stains, iron or rust spots. RINSE THOROUGHLY to remove residue acid.

3. If stain persists after rinsing, sponge small amount of undiluted bleach on area. Rinse thoroughly in cool water to minimize fabric damage.

In special cases, such as nail polish spilled on cotton or linen, remove the lacquer with nail polish remover, then treat as directed. If you spill polish on any synthetic fabric, give up.

For iodine stains, you'll need a small packet of photographer's hypo bought from camera shop and mixed with water. Sponge this solution on the stain.

Dogs Diseased

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An epidemic of an incurable disease has broken out among dogs here, the Humane Society said Wednesday. Residents have been advised not to let their dogs out while the epidemic, expected to last two weeks, is on. The disease, known as "infectious hepatitus" is almost incurable, a spokesman for the society said, and already a large number of dogs suffering from it have been brought in for treatment.

Desert Warfare

LONDON (AP)—Desert fighting broke out at an isolated Persian gulf oasis between turbanned warriors loyal to Britain and to Saudi Arabia, spokesmen for the two countries disclosed Wednesday night. Each side blamed the other for the shooting in which "several deaths" were reported in the disputed oil-rich frontier region last week.

To Rebuild Church

LONDON (Reuters) —One of London's historic churches, now a bombed-out war ruin, will be rebuilt and used by the RAF as a permanent church. Saint Clement Danes Church will be restored to the richly carved delicate style of Sir Christopher Wren, famous 17th century architect who designed it. The church was fired by German bombs and only its stone walls and tower remain.

Belgian Committee Approves Treaty

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A special committee of the Belgian House of Representatives today unanimously recommended approval of the European Defence Community treaty setting up a six-nation European army.

The bill is expected to win approval of both House and Senate. This would make Belgium the second member of the EDC to complete ratification of the treaty. Both houses of the West German parliament and the lower house of the Netherlands Parliament have given approval. Action is still awaited in Italy, France, and Luxembourg.

Name New Minister

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Gen. Johan Lombak of the Soviet army has been appointed minister of the interior in Estonia, replacing Michael Krassman, a "Beria man," Estonian newspapers received here today report. Lombak served as divisional commander on the Leningrad front in the Second World War.

African Chief Will Return To Country M.R.A. Leader

By ANGUS MUNRO
(Windsor Star Staff Writer)
(Special to The Examiner)

CAUX, Switzerland — Moral Rearmament is going to Africa following the World Assembly here, it was indicated this week as the industrial section of the assembly swung into its first days.

CHIEF ADVANCE AGENT

One of its advance agents will be Nana Wiafe Akenten II, paramount chief of the Offinso State of Ashanti, Gold Coast, West Africa —approximately in the lower half of the great African bulge. The chief has been at Caux several weeks.

The chief speaks fluent English. He has had the advantage of an education few in the Western World are able to achieve. He is a graduate of Achimota College, the Gold Coast's leading University. His teachers were chiefly from Oxford and Cambridge.

Here at Caux, in his ceremonial robes, he appears strange to Western eyes. Full-flowing and threaded with gold-colored cloth the chief's robes are augmented by gold rings and bracelets. When at home he lives in a 42-room palace, where he has 400 servants to do his bidding. Here he is just one of the boys, though one that stands out even among so cosmopolitan a crowd as is here from 42 nations.

Last year the chief's brother came to Caux (the family has been a ruling one in the British Colony for generations). He was so moved by what he saw that he went back to Africa and distributed free to his poorer subjects a tract of 4,000 acres of land.

"I am ready to take this ideology back to my people and my country so that we may do our share in applying the four moral standards of behaviour which I have found here to be the basis of the new world we all want to see," the chief said in an interview with The Star.

FRUIT, COCOA, MAHOGANY

His lands are chiefly agricultural in character. The area produces huge quantities of fruits such as oranges, pineapples and bananas. It exports 60 per cent of the world's cocoa and large shipments of mahogany. In his own state, the chief is leader of 45,000 subjects.

"We are looking forward to the day when we will be granted our independence," he explained. "And that day is coming soon."

The chief is but one of a score of colorful figures one meets in a day here at Mountain House. There are predominant numbers of Europeans—French, German, Scandinavian and Italian—but there are a great many from Asia, too. India, Pakistan, Burma, Ceylon, Japan and Kashmir are some of the nationalities one meets every day.

Your reporter dined last night with two Italian industrialists from Bologna who came direct from the Eucharistic Congress at Turin, Italy, along with their priest. It was their first visit to Caux and they expressed amaze-

Trim Lines Give Height

Built up lines and an array of colorful fabrics are combining to give clothing a new lift for Fall.

Spurred by the excitement produced by Nubby Touch fabrics, new modifications are being developed in the single-breasted suit to maintain it at the peak of popularity.

A trim, slim line is being achieved by slightly raising the gorge joining the collar and the lapel. At the same time, shoulders are being made higher and lapels are being narrowed to conform with the trim outline.

The entire effect creates a trim illusion of height which is flattering to most men. Both the two-button and three-button single-breasted models reflect the trend to more casual styling. This is being expressed in the greater use of centre vents, easy lines and patch pockets.

Canada made its contribution when Cecil G. Morrison, of Ottawa, the federal bread administrator during World War II, and now a leading Ottawa bakery chain executive, told how he had applied M.R.A. in his business and found it the answer to the bitter labor problems encountered there during the past.

He now believes union and management in his company have the best contract known anywhere in their field.

Brothers Killed

WINGHAM (CP)—Two Brussels brothers were killed Wednesday night eight miles south of here when their car crashed the back of a parked five-ton transport truck. Lorne Elwood McCutcheon, about 25, driving the car, was killed by the impact that buckled the front of the car back into the windshield. His brother, William, 18, died half an hour later in hospital.

Earnest Clergyman

PLYMOUTH, England (CP)—Rev. N. Knock was determined not to disappoint a bridal couple. With his injured legs in a cast, he was carried up the aisle in time to perform the ceremony at his Methodist church.

Communists Surrender 359 Prisoners To Indian Troops

PANMUNJOM (AP)—The Communists today surrendered to neutral nations custody 359 war prisoners—one Briton, 23 Americans, and 335 South Koreans—who the Reds say asked to remain behind the Iron Curtain.

"Arise, ye prisoners of starvation, arise ye starvelings of want," chanted the tanned, healthy looking men.

The South Korean prisoners screamed "American imperialists, get out!" at U.S. reporters who watched the transfer of prisoners to custody of Indian troops in the demilitarized zone near here.

Communist Correspondent Wilfred Burchett told Allied newspaper men the names of the Americans and the Briton, but U.S. Army censors would not pass the list. The censors said names would be cleared only if prisoners changed their minds and decide to go home.

The Americans looked happy and contented. The Communists quoted them as saying they love their country and some day will return —when the American people have achieved "freedom."

"We hope to play our part in achieving this and we know the American people will receive us back on that day with open arms," said a statement the Reds said was drafted and signed by the Americans while at nearby Kaesong.

The Briton, identified as a marine who had served seven years of a 12-year enlistment, was quoted:

"I am determined to play my small part in fighting for the better sort of world I believe in. . . ."

Allied "explainers" are to begin talking to U.S., British and South Korean prisoners at the camp a mile above Panmunjom Saturday, telling them they have the right to be repatriated if they wish.

At the same time, Communist representatives will visit 22,600 North Korean and Chinese prisoners who refuse repatriation at another Indian camp five miles southwest of Panmunjom, trying to make them change their minds.

The Allies today boosted the number of missing United Nations soldiers for whom they demand an accounting from the Reds by 17 to 3,421. Three Canadians are included in the original list.

The Allies conceded at a meeting of the armistice commission secretariat, that some American PoWs on the original list submitted Sept. 9 had been repatriated.

The UN command deleted 27 names from the original list of 944 Americans, then added 41 more American names. They also added the names of two British soldiers and one Canadian.

Two weeks after the Allies submitted the first list of 3,404 names, the Reds answered that most had never been prisoners. The Communists said some died in captivity, while others either had been repatriated, had escaped, or had been released at the front during the war.

Most of today's returning Allies shook hands and thanked the Chinese and North Korean Communists who helped them from the Russian-built trucks.

"Good luck, Comrade Lee. We will see you in Peiping," one American told a Chinese.

They were dressed in drab blue Chinese uniforms and wore white pins with the Picasso peace dove symbol on their jackets.

Five of the South Koreans were women. One was pregnant and a child clung to her hand.

Lighter Colors And Slimmer Lines Dramatize Fur Collection For Fall

Furs, which always lend such a glamorous note to the Fall Openings, are attracting extra attention this season!

This added interest is due not only to the unprecedented smartness of the new silhouettes and style details, but also to the fashion emphasis that manufacturers have given to budget-priced furs.

In the styling of the furs featured in the Fall Showings, there are six major fashion points. Strongly emphasized is the slim silhouette, which represents the biggest change over last season.

This slender-line features roominess through the shoulders and enough fullness at the hemline for ease of movement. The armholes are cut deep, while the shoulders are small and often dropped well below the shoulder point.

Fall's easy slimness in furs emerges in several significant silhouettes. There is the wrap coat that can be worn loose in an easy, casual line or wrapped in a tapered, slender hemline effect. This wrap coat appears in all lengths—jackets that can be pulled in to hug the hipline, three-quarter coats with cut-away hemlines, and full-length coats.

The straight coat is the newest and appears most often in the better collections. It is cut straight at the front and back, with enough ease at the sides to avoid a skimpy look

Flat back coats, a modification of the straight coat, appear in all price lines. This style gives more fullness and has some wrapping ease at the front. Often the hemline is slashed at the sides.

Another outstanding fashion point in the fur showings is soft, attractive arrangement of fur around the face. With the newly tapered silhouette, the interest is focused on the collar treatment.

Larger collars, in dimensional shapes, are important. Wide, softly-draped collars lend a soft and flattering look to this season's loveliest furs.

Sleeve treatments are another major point in the newest fur coats. They are often bloused, puffed, or gently rounded at the top and tapering to the cuff for a flattering effect.

Other points of interest in this season's fur styling are: the new lengths, from 24 inches to 40 inches, to dramatize the slim skirts of Fall ready-to-wear; small furs, including stoles, brief shoulder capes, and full capes; and the color excitement of the new-season furs.

Mink, Persian lamb, nutria, broadtail, Alaskan seal, and beaver, are particularly adaptable to the new silhouettes, but other perennial favorites, sheared racoon, squirrel, muskrat and others show up significantly in this newsworthy Fall Fur Showing.

DRESSY SEPARATES

Dressy separates achieve added after-five popularity. Slim or buoyant skirts appear in chiffon, velvet and taffeta. Festive blouses are found in sheer nylon, supple jersey, silk and synthetic blends, wonderful rayon prints.

SAFETY MEASURE

Press a bar of damp soap into broken ends of a light bulb and turn it to remove it from the socket. But be sure to turn off the current. If in doubt, remove the fuse.

IN THIS DRAMATIC, long evening wrap of baby beaver the skins are masterfully rounded into open cape sleeves which curve below the waist to contrast with the vertically-worked skins of the coat.

THIS FORMAL BLOUSE is of veil and mist silk print. It is a new fall fashion in blouses which have the new cover drape sleeves.

Casual Dresses Combine Ease With Prettiness

Casual dresses offer a pretty outlook for Fall '53. No longer stripped of detail, casuals are softened both in line and texture, accented with gentle, feminine touches.

Fluid fabrics, such as jersey and a silky flannel appear in an assortment of lady-like styles with rounded curves, subtle shoulder treatment and long, slim lines. Wools and tweeds are softened, too. Flowing gently over the hips, they narrow down to sheath slimness.

Casual dress perennials, such as gabardine and twill are handled beautifully to produce graceful effects. Joining the line-up are wool and rabbit hair blends, wool and orlon blends and handsomely textured cottons, frequently interwoven with metallic strands.

Knit dresses and dresses with a knit look are done in flattering new styles that feature interesting colored banding and new, distinct shaping. Several of the new "miracle" fibres combine with wool for a knit-look that holds its shape, takes well to draping.

Colors in casuals are bright and well-harmonized. Jersey - orlon appears for the first time in such bold tones as cherry red, kelly and hunter green, royal blue. Tweeds feature a misty air, blending rose with gray, pastel blue with warm brown, and many heather tones in cloud-soft, shaggy textures.

Orlon-wool dresses abound in permanent pleating, much pretty draping about the shoulders, and a wide range of vivid colors in plaids and solids . . . all washable. Jersey plays host to deep leaf oranges, reds and yellows. In all casuals, brown is the natural in the news.

The skirt story is limited to slimness, sloping pockets that camousflage the hipline, back kick pleats, low-lying belts and some slot seaming.

Main style interest is focused above the waist. Collars, for instance, are wonderful. In addition to the accepted cardigan and tab collars, there are stand-away turtle-necks, V-dipping turtle necks, wide front and back open V necklines and bow ties—everything from an enormous artist's bow to a tiny shoe-string tie.

The dolman sleeve remains a casual favorite, but newer is the slender bracelet-length with its tiny turn-up cuff usually contrastingly colored. Other sleeves close just below the elbow with cuff links, end just above elbow with pert pointed cuffs. All provide a crisp prettiness.

Tucking or gathering lends the shoulder fullness so desirable in all modes of fashion, and sky-high pockets or button trims accent the shoulder area.

Idler Suit Natural For Leisure

There's many a man who has envied the array of easy-to-put-on-garments his wife has for lounging and entertaining at home. Her wrap-around swirl and hostess gown had not counterparts in the male lineup until recently. Now a man can have a stream-lined step-in suit that combines the virtues of a shirt and slack in one piece. This suit is the idler.

Men now have a changeover garment that matches the comfort and good looks of anything their wives possess. The Idler is made in a variety of fabrics—gabardine, Orlon-wool, and washable blends. The shirt top has a convertible collar, zip front closure or buttons, button cuff shirt sleeves, and two roomy chest pockets. The lower part, the slacks, have large slash hip pockets and cuffs on the trousers. An elasticized self belt buttons trimly in front.

Fabric Textures Accent Compound Color Suits

If it hasn't got texture and color your suit is as obsolete as the model T. The success of Nubby Touch effects this past season is being extended and accentuated by Compound Color effects for Fall. Suitings in tone-on-tone colors with surface interest have captured the imagination of well dressed men the country over.

Flannels, tweeds, blends of man-made fibers and natural fibers all show the influence of several color tones blended into the fabric with an irregularity of surface. These are expressed in multi-colored nubs, slubs, splashes and flecks.

The raised surface weave accents the Compound Colors of the fabric. For example, a Compound Color tweedy check may be accented by a striped effect in a slub. Or again, a soft textured worsted fabric in grey, blue or brown may be accented by flecks in Compound Colors.

These new Compound Color suits with a Nubby Touch are pleasing to the eye and are guaranteed to brighten any man's suit wardrobe. Suitable for wear in both town and country, these suits also are doubly versatile.

Sunday Dresses

A newcomer in fashions for girls, the "Sunday Afternoon Dress", is gaining terrific fashion acceptance. These dress-up frocks give girls and sub-teens a welcome change from their school-day separates; to wear for Sunday dinner, visiting and trips to museums, etc.

Velvets, taffetas, and failles with imaginative trims are featured, while simple styling is the signature of the "Sunday Afternoon" frock.

Car Taken In After Failure To Pass Test

Illustrating police weren't kidding when they initiated a "get tough" policy in car inspections, a potentially dangerous vehicle was towed off the street this morning after it knocked down a traffic cone.

PC Don Mackay was first attracted to the vehicle when, on backing from a driveway, it struck the school zone warning cone, knocking it over.

The driver explained he couldn't see the cone because his back window was fogged over. Constable Mackay ordered him to clean it but on further checking, found the vehicle, a 1939 model, had faulty brakes, lights and a few more faults.

"It will either be fixed to pass a rigid inspection or wrecked," Constable Mackay promised.

SCORES OF CHECKS

Making reference to a report on Vancouver's vehicle checking, he displayed 23 pages of closely-typed instructions which constitute the check. There are 66 different check points on steering alone.

There, cars in faulty condition are responsible for one half of one per cent of traffic accidents.

In areas where vehicles are not safety inspected, faulty mechanical conditions are responsible for 10 to 13 per cent of crashes.

Third Degree Burns

SUTTON, Ont. (CP)—A lighted pipe in a back pocket sent a man to hospital with third-degree burns Wednesday. While driving in his car, Leslie J. Cockburn, 52, put his pipe in his pocket thinking it was out. A few minutes later his trousers caught fire. Before he could stop the car, a large section of his shirt and jacket was burned.

Postmaster 51 Years In Rainy River

"Things have changed radically from the early days when I first started taking care of the mail back in 1912," said George Thomas Ferris, 71, one of the oldest postmasters attending the annual Ontario conference, which was being held in the city during the past three days.

Both he and Mrs. Ferris have attended every Ontario Postmasters' Convention for the past 18 years and Mr. Ferris has been a member of the Ontario Association for more than 25 years. Mr. Ferris is the postmaster of Finland, Ontario, which is just a few miles from the Manitoba border and exactly 1,240 miles from Peterborough.

ORIGINAL SETTLERS

Mr. and Mrs. Ferris were among the original settlers who settled in the Rainy River district back in 1907 and they were the first settlers to set up a homestead at what is now Finland.

Mr. Ferris was born and raised in England and came out to Canada for the first time in 1905, with his brother. They came over in one of the early steamships. It took them 16 days to cross and after arriving in Canada they pushed west to Brandon, Manitoba, and helped to harvest the wheat crop that year.

After the work was done, he and his brother headed back for England and came by way of Fort William in an old paddle wheel steamer. It took them two weeks to reach Montreal and they arrived back in England in time for Christmas.

BACK TO CANADA

The following year, he and his brother started back again for Canada, but this time they brought George Ferris' wife with them. They settled at Renfrew for a year-and-a-half. Mr. Ferris went into the contracting and decorating business, which was his trade. Just about that time they heard that the government was giving away free farm land in the Rainy River district. Mr. and Mrs. Ferris started west by themselves, for Mr. Ferris's brother had gone to Winnipeg, the year before. They went by way of Winnipeg, for Mr. Ferris wanted to show his wife the west. At that time Winnipeg streets were just a sea of mud, and Winnipeg was a quarter of its size today.

From Winnipeg they went on to Emo, Ontario, which is a few miles from the Manitoba border. They arrived there in 1907 and at that time there wasn't anything you could call a road. They managed to get 16 miles back into the country, with five other families and took up 160 acres of free grant farm land.

FIRST HOUSE

It took Mr. Ferris about a week to build their first home, which was 12 by 16 feet and made of logs. For a roof he used small popular trees, tar paper and sod. But the first good rain storm completely washed away the roof and he and his wife and their baby had to spend the night under an umbrella.

The closest settlement was at Emo, and it only had a two small stores, a livery stable and a few shacks owned by river men. That was the only place one could buy supplies recalls Mr. Ferris. But quite often they didn't have anything to sell. Storekeeper had to carry all the supplies on their backs from Straton, Ontario which was 16 miles from Emo.

The young couple managed to get through the first winter and that spring two Italians moved into the district, bringing with them a team of oxen. Horses could not work on the muskeg.

"It seems," said Mr. Ferris, "that they couldn't stand the hard living and left the next summer and I bought their team of oxen and from then on things picked up."

WORKED IN BUSH

For the next four or five years Mr. Ferris worked in the bush in the winter, cutting down trees and hauling them to Emo. During the summer he worked on his farm and in Fort Frances as a carpenter. Around the summer of 1910, 20 Finnish families moved into the district from Hibbing, Minnesota, and from them Finland got its name explained Mr. Ferris. During that summer more and more settlers kept moving into the district and the government was paying Mr. Ferris $2 a day, to take them into the district and help them get settled.

"The Finnish homesteaders never bothered to stock up enough provisions for the winter," recalls Mr. Ferris and they would always come to me in the winter and buy food, and that is how I got started in the store business."

In 1912 Finland had enough people for a post office and Mr. Ferris applied for it, and got it. In those days Mr. Ferris had to carry all the mail on his back from Emo. Besides farming and running the post office and his store Mr. Ferris carried on a thriving fur trading business with the Sioux Indians, who had a reservation at Berwick and Emo.

CHANGED NOW

Finland and Emo have changed radically from the early days recalls Mr. Ferris. "When I first went into the district there were not any roads and the railroad had just been in two years. Today there's a paved highway that goes right past the door.

Floods plagued them in the early days said Mr. Ferris "you could hardly get a team of horses over the roads. It was so bad, recalls Mr. Ferris, "that one spring when I was bringing back supplies from Emo, all you could see of the oxen was their heads bobbing up and down in water."

Besides all his other activities Mr. Ferris prides himself on owning the oldest car in the Rainy River district. It is a two-cylinder 102 Sears car. Made of brass, it has rubber tires and is steared by a handle. It cost him $175.

Mr. Ferris plans to retire from the post office, when he returns home. Their plans for the future are vague, but they inted to do some travelling, but he doesn't intend to leave the Rainy River district for long.

DOROTHY DIX

Model Requires More Than Good Looks

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 20 years of age. I quit school in the eighth grade. I looked much older than I was then. Since I frequently had been told I was attractive, and had a good figure, I wanted a modeling career. My attempts to get work in that line weren't successful, so I tried a variety of other jobs. Now, of course, I realize how handicapped I am by lack of education. My chief trouble, I think, is that I've been getting advice from too many people and usually the wrong ones. I like people and enjoy working in a busy place. Have you any suggestions for me?

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You certainly are going to find your brief education inadeqquate for many jobs but the situation is anything but hopeless. There's no necessity, either, for you to wait until you have enough money to continue your schooling. You can take up where you left off at no expense, or for a small tuition fee if you can afford it. Contact your local board of education at once and find out what night classes are open. Get your elementary school diploma, if you haven't one already, then take high-school subjects in the field that interests you most. If you are makking the attempt to further your education, you will find large companies more receptive to your application for employment.

This is a competitive age and without the proper all-around training success will almost always be just around the corner.

"It is our opportunity to do and achieve the laying of a Christian foundation for the children of the future in a house of Worship. The monument to God who will crown our efforts".

Consumer President Says Housewives Need Training

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian women may hold the purse strings but not all of them know how to use them properly.

In an interview Wednesday after her election as head of the consumer education and liaison group, she said the housewife is Canada's chief purchasing agent but nothing has been done to prepare her for that job.

"What has education or society or even public thinking done to prepare the housewife for the immense power that her hand has over the steering dollar of the household budget expenses?

"I have often wondered why universities and schools have not begun before this to train girls who will do the nation's spending in a greater awareness of what their dollar can do to the Canadian economy."

IMPORTANT EDUCATION

She said this neglect to prepare the housewife for her big task has made education of the consumer "one of the most important forms of adult education."

Mrs. Vautelet herself brings to her new job a wealth of experience and information in the field of economics. No stranger to the kitchen, she plans to edit a cookbook of old French recipes that have been used in her family for generations.

During the Second World War she made a six-month survey of Quebec women's economic position and legislative needs on behalf of the provincial government. She was the only woman member of the economic advisory board of Quebec, a post-war planning board created by the Quebec government.

She was one of the two women named to the war savings board. She has been connected with the Canadian Association of Consumers since its beginning and has led the movement in Quebec as national French vice-president and as provincial president.

ASK RATE STATED

The two-day national convention which ended Wednesday asked that the effective annual rate of interest be clearly stated on all loan or sales contracts and in all advertising of time payment plans.

The meeting also went on record as urging labelling of all products made from pasteurized milk or cream, so as to protect both manufacturer and consumer. It reiterated its disapproval of coupons and premiums as forms of advertising, called on food processors to make available a more generous supply of apple juice enriched with vitamin C, and recommended removal of the 10-per-cent sales tax on tea and coffee.

The daily use of perfume is a good grooming habit. But be sure to use the proper scent for the occasion. Light, floral scents are best for daytime, spicy, for sports, heavy, for evening.

Hospital Aux. Canvassers Guests At Membership Tea

Autumn colours mingled with sun rays beaming through the windows created warmth in atmosphere and the charming hospitality of those in charge was felt by those present for the annual membership tea of the Civic Hospital Women's Auxiliary. Wednesday afternoon in the nurses' residence.

Mrs. E. Chambers, president, and Mrs. W. T. Fanjoy, vice president of the Auxiliary received the guests. In her brief opening remarks, Mrs. Chambers welcomed both the new and former canvassers and stressed the importance of early canvassing. Sympathy was extended also to the members of the family of the late Mrs. Gordon Miller.

Honoured guests at this tea were Mrs. E. Dinner and Miss E. Morrow. Commendation for their wonderful efforts on behalf of the Auxiliary was extended by Mrs. Chambers. Mr. John Hornal was asked to speak and he also expressed pleasure in the task he was to perform. Speaking for the Board of Governors he extended appreciation for the worthwhile work Miss Morrow has done for the hospital. Also for her wonderful service to the Auxiliary during the entire history of its organization.

A gift was presented to Miss Morrow in the form of a special copy of the history of the Civic Hospital Women's Auxiliary. Miss Morrow, in replying to the honour conferred upon her, expressed thanks for the thoughtful act and said the gift was much appreciated. She went on to say that she had always enjoyed her work in the Auxiliary, and that she will always be interested in the work of the Auxiliary.

Mrs. Chambers invited everyone to visit the library wagon which is under convenorship of Mrs. Fanjoy, have a look at the mobile tuck shop under the convenorship of Miss Margaret English and also see the "articles of welcome" to all new babies in the hospital, the boottee committee under Mrs. Clarke Murkar. Too, she stressed the fact that new knitters would be welcome.

All members help toward this Membership Tea which is actually considered the opening of the membership drive. Mrs. J. E. Girven and Mrs. A. Clarke were convenors. The issistants were—Mrs. W. A. Taylor, Mrs. G. W. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Clarke Murkar, Mrs. Wm. Nash and Mrs. W. Jones.

Miss Margaret English and Mrs. L. G. Dobbin poured tea and coffee. The table was most attractive being covered with a large Quaker lace cloth. Yellow and bronze 'mums were arranged in a very dark green glass bowl. Around the base of this unusual bowl was a brass metallic band and candlestick holders in corresponding metallic covered with green ivy held yellow tapers to blend in with the Autumn harmony. Silver tea services were placed at each end of the table.

Mrs. G. Barnes, Mrs. C. Huffman, Mrs. Geo. Coleman, Mrs. H. Rehill, Mrs. L. Zacks, Mrs. C. Craig, Mrs. C. Muir, Mrs. H. Mason and Mrs. H. Cherney assisted in serving the guests.

Mrs. Samis said that there would have to be an extra effort if the church's pledge for the building of the training school in Toronto is to be met.

Reports were read from Mrs. A. J. Macklin, chairman stewardship secretary, and from Mrs. Edith Howson, supply secretary. Mrs. Howson said that bales of clothing are being prepared for shipment overseas, particularly Korea.

Devotional section of the meeting was in charge of Mrs. Albert Roberts, assisted by Mrs. J. M. Sargent and Mrs. Edith Howson.

A duet "Moment by Moment" was sung by Mrs. Fred Stephenson and Mrs. Alice Scriver with Mrs. William Smith accompanying on the piano.

The Study Book "Where e'er the Sun" was introduced by Mrs. Roberts with readings on various countries by Mesdames Garnet Burns, Milton Clysdale, W. A. Atchison, Stevenson and Sargent.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Sheldon Moffat of R.R. 2, Orono, on Saturday at high noon, the marriage took place of their daughter Dawn Marie to Mr. Keith George Hall Finnie, son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Finnie of Bailieboro. The Rev. Andrew E. Eustace of Pembroke officiated.

Tall standards of white gladioli formed the setting. Mrs. W. Workman played wedding music and Miss Gwendolyn Chatterton was soloist. During the ceremony she sang "The Lord's Prayer" and at the signing of the register she sang "Because."

The bride was wearing a sparkling white strapless gown of lace and net over satin. This was topped with a matching lace and net jacket which formed a redingote, featuring long lily-pointed sleeves and a high PeterPan collar. The very full skirt was fashioned with panels of the lace and net falling to the waltz-length hemline in stiff folds. She wore a small white hat of lace and net and carried a cascade bouquet of white Shasta 'mums.

She was given in marriage by her father and attended by her sister Miss Jean Elaine Moffatt who was frocked in a waltz-length strapless gown of turquoise nylon marquisette over taffeta with taffeta trimming and mittens. A bolero and headdress of matching marquisette completed her ensemble and she carried a cascade of pale rose gladioli.

Tea For Mothers Of Kindergarten At P. of W. School

The rotunda of the Prince of Wales Primary School was filled Wednesday afternoon when the Home and School Association had as their guests for tea the mothers of the kindergarten children.

President Mrs. A. M. Parker, together with Vice-Presidents Mrs. J. Morley and Mrs. A. W. Smith, received them.

Miss Mary Faulkner, the kindergarten teacher, in discussing points of interest concerning the children attending kindergarten, emphasized the need for security in a child's life, and the necessity of obedience, stressing that "only through obedience will later come love and respect for the parent."

Reporting a total of 104 children in her morning and afternoon classes, Miss Faulkner commented that one of her aims is "a perfect understanding between the home and school, through the medium of the Home and School Association," and expressed the hope that all parents of her pupils would become members.

Miss Alfreda Jenkins, assistant to Miss Faulkner, was introduced to the mothers.

Mrs. W. Pakenham convened the tea, assisted by Mrs. A. Barber, Mrs. A. Millard, Mrs. A. Pearcy, Mrs. S. Daniel, Mrs. A. MacGregor, Mrs. J. Turner, Mrs. A. Pooley, Mrs. V. Ridley and Mrs. P. Butler.

29-Year-Old Canadian Ranks High Among London's Hair Stylists

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Business appointments with countesses, marchionesses, the occasional duchess, even a princess or two—these are everyday events in the London working life of Saskatchewan-born hair stylist Michael MacNeil.

Since January, the 29-year-old six-footer from Bienfait, Sask., and Vancouver has worked in the Mayfair salon of Antoine of Paris. Here well-known names from society lists and theatre guides of many countries are a commonplace.

At Coronation time, ranking Canadians brushed shoulders in the salon with such titled personalities as the Duchess of Argyll, the Marchionesses of Bute and Lothian and the Countesses of Sondes and Feversham. Favorite theatre customers are actresses Joan Greenwood, Elizabeth Sellars, Margaret Johnson and Yvonne Arnaud.

For the June 2 Coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey, MacNeil styled the hair-dos of two countesses. His Canadian customers included Mrs. T. C. Douglas and Mrs. William Patterson, wives respectively of Saskatchewan's premier and lieutenant-governor, and Mrs. E. C. Leslie, whose husband represented the University of Saskatchewan at the Coronation.

After the abbey ceremony, he tidied the hair of Princess Marie of Croy for a Coronation ball.

NEW YORK TRAINING

Just such cosmopolitan experiences as these were MacNeil's aim when he sold his beauty shop at Abernethy, Sask., in 1949 and took a year's training at a New York institute. He then toured Canada's salons and made a bee-line for London last fall.

Before starting at Antoine, MacNeil made straight for a two-month holiday in Scotland's Outer Hebrides. His parents, now living in Vancouver, were originally from Barra, an island in the Hebrides.

MacNeil started hairdressing as a "blind stab" after wartime service in the Canadian and United States navies. He took a course in Regina, six months on men's hairdressing and six months on women's, but quickly decided which offered the best return.

MacNeil says his big ambition is to own a top beauty salon in Canada—"even if I have to wait to collect my life insurance to do it." He has already picked the name, the color scheme and even some of the fittings for his dream salon.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Young Bride Disappointed Attempt To Roast Chicken

Completely captivated by the wrtier of this letter, I had to do something concrete about it and I did:

"Dear Mrs. Moore: I'm 18, but that's no excuse for roasting the first chicken my husband brought home until it was dry and hard. I was disgusted, for both he and his mother are expert chicken roasters. Could you tell me (and I am sure other brides would like it too) exactly what you do when you stuff and roast a chicken. Our butcher will dress them but even if he didn't my husband would (for the darling is afraid I'll cut my fingers!) . . . Rosemary."

Isn't she a dear? No wonder her husband is so fond . . .

That gave me a perfect excuse to have roast chicken smack in the middle of the week so I could watch every move I made and every minute I spent.

ROAST CHICKEN

I bought a 7-month-old roaster weighing 5½ lbs. before it was dressed. I singed what few hairs were on it with a candle. I washed it inside with cold running water, scooping out the odd bits of connective tissue and kidney that were buried deep in the backbone. There were a few little feather pins under the tail skin so I pulled them out, using the small paring knife and my thumb as pincers. I drained and dried the bird on a big cotton tea towel that I keep at the bottom of the tea towel pile, nice and clean, for just such purposes.

Meanwhile Pete was breaking up 9 slices of white bread including the end crust and the crusts on the slices. I sauteed 2 green onions in 2 tablespoons butter until they were limp but not brown at all. I removed these from the heat, added ¼ teaspoon each crumbled sage and celery salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and ¾ teaspoon salt. This I stirred into the crumbs, and used all but ½ cup of it to stuff the bird. I closed him up with 2 four-inch skewers. I stuffed the neck skin (for the butcher had cut the neck off close and put it with the gizzard, heart and liver) with the remaining stuffing and skewered it closed with a 6-inch skewer.

The oven was set at 325 deg. Fahr. I smeared the chicken skin all over with unsalted shortening, and put it in the roasting pan on the trivet breast up, and put it in the oven—no water, no cover.

When it had roasted for 2 hours I sprinkled it with salt. Total roasting time 2¾ hours. During last 5 minutes I turned on my top oven to give it a little extra browning for this low temperature does not give a deep rich gold color to the skin BUT it pays off in delicious moist roasted chicken—you will never have the dry hard result you describe if you use this technique.

To the neck, gizzard, heart and liver I added 2 cups water and simmered them for 2¾ hours. I will chop this meat and add it to some leftover chicken and make chicken a la king with it.

CHICKEN GRAVY

There will be very little if any fat in your roasting pan but there will be delicious brown bits of sediment. When chicken is on hot platter and waiting in warming oven, put roasting pan over burner and add 2 cups hot water, stirring to scrape off all bits clinging to pan. Stir 4½ tablespoons flour into 4½ tablespoons cold water until smooth. Stir this into the pan liquid until thick. Taste to see if it needs salt OR if you want this gravy rich use milk instead of water. You could add the chopped giblets to this gravy if you wish.

Will that be okay for today's lesson Rosemary? I'd love to hear from you any time. Greetings to your husband who is a lucky man.

LUXURIOUS cashmere has blossomed out this fall, moving into the realm of suits, dresses, skirts and coats both dressy and casual. We show here three cashmere coats, each of them destined to lead a different life. Fluid coat (centre) falls into folds as soft and gentle as those of a sheer woollen dress. "Little boy look" finds new treatment (left) in coat with high waist and deep, easy sleeves. The utter luxury of white cashmere with mink (right) makes the kind of coat most women yearn to own. This one costs less than an inexpensive fur coat, is one of the dramatic coats of the season.

Fall Air Holds Health, Beauty

BY ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

You will rate A in common sense teen agers, if you heed the nip in the autumn air. It's an invitation to health and beauty.

Don't fall into the habit of spending hours in the ice cream parlor. Get away from the calories and out into that air. Walk. Take bicycle rides. Go horseback riding. Do anything that requires you to use your muscles in the outdoors. You will be richly rewarded.

Walking is the best all-around exercise. While it tones your muscles, you can take note of your posture and practice improved carriage. Meanwhile, the air will be doing wonders for your complexion.

If you enjoy riding bicycles or horses, fine. You can supplement your daily walk with these pastimes. Bicycle riding is excellent for the leg muscles, and horseback riding, if you use an English saddle, helps develop good sitting posture.

These sports have the added advantage of giving you an opportunity to get into the countryside to marvel at the crazy-quilt fall colors.

You may discover that an afternoon's jaunt to the countryside will not satisfy you. Then, why not plan an all-day hike with your friends for some Saturday? Pack a light lunch, wear slacks to protect your legs from brambles and be on your way early.

Hiking will not only help you to improve health and beauty but it will open new fields of interest, that should result in a more interesting you.

Misty-To-Dark Tones In Hosiery

Costume-keyed colors highlight the news of hosiery for Fall, 1953. These shades range from light, misty tones to colors that are somewhat darker than last season's.

These flattering new-for-Fall hosiery shades include:

Misty gray tones to wear with all the grays, as well as blues and black.

ment in the family over my marriage.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: If people are going to talk—and undoubtedly they will—the fact that you have a big or small wedding won't influence them one bit. If you want a big wedding, go ahead and have it; in fact, the more proudly you present your man, the less criticism you'll invite.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Harold and I have been corresponding for almost two years, though we never met until a few months ago. We see each other seldom, since he lives quite a distance from me. He says he loves me and I know I love him, though I haven't told him yet. He's busy at school and work now, so I don't hear from him more than once a week. If the week passes without a letter, I get very worried. Do you think if I told him I love him it would make any difference? I'm 17 and he's 21.

Addie T.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Your friendship with the young man seems rather unstable. I think it would be better for you both to kkeep your correspondence on a friendly, rather than sentimental, level for the time being. He is so greatly preoccupied with the business of making a living and acquiring an education that it would be better for him to shelve the question of marriage for a time. You are too young to become permanently involved, especially with a youth you don't really know well.

DAZZLING FOR DATES

For dates, polished cottons star in a dazzling range of one- and two-piece styles. Strapless and jacketed, scoop necklined, low waisted, tie-printed or in deep fall solids, these shining examples look like silk or satin, cost a lot less, and are a breeze to care for.

BRIGHT FALL UMBRELLAS

Viennese designers are showing sturdy, short-stemmed rucksack umbrellas, bright colored cotton dirndls, and long-stemmed light colored silk shades for fall.

Cattle Sale Bids Down

LITTLE CURRENT (CP)—Opening bids in Manitoulin Island's cattle sale were down five cents from last year's $22.25 to $17.50. First five cars all went from $17.00 to $17.75. Highest price ever paid in Canada was $36.00 paid at the sale two years ago for a carload of white-faced heifers.

Weather was ideal with an estimated 200 buyers present from all parts of southern Ontario. Quality was highest in the sale's 10-year history.

Highways Minister Doucette, of Ontario, a cattleman himself, formally opened the sale.

Ninety-eight carlots just under 3,000 head, is being sold today, compared with 99 last year. Duncan Brown of Shedden is auctioneer. The sale is largest one-day annual sale in Canada.

But under cross-examination from Mr. Fanjoy, the witness, Neil Wasson of Lakefield, conceded that the third party might have been returning a loan from Taylor.

He was asked by Judge Kennedy why there had been no line-up so witnesses would have had to pick Taylor out instead of just pointing to the accused man as he sat conspicuously in the dock. He said the two main difficulties were the physical inability of their chief witness, Smith, to appear before the preliminary trial was heard; and it was difficult to get a line-up of Indians resembling Taylor.

"That's about the lamest explanation I've ever heard," said Mr. Fanjoy, who added that he would bring this up again, later in the case.

The first witness for the defence, Ray Taylor, 24, also of Curve Lake, swore that he was with Leonard Taylor on the morning in question. The accused man was having breakfast in a tent on an island near the Indian village, Taylor said; and they visited for three-quarters of an hour. While they were there two other Indians—Stan and Roy Taylor—came to borrow a fishing spear.

The case for the defence is continuing later today.

Bancroft Lions Present Swim Awards

Swimming pool committee chairman Lion Jack Follis spoke highly of the results achieved and complimented the pupils and their instructor, Scott Pearton, of Peterborough.

Gordon Minty, of Peterborough YMCA, assisted by Scott Pearton, made the presentations and stressed the importance of swimming instruction from the points of view of safety, physical welfare, hygiene and courage. He urged the children to realise and appreciate the work and expense incurred by the Lions club in maintaining and staffing the pool each year.

The young visitors joined in the club sing-song and were shown films featuring ice rescue, water safety and camping.

Treasurer Lion Chet Wark reported the club's finances in a healthy state as a result of the summers activities. Lion Jack Brown announced Charter Night would be held on Friday, Oct. 2, and preparations were well under way.

Health and welfare chairman Lion John Hawkins reported that 21 crippled children had received clinical examination and that numerous children had been transported to and from summer camps.

A large party will attend the newly-formed Madawaska Valley club's charter night.

25,000 Hawks On Migration

PORT STANLEY (CP) — About 25,000 hawks and a few bald eagles have been counted wheeling and soaring over Port Stanley this week on their annual migration to the south, Aubrey Clendenning, of McIlwraith Ornithological Society, London, disclosed today.

The birds, he said, flying in huge flock high in the air and in smaller numbers closer to earth, had attracted attention in St. Thomas and Port Stanley.

One teacher in the village school had to adjust venetian blinds to divert the attention of her class from an impromptu study of nature—hawks—to textbooks.

Mr. Clendenning said he had counted about 22,000 broad-winged hawks over Port Stanley on Tuesday and that on the basis of briefer observations Wednesday, he estimated the Wednesday flight at about 1600.

Through October the flights will continue in diminishing size with the passage of red-tailed, red-shouldered and rough-legged hawks, Mr. Clendenning said.

Jailed 2 Months For Robbing Club

HAMILTON (CP)—In sentencing 17-year-old George Carter, Jamestown, N. Y., today to two months in jail for the theft of a strongbox containing money, watches, and rings belonging to members of the Jamestown baseball club, Magistrate Beamer W. Hopkins paid special tribute to Sgt. of Detectives John Freeborn. Sgt. Freeborn was responsible for arresting the lad having noticed him acting suspiciously around the Jamestown bus when it was parked at the stadium.

Another lad, alleged to have been with Carter and who made off with the greater part of the money, has not yet been apprehended. It is believed he is in the United States.

Not Being Snooty Ottawa Mayor Says

OTTAWA (CP) — Mayor Charlotte Whitton today took exception to a Montreal dispatch suggesting she spurned a Montreal bus for her own civic Cadillac on a tour for the International Congress of Mayors Wednesday.

"Fact is, I wasn't even on the tour," the mayor said. "I spent the afternoon on important business for the City of Ottawa."

Miss Whitton said she used the Cadillac to go to Montreal because she left Ottawa late Tuesday night after a city council meeting and there was no other way to travel. She attended the morning sessions and the luncheon, but could not take in the tour because of business.

Raid On Roadhouse Brings 10 Fines

FORT ERIE (CP)—One person was jailed and 10 others were fined today after a provincial police raid on a roadhouse on the outskirts of Fort Erie Sept. 4.

Raymond Basil Finch, 34, of Bertie township was sentenced to four months in jail and fined $200 when he pleaded guilty to conducting a bawdy house.

Mrs. Bertha Prest, 26, of Courtland, pleaded guilty to keeping liquor on the premises and was fined $518.50.

A court order was issued declaring the house a public zone.

Woman Sings Outside Prison At Executions

LONDON (Reuters) — No execution is complete in Britain without a fiery old lady in a black astrakahn-trimmed cloak standing atop her Rolls Royce outside the prison gates singing "Abide With Me."

Reforms in British capital punishment laws recommended in a royal commission report published Wednesday will not alter this national institution.

For Mrs. Violet Van Der Elst, who has waged an independent campaign against the death sentence for 25 years, is not satisfied. She spent Wednesday reading the report on her sick bed and decided: "The fight must go on."

The fight may kill her first. "I've got inflammation of the lungs," she said today. "I've been outside so many jails in all kinds of weather that I'm completely worn out."

HOPES TO BE BACK

She hopes to be out again soon, taking her customary place at the head of the crowd which always gathers outside a jail in the chilly dawn of an execution day.

Illness kept her away from the hanging of mass-slayer John Christie last July. And in this case—Christie confessed to the sex-slaying of six women — even Mrs. Van Der Elst admitted "there was nothing I could do." Not that she has ever stopped an execution.

Most of the fortune she made marketing the first brushless shaving soap has dwindled in taxes—and the cost of her crusade against capital punishment. She has been arrested for obstruction outside jails six times, fined at least another 25.

Nowadays she just turns up at prison in mourning, her Rolls plastered with anti-hanging slogans. In her wealtheir days, she hired planes, loudspeaker vans playing "Abide With Me" and anything up to 100 sandwich-board men carrying slogans like: "Another state murder has been committed."

Most people smilingly regard her as an eccentric. Even members of the royal commission itself took little notice when Mrs. Van Der Elst turned up at one of its public hearings in February, 1950.

Red Answer Unsatisfactory

TOKYO (AP)—Gen. Mark Clark told the Communists today he considers "wholly unacceptable" Red answers to UN demands for an accounting of missing Allied soldiers believed to have been prisoners of war.

In a letter delivered at Panmunjom tonight, the UN commander demanded the "immediate return of those United Nations command personnel remaining in your hands, and an honest accounting for all others who have been so clearly identified as having been in your custody."

The Allies demanded Sept. 9 an accounting of 3,404 men identified at some time as prisoners of the Reds. The total was revised upward to 3,421 today. Three Canadians were mentioned in the original list and a fourth was added in the revision.

The Reds replied that some of the men already have been repatriated, others were released at the front, some escaped and some died. But the Communists said most of those on the list never were prisoners.

Pipe Band RehearsesMarch

CGE Pipe Band rehearsed at Club Aragon Wednesday night their detail of social ceremonial for the Tartan Ball Friday night.

Leading the grand march, always a stirring feature, the band will play The Pibroch of Donald Dhu. They also provide a short program of pipe numbers, marching on the floor to the tune "Farquhar McRae" in honor of Ian McRae, whose tartan the band adopted. He was largely helpful in the founding of the band. Mr. and Mrs. McRae are expected from Toronto.

Several other numbers will include The Road to the Isles and Bonnie Dundee.

The committee in charge of the ball limited their tickets to 270 couples. Most of them were picked up a week or so ago. It may be that at the last minute some one may have to cancel this engagement, making a pair of tickets available, but otherwise they are all taken. There was still considerable scurrying of enquiry this morning.

Australia Refuses Consider Resignation

CANBERRA (Reuters) — Prime Minister Robert Menzies said tonight that the question of Australian recognition of Communist China "simply does not arise in our view while we are in a state of suspended hostilities with that nation."

He had been asked in the House of Representatives for a statement on the government's attitude.

Menzies said: "We would not waste even two minutes thinking of recognizing a country that until a few months ago was engaged in military operations and for that matter dealing out death to our own people."

West Berlin Mayor Crosses Border Safely

LAUENBURG, Germany (AP)—West Berlin's vigorously anti-Communist mayor, Ernst Reuter, crossed the Iron Curtain border into West Germany safely and without hindrance today after Red guards had sent him home to get his identity papers amended.

En route to Hamburg for a meeting of West German mayors, Reuter and his wife and driver were stopped at the East German border here Wednesday night. The Communist frontier guards said the mayor's papers gave his address only as the "Senate of Berlin," instead of his home location in West Berlin's U. S. sector.

Reuter frequently has driven without interference through Soviet East Germany to the West.

Bottle With Note Addressed To Princess

LONDON (Reuters) — A bottle containing a note from an American addressed to Princess Margaret was picked up on the beach at Southwick, southern England, Wednesday.

The bottle also contained a model harbor, showing a lighthouse, pier and several boats.

On the back of the note, addressed to "Buckingham Palace, London, England" was written: "S. S. American Inventor, J. A. Rinkostki, pier N. R. 59, New York."

The finder, Cyril Todman, Southwick, said he will send the bottle, with the note unopened, to Buckingham Palace.

Princess Margaret is in Scotland.

To Hear Report On Causeway

An engineering report on the cost of putting a rock-fill causeway and bridge over Pigeon Lake will be heard at the November sessions of both the Peterborough County Council and the Victoria County Council.

This step was decided on after a meeting of the roads committee from Peterborough County and the bridge committee of Victoria County.

There will also be a report on another joint project: building a new bridge across the Burnt River at Kinmount. Reeve Peter Pearson of Galway-Cavendish says the present bridge is neither wide enough nor strong enough for motor traffic; so a replacement is necessary.

INSPECTED SHORES

The two committees on Tuesday inspected the Ennismore and Emily shorelines where the old floating bridge used to cross Pigeon Lake. There has been talk, particularly in the Bobcaygeon region, about a causeway and bridge—somewhat similar to the one planned at Gannon's Narrows—to link the two counties.

County Engineer Jack Kean of Peterborough and Harold Wilford of Victoria were asked to bring in a report on costs when their respective councils meet in November.

The report will be an engineering one. Whether or not the councils will want to go ahead with the causeway at Pigeon Lake and the bridge at Kinmount, on the basis of the report, is another matter.

Mr. Wilford has estimated that it would cost $190,000 for rock fill and culverts across the 5,000 foot wide lake. That doesn't take into account the cost of a bridge — whether high level or low level, depending on Department of Transport requirements.

Motorcyclist Hurt In Crash

LINDSAY (ENS) — Eighteen-year-old Terry Heard, 39 Stewart St., Peterborough, was treated at Ross Memorial Hospital for face lacerations and bruises Wednesday night after his motorcycle was in collision with a car on Highway 7, east of Lindsay.

The mishap occurred near McArthur's school, some five miles east of town, when Heard's motorcycle collided with a car driven by Leroy Eager, of Lindsay. Damage to the car was about $200.

Heard was rushed to hospital by ambulance. One stitch was required to close a cut in his face.

OPP Constable George Mountstephen investigated.

Meeting In Piccadilly Confirms Parting Joke

"See you in Piccadilly," was the casually humored parting in Tem office after Don Carr of CGE and J. L. Ireland of McGinnis Trailers had bought their tickets and were taking off on their separate ways for Europe.

And that was exactly the scene of their next meeting, thanks to the long arm of coincidence.

Mr. Carr was off on a honeymoon trip to Britain and the continent and after seeing much of Scotland they got down to London. One day, as Mr. Ireland, recently returned to Peterborough, was strolling along Regent St. with his wife, window shopping, they turned into Piccadilly, and the first persons they noticed incredibly, were Mr. and Mrs. Carr. There in the heart of the Commonwealth, and at the crossroads of the world, the Peterborough foursome held a sidewalk reunion with much laughter and some astonishment that the Tem parting of the two husbands had become a reality. They remained together in London for nearly two hours before separating again to continue their journeying.

Free Publicity Scored By Publisher

HAMILTON (CP)—Scoring what he termed the "frank and astonishingly bold attempts" by some organizations to get free publicity in newspaper columns, Col. J. F. Picking of the Aurora Banner, this morning called on publishers and editors of the Ontario division, Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, to abandon their negative attitude towards this perennial and thorny problem of newspaper publishing.

"A grocer cannot live by giving away a can of peas; a newspaper cannot live by giving away the commodity it has to sell. We should stop being afraid of fear," he said.

The speaker, in a surprise move, called for a group discussion, rather than a single speech. This dealt with free publicity for products, municipal government bodies and churches.

The chairman grouped free publicity into two classes: that aimed at getting advertising space free, and the type which it was the duty of a publication to carry for the information and interest of readers.

With respect to such matters as municipal traffic regulations and fire control it was felt that free publicity was in order on the news pages, but should be backed by advertising of by-laws.

200 Delegates At CWNA Meet

HAMILTON (CP)—With an estimated attendance of 200 delegates, the Ontario division, Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, opened its three-day annual convention here this morning. Charles Nolan of the Stouffville Tribune, president, was in the chair.

Events of the morning session included appointment of the nominating and resolutions committees; an address, Free Publicity, by Col. J. F. Pickering of the Aurora Banner and a second address, Co-operative Advertising by Leonard Harriman of Toronto.

J. D. Thomas, past president of the Don river conservation authority, is the luncheon speaker. His topic is conversation.

Speaker at the dinner tonight will be Hon. Charles Daley, Ontario minister of labor. At that time trophies will be presented to winners of the CWNA awards.

16 Weeklies Win Awards At Convention

HAMILTON (CP)—Sixteen Ontario weekly newspapers have won awards at the annual convention of Ontario division, Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association. The organization opened its three-day convention here this morning.

Winner of the Aurora Bannet Trophy for best all-round paper in communities of 4,500 and over is the Barrie Examiner, with the Simcoe Reformer in second place and the Tillsonburg News coming third. News and pictures, feature editorials, display advertisements, typography, press work and general appearance were taken into account.

Winner of the Albert V. Nolan Memorial Trophy for the best all-round paper for populations from 1,500 to 4,500 is the Aurora Banner, with the Port Credit Weekly second and the Clinton News-Record third.

Winner of the Joseph T. Clark Trophy for the best all-round paper serving populations of under 1,500 is the Harrow News, with the Winchester Press second and the Bolton Enterprise third.

The E. F. Stephenson award for the best front page in papers serving populations from 1,500 to 4,500 goes to the Aurora Banner, with the Amherstburg Echo second and the Exeter Times-Advocate third.

The Legge Trophy for the best editorial page, open to all weeklies, goes to the Tillsonburg News, with the Gananoque Reporter second. The Fort Erie Times-Review and the Brampton Conservator tied for third.

Muskies To Play Despite Rumors

Rumors to contrary had circulated after an announcement by the Recreation Centre Committee that the local arena would not open until November 1.

Today, Manager Warren Fry, of the Muskies, confirmed that the team had thought, for a time, of discontinuing operations. A meeting was held this week, however, and most of last year's team with a few additions from rural teams, turned out to start organizing this year's team.

Representatives of the team will meet with the committee in an attempt to iron out their differences.

The Muskies feel, said Mr. Fray, that they need more practice time than the two weeks they would have from November 1 to the season's opening.

Secretary of the Recreation Committee, Bert Hick said there is a good chance of the arena opening earlier than previously announced.

Military Aid To French In Indo-China Doubled

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jack Macbeth as an Associated Press Correspondent, spent six months earlier this year in Indo-China where French and Vietminh forces have been struggling for control for almost seven years. Now working in Ottawa with The Canadian Press, Macbeth reviews the situation as things now appear to shape up.

By JACK MacBETH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bold steps appear to have been taken in an attempt to reach a military decision in Indo-China. But a verdict may be a long time coming, if at all.

For nearly seven years fighting has see-sawed in a costly stalemate between French Union forces and their Communist-led enemy, the Vietminh. Now, possibly seeking a verdict, the United States has decided tentatively to double military aid to the French.

This strategically-timed move is reported to have as its objective the final and complete defeat of Vietminh troops in about two years.

However, it's anybody's guess as to whether it will succeed. It depends to a large extent on French ability to meet commitments.

FRENCH UNDERTAKING

To obtain additional U.S. support, the French government is understood to have promised:

1. To move nine battalions of French troops from Europe to the Indo-China battle front to reinforce 150,000 men already in the field.

2. To accelerate training of loyal Indo-Chinese manpower to create a tough anti-Communist force capable of winning the present war and countering any future threats.

(The French have begun to raise 54 battalions in Indo-China this year to reinforce 200,000 already under arms.)

3. To grant complete, visible independence to the three Indo-Chinese states of Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia, all of which have been complaining about French rule.

There seems little doubt that the French can provide another nine battalions—about 7,000 men. This will help.

OFFICER'S OPINION

He added that experience had proven that, with heroic exceptions Viet Namese units were not always thoroughly reliable. It was a question of their loyalty.

If the French government carries out its third promise, giving full independence to the three associated states, the indicator line on their loyalty chart will climb. However, after nearly seven years' subjection to Communist propaganda, it is doubtful that they will be convinced to a man that the French finally are on their way out.

Competent observers in Saigon have said that while the raising of a national army in Korea was an eminent success—after two difficult years—equal success could not be expected in Indo-China. They cited the fact that Koreans never were colonized by Europeans.

They were subjugated by the Japanese for years but, when the time came to fight communism, there wasn't a Japanese in sight. In Indo-China, the Viet Namese inhabitants have seen French soldiers and civilians for many years, and still see them every day.

When and if the French finally leave, observers feel that it will be a long time before Communist charges of Western imperialism stop ringing in the ears of thousands of Viet Namese. All three states have agreed to remain with the French Union as independent countries. That means there will be sizable French representation within their boundaries, a factor which Communist propaganda would not likely ignore.

Meanwhile, increased U.S. aid appears to have two immediate aims: To prod the defensively-minded French high command to attack; and to discourage possible Chinese Communist intervention.

The decision of the U.S. national security council to recommend that $385,000,000 be added to the $400,000,000 already voted for Indo-China aid this year, following so closely the Korean cease-fire, could be considered as still another warning to the Chinese against any new military adventure.

American sources in Ottawa say it is "a foregone conclusion" that the council's recommendation will meet with congressional approval. They added that perhaps some of the additional sum already may be available from "other" funds already voted.

Meanwhile, the war in Indo-China continues. It has cost the French Union roughly 50,000 killed, 12,000 missing and nearly 100,000 wounded. Vietminh casualties have been even higher. There are almost 1,000,000 men in action on both sides, the French having committed slightly more than the enemy.

It is no secret that many French military and political leaders want to evacuate the country. They say that they are not getting enough exports from it to justify the cost in money and blood.

Others, however, with strong support from Britain and the U.S., insist that Indo-China must be held at all costs to prevent a possibly-fatal Communist thrust at rich Malaya, Burma and Thailand.

Melchior Hit On Night Club Circuit

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Now a hit of the night club circuit, Lauritz Melchior can snap his pudgy fingers at the Metropolitan Opera, which turned him out a couple of years ago.

When impresario Rudolph Bing took over the Met, he neglected to sign Melchior for another season. This aroused a controversy, since the great Dane had long been a fixture in the company's Wagnerian program.

"I was surprised," remarked the massive tenor. "It wasn't because of the money, I wanted to stay there. No one grows rich singing at the Met, and I even took losses by passing up other engagements. But I had sung there 24 years and I had wanted to round out my silver anniversary season.

"It wasn't because of my voice that I wasn't signed. It is as good as it ever was; without bragging, I can say that I am still the best Tristran in the world today.

EXPECTED CONSIDERATION

"I would have expected the new manager to show more consideration for the senior artists of the company."

Melchior should care. He still makes a fistful with his movie, radio, TV and concert engagements. And now he is knocking them dead with his night club dates. He opens this week at the Sahara in Las Vegas, his third date there this year. That's a record in the Nevada gold gulch. He also holds the all time Las Vegas record for the size of an audience in one night.

I asked Melchior what he thought of the new Met management, and his reaction was what I expected. He disapproved.

"If you are going to put on Broadway shows to compete with other musicals, that is one thing," he remarked. "But the Met is supposed to be our greatest opera house. It should present the classical opera in its finest form.

"I don't disapprove of opera in English translations. That is all right for the lesser companies. But the Met should present opera in its greatest form, and that is the original languages.

CAN'T UNDERSTAND

"Besides, you can't understand the words, even if they are sung in English."

Melchior also suggested giving more native singers a break and importing fewer Europeans. "Why bring singers from all over the world when you have just as good voices here?" he said. "Unless there is only one singer of his kind, as I was when they brought me here."

RIDING ACROSS CANADA—Brenda Collins, 25-year-old writer from Kent, England, is travelling across Canada on a motorcycle and intends to write a book about her experiences. The mileage metre on her small English motorcycle registered 2,004 miles when she reached Calgary after a three-week trip from Montreal.

Plans To Circle Continent On Small British Motorcycle

CALGARY (CP)—Brenda Collins 25-year-old writer from Kent, England, is travelling through Canada on a motorcycle and intends to write a book about her experiences.

Brenda, a vivacious redhead, says she will circle the North American continent by way of the Pacific coast, California, New Mexico, Texas, Louisiana, Florida and up the eastern seaboard to New York and Boston.

The mileage meter on her small English motorcycle registered 2,004 miles when she reached Calgary after a three-week trip from Montreal. However, 383 of those miles went for practice. Brenda, a novice at the start, now talks knowingly of plugs, carburetors and other motorcycle parts.

WORKED IN MONTREAL

Three years ago back in England Brenda wanted to see Canada but didn't quite know how. Last February found her working in Montreal—closer to her goal but still wondering how lean savings would get her across the country.

She found the answer when she wandered into a motor show and saw a small motorcycle. On a whim, she wrote the manufacturers in England and told them she wanted to tour Canada and could they send her a bike. The company did—without charge—considering the publicity of the trip payment enough.

Brenda received help from a firm which distributes feature stories when she suggested Canadian readers would enjoy a newspaper column by a gal motorcyclist with wanderlust. The firm agreed, and Brenda strapped a typewriter to the bike.

ODD WRITING ROOMS

Her columns so far have originated from hay fields, an abandoned school bus, an oil well, a farm shed and YWCA upper bunks.

Brenda says her main problem on her trip is how to keep clean.

"There's no glamor in a jaunt like this," she says. "I'm dying to get into nylon stockings and a clean dress."

While on the road, Brenda wears tight-fitting trousers, ugh boots and a leather jacket. She soon jettisoned non-essential dresses after setting out from Montreal.

Brenda set herself a budget of $1.00 a day for food and lodging and the same amount for gasoline. She kept up the fuel end of the budget but had to go to an extra 50 cents a day for food and shelter.

4,000 Men Walk Out In Northland

Hollinger Shutdown New Blow To Municipalities

TIMMINS —(CP)— Pickets patrolled in soupy fog today around the giant Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines, hit Thursday night by a strike which has stopped production at seven mines in northern Ontario and Quebec.

The United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), called out its 1,600 members at Hollinger, the biggest mine in the Porcupine gold fields, as part of its fight against what the union calls a "conspiracy of mine operators to destroy union ism in the gold camps."

E. A. Perry, Hollinger manager, called the work stoppage "unlawful" but said operations at the mine have been suspended "until the situation is clarified" in order to "keep conflict to a minimum."

Mr. Perry said in a statement that the company "is making every effort to protect the property and service the equipment so that normal operations may be resumed in the future with the least possible delay."

Mayor J. W. Spooner left today for Toronto and possible discussions with provincial authorities aimed at settlement of the walkouts, which civic officials in this area have called "disastrous." The mayor was scheduled to meet Labor Minister Daley next Tuesday.

Acting Mayor J. V. Bonhomme said today the Hollinger strike "adds fuel to the fire—something will have to be done and done fast."

SHOULD ACT NOW

Spooner of Timmins said today that the Ontario government should call Timmins area mine operators and union officials together as soon as possible for talks on the strike situation there.

"Why should we be treated differently from the parties in any other dispute?" asked Mr. Spooner in an interview. "Is it because we are 450 miles from Toronto?"

Typhoon Damage

SAIGON, Indo-China — (AP)— Several hundred Indo-Chinese were believed dead and several hundred thousand homeless in a typhoon today which struck a 90-mile stretch of the central Indo-China coast. The destruction was centred on the ancient Annamite capital of Hue, 325 miles north of Saigon. The American economic mission estimated that 90 per cent of the population of Hue, a town of 25,000, and the surrounding area were homeless.

To Give Reds Choice At Peace Parley

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Times says today U.S. government officials are planning to give the Communists at the Korean peace conference a choice of agreeing to an independent Korea under international guarantee or facing the continued presence of American troops in the war-torn peninsula.

In a dispatch from United Nations headquarters, the Times adds however, that the plan has not yet received final approval from the national security council or President Eisenhower, although its basic principles have been disclosed to representatives of at least two of the 15 other UN members with fighting forces in Korea.

"There is no doubt," the Times declares, "that the policy reflects the belief in the state department that it offers the only hope that a permanent settlement of the Korean question can be reached in the foreseeable future."

RECIPROCAL SAFEGUARDS

The dispatch says: "If the Communists okay unification of the peninsula, the United States would be prepared to join in an international guarantee of Korea's neutrality. This would be accompanied by reciprocal safeguards that an all-Korean government would not offer a military threat to the Soviet Union or Communist China and they in turn would not threaten Korea.

"If the Soviet Union and Communist China do not agree, the United States 'will maintain large forces in South Korea as long as there is any possibility of another aggression by North Korea.'"

Body Of Woman Found In Pigeon L. Man Still Missing

Body of a woman missing since last Sunday was found Thursday afternoon in Pigeon Lake. She was Miss Lillian Watson, 33, of 1574 Bathurst St., Toronto. Her companion, Glenn South, about 40, and also of Toronto, is still missing. Their overturned boat, which they had rented with a motor from Lakeview Inn Sunday afternoon, was found floating on the choppy waters of Pigeon Lake about 6:30 p.m. the same day. Provincial Police said the motor they were using was too heavy for the boat and was at least a partial cause of the upset.

At first, it was believed that the body found was that of another, unidentified woman. The description given of Miss Watson did not tally with that of the body found. Among other differences, she had been described as having blonde hair.

The woman found floating in the lake has dark hair. However, Corporal Ken Dennis of Lindsay OPP said today that almost definite identification as Miss Watson has been made.

ON EAST SHORE

Miss Watson's body was found on the east shore of the lake, directly opposite the area police were dragging for hers and South's bodies. Police say now they hardly know where to expect South's body to turn up.

Dragging operations were suspended Tuesday when thick weeds clogged the propellors of boats searching the area the overturned craft was found in. It was thought likely that both bodies were entangled in weeds and would be difficult to find.

Miss Watson' body was found by Mrs. Frank Jenkinson, wife of the proprietor of Pine Tree Lodge, about three miles north of Gannons Narrows, and about 2½ miles east of where the boat was found.

The two Toronto people left Lakeview Inn, eight miles south of Bobcaygeon, at 1.30 Sunday afternoon. Five hours later, their overturned boat was found floating halfway between the lodge and Bobcaygeon.

STARTED SEARCH SUNDAY

Dragging started Sunday, was discontinued Monday and resumed later this week.

Bob Swartman of Bobcaygeon saw the boat first. It was floating at a 45-degree angle, with the Farmer Caught On Machine, Killed Instantly

GRAFTON (ENS)—Caught in the belt of a corn-harvesting machine, Thomas R. Waldie, 57-year-old Haldimand township farmer, was killed almost instantly at 11:30 a.m. today.

He was working on the farm of Ken Bilcox, south of Wicklow, and was helping Bilcox cut silo corn with a tractor and a belt-operated corn harvester. Somehow he got tangled up in the belt and his body was mangled by the machine. One leg was torn off at the hip.

A muffled cry was heard from Waldie, and four men, working at the silo ran over to see what was the matter. They found him fatally injured and Dr. W. H. Fleming who answered the call pronounced him dead.

There will be no inquest.

The four men who found him were all district farmers: Ken Bilcox, Roy Finnemore, Aaron McGlennon and Henry May.

He leaves his widow, and three daughters: Isabel 11, Florence 8, and Linda 6.

OPP Constable Lyle Erskine of Cobourg investigated.

Order Sailors Not To Laugh

ABOARD HMS VANGUARD (AP)—Seamen aboard this mighty British battleship were ordered Thursday not to laugh when oil hoses break during refuelling operations—especially when the black sticky oil splatters all over high-ranking officers.

Operating in heavy seas Wednesday night, a British tanker had come alongside and fastened two rubber hoses to the Vanguard. One hose connection broke as the two ships heeled over in opposite directions.

A huge amount of oil splattered over the decks and gun turrets. A large number of visiting high-ranking officers were standing on the quarter-deck watching. The oil came whipping back, splattering gold braid and white shirts.

A number of ratings were seen laughing heartily and this resulted in the following notice being posted on the ship's bulletin board:

"Anyone seen laughing when an oil fuel hose parts in the future will be placed on the commander's report."

Actress Suffers Heart Cramp

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) —Movie actress Elizabeth Taylor was reported taken seriously ill here Thursday night and a local agent of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer said today her condition had "worsened."

Dr. Sven Johnsen said Miss Taylor was suffering from a serious heart cramp due to overstrain.

(The film company's studios in London said: "Reports she is seriously ill are incorrect. She is suffering from back trouble following a tour of European cities with Michael Wilding, her actor husband, and she is having massage.")

The 21-year-old actress arrived here with her British husband Thursday from Stockholm where she had been ill with influenza. She complained of a headache, and according to the report, collapsed soon after in her hotel room.

Seeking a peaceful spot to recuperate, she and Wilding left Copenhagen for a place in northern Zealand, but they rushed back to the hotel here early this afternoon. The local film company agent said her condition had worsened during the auto ride but he did not elaborate.

Allow 2 PoWs Stay In Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Second World War prisoners who escaped while being held in Canada have been granted permission to remain "provided they meet health requirements," the immigration department announced today.

Both former members of the German merchant navy, they are Franz J. Jenisch, arrested in Hamilton about six weeks ago, and Heinz Fromme, who surrendered to RCMP here more recently in order that his status could be cleared. Fromme is living in Marathon, Ont.

process." It will mean a check by the health department similar to that given all immigrants, who may be ruled out because of tuberculosis, mental illness or serious physical defect.

Once cleared by the health department, Jenisch and Fromme will be given landing certificates, officially granting their entry into Canada. They may then become Canadian citizens in five years.

Hurricane Lashes Gulf Of Mexico Area

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The season's sixth hurricane, gaining in size and intensity, lashed through the Gulf of Mexico early today about 430 miles south of Pensacola, Fla.

The day-old storm was moving in a northwesterly direction with winds estimated at 90 miles an hour near its centre, and was expected to continue along this general course with a slow turn to the north.

The New Orleans weather bureau said in an advisory at 6 a.m. EDT that the hurricane, named Florence for the sixth letter in the alphabet, was travelling at about 14 miles an hour but was expected to pick up more speed as it roared through the gulf.

The weather bureau said gales extend 200 miles to the northeast and half that distance to the west and south of centre. Ships in the path of the storm were advised to exercise caution and small craft from the upper Texas coast through the Florida keys were urged to remain in port.

Police Comb Street For Missing Snake

TORONTO (CP) — Is a rattlesnake loose on downtown University avenue? Ludwig Sobel, 26, says there is.

When Ludwig told police Thursday night there should be three snakes around the wreckage of his car, the officers were understandably skeptical. But he dug into the wreckage, produced two garter snakes and then demanded: "Where's the rattlesnake?"

About 25 cops prowled University avenue around Toronto General Hospital last night looking—cautiously — for the serpent. Ludwig said it is about three feet long and hungry because he didn't get a chance to feed it Thursday.

Police said the accident happened after Arthur Beaudoin, 24, borrowed the car to take five friends for a drive. Opposite the hospital the car hit a curb, overturned.

Economic Slump Feared, Europe Prepares

STRASBOURG, France (Reuters)—The Council of Europe today warned its 15 nations they are threatened by an economic slump and ordered its economic experts to lay plans to deal with unemployment.

The council's assembly passed a resolution which warned that a trade recession might hit Western Europe in the next few years. It ordered the 18-nation Organization for European Economic Co-operation to draw up a plan for counteracting the unemployment.

The resolution said "the economic climate of the world is changing" and cited these danger signs:

1. Many food and raw material prices "have begun to show a recession."

2. Trade competition between industrial nations "is converting a sellers' into a buyers' market."

It also said slackening of arms production would aid the downward spiral.

First Snow Falls On Prairie Areas

EDMONTON (CP)—First snow of the season in the Prairie provinces fell early today at Jasper while several other Alberta points reported light rain.

French Offer To Negotiate

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—France today offered to negotiate with the Communists for peace in embattled Indo-China and suggested that the projected Korean political conference be broadened to take on the task. Delegate Maurice Schumann also told the UN General Assembly that France would do all in its power to have the conference invite India to join in its work. Schumann said that if the Korean conference didn't get around to the Indo-Chinese problem, it might be taken up on a diplomatic level afterwards. Schumann, making France's major foreign policy declaration of 1953 at the assembly, defined his country's goals as "to united Europe and seek a lasting understanding among the great powers."

He told Soviet delegate Andrei Y. Vishinsky directly that an European Defence Community—which, in the natural course of events, would mean an European defence army—presented no threat to Russia but would rather guarantee her security.

Schumann spoke as pleas for a high-level meeting between Russia and the West mounted in the assembly.

Recaptured Prisoners Slug Officers In New Escape Try

ANSONVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Police said today that three shackled prisoners, recaptured after their escape from penitentiary, assaulted two officers in another escape attempt.

The three, James McCooey and two brothers, Joseph and Percy Coe, escaped from Collins Bay Penitentiary near Kingston earlier this month.

Police charge that they stole a car in Cobalt and drove to Kapuskasing, where they broke into a clothing store and stole $2,000 in merchandise. They were later arrested in Fort William.

BEGIN SLUGGING

Constables Phil Gerard and Charles Eveson were taking the men to Haileybury, 75 miles north of North Bay, Thursday, to await trial. The three, shackled leg to leg, stood up in the back seat of the car and began slugging the policemen.

Police said two of the men overpowered Eveson and the other managed to get the handcuffs out of the back pocket of Gerard, the driver, and struck him over the head with them. Gerard halted the car and rolled out. He drew his gun and cowed the prisoners.

It took 11 stitches to close the wound on Gerard's head. Constable Eveson enlisted the aid of constable Jim Murdock at Iroquois Falls and took the prisoners on to Haileybury.

Autumn Fog Blankets London

LONDON (Reuters) — Millions of Londoners groped their way to work today through a chill, gray fog, which turned fall into winter.

By noon warm sunshine dispersed the dense shroud but weather experts warned: "It will be back either tonight or Saturday."

City folk were alarmed, for bad fogs seldom descend on the capital before the winter months. They feared this might mean a winter of death-dealing fogs comparable with the four-day nightmare last December that killed 2,484 persons. Weather experts said however they were unable to give any forecast of the coming months.

"We can only get a few days warning," an expert said, "once the winter starts and fires are lit there will of course, be more danger of fogs."

Lindsay Flier's Body Sent Home For Burial

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five airmen, united in death, will be separated by burial.

The crew lay dead in the snowbound wreckage of their aircraft for seven months, high on a mountain top 25 miles northeast of here. The cold of the perpetual snowfield preserved their bodies in the attitude of their deaths.

Funeral arrangements were completed Thursday after a hazardous operation to remove the men from their twisted Mitchell bomber. The body of PO. M. D. Hill, Lindsay, Ont., was sent to his home town for burial. The others will be buried in western Canada.

Daley To Meet Timmins Mayor

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE (CP) Labor Minister Daley of Ontario said today he plans to meet with Mayor J. W. Spooner of Timmins next Tuesday to try to work out a scheme for settling strikes at six gold mines in the Porcupine area which have left 80 per cent of the district's miners out of work.

The meeting was originally scheduled for today.

Mr. Daley, at his summer home here, made no comment on the strike or on the latest walkout Thursday night. About 1,700 workers at Hollinger Consolidated, Canada's second-largest gold mine, struck over what union officials said was "an attempt by the company to destroy the union."

About 4,000 workers, members of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), now are on strike in the area.

Pinay Sounds Warning

French In Indo-China Need More Help From U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — The former French premier, Antoine Pinay, said here Thursday that French troops fighting the Communists in Indo-China need more help from the United States.

The burden of the war is too much for France to bear alone, he said.

The war is costing her $1,500,000,000 a year and hardly a family in France has not been touched through death or injury in the fighting, he said.

Mr. Pinay, 61-year-old business man, was virtually unknown when he became premier in March last year, but rapidly won an international reputation by his campaign to save the franc. He resigned last December over a taxation issue.

Mr. Pinay, making a five-day private visit to Canada, told an informal press conference that he was impressed by the great prosperity here. He called Canadians "a proud and happy people."

Mr. Pinay said he had been struck at a meeting earlier in the day with Prime Minister St. Laurent's grasp of European problems.

He also met Defence Minister Claxton and Most Rev. Marie Joseph Lemieux, the new Roman Catholic archbishop of Ottawa.

To Mr. Claxton he expressed France's thanks for the Canadian effort in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. They discussed Canadian airmen in France and the training of French airmen in Canada.

Mr. Pinay will visit the aluminum plant at Arvida, Que., today and Saturday will address the Chambre de Commerce in Montreal. He leaves for the U .S. Monday.

Believe British Jet Breaks Speed Record

CASTEL IDRIS, Libya (Reuters) A British Supermarine Swift jet fighter plane was unofficially believed to have broken the world air speed record today after being clocked in four sweeps over a desert course.

Officials worked to check elaborate timing devices over the two-mile course, test pilot Michael Lithgow said he would take to the air again Saturday in an attempt to surpass this afternoon's tim

Pleas Mount For New Big 4 Meeting

Smaller Nations Anxiously Move To Ease Tension

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Pleas for a high level meeting of the West and Russia in an effort to ease world tensions mounted today as the UN General Assembly moved toward the wind-up of member countries' broad policy statements.

Such pleas are not new in the UN, where little nations in the past have begged the Big Four to get together. What is new is that the pleas this year have come so early and so often—in the opening sessions.

France, last of the Western big three to speak in the policy debates, was on today's speaking list, along with Middle East countries which have been loudest in the attacks on French policy in North Africa.

With less than 20 countries left to speak, UN officials hope to get the formal statements out of the way by Monday, then start the political committees to work on such issues as Korea, Palestine, disarment and Morocco-Tunisia.

URGED BY MANY

The Big Four meetings—to seek agreements on Germany, Austria, Korea and other issues disturbing the world—have been urged by delegates from countries with wide political and geographical distribution.

He quoted recent statements by President Eisenhower, Britain's Prime Minister Churchill, and Russia's Premier Georgi Malenkov to support his contention that disputed issues could be settled.

"When they all seem to be seeking to get together, why don't they?" Thors asked. "That the world must know. It demands to know.

"The time has come to face facts. When we hear, day after day, over the radio and read in newspapers, that over 80 leading cities and centres of population here in America are being singled out as target for atomic attacks, and as we can imagine that such visits would be returned in the visitors' own territory, has not the time arrived for facing facts and awakening to this deadly outlook. We cannot continue to live in a fools' paradise.

UP TO BIG LEADERS

"But it seems clear that the decision lies with the big leaders and to does the responsibility."

As did many earlier speakers, Thors emphasized that world tensions appeared to have eased with a new regime in Russia. He cited what he termed "conciliator" speeches by both U.S. State Secretary Dulles and Soviet delegate Andrei Vishinsky.

"The doors seem to be open," Thors asserted, "at least not closed. Any entrance will do, if the negotiators enter in the right mood and in good faith."

Queen Godmother To Duke's Baby

LONDON (Reuters)—The Queen will be godmother to the 12-week-old son of the Duke of Northumberland next month, it was announced Thursday.

The Queen will not be present at the christening. The Duchess of Northumberland will stand proxy for her during the ceremony Oct. 15 at the duke's Northumberland estate, Alnwick Castle.

His birth drew much attention here, since he is the first male child born to the Duke and Duchess of Northumberland. There is a definite shortage of male offspring among British dukes.

Admiral Retires

LONDON (Reuters)—Rear Adm. Philip Sydney Smith, head of the Royal naval mission to Greece from April 1951 until last June, will be placed on the retired list as from today, the admiralty announced this morning. Smith, 54, served in both world wars and was awarded the Distinguished Service Order in 1945.

Official forecasts issued by the Dominion public weather office in Toronto at 9:30 a.m.:

Synopsis.

Temperatures across the lower lakes areas averaged 10 to 15 degrees warmer Thursday night than those experienced 24 hours earlier. Rather patchy cloudy which formed over the Muskoka and Lake Ontario regions caused a few overnight showers, but by early morning large breaks in the cloud gave indications of a sunny warm day throughout these areas.

However a storm centre developing over western Lake Supeior has caused rain to move into areas bordering this lake, and this rain area will move eastward today entering southern Ontario this evening. Clearing appears likely for Saturday but temperatures will begin dropping once more as cold air moves in from the northwest.

Regional forecasts valid until midnight Saturday:

Georgian Bay, Niagara, Haliburton, Lake Ontario regions; Toronto and Hamilton: Sunny, clouding over this evening; showers and scattered thunderstorms beginning by midnight and ending by mid-morning Saturday; sunny with a few cloudy intervals and cooler Saturday, winds southwest 15 today, northwest 15 Saturday occasionally 20 during the afternoon, low tonight and high Saturday at Toornto, Trenton, St. Catharines and Hamilton 55 and 65, Killaloe and Muskoka 50 and 60. Summary for Saturday: Clearing, cooler.

Man Stole $690 Jailed One Year

William Mullen, 20, of Norwood, on Thursday afternoon was sentenced to a year in Burwash Reformatory after he pleaded guilty to breaking into the Keith Innes Service Station on Charlotte St., and stealing more than $690.

After breaking two rear windows of the service station on June 4, Mullen pried the hasp off a lock on a desk and stole $690 in cash and a cheque. City police recovered $134 and the cheque.

Gordon H. T. Farquharson, defence counsel, said that Mullen was suffering from an acute nervous condition and he asked that the youth be given psyehiatric treatment when he serves his one-year term.

Judge John de N. Kennedy, presiding at the county criminal court, said he could not give Mullen a suspended sentence because he has a criminal record. He agreed with Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw that a year in reformatory would be sufficient sentence.

4-H Clubs To Hold Achievement Day

Peterborough county's 4-H Clubs are closing their season's program of projects with achievement Day at Morrow Park all day Saturday.

The boys and girls from the east and west sections of the country are due at 9 a.m. at the park. They are required to bring for exhibiting the diary and beef calves, pigs and bags of grain on which they have been working since early spring.

They are also examined for what they learned about cattle in what are called judging competitions. Classes of cattle and specimens of grain have to be placed in order of merit and the youngsters have to give reasons for their placing.

n the afternoon the calves are judged, and there is a competition in showmanship. Principal A. M. Barr of Kemptville Agricultural School will be judge of the animals which the boys and girls have had under their care this season. Lunch is at noon. Parents and friends of the club members are invited.

Hint H-Bomb Can Be Made Very Cheaply

WASHINGTON (AP)—The dread hydrogen bomb may turn out to be so cheap and simple that almost any country will be able to produce an arsenal of them in a few years.

That word seeped out Thursday as President Eisenhower met in a prolonged three-hour session with his national security council, the commanders and civilian chiefs of the armed forces, and a committee of advisers on defence of the North American continent.

No information was released after the session as to what took place. The extraordinary nature of the session was attested by the fact that more than twice the usual number attended.

PRIMARY CONCERN

Of primary concern, obviously, was Russia's position in the atomic arms race, and United States ability to unleash retaliatory action if the Soviet Union should start war with hydrogen bombs.

But it was the amazing progress in development of H-bombs for the American arsenal that stirred alarm.

Nuclear scientists are on the track of methods for making and exploding hydrogen weapons so simplified and so relatively cheap that any nation with a moderate military budget may be able to manufacture them well within the next decade.

Farmer Dies Polio Victim

The district's second death from polio occurred Thursday in Downeyville, north of Omemee, when 33-year-old John D. O'Leary died at his home there.

First to die was 12-year-old Beryl Kemp, of Lang, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kemp. She was rushed to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto a week ago today and died there Tuesday morning.

There have been no city deaths as a result of polio.

Mr. O'Leary was a farmer in the Downeyville district, and was born and educated there. He attended Lindsay Collegiate for three years before returning to work in his native area.

A son of John J. O'Leary, 262 Stewart St., and the late Mrs. O'Leary, he is survived by his widow, the former Alice Mahoney of Douro, and six children: Peter Mary Anne, Lillian, Leonard, Elaine and Carol.

Requiem mass will be said at St. Luke's Church, Downeyville on Saturday at 9 a.m.

Team Tramples Man Breaks Jaw In 2 Places

COBOURG (ENS)—Trampled by his team when they jerked him off his feet while he was hitching them to a seeder Thursday on his farm at Fenella, 65-year-old Frank Usher had his jaw broken in two places. He was brought to Cobourg by Lyle Curtis and after he was examined by a physician he was taken to Peterborough Civic Hospital.

It was thought that he might have broken his shoulder too, but an x-ray revealed this was not so.

How the accident happened, is not clear. Mr. Usher was alone at the time and he was hitching his team to the seeder. The hitching had not been completed when one of the horses lunged and he fell bewteen their hooves and the seeder. He managed to get clear but not before he had been badly kicked. He went to a telephone and called a neighbor.

Manitoba Reports 96% Of Wheat Crop Cut

WINNIPEG (CP)—Manitoba has 96 per cent of its wheat cut and 80 per cent threshed, the crop reports of the Canadian Pacific and National Railways showed today.

In the other Prairie provinces the figures are lower. Saskatchewan has 84 per cent cut and 68 threshed, Alberta 75 and 39 per cent. Northern Manitoba and Saskatchewan are lagging behind as is west-central Alberta.

Frost in sections of Manitoba and Saskatchewan last Sunday did some slight damage with the lowest temperature 18 above zero.

Two or three weeks of good dry weather are needed to complete the western harvest. Grain storage is a general problem due to low quotas.

Of the companies reporting that year, 317 executives had salaries of $100,000 or more, but they then had to pay their taxes.

The internal revenue man said, the way he heard it, the plane was worth $300,000 or $400,000, so he figures it was a bargain quite aside from its scientific worth.

GOOD IDEA

"But I keep thinking about that $100,000, without taxes," he said. "You know, how about sneaking into Russia, stealing a plane, flying it back and picking up $100,000 ourselves?"

There is just one little gimmick. The offer was $50,000 a plane, plus a $50,000 bonus for the first Red flier to deliver one. But even $50,000, tax free, is not to be jeered at.

Take Over Land For Urgent Housing Scheme

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost said Thursday that the provincial government expropriated 1,400 acres in neighboring Scarborough township for public housing because low-cost housing is the most pressing problem in the metropolitan Toronto area.

The premier estimated the Scarborough land deal will provide up to 10,000 homes.

Toronto is 10 years behind other centres in providing housing development areas, Mr. Frost said, and the action in Scarborough was taken because municipalities are not planning for the future.

TO ACT SOON

The province is planning to take over the suburban Long Branch rifle range as soon as it is vacated by the federal government and provincial hydro and highways departments have been asked not to dispose of vacant land they may now have which would be suitable for housing.

Mr. Frost said the present project is located in an area isolated from facilities such as water, sewage and transportation because land nearer Toronto already is earmarked for other development.

4,000 Men

He said he has a "preparatory" conference scheduled today with "high government officials." He did not elaborate.

The government viewpoint is reported to be that it should wait a few days for things to cool down. But Mr. Spooner said he feels that "now is the time before bitter feelings solidify."

Hollinger, one of the mainstays of the Porcupine area's economy, mills about $10,000,000 in gold every year. Its maze of underground workings extend under the streets of Timmins.

Picketing remained peaceful at the Hollinger and the nearby McIntyre mine, where 1,200 men went on strike Tuesday. Picket lines were increased at McIntyre today when there was a report that shift bosses would attempt to enter the property, but they turned back when picketers asked them to honor the line.

CRUSHING BLOW

In extending the strike to Hollinger, known locally as "the big mine," the union delivered what municipal leaders described as a crushing blow to the entire north country. Said town councillor Leo del Vallano:

"Prime Minister St. Laurent and Premier Frost are going to have to make arrangements for transporting 40,000 people out of this area right away or find some way of settling this thing."

The same union put 1,600 men on strike at the big Noranda copper and gold mine in northwestern Quebec Aug. 21.

As north country residents watched the strike paralysis creep across the previously-thriving goldfields, they were chilled by memories of the three-month strike in the winter of 1941-42 which cost Kirkland Lake thousands of residents and gave its economy a setback from which it took years to recover.

The union announced the strike about the time the 11 o'clock shift was due to report. It immediately placed about 200 pickets outside the mine entrances.

Hundreds of automobiles jammed the highway in front of the mine as word flashed through the community that the pickets had taken up position. Cars bearing incoming workers were stopped at the gates but some officials went through the lines.

CROWDS OF TOWNSFOLK

Crowds of townsfolk, including some women, gathered in drizzling rain near the picket lines. The Hollinger property, which is within the town limits, is about a quarter of a mile east of the main business section of this community of 30,000.

Throughout the dispute with the union, the mine operators have taken the attitude that theirs is a depressed industry operating only with government support and that they cannot afford to increase wages or shorten working hours. The McIntyre management had instructions from its shareholders to close down the mine in the event of a strike and there have been suggestions that, since gold in the ground can be left there indefinitely without harm, this policy may be adopted by other mines.

RIGID PRICE

One of he difficulties under which Canadian gold mines have been operating for some time is the rigidity of the official world price of gold. It has been held at $35 a fine ounce in United States funds for 20 years while production costs have more than doubled.

The latest crisis in the Porcupine gold camp came in the wake of an exchange of telegrams between C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the steel union, and Jules Timmins, president of Hollinger.

Mr. Millard said the company suggestion of renewed negotiations in the contract dispute was unacceptable to the union because the company's negotiators had indicated decisions on matters at issue had already been taken by the mine's board of directors.

The union official offered to meet with Mr. Timmins or other top executives of the company in an effort to settle the differences. Mr. Timmins replied to one telegram from Mr. Millard that the company's negotiating committee had authority to deal with the situation and was ready to meet the union. A second wire from Mr. Millard to Mr. Timmins went unanswered.

50 Of Duffy Club Attend Reunion

Fifty members of the Duffy Club—the Peterborough branch of the veterans of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment—will go to Cobourg for the ninth regimental reunion on Thanksgiving weekend.

When the 1st Division vets get to Cobourg they hope to see their original mascot, "Little Chief," the nine-foot iron Indian that the regiment had to bury near Brest, France, while escaping in 1940 from the advancing Germans.

Two members of the regiment are going to France to find the gave of "Little Chief" and bring him back to Cobourg in time for the reunion. The two are Sgt. Eddie King, the last man of the four-man burial detail who is still alive, and Lieut. George Hepburn.

The "Little Chief" became a Hasty - Pee when he was "liberated" from his stand on top of a Picton canning factory. Since he was abandoned during the evacuation of France the Hasty-Pees adopted another mascot, Chief Petawawa-Much, another Indian, but this one carved out of wood.

Chief Petawawa-Much has twice been to Peterborough: in the regimental reunions here in 1949 and 1952.

George Foster, president of Peterborough's Duffy Club, will head the group of local Hasty-Pee vets going to Cobourg. The club gets its name from one of the regiment's best-known personalities, Sgt.-Major Angus Duffy, of Belleville.

Mrs. Gordon C. Miller

The funeral of Alma Eloise Lapp, wife of Gordon C. Miller, 161 Douro St., was an impressive tribute of friendship and respect in the large attendance Thursday afternoon. It was held from the residence of the late Col. W. J. Miller, 212 McDonnel St., father of Gordon Miller, and for many years the home of the Miller family.

The service was conducted by Rev. A. A. Mathews of George St. United Church, assisted by Rev. E. W. Rowland.

Honorary pallbearers were: Richard Raine, H. S. Longhurst, Milford G. Hardill, Darrell Rose, John Lewis, Austin D. Elliott, Ian F. McRae, Walter Jackson and E. L. Sackville.

The active bearers were: Grant Miller, Cortland Miller, Meredith Miller, Vernon Fiske, Gordon Lapp and Fred Lapp.

Interment was at Little Lake cemetery. By her neighbors and many other friends Mrs. Miller will be particularly remembered for the beauty of the flower garden at her Douro St. home, in which she shared her husband's interest in the growing of roses. In season it was one of the attractive residences of Ashburnham.

Report Prices Mixed On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO (CP)—Prices were mixed in early afternoon stock market trading today as activity increased slightly.

Industrials increased their small lead and base metals moved into the plus column. Golds and western oils slipped more.

The industrials that brought about the rise were utilities, manufactures and foods, with majorities of small gains. Western oils showed a large front of losses with gains greatly outnumbered, almost three to one.

Golds continued to drop with widespread losses. All groups were down with juniors taking the greatest loss. As in western oils, the individual losses were not great, but the trend covered the list. Only one junior, Starratt, gained. Thirteen lost.

Base metals made their slight gain on the index as the majority of the losses were confined to the juniors. Seniors were mixed with little change.

Uraniums and New Brunswick base metals were active with losses leading the gains by a two-to-one margin. Gunnar and Conwest were the hardest hit.

Hearing on the two counts was adjourned to October 5.

Caldwell Hawkins, 23, of 159 Hart Ave., told police he was driving north on the road and had slowed behind a horse and wagon when his car was struck on the left rear fender by the Smith vehicle.

Smith's car was found on a lawn 161 feet away from the point of impact by police. It had cut across the road following the crash, been driven in and out of a ditch, through a fence and across the lawn before coming to a stop.

Driver Is Held Boy Injured

BRIGHTON—Provincial police in Brighton are holding a car and driver in connection with a hit and run accident Thursday afternoon that seriously injured a seven-year-old boy.

Hurt was Kenneth Dixon, who is in Trenton Memorial Hospital with a fractured skull, a fracture of the right leg, and internal injuries. A second boy, Harry Semple, Jr., who was playing with Kenneth, was unhurt.

The accident happened on the Wooler road, about half-a-mile north of Trenton, in front of the Semple home. The Dixon boy's home is only a short distance away.

The boys were playing on the road when the accident occurred. Young Semple ran into his home, and his father, Harry St., drove the Dixon boy to Trenton hospital, where he was treated by Dr. J. V. Byrne.

OPP Constable L. G. Lyle said today that they were holding a car and its driver in connection with the accident. Corp. Lyle would only say that the driver was not from the Trenton area. Constable H. R. Cooke is also investigating.

Herbert Feil and George Vice, partners in a hardware business, and who employed Drinkwalter in their store, asked that the charges be withdrawn when the case came up on Thursday.

Arthur Grier of Oshawa appeared as defence counsel for the accused. No explanation for the withdrawal of the charge was given. Chief Constable Charles Lockwood made the arrest last month.

United Counties Hear Engineer Applications

COBOURG—(ENS)—Northumberland and Durham Counties Council will hold a special session on the night of October 29 to consider applications for the job of counties road engineer. Jack Jordan, who resigned recently to take a better paying job of the same nature with Waterloo county leaves on October 1.

Last January Mr. Jordan asked for a $500 increase in pay, which he didn't get. When he tendered his resignation, counties council called a special session to authorize the calling for applications. Another special session will be called to deal with the applications. Cost of a special session is around $600. To deal with Mr. Jordan's resignation and appointment of a successor is costing about $1,200, which would almost have paid the increase he sought, for three years.

Car Accident Cuts Off Hydro

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS) — Thomas Fry, 18, of R. R. No. 3, Campbellford, while driving north on Queen St. Thursday night failed to negotiate a "S" turn immediately north of the war memorial and his car mounted the left boulevard.

One private culvert was torn out on a driveway, two telephone poles were broken and the car travelled another 200 feet north before coming to a stop. As a result of the crash the telephone service to part of the town and to Trent River was disrupted and hydro in a part of the west section cut off.

Fry faced a charge today of careless driving laid by Chief C. Constable Charles Lockwood who investigated the accident. Four others were in the car at the time but no one was hurt.

Edwin Wilson, of Garden Hill, sweeping the class.

Serious But Not Pompous

Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto, knows how to get the newspapers to pay attention to his speeches. He knows that it is only necessary to suggest that Canadians are dull, lacking in humour, to provoke a discussion. Speaking to this autumn's freshman class he had this to say:

"I met many students in Great Britain and on the continent during the past summer, and I was prompted to speculate whether Canadian students, and indeed Canadians generally, are too solemn. It is possible to combine a serious, responsible sense of purpose in life with a jubilant sense of humour. Humour is a joyful quality that springs from the heart; it is more friendly than fun, more kindly than wit, and infinitely more satisfying than flippancy. It does not see anything funny in crude practical jokes, or in injuring others or destroying property, because it does not thrive on cruelty or vandalism. Humour enables one to be serious without being pompous; it preserves one's sense of proportion; it enhances one's courage; and it engenders sympathy and affection among those who smile together, or laugh together, or sing together."

* * *

We agree with Dr. Smith that Canadians would be a better and more interesting people if they had more sense of humour. But we are, most of us, descendants of the British peoples who have never been short of this characteristic. Why have we, in this new country, apparently lost the sense of humour which is part of our heritage?

* * *

Our own opinion is that our sense of humour has been a casualty in our long battle for success. Because, make no mistake about it, success is the god which every Canadian worships; there are no atheists in that realm. We do not worship success quite as the Americans are accused of doing; we do not all want to be millionaires, and thus far our aim is more modest than theirs. But every Canadian family, since its first ancestors landed on these shores, has been possessed by the notion that each generation must be better off, financially and socially, than the generation that preceded it.

* * *

You doubt that, do you? Well, doubting reader, are you not a richer man than your grandfather? Than your father? Do you not move among better-dressed people, who eat better food? Have you not had more schooling than your forebears? Do you not, in your heart, consider yourself a cut above them?

* * *

If your answer is Yes, there is no need to be ashamed of it. Canada would not have progressed if we had all been content to remain precisely where our immigrant ancestors began; we should still be in log cabins, eating salt pork. But the point which concerns the present discussion is this: people who are seriously engaged in getting on in the world have rarely much sense of humour. They suffer from a sense of insecurity; they fear that, while they are climbing the ladder, somebody may pull it from beneath them. Humour thrives in societies where most people are not primarily engaged in changing their level.

* * *

Surely the time has come in Canadian development when we can relax a little in our struggle toward success? After all, we have achieved a very real degree of success as a nation, and our national success is founded upon a great number of varied individual successes. We are more secure than we choose to admit.

* * *

Nobody suggests that Canadians should become frivolous. But there is, as Dr. Smith says, a great difference between what is serious and what is merely pompous. Pomposity is a bad Canadian characteristic; it springs from a lack of proportion. There are signs that we are outgrowing this disease; the fact that a university president comments upon it publicly is such a sign.

Russia Wants Ban

Canadians will be relieved that the UN Assembly is going to debate the Russian demands for bans on atomic weapons and for disarmament. Specifically, the Russian delegate has asked UN to place an immediate unconditional ban on atomic and hydrogen weapons, and to require a one-third reduction in all the armaments of the Big Five—U.S.S.R., U.S.A., U.K., France and China.

To have refused to consider the Russian proposal would have given Russia prestige as the rebuffed peace-loving nation and damaged Western pretensions of hating war and wanting peace. Reds and pinks are suspicious that the U.S. fears the economic consequences of disarmament and wants war as a prop to profits. It is a Marxist theory that capitalism is inherently self-destructive and is saved from economic collapse by war or preparations for war. To have rejected the Russian proposals out of hand would have given Communism more ammunition and free propaganda than the West (and UN) could afford to risk.

The proposals of the Soviet Union seem as hollow as similar ones made since the war. There is this apparent new condition: that Russia and other Communist countries have an internal need for peace; they are now emphasizing butter, not guns, in production and internal propaganda. Further, Communist imperialism has met strong and united Western opposition and has been blocked. Russia may feel that having failed to get the world by forceful means, she should now try peaceful infiltration. The West should not fear this; if it is strong enough to resist Russia in warlike mood, is it not strong enough and firm enough in its principles to be able to deal with Russia acting peacefully?

The UN debate will put Russia's intentions to the test. If she wants peace and disarmament and is ready to accept adequate conditions for control and inspection, then disarmament and peace can be obtained.

See, The Conquering Heroes Come!

The victorious sloggers—we are sure Victoria will permit us the term—are on their way home from the B.C. capital with the Mann Cup, emblematic of the senior lacrosse championship of Canada. We congratulate Captain Vitarelli, his fellow-players, the coaches, the managers and the promoters, on the triumph the Peterborough lacrosse team has had, for the third consecutive year. One way and another Peterborough's name is spreading across the map of Canada and even overflowing into the United States, with scholars, tourists, canoes, machinery, Lift Locks and sports. Not the least of the Peterborough propagandists are the lacrosse players.

The Mann Cup seems on the way to becoming a permanent Peterborough possession. We wonder what has happened to another lacrosse cup, the Minto Cup, and if our top team has any interest in it? It is—or was—the cup awarded for the junior championship, back in the days when the New Westminster Salmonbellies used to sweep out of British Columbia and win the Minto Cup. A team known as the Salmonacs—also from New Westminster—has been waging hard and fast play in Toronto for the junior championship at the same time that Peterborough's Trailermen have been wiping the boards with Victoria players out on the Coast. Peterborough's Seniors are, of course, exalted above mere juniors, but since they now have the Mann Cup, perhaps they might be interested in some junior Peterborough players forming ranks to get the Minto Cup. Maybe not. Probably the Minto Cup has disappeared and maybe there are no Peterborough juniors in sight to try for a cupless junior championship.

A Canadian Buys The Scotsman

We have not commented until now upon the purchase of the Edinburgh Scotsman by Mr. Roy H. Thomson because we have been waiting in the expectation that some statement from Mr. Thomson might appear on this matter which would throw new light on it. It is no longer hot news when Mr. Thomson buys a paper, for he owns twenty-three of them, but The Scotsman is more than just another paper; it is an institution, ranking in prestige with The Times of London, and The Manchester Guardian. If Mr. Thomson had any intention of making major changes in it, we know that he would have said so. As he has made no statement, we assume that he does not contemplate any radical alteration in his new property.

The purchase of The Scotsman puts a crown—though perhaps not the final one—on Mr. Thomson's remarkable career as a publisher. He is now one of the important publishers in the English-speaking world. Unlike many men in similar positions, he does not attempt to impose his ideas upon the papers he owns, taking the view that they should continue to serve local interests, rather than any policy of his making. If anyone was fearful that he would try to make the leading paper of Scotland conform to Canadian ideas of publishing, we think that they may be at ease. That has never been Mr. Thomson's way.

We congratulate him whole-heartedly on the acquirement of a newspaper which has the respect of the world, and which brings him an enviable measure of prestige. Although there is a strong rumour that he may live in Scotland for a part of each year we hope, and are reasonably sure, that he is not lost to Canada, where his tonic influence is felt in many spheres.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A survey shows that television is no threat to newspaper reading, as the number of newspaper readers is up. The great advantage that a newspaper has over TV is that it will not suddenly dissolve into a pattern like father's old herringbone pants.

The Troubles Of Trieste

By DINGLE FOOT, M.P.
(in Trieste)

IF this city of all our yesterdays, visited by the Argonauts and occupied in turn by Romans, Byzantines, Ostrogoths, Lombards, Franks, Austrians, Italians, and Yugoslavs, and now by the Allied Military Government, were asked to choose between its ghosts, the result would be a foregone conclusion. There would be a landslide for the Emperor Francis Joseph.

The city, as it exists to-day, with its stately buildings and magnificent harbour facilities, is the achievement of the Hapsburgs. It was the great port of the Austrian Empire, serving the whole of Central Europe, and its future, if it is not to decay and perish, is inevitably dependent upon Central European trade. This is one of those obvious dominating factors which are always liable to be ignored by harassed diplomats in search of an accommodation between rival claimants.

THE SCENE in Zone A presents certain features with which the British, if not the Americans, should by now be tolerably familiar. A small band of highly competent military and civilian officials carry on the business of administration according to the high Anglo-American standards. (Their outstanding achievement is a police force whose organization is a precise replica of the Metropolitan Police. Triestine policemen are wonderful.) For this service, of course, they neither receive nor expect anything in the nature of gratitude. They are, indeed, an inevitable target of attack by local political leaders, since they are required to carry out a vacillating and inconsistent policy, jointly arrived at by their two Governments for reasons which have little to do with the welfare of the territory.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE ATTITUDE of Britain and the United States over the past two years has been that they would welcome any agreement resulting from direct negotiations between Rome and Belgrade. Here lies the inconsistency. The chances of such an agreement, always remote, have been rendered practically non-existent by the actions during the past five years of Britain and America themselves. In 1948 they, together with the French, published a tripartite declaration that the whole territory, including Zone B, occupied by the Yugoslavs, should revert to Italian sovereignty. They also entered into a financial currency and customs agreement designed to bring about close economic union between Italy and Zone A. In March, 1952, they handed over a large part of administrative responsibility to Italian officials, who are members of the Italian civil service and take their orders direct from Rome.

THESE MEASURES make it almost impossible for the Italian and Yugoslav Governments to arrive at any compromise. The Italian people have been led to expect that whole inheritance will be theirs. They have been encouraged to believe in the righteousness of their cause. They have been given a considerable degree of economic control. In these circumstances it was a mere counsel of perfection to expect any Italian Government to agree with Marshal Tito. Any agreement based on compromise would have involved the surrender of part of what Italy had already gained, and a still greater surrender of Italian aspirations.

On the Yugoslav side, there is no conceivable reason for accepting the Italian solution. Not only would it necessitate the surrender of Zone B, but it might give a dangerous fillip to Italian irredentism. This, in turn, might mean an eventual threat to the coastal towns of Istria which passed to Yugoslavia under the Italian peace treaty.

A PLEBISCITE, even if Yugoslavia could be induced to agree to it, would be a futile proceeding. A Yugoslav triumph would be out of the question. If, therefore, it were not to be completely meaningless the voters would have to be given the option of remaining in the free territory. But the uppermost consideration in the minds of many would not be so much to express their unfettered choice, as to safeguard their own personal positions in the event of the Italians winning. Even during the last fifteen months of semi-Italian administration, it has become clear that anyone in public employ is well advised to proclaim himself on the Italian side. Moreover, a plebiscite would certainly reveal a very substantial minority — to put it no higher — opposed to incorporation with Italy.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN THESE CIRCUMSTANCES the British and United States Governments, unless they wish to maintain their garrisons indefinitely, must devise their own solution. This can take only one of two forms: partition, based on any ethnic principle, can hardly be contemplated. The Italian coastal towns in Zone B, and the Slovene coastal towns in Zone A, would be completely cut off. Unless resort were had to the brutal expedient of a compulsory exchange of populations such an arrangement would clearly be unworkable.

THE ONLY remaining solution is that the whole territory (as distinct from the city alone, as proposed by Marshal Tito) should come under international control, as intended by the peace treaty. It would no doubt be difficult to go back to the treaty itself. There is a distinct danger that Trieste, with a Governor approved by the Kremlin, might become a conduit pipe through which forbidden strategic materials could reach Eastern Europe. But there might be less objection to an international regime somewhat after the model of Tangier. The nations to be represented upon the governing body might include not only Italy and Yugoslavia, but also Austria and Switzerland. There might perhaps be a Scandinavian chairman. The terms of reference of these commissioners would be to supervise the self-governing affairs of the Triestines and to develop to the utmost, subject only to strategic considerations, the commerce of the territory.

Such a scheme would most certainly not receive an immediate welcome in Belgrade; still less in Rome. But it offers a way out which each side would prefer to a victory for the other. And it might eventually result in Trieste regaining its natural place as the great port of Central Europe.

Letters To The Editor

WORSENEVER

Excellency: Respected better-half ball and chain forcibly propelled humble self to recent scene of desolation entitled Peterborough Exhfbition.

Benevolent sahib on receiving two sums of 50 cents (extracted from wife's bread and hamburger allowance) gave jovial permission for ignorant self and wife to inspect various mausoleums and sepulchres.

Was much interested in seeing pathetic smiling faces of population buying balloons and having much ribald merriment among decorated tombs.

Also greatly interested to hear obvious foreign gentleman saying in native tongue "Worsenever", said gentleman drinking embalming fluid, no doubt being toast to success of exhibition.

Salaam,
YOHO HAMA.

MEAT PRICES SUPPORTS AND PRODUCTION

Sir: In regard to your editorial about price supports for farm products, it must surely be realized that there is no comparison between the United States and United Kingdom price supports and the Canadian payments to wholesalers. There is no support program in Canada to the farmers.

When the Government bought pork, the price to farmers was set at $26 a cwt., later $23. This was more of a ceiling price as it was the lowest price in years and resulted in the farmers losing hundreds of thousands of dollars. You have said that the Government bought this pork at 57c a lb. and sold it at 37c. I wonder why? Competition from the packers? But the price is $34.50. Do you mean that the packers now can buy at $34.50 and sell at $37? While previously buying at $26.00 they had to have $57.00 from the government.

Mr. Gardiner arranging a contract with the British Government several years ago at $36, said it would enable the packers to pay $32 for pigs, a spread of $4. It would appear that the Government covered the packers inventory loss while liquidating the Kulaks.

The same is true of cattle. The price here was set at $26 for choice heavy steers. Of course choice heavy steers are and were very scarce. Probably 90 per cent of the cattle going into the Toronto market are old cows, bulls, calves, light steers and heifers. They sold now and then down to about $8 a cwt. Steak is steak to the Canadian housewife whether it comes from a cutter cow or a stall fed steer; so the packers don't waste much money on No. 1 steers.

As regards the profits of one cent in the dollar sales, it would seem that that is considerable in a business with a quick turnover. If that dollar is turned over 300 times in the year that is $3.00 profit and 300 per cent on the capital I believe. The packing houses' statements show that they made the biggest profits in their history. They gave the annual increase in wages and transfered the usual amounts to reserves, i.e. reserve for loss in inventory, etc.

The United States system is different altogether, the support goes right to the farmers' prices and has resulted in almost unbelievable production. They have fed their own 165 million people and sent food all over the world. There have some losses of course but there always are. Weather and other things make it impossible to judge production to 1/10 of 1 per cent.

But consider the 13 southern states, the home of the Negro and the poverty-stricken White. Last year their industrial production was 51 billion, their agricultural production 9 billion. That would be equal to the Canadian and United Kingdom industrial production combined. Their agricultural production would double that of Canada and the U. K. combined.

Yours truly
J. R. ROBERTSON

NEXT LABOUR DAY

Sir: As secretary of the Peterborough Trades and Labour Council I have been instructed to inform you, that the Peterborough Trades and Labour Council take strong exception to your remarks about Organized Labour in Peterborough as put forth in your Labour Day editorial of Sept. 5th.

Organized labour in Peterborough is not ashamed of its movement, on a contrary it is proud to have been a part of a movement which has ever pressed for better standards of living for all Canadians. Through the I. L. O. Canadian Labour has taken a leading part in attempting to give higher standards of living, freedom from want and oppression to people in all nations. Such legislation as the Widows Allowance Act, the Ontario Compensations Act, the Compulsory Education Act, the Factory Act, Old Age Pensions Act, was not gained by people who were ashamed of their movement. Canadian Labour is pressing even now for a National Health scheme to help Canadians everywhere.

I would like to make it quite clear that as far as the A. F. L. -T. L. C. Unions in Peterborough are concerned we definitely are not dominated by any labour bosses located in the United States. We run our own show. I think that this can be proven by the minimum of Labour disputes that there has been in Peterborough. When there have been disputes the Unions concerned have been represented on almost all occasions by Canadians.

I think that a word of explanation is due you as to why there was not a Labour Day parade. This year was the first year that a joint Labour Day celebration between the Peterborough and District C. C. L. Labour Council and the Peterborough Trades and Labour Council T. L. C.-A. F. L. has been attempted. It is my opinion and that of the Peterborough Trades and Labour Council that we should be commended rather than knocked for our efforts. I can also assure you that plans are now being made so that our Labour Day celebrations will be on a much larger scale next year. I can also assure you that if these plans are carried out there will be a parade.

Trusting that this letter will clear up any misunderstanding and make the position of A. F. L.- T. L. C. labour in Peterborough quite clear. I remain,

Yours truly,
HENRY NOKES,
Peterborough Trades & Labour Council.

MIGHTY QUEER

Sir:

Well now Effie, where did all those children hie from,
Out in the country where we live, there are few.
We hardly know or see a hired man
And without them, we work from dawn till dew.

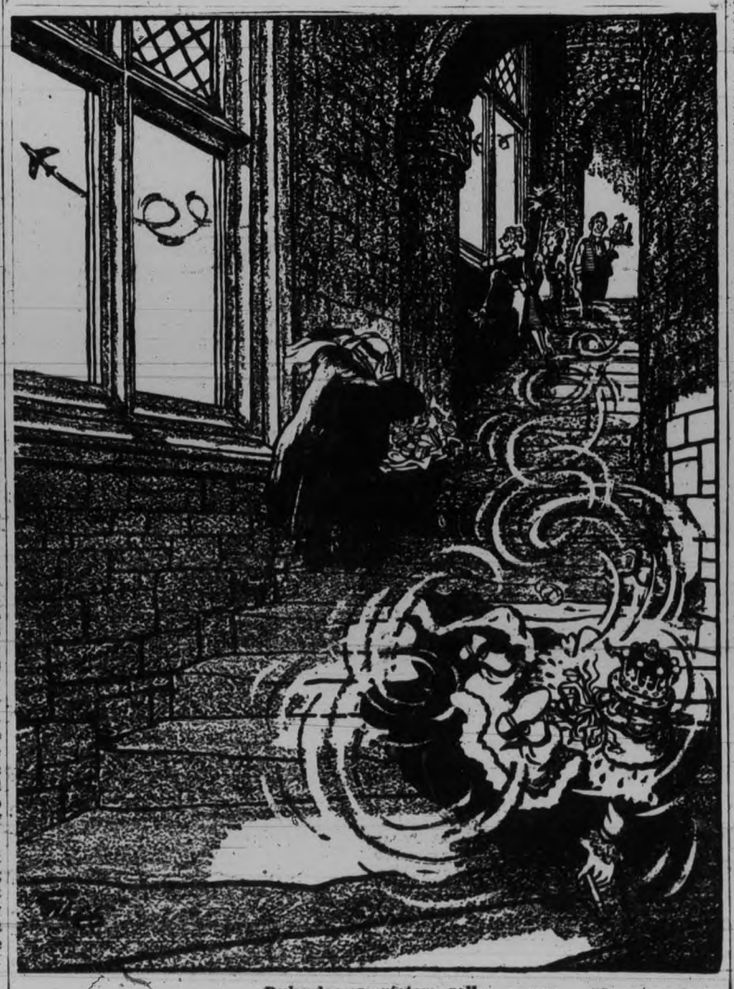
Now as far as I can see there is no use
Of looking to us farmers to build new schools.
Yet if we don't, we do sure get abuse
But make no mistake we need new rules.

It is also mighty queer that new schools have hoisted taxes
Yet in Otonabee here, no new ones have we—
Just the highest taxes and no relaxes
How could such injustices be?

But in Keene there is a brand new rink
Built in no time at all or cost to us of land
Except by donation, without a blink

Of tired eye or feet or hand
In Keene too is an old exhibtion ground
What better play-ground could be found?

WIFE OF OTONABEE.



Duke does a victory roll.

Bible Message

(From The Authorized Version)

Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness and what communion hath light with darkness? . . . Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separated saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be by sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. (II Cor. 6:14, 17, 18.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. (II Cor. 7:1.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Acquaint now thyself with him, and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee . . . If thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, thou shalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles . . . He shall deliver the island of the innocent: and it is delivered by the pureness of thine hands. (Job. 22: 21, 23, 30.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God. (Matt. 5: 8.)

TSO Overlooks Healey Willan

(Toronto Star)

As a composer Dr. Healey Willan is not without honor, except, it would seem, in his home city.

Dr. Willan's one and only composition for band is being played by the Guard Republican Band of France, now touring Canada and the United States. The conductor of this famous organization found the score of his "Royce Hall Suite" to be "masterfully composed".

Dr. Willan was commissioned to write one of the Homage Anthems for the coronation and had a special seat in the Abbey reserved for him. One of his works, "An Apostrophe to the Heavenly Hosts", was performed at the last St. Cecilia Day Festival in Britain, attended, as is traditional, by royalty. He was presented to the Queen afterward, and he has been commissioned to write another work for the next St. Cecilia Festival.

All this spells recognition, and Dr. Willan is, in fact, the most famous of Canadian composers. But none of his works is listed in the programs for the Toronto Symphony Orchestra's forthcoming "subscription series" in Massey Hall. Only one Canadian work is to be performed, that by Quebec's Claude Champagne.

Mother Dead Baby Delivered

QUEBEC (CP) — Mrs. Nazaire Bedard, 34, of St. Raymond, Que., was delivered by caesarian section of her 10th child, a seven-pound boy, immediately after she died Wednesday of a heart attack.

Notre Dame de Recouvrance Hospital authorities said the baby, delivered by Dr. Robert Darveau, "is a normal baby and is doing fine."

Dr. Georges Foy, district coroner, said he will conduct an investigation in the death but did not comment on published reports that the woman was refused admittance in a number of Quebec hospitals because there was no room.

"There is nothing criminal in the case," Dr. Foy said, "but there may have been negligence."

Hospital authorities said the baby was not premature and that the woman's labor had not started when she died.

Watching Progress Of Nuclear Energy

NIAGARA FALLS (CP)—Canadian electrical manufacturers are carefully watching progress in the use of nuclear energy for power plants, Brig. F. C. Wallace, president of the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, said here Thursday.

However, he told a press conference, available cost estimates indicate that the cost of an atomic fuel power plant will be materially higher than that of a conventional plant using coal or oil for fuel.

No information had been released concerning the cost of atomic fuel and it was impossible to compare prospective costs of power produced by nuclear energy with that produced by water power or other fuels.

Lakehead Man Elected

REGINA (CP)—B. F. Daniels of Fort William Wednesday night was elected vice-president of the National Old Age Pensions Federation. Nathan Medd of Saskatoon was elected president.

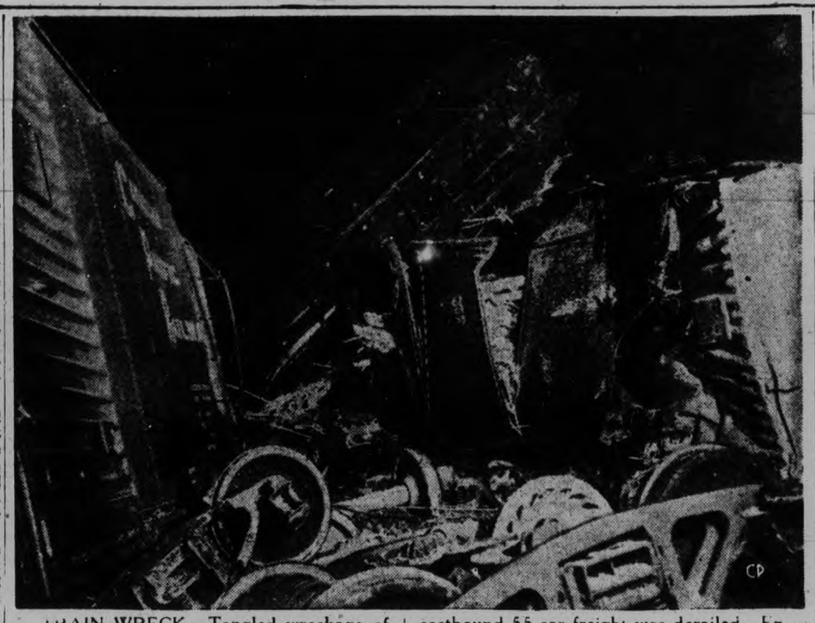
RCAF Completes Cache Inspection

OTTAWA (CP)—The air force said Thursday that the air materiel command has completed its annual inspection of a chain of 23 RCAF gasoline caches in Canada's far north.

The gasoline caches, stretching from the Yukon to Labrador, were examined by an inspection team under command of FO. George M. Gould, 32, of the air materiel command in Ottawa. The examination, called "Operation Evaporate Eskimo" took two months to complete.

The caches have been maintained in the north since before the last war for use in emergencies or in the event of war. Their location has not been publicly announced but it is made known to RCAF, United States Air Force and civilian pilots operating in the north.

At each depot, the inspection tested the drums of fuel to check water pollution. The octane rating in each steel drum was then painted on it.



TRAIN WRECK—Tangled wreckage of 33 boxcars is strewn over a 600-foot area four miles east of Carseland, Alta., where an eastbound 55-car freight was derailed. Engineer T. K. Newcombe and fireman Joe Veres, both of Calgary, escaped injury when their steam locomotive overturned.

Special Whisky Shipped To U.S.

LONDON (Reuters)—A consignment of scotch whisky, bottled for the first time in earthenware containers, was sent on its way to the United States Thursday.

Called "Royal Salute" in commemoration of Coronation year, the 30,000-bottle shipment is the biggest single one since the war.

The youngest whisky in the blend is 21 years old and the distillers figured this special drink should have an equally-special bottle.

Liver Epidemic In Nova Scotia

DIGBY, N.S. (CP)—There still is no sign of a drop in the epidemic of hepatitus a stubborn liver illness, which has hit about 1,000 persons in this Bay of Fundy town since June.

Although the epidemic has been widespread, only a few persons have been admitted to hospital and a few others confined to bed for five to seven days.

Hepatitus is a mild form of yellow jaundice and not new to Nova Scotia. A health department official in Halifax said Thursday that about six towns probably have the same situation. He declined to name them.

Symptoms of the ailment are tiredness, headaches, nausea, stomach pains and indigestion. It is a virus and can be spread several ways, including coughing, sneezing and contact with infected persons.

So far efforts to track the source of outbreak have been unsuccessful. In Halifax, the health department spokesman said there is no way of controlling it.

Likes MiG

TORONTO (CP) — Franciszek Janecki, 22-year-old ex-Polish Air Force pilot, said Thursday that if Western airmen were equipped with Russia's MiG jet fighter, they could shoot any enemy out of the skies. Janecki, who recently fled his Iron Curtain country in a similar Soviet aircraft, said during a visit here that the combination of American gunsights and Canadian and American pilots in the MiG would make any air force unbeatable.

Blasts Beer Inspectors

TORONTO (CP)—The proprietor of a Toronto tavern whose liquor licences were suspended Thursday for one week told a liquor licence board hearing that the methods of some inspectors made them "virtual accessories" to the infractions. W. Ward Markle of the Beverley Hotel, told the board he questioned "the ethics of having inspectors come in and ask the waiter for two beers, knowing the man from whom they ask the service is going to lose his job."

Vital Two Countries Back Seaway—Mayor

MONTREAL (CP)—An American mayor said Thursday that it is vital Canadian and United States government leaders back the St. Lawrence seaway project.

Mayor Frank T. Zeidler of Milwaukee, Wis., told members of the Kiwanis Club of Montreal that the middle west states urgently need completion of the seaway if they are to stay in the steel manufacturing business.

The north Minnesota Mesabi iron range was nearly exhausted and midwestern manufacturers needed access to Labrador's supply.

Doctors Differ On Plan Value

LONDON (Reuters)—A poll of Britain's 17,000 family doctors reveals a deep difference of opinion on the merits of socialized medicine.

Forty-two per cent said they were less satisfied with their work since the system began five years ago. Thirty-seven per cent said they were more satisfied. The remainder refrained from expressing an opinion.

But 45 per cent of the general practitioners, even including those who dislike socialized medicine, admitted they are doing all they can for their patients now and said they are no longer hampered in recommending treatments by considerations of a person's income.

The poll, conducted by a committee of the British Medical Association, covered doctors in cities, towns and villages throughout Britain. The association mailed detailed questionnaires to all 17,000 practitioners and received 12,000 replies.

Freight Derailed

VANCOUVER (CP)—Seven cars of an eastbound Canadian Pacific Railway freight were derailed Thursday about 91 miles from Vancouver. No one was injured. A passenger train, No. 7, from Montreal, was stalled at Choate, near the wreck scene. Passengers were loaded aboard buses for the trip to Vancouver.

Virgin's Funeral Held In England

ABBOTTS ANN, England (Reuters)—Two little girls in spotless white dresses carried a hazel-twig crown before the coffin of 72-year-old spinster Florence Wisewell in her funeral procession to Abbotts Ann church Thursday.

The crown was taken into the church to proclaim that Miss Wisewell died a virgin.

Inside the crown were three goatskin gauntlets, symbolic in medieval tradition of the virgin's honor.

For three Sundays the crown with its gauntlets will hang in the village church. If any Englishman thinks he can show that Miss Wisewell lost her virginity, he has the ancient right to come to the church and "throw down the gauntlet."

If no challenger speaks before two weeks from Saturday, Miss Wisewell's crown of freshly-gathered hazel twigs will be placed in the rafters of the church among 40 other testaments to life-long virginity.

Villager George Redman, 89, said "It's been a long time since we had a virgin's funeral in our village."

Says U.S. Pleased Canada Strong Land

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's emergence as "one of the strong bulwarks of the free world" is greeted in the United States with "lightened hearts," the publisher of the New York Times said Thursday.

Arthur Hays Sulzberger, the publisher, declared at a luncheon meeting:

"While there has been nothing but the warmest friendship in the United States for Canada and Canadians, it has only been recently that we have begun to appreciate the place Canada has been making for itself in world affairs."

The luncheon was given in honor of the Times' new Ottawa correspondents, Raymond Daniell and his wife, Tania Long. They recently replaced Percy J. Philip, who retired after 30 years with the paper.

Marauders May Be Going On A Wing And A Prayer

By GARY LAUTENS

HAMILTON (CP) — McMaster Marauders, the dark-horse team in the Senior Intercollegiate Football Union, are prepping for their first official season in the league. They may be going in on a wing and a prayer.

Marauders, who did so well against Queen's University, University of Toronto Blues, University of Western Ontario Mustangs and McGill Redmen in exhibition games last year, have only 30 candidates from which to pick 24 starters. That's all coach Al Smith could find among 645 male students attending the university.

However, 22 of the 30 hopefuls turning out for practice are veterans of last year's squad. Smith is counting on them to carry most of the load.

DEFENCE STAR

Kingpin of the Marauders' offence will be halfback Lorne Wrigglesworth. A former quarterback, he still does much of the team's passing and is slated to do all the kicking.

Other returning halves are Max Wookey, Jim Dodds, John Pelech, Wimp Crawford, John McPhee, Bert Kelloch and Ernie Darragh. Only newcomer will be Jack Rome, who starred for Toronto's Humberside Collegiate last season.

Both McMaster quarterbacks, Ed Parente and Joe Kosakowski, worked in the slot for Marauders last year. Smith has also been playing Parente as a fullback to give the team a potential of three passers in Parente, Kosakowski and Wrigglesworth in the same backfield.

Kelloch, the youngest member of the squad at 18, is being converted to an end, along with Darragh. Others catching passes from either side of the line are holdovers Danny Pugliese, Dave Fraser and Jim Forrester. Ted Rokowski and Denny Moffat, both Hamilton boys, are first-year men.

Murray Howlett and George Rawlyk appear likely choices to share the centre position. Howlett, at 205 pounds, is a holdover from 1952 while the 200-pound Rawlyk is a St. Catharines Collegiate product.

GOOD MATERIAL

The club has good material at guard. Rosti Radchuk, Joe Strobl, Louis Dometto and Bob Fitzhenry are veterans of last year's campaigns while Peter Martin, Tony Yakutchik and Glenn McLean are newcomers. McLean, a Toronto product, is the heaviest man on the squad at 240 pounds while the other pair are both Hamilton boys.

The five candidates for tackle all weigh over 200 pounds. Keith Relly, Ed Gregotski and Doug Jackson are second-year men while Jim Hughes, a Toronto boy, is the only newcomer. The other tackle is team captain Ken Stanley.

In all, the team boasts three five-year veterans, four four-year men and six three-year players. The line averages 201 pounds.

McMaster has drawn what Smith believes is the best of the schedule in that Marauders will meet the Mustangs and Varsity Blues only once each during the season. Smith rates them as the toughest clubs.

They open at home Oct. 3 against Western Mustangs before what McMaster officials hope will be a record crowd at the 19,500-seat Hamilton Municipal Stadium.

Rookie Scores 3 Goals In Scrimmage

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Rookie Bob Bailey came up with three goals in a 60-minute scrimmage Thursday at the Toronto Maple Leaf fall training camp, and looked good enough to stick with the National Hockey League club.

Playing right wing on a line with centre Ted Kennedy and left-winger Sid Smith, Bailey played with Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League. He has six goals and four assists here so far this year.

Leaf officials said they are worried over three sophomores, Eric Nesterenko, Leo Boivin and Gord Hannigan. All three have been plagued by poor condition.

IN POOR CONDITION

"I'm tired all the time," said Hannigan. "The difference, I think, is that I came to camp in good condition last year. It's not so good this year."

Boivin, a 22-year-old defenceman said he was having a hard time skating. "My timing is off and I'm not hitting."

"I think I'm starting to skate better now," said Nesterenko, "but I'm having troubles."

Canadiens, Buffalo Battle To Deadlock

The Bisons were reinforced by a number of Montrealers.

Canadien scorers were Boom Boom Geoffrion and Maurice Richard. Jean Beliveau got an assist but was used sparingly.

Polite La Starza Lauds Marciano As Fighter

By TED SMITS

NEW YORK (AP)—Roland LaStarza, bloody, beaten, but polite, sang the praises of his conqueror, Rocky Marciano.

"He's a great fighter," said Roland Thursday night in his crowded silent dressing room. "He's definitely a better fighter than when I fought him before—5,000 per cent better.

"The doctor says something happened to my left arm. I know I couldn't use it. That was in the second round. But please don't think I'm trying to alibi. He's a great champion."

Dr. Vincent Nardiello, physician of the New York state athletic commission, said the injury to LaStarza's left arm could be a dislocation.

COULDN'T DO IT

"I asked him to use his left," said Dan Florio, his trainer, "but he couldn't do it. He said he was hurt."

Because of his injuries, LaStarza was sent from the Polo Grounds to St. Clare Hospital.

"I'm sorry," LaStarza said after the fight. "I honestly thought I could beat him, but he's a great fighter.

"He hurt me in the late rounds."

When Dr. Nardiello came over to see what LaStarza needed in the way of repairs to his right eye, LaStarza said:

"He really busted me up, didn't he, doc?"

In the dressing room, LaStarza spoke with ease. There was no shouting or pushing, and at one point, when a question was asked that he couldn't hear, he said:

"I beg your pardon."

THE MONTREAL CANADIENS' No. 1 OFFENSIVE line of last season, and almost as many seasons as one can remember Lach and Richard, is all set to go again. The free-wheeling line of Rocket Richard, Elmer Lach and Bert Olmstead are expecting to go as well as in the past.

Junior AHL Managers Mourn Poor Teams

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With the first games of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A schedule only a few weeks away, club operators have already begun their annual pre-season weeping. Each seems certain his outfit is the weakest of the nine-team circuit.

Take Frank Byrne, owner of Quebec Citadels, a team playing its first full schedule in the OHA set-up. Byrne isn't hamstrung by an anaemic budget, but his eyes develop a haunted look at a mention of the coming schedule.

"We're going to have a lousy team," he said with astonishing frankness. "I'm not fooling. It's the worst we've had since I started in hockey. I'm really discouraged."

Citadels, spurned by the Quebec junior loop, are in the Ontario series as a full-fledged partner. However, each time an Ontario team goes to Quebec City it receives $1,000, and then another $1,000 for each game played there.

NOT MANY ILLUSIONS

Rudy Pilous, coach of St. Catharines TeePees, isn't harboring many illusions either.

"I took one look the other day at Toronto Marlboros and St. Mike's practising; that was enough," he said. "I think I'll go enter my team in some junior B loop."

Marlboros are considered by some to be the team to beat, but manager Stafford Smythe, son of Maple Leaf boss Conn Smythe, is playing it cautiously.

"About the only thing I'm sure of right now," he said, "is that I don't intend to make any deals before Dec. 15. We made a few mistakes last year."

Rev. Donald Faught, genial manager of St. Michael's Majors, was even more noncommittal.

"I think we might make the playoffs," he said rather soberly after a recent workout.

Hap Emms, whose Barrie Flyers captured the Memorial Cup for the East last spring, isn't going out on any limb.

"I don't think we'll be so hot," he admitted. "However, you can be sure we'll have something. We'll make a showing."

MORE OPTIMISTIC

Manager Roy Mason of Guelph Biltmores, last year's seventh-place club, appeared more optimistic than the rest. After drawing high-scoring forward Bob Attersley from the defunct Oshawa Generals, he admitted he thought the Hatters would be a contender this season.

Biltmore coach Alf Pike backed up Mason when he said: "We've got a good team this year. We're going to do all right."

Galt Black Hawks, Kitchener Greenshirts and the embryonic Hamilton Tigers are remaining silent on their chances this year. Hawks are having plenty of hold-out trouble and Tigers were late starting when the new ice plant at Hamilton Forum failed. Greenshirts are training at Galt until their ice is in.

Last Games May Decide League Batting Champion

By BEN PHLEGAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

The final three games may determine a surprise National League batting champion while the potential winner sits in the dugout nursing an aching hand.

The laurels probably will go to Carl Furillo, Brooklyn Dodgers' right fielder. Furillo hasn't played since he broke the little finger of his left hand in a free-for-all at the Polo Grounds Sept. 6. He ended his season with 165 hits in 479 times at bat, an average of .3445.

But three other men still have a fighting chance.

The three possibilities, in the order of their chances, are Red Schoendienst, the switch-hitting second-baseman of St. Louis Cardinals; Duke Snider, Furillo's centre field team-mate, and Stan Musial of the Cardinals, the defending champion and six-time batting king.

JOB AHEAD

Here's what they would have to do to catch Furillo, figuring that each will get 12 more times at bat—a good standard figure of four times up in each of the last three games:

Schoendienst needs seven hits. This would give him an average of .3458. Six hits would leave him .00044 short of Furillo.

Snider needs nine hits. His average then would be .34576. Eight hits would leave him, too, short by .00040.

Musial, of course, faces the toughest job of all. He needs 10 hits in 12 times up to finish with .3446.

Schoendienst and Musial will be playing their three games against the Cubs in Chicago. Snider will see action at Philadelphia.

LAST IN 1949

The last time it took four decimal places to determine a batting champion was in 1949 when George Kell, then with Detroit, edged Ted Williams of Boston by a fraction of a point in the American League.

Of the three men, Snider has gained the most ground in the last month. He has had 44 hits in 92 times at bat since Aug. 25, raising his average from .313 to .337.

Musial was in a terrific slump during the spring and didn't start to make real progress until after the all-star game. Like Snider, he's come with a rush in the last 30 days with 49 hits in 120 times at bat. During that spell he improved from .315 to .334.

AT TOP ALL SEASON

Schoendienst, on the other hand, has been on top or among the leaders all season. A month ago he was hitting .340. Then he dropped off suddenly, slumping to as low as .329. He's jumped to .339 in just over a week.

All of the clubs were idle Thursday. Tonight there is a full program in the American League. In the National League the Cardinals and Cubs play a day game in Chicago, Brooklyn is at Philadelphia tonight and New York is at Pittsburgh. Milwaukee and Cincinnati get another day off.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

There are two important events coming up that the committees would like bowlers to keep in mind: On Tuesday next, at 7:00 p.m. sharp, The Review Trebles tournament goes. Get up your own rink and phone your entry to Billy McCreery. There will be three 8-ends played and the fun will be all over in one evening. Don't miss this last tournament.

And then on Saturday, Oct. 3, the ladies are holding a "Last Fling" trebles tournament. This will probably be the last bowling for this season, so you lady bowlers take it from here.

Now tonight we have mixed doubles and tomorrow night the last "Family Hour" tournament for this season.

Bert McCarrell High

Bert McCarrell had high single of 357 and J. Goodson top three of 888 this week in the men's City Bowling League. Novely Shoe led in pinnage with 3656 while Payne's 1345 was best team single. The 6-0 victories were taken by Sunocos, Payne's, McGillis, McBride & Anderson, and by Novelty over Loblaws, Calvert, Parkhill, Family Credit and Monumentals. The 4-2 wins went to Primeau's over Ferguson and to Macdonald over McCormick.

Good singles included: W. Boon 352 and 312, J. Goodson 332, J. Playford 316, F. McCormick 305, B. Nicholls 305 and M. Akers 304; neat triples were: J. Playford 887, M. Akers 865, W. Boon 849, B. McCarrell 846, P. Pryde 812, E. Reynolds 802, W. Crary 758, B. Nicholls 745, G. Hanes 723, D. Abraham 715 and M. Anthony 715.

Changed Style Of Fighting Brought Victory--Marciano

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP)—"I changed my style of fighting in the seventh round—otherwise I may never have done it."

Thus Rocky Marciano described his 11th-round victory over rugged Roland LaStarza Thursday night to retain his heavyweight championship of the world.

"I had been going for the big punch—been throwing my overhand right.

"About the sixth round I felt I was behind and I said to myself I'd better get going. So instead of throwing my right so much I concentrated on hooks and combination punches.

"That was the difference."

ONE OF HARDEST FIGHTS

Munching an orange and perfectly poised, the sweating champion sat on a table in his dressing room and described what he called "one of my toughest fights."

"I thought it was a left hook that sent him on his way. I landed it early in the 11th round to the head. That's what sent him through the ropes. Then I knew I had him."

The swarthy, muscled Brockton, Mass., shoemaker's son said he was surprised at LaStarza's ability to stand up under his bombardment in the early rounds, but he added:

"I never hit him a blow as good as the one that got Walcott in Chicago. That was a honey of a punch—just travelled this far. I never had one blow as good tonight."

Big 3 Of Yank Pitchers Hope For Win

By SHELDON SAKOWITZ

NEW YORK (AP) — The "big three" of New York Yankees' pitching staff—Allie Reynolds, Vic Raschi and Ed Lopat—hope to continue their world series mastery when they face Brooklyn Dodgers starting next Wednesday.

The veteran hurlers have been good in their past series performances. Over-all they have an impressive 14-5 won-lost mark. Reynolds is 6-2, Raschi 5-2 and Lopat 3-1.

Reynolds, key man in the Yankee pitching rotation, is valuable both as a starting pitcher and as a reliever. "The Chief" probably will get the opening-day assignment at the Yankee Stadium, opposing Brooklyn's ace, Carl Erskine.

OTHER STALWARTS

Other Yankee pitching stalwarts who probably will see action in the series are Whitey Ford (18-5) Johnny Sain (14-6), Bob Kuzava (6-4), Jim McDonald (9-7) and Tom Gorman (4-5). Ford, the Yanks' big winner, is another possible starter, while the other four will be on relief duty.

The Dodgers, striving for their first world championship after six futile attempts, also present a formidable array of pitchers, led by Erskine, their lone 20-game winner. The Brooklyn staff has depth, but it lacks the experience of Yankee hurlers.

Eerskine, a fast-balling right-hander with a 20-6 record, is being counted on for at least two and possibly three starts. He had a 1-1 mark against the Yanks in the 1952 fall classic.

ROE TO TAKE MOUND

Veteran lefthander Preacher Roe 11-3 during the season and 2-0 over the Yanks in series play, is expected to take the mound in the second game. Righthanders Russ Meyer (15-5) and Billy Loes (13-8) are candidates for the third game.

Clem Labine (10-6), Bob Milliken (8-3), Johnny Podres (9-4), Ben Wade (7-5), Jim Hughes (4-3) and Joe Black (6-3) will be on bullpen duty for the Dodgers. Black, a sensation a year ago, started three games against the Yanks, but he has been ineffective this season.

Local Midgets Have Edge In OLA Finals

Defeating St. Catharines 8-6 here last night, the Peterborough midgets will carry a two-goal lead into the return game of their OLA midget "A" final playoff series next Tuesday night in St. Catharines. It is a home-and-home series, goals to count, and the local squad handled by Red Hill and Bill Post, had to hustle late in the fourth quarter to break the 6-all deadlock and get the margin.

St. Kitts had a weight advantage and the two teams appeared well-matched in a fairly clean and lively tussle before the next of kin at Miller Bowl. Petes led 2-1 in the first quarter, 4-2 at the half but were outscored 3-2 in the third quarter, and the Saints got the tying goal early in the fourth. But the locals sniped two nice ones—a hot side shot and a high one from in front—late in the joust to earn the win. They checked and passed well, and had good goaltending. The visitors, too, played a solid game for midgets.

BANTAMS TONIGHT

The local bantam "A" team is also in OLA finals and opens the two-game series here at seven tonight in Miller Bowl, returning to Port Dalhousie next Saturday. This Peterborough team is run by Ed Woodcock and Neil Oliver.

In the midget playoff opener, MacInnes, Heffernan and Jay each scored twice, with Floyd and Parnell counting one apiece. Jay got two assists, one apiece going to Quinlan, Heffernan and Floyd. For the losers, Hill and Simpson got three each in a neat showing, with Uhrynuk, Allison and Baird having one assist each. The visitors drew six penalties and the homesters five in a game well handled by referees Joe McNulty of St. Catharines and Ed Woodcock of Peterborough. Teams:

PCVS Grid Squads Play On Saturday

High school football begins its season here this Saturday afternoon with an exhibition double-header in Riverside Park. PCVS juniors play Toronto Humberside at 1.15, and the senior squads of these schools meet at 3.00. Coach Bev Goulding hasn't announced his starting lineup, but he usually comes up with a real contending PCVS senior pack. The two visiting clubs are an unknown quantity at this time.

Remember When—

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brooklyn Dodgers, who have just won the National League pennant, 12 years ago today won their first flag in a 21-year stretch. The Dodgers first took the league championship in 1916, and again in 1920, 1941, 1947, 1949, 1952 and again this fall. The 1941 flag was cinched when Whitlow Wyatt shut out Boston on five hits.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

The Orfuns are off to Cobourg tomorrow for a grid battle royal in Horse Show Park at 2:30 of the clock. This will be a big test for the local ORFU-ers, who have beaten Toronto Marauders and Oshawa Raiders twice to date and Cobourg once. If they can trim the Ghosts on their own grounds the Orfuns are practically a shoo-in for group playoffs. With five straight wins so far it's going to be pretty hard to keep 'em out. However, the Gallopers are always extra tough at home and they'll shoot the works Saturday. Marauders play here next Wednesday under Morrow Park arcs and Orfuns are at Oshawa next Sat'day.

An exhibition grid high school twin bill tomorrow aft in Riverside. It's Toronto Humberside vs. PCVS juniors at 1:30, and the senior Humbersides vs. Collegiate seniors at three. We hear, though unofficially, that there'll be but two senior teams in this COSSA district, Oshawa Combines and PCVS. Junior setup has Cobourg, Lindsay and the two local collegiates, Kenner and PCVS. No word at the moment on St. Peter's High, though they may be in the OCC. 'Tis said that the seniors just play a two-game home-and-home set, winner going into COSSA playdowns. Winner of the first scheduled game meets a Bay of Quinte leader, survivor tackling Georgian Bay next and the victor representing this section in the Red Feather tourney.

TCA Plane Fogged Down

As Robert Burns once wrote: "The best laid plans o' mice and men gang aft agley". Fog rolled in on the Vancouver airport last night cancelling all flights. A wire arrived at nine this morning from Don Grant saying: "Fogged in. No idea when arrive. Possible Saturday." Therefore, Chamber of Commerce, civic and club executive, plans for a welcoming parade and reception for the championship Petes' Trailermen here this evening have to be laid over, though it is expected that the reception and parade will be staged Saturday evening instead, commencing at seven. Everything just the same as planned, but one day later. Watch tomorrow's paper for any further developments in this regard. (Darn those pea-soup B.C. fogs!)

Local midgets won the first game of their OLA midget "A" finals over St. Catharines 8-6 here last evening, return one of the goals-to-count series being in St. Kitts next Tuesday night. The boys, handled by Bill Post and Red Hill, thus tote a two-goal lead into the big return match, with a provincial crown at stake. It might be a close fit, but the young Petes will be gunning for that title. Meantime, the opening game of the home-and-home OLA bantam "A" finals is here tomorrow eve at seven in Miller Bowl, Port Dalhousie playing the Peterborough boys, who are tutored by Ed Woodcock and Neil Oliver. Our peewees, under Bob Curtis and Bob Allen, are off to Burlington tomorrow in an OLA playoff tourney. PMLA is sure paying off now, eh?

Petes Reported "Credit"

A St. Catharines' item the other day told of a wire received there from OLA president Art Brown who took in the Mann Cup series. The clipping went: "President Brown continues to say 'Peterborough's actions on and off the floor are a credit to the Peterborough management. Already, quite a number of players have been approached to change residence next season. They include Ross Powless, Nip O'Hearn, Curly Mason, Russ Slater and Lou Nickle'." What, not Moon Wootton? In '51 at Vancouver, the Moon was invited to stay over and play goal for Vancouver or Victoria. Again in the cup series last year in Toronto he was asked to go west with 'em. But they seem to prefer it in Peterborough.

* * * * * *

They're putting ice in immediately at Bowmanville to provide the senior "B" Oshawa Truckmen practise sessions as the Truckers will use that centre for "home" games in the Central Ontario grouping this coming puck campaign. To raise funds for their burned-up equipment replacements, the Oshawa crew have lined up an exhibition game one week from tomorrow with Hap Emms' Memorial Cup champs, Barrie Flyers, in Bowman Ville. The Flyers will make the trip for bus fare. Orillia expects to have ice for practises next week, and Walt Smillie is getting things lined up here at Civic Arena to put in an artificial sheet ere the end of next week so the Petes' prospects can start hockey workouts. Looks like the puck season is almost upon us.

Scanning And Scalping

A soccer exhibition here tomorrow aft, Bowmanville all-stars vs. the Scots at five in King Edward Park . . . Scots lost to 'em 3-1 in a previous match . . . Bell Telephone and Foresters resume Civic Softball League finals at eight this e'en in the East City Bowl, Bell leading the best-of-fiver by 2-0 . . . New Westminster beat Long Branch in junior lacrosse finals last p.m. to capture the Minto Cup as Canadian champs . . . Bert McCarrell rolled a 357 single in the City Bowling League . . . LaStarza lasted longer than we thought, giving a much gamer showing ere losing on a TKO to Marciano in the 11th . . . Just got word that the COSSA district junior grid grouping has SPS and Kenner (as "B" teams) in the setup with PCS and Lindsay as "A" squads . . . Dave Langhorne of the Orfuns played on five successive COSSA championship grid teams the past five years, three times for Alex Londry's Collegiate juniors and then twice for Bev Goulding's senior PCI-ers; some record . . . PCVS junior lineup for tomorrow's tilt is in elsewhere this eve . . . Oshawa scribe says George Moss of that city walked eight miles in a bit under an hour for a probable walking race record, as George Goulding's time back in 1913 was slightly over the hour . . . That's all.

Marciano Keeps Crown, Fight Goes 11 Rounds

NEW YORK (AP)—Roland LaStarza had the heart but Rocky Marciano had the guns, and today still holds the heavyweight championship of the world. Few fighters have taken a more brutal beating than the ex-collegian from the Bronx absorbed in Thursday night's fight before referee Ruby Goldstein stopped it midway in the 11th round at the Polo Grounds. Outclassed and almost defenceless for the final four rounds, LaStarza had done all that could have been asked of him.

Today, just a year and two days since he pulverized Jersey Joe Walcott at Philadelphia to win the title, Marciano has no rival of real stature. The Brockton, Mass., slugger must be accepted as one of the great champions.

AWE-STRUCK CROWD

He proved Thursday night before an awe-struck crowd of 44,562 that there is nothing to hold him off once he starts moving forward and throwing punches. LaStarza tried. He fought back as long as it was physically possible and tried every stratagem he knew. He made it close for six rounds. Then the roof began caving in on him.

Early in the 11th, Rocky rushed his bleeding rival against the ropes and with a lethal succession of left-right-left swings to the jaw slammed LaStarza to the canvas for the first knockdown of the fight. LaStarza rose on shaky legs well before the count of nine, but as Goldstein wiped his gloves clean it was evident that the challenger had made his bid and failed.

Again the Rock barrelled in, apparently as fresh and relentless as he had been in the opening round. When it was evident that LaStarza could not defend himself, Goldstein stopped the fight. LaStarza stood, blood on his lips, and made no dissent.

HURT IN SEVENTH

For nearly four rounds before that Marciano had been in full charge. He had hurt LaStarza in the seventh when he slugged him into the ropes and for the last two minutes pounded the challenger almost without a return. Only LaStarza's fighting spirit enabled him to weather the punishment.

The eighth, ninth and 10th rounds followed much the same pattern. LaStarza was bleeding from a cut at the corner of his right eye which had been opened in the first round, and a cut on his nose added to the carnage.

So anxious was Marciano to complete the kill that he missed a wild swing in the 10th and fell in LaStarza's corner. His handlers were in an uproar through the concluding rounds, yelling to the Rock to "keep him there" and "hit him in the belly, Rocky."

LaStarza will go into the big book only as a game boy who thought he could lick Marciano and learned the job was beyond him. But he gave the crowd which paid $435,817 a few thrills before he was tagged.

EVEN FOR FIRST SIX

On this score card they were even for the first six rounds—two for LaStarza, two for Marciano and two even. Referee Goldstein had it even, too, and the two judges gave the challenger an edge to that point, partly because Goldstein took the sixth round away from the champ for a low blow.

Eager to score a quick kill, Rocky was wild early in the going, missing many full right swings. LaStarza took advantage of the Rock's haste and jarred him with solid licks to the head and body. He made the champ look awkward in numerous clinches.

Even when LaStarza was piling up points, it was obvious he was doing no real damage. His best rights, landing flush, only made Rocky blink. There wasn't a mark on the champ when it was over.

Finally, at the end of six rounds Rocky changed his tactics abruptly. He quit his swinging and began throwing hooks that exploded like bombs on LaStarza's jaw. Every one of them hurt. After that it was only a question of time.

Injuries Dog Toronto Blues

TORONTO (CP)—University of Toronto Blues of the intercollegiate football loop are beset by injuries as they make final preparations for Saturday's exhibition game against the defending champions, University of Western Ontario Mustangs here.

Three of coach Bob Masterson's top players will be sitting out the game, all of them injured in Varsity's Sept. 18 exhibition loss to Balmy Beach. They are ends Gene Chorostecki and Fred Smale and halfback Bob Kimoff.

Kimoff, one of the best backfielders in college ball, had his right knee severely wrenched in last Friday's game. It is in a cast and he will be lost to the team for another two weeks.

Smale will be missed for about three weeks with a broken nose and cheekbone. Chorostecki is recovering from a twisted ankle.

Masterson said he will dress 37 players for Saturday's bout. Mustangs are expected to have the same number in uniform.

Galt manager Bob Wilson said Chicago general manager Bill Tobin will take charge of Menard's case. Lalonde will be given until the end of the week.

However, Markarian is not expected back. He telephoned from his St. Catharines home and said he was ready to negotiate for his release.

Royals Whip Red Wings With 5-2 Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Royals drew first blood in the International League final series with a 5-2 victory Thursday night at Rochester over the Red Wings. It was the opener of the best-of-seven final to decide the league's entrant into the little world series.

Lefthander Ken Lehman gave up a pair of runs but pitched an otherwise-strong seven-hitter. The Royals clustered three hits for three runs in the sixth and the winning margin.

Rocky Nelson, the league's most valuable player who clouted 34 regular-season homers, led off with a round-tripper in the second for his third home run in this year's playoff.

The teams meet again at Rochester tonight.

Choir Social Sept. 29

Junior Farmers' Choir will begin its second season with a social evening in the basement of George St. United Church Tuesday Sept. 29.

Ken Best, assistant agricultural representative, reports that Charles Allen has agreed to continue his interest and help as director. Any of the Juniors of the district who are attracted to this choral group are invited to attend this "get together". Proposed last winter by Mr. Best as a cultural activity of the Peterborough Juniors, young men and women, it was a fine success.

"However, I would like to see some more of our young people join the choir, and the best time to do so is at the beginning of the new season," Mr. Best said.

Judge 110 Shorthorns

"There were 110 entries," Mr. Pimmett said yesterday. "I think this was the largest regional Shorthorn show this summer and the quality stood up to the number of animals. The females especially were good enough to be entered anywhere."

This was Mr. Pimmett's first assignment as judge of an Ontario regional show. "It should be all right to say that I didn't have any complaints from the exhibitors. In fact they appeared to be pretty well pleased."

216 Holsteins Shown

62 Juniors Here Oct. 3

Sixty-two Junior Farmers from western Ontario are arriving in Peterborough around noon Saturday Oct. 3, on their way home from a week's eastern tour. Ken Best was in charge of a similar party from fourteen counties a year ago. The end of their itinerary brings them to Peterborough for lunch. They resume their way homeward in the early afternoon.

U.S. Drought Victims

"The Big Cattle Bust of '53 is the title of a rueful story in this week's Saturday Evening Post which farmers could read with sympathetic interest.

The sub-head enlarges the introduction: "The sun blazed down on the plains, scorched the land and hit cattle raisers on the head with a $7 billion thud. The 'big cattle boom' was over, and down went the cost of steak on your table. Now fancy-booted stockmen yell for help from Uncle Sam—and tragedy has come to many a small rancher.'

Newspapers carried reports through the summer from the country north of the Rio Grande, and the southwest, from Texas Oklahoma, Arkansas, west Kansas, and virtualy to Wyoming.

Swollen prices during the war and post-war years attracted the baker, barber, banker and others into the beef cattle business until the number of animals rose to the all time U.S. high of 93,700,000. Three or four years of drought culminated in a parching climax last spring and summer, expanding along farther fronts the heavy selling that began in May 1952.

In its broad aspects and effects, the story is hardly new now, but it is interspersed with personal experiences. Several for instance indicate the severity of the loss to the breeders of beef cattle. The following are milder accounts of adversity, omitting some of the stories of farmers facing the loss of their properties unless help was forthcoming from the government.

"In the summer of 1952, a ranchman on the Oklahoma-Texas line had 1000 big steers on bluestem grass in the Flint Hills of Kansas. He had grown accustomed to getting 35 to 40c a pound for such beeves. When a Midwestern corn farmer offered him 23c, the Texan's face took on a "When you say that, smile," look.

"You can't steal my steers that way," he said. He shipped them home and fed them high-priced feed for 120 days. Then the highest offer he could get was 21c. He lost thousands of dollars by not letting the farmer "steal" his steers.

At about the same time, a rotund Panhandle rancher contracted for a herd from an Oklahoma stockman. He made a cincher payment of $10,000 and agreed to take over the cattle in 60 days.

In that period the price break came. "I never break a trade that I make voluntarily," the Texan said "but I'd like to revise our deal. You keep my check and also the cattle, and let me out."

The Oklahoman was indignant. "You're going to take these cattle off my hands just like you said you would."

Angus Sale Oct. 24

Thirty-five head of Aberdeen-Angus cattle are being consigned to Peterborough for an auction sale at Exhibition Park Saturday, October 24. These animals are being selected from twelve of the outstanding herds of black beef cattle in the province, Mr. Bailey said. Details of the sale will be announced later.

✦ ✦ ✦

Imported Ayrshires

The Ayrshire Post, Scotland, lists the consignment of fifteen "choicely bred Ayrshire cattle, nine females and six males," by export to R. O. Briggs, Dundas, Ontario. They were selected from some of the leading herds in Scotland. Lessnessock strain is prominent in this shipment.

Seven other young Ayrshire females were previously bought from A. W. Montgomerie & Sons, Lessenessock, Ochiltree, on the order of G. M. Brawley, 25 King St. West, Toronto.

Dance At Belleville

Hastings county Junior Farmers announce their fourth annual At Home for Friday evening Oct. 2, 1953 at Club Commodores, Belleville. Tickets are $2.50 a couple, and a member of the committee said he hoped to see some of the Peterborough young people present.

DAVE KERR (left), manager of the Empress Hotal, handed the halter strap of Old Orchard Symbol to C. B. Neal, president and general manager of Outboard Marine & Manufacturing Co., Thursday afternoon. In that gesture, "Symbol" lent animation to one of the most important sales of rural properties in the Peterborough district over a long period. In one aspect it was the transfer of the farm of two city men's dreams.

Four years ago Mr. Kerr began the realization of a desire to live in the country. He bought a property of some 200 acres on the 4th line of Smith, Highway No. 7 West, which had been in the Moore family nearly a century. An allergy of his daughter, Barbara, recurring only in her township home, convinced Mr. Kerr on the advice of his family physician, that the only remedy and recourse was return to the city.

So, C. B. Neal moved into the Smith community Thursday, taking possession of the farm Mr. Kerr has been steadily improving for four years. One of its finest assets is the herd of 35 pure bred Hereford cattle which Dave Kerr handpicked from WHR strain imported by John Stuart at Old Orchard Farm several miles east of Peterborough.

"Symbol" has been the herd sire. He was imported in dam by Mr. Stuart, and stems directly from the Wyoming Hereford Ranch. This line of Hereford breeding has been rather widely disseminated in the province, and is a valuable acquisition to the white faced beef cattle on many farms.

Ourvilla Princess Phyllis, a purebred Holstein owned by E. L. Sweet, Belmont, Ont. has established a World Record for butterfat in the junior three-year-old class for 365 day production of butterfat. On twice-a-day milking she gave 1015 lbs. fat from 22,785 lbs. milk, average test 4.45 per cent butterfat.

Phyllis thus becomes the first Canadian heifer to produce over 1000 lbs. fat as either a junior or senior three-year-old on twice-a-day milking. She was bred by Elgin A. Laidlaw, Aylmer, Ont.

Mr. Sweet has developed a number of champions for production over the years. He reports that he has found them all to be somewhat temperamental and Phyllis is no exception. Most cows like to run with the herd but she would sooner be by herself. Accordingly when on pasture she is usually alone. In the stable she stands in a stanchion with the rest of the herd and gets no special treatment. She was milked by hand.

4-H Club Boy And His Calf, And Grandsire's Sentiment

Peterborough Exhibition of 1953 may some day be a significant memory, and pleasant, to Wayne Kerr, the 12 year old grandson of Garnet Kerr of Seymour township.

If he becomes a breeder of Jersey cattle, continuing the long preference of his grandfather, that Wednesday's judging of dairy breeds may recur in his recollections as the occasion when he showed his heifer calf in the strong company at Peterborough fair.

Whether a farmer or not eventually, he will probably always remember that day when he was an owning competitor with the Jersey calf his grandfather selected and gave to him. Of such incidents are men's thoughts in looking back on the more vivid impressions of boyhood.

Garnet Kerr did not need the advice of the speaker who reminded a group of Peterborough district breeders last winter that interest in Jersey cattle begins at home, that the boys of the family, girls too for that matter, should have their own calves and be members of their neighbourhood 4-H calf club.

Wayne has already two calves, and there may be a third for him, the nucleus of a herd. His grandfather went beyond his own Jerseys to buy the calf shown in the accompanying photograph. He bought Rainbow Valley Basil Fern, born Jan. 31, 1953, from F. H. Carey of Mt. Chesney, north of Kingston. The registration paper, one of the boy's possessions, shows its good breeding, by Don Head Prince Jester Basil out of Rainbow Valley Bonnie Pinn.

So his two calves, apart from the lettering on his white sweater, confirm Wayne Kerr as a junior member of the Jersey breeders fraternity. Obviously there is a lot of sentiment behind this little incident of the Exhibition. Garnet Kerr of Petherick's Corners, east of Campbellford, has lost none of a life time's affection for his herd of Jerseys. He has been around the district circuit of fairs, including Peterborough, a long time, a veteran of the exhibitors who have been showing here.

A quiet man of rather few words, it is evident that he regards the Jersey breed as a sound investment for his grandson And that is more than sentiment.

In that hope and confidence he bought Rainbow Valley Basil Fern as a gift for the boy. Many a breeder's prize stock, and his own place in the community of rural citizens, have been founded on less.

The Kerrs packed up for home Thursday while the weather was fair, escaping the drenching rains that fell Saturday before all the beef breeders were gone, although most of them were loading in the late afternoon. Wayne missed the downpour that might have accentuated his memory of the day at the "Ex.", but that memory will be with him far along in the future. Of its effect then cumulative in the meantime, if at all—who can tell?

Cream Meeting Here Oct. 15

Ontario Cream Producers announce a series of county meetings beginning in York and Kent Oct. 1 and ending at Temiskaming Oct. 29.

Dates for this district are: Victoria county Oct. 14; Peterborough Oct. 15; Durham Oct. 16; Northumberland Oct. 19 and Hastings Oct. 20.

Possibly something will be said about milk pooling, a proposed development in the marketing of milk products that is receiving increasing attention from farm leaders, and especially here in Ontario.

A related subject is the two-way price system which was discussed at the recent cheese conference at Belleville.

As explained in a rural publication: "One price would be based on a fair cost of production as far as possible for the domestic market, and the second would be an export price in the form of a subsidy from some quarter."

This proposal of the dual price was set forth at the very first meeting of the Peterborough Federation of Agriculture after its organization. The principle or expedient was outlined by H. S. Arkell of Carleton county in a story of three hammers that found their way into the world market, such as London from maunfacturing plants in Sweden, Sheffield and Pittsburgh.

By means of a tariff on certain steel products, the American hammer sold at home at a higher price than abroad, thereby competing with the Swedish and British hammers in the foreign field and shutting them out of the U.S. market.

The Arkell story was told fifteen years ago at a meeting in the Peterborough court house. And that was the end of it. In altered form it is projected again as an aid to the Ontario dairy industry, recommending a price differential enabling cheese to compete in markets abroad. If it is now suggested that the home consumer should pay the difference in price, it might be necessary to convince him that he should be willing to pay more for his Canadian Cheddar than its price to some foreign consumer.

The subject leads into interesting bypaths of marketing and trade, and apparently is likely to be heard at meetings through the fall .

Incidentally, there must be some farmers who remember Arkell's address.

Should Produce Bacon-Type Hog

Another appeal to farmers to maintain their production of the bacon-type hog, avoiding excess lard as a wasteful practicec, is included in the Farm News sheet issued by the federal Department of Agriculture. It is directed against a trend toward the lard-type since the loss of the British market for Wiltshire sides.

This controversy is a live topic in the United States. The following is quoted from "The National Provisioner" (U.S.):

"The fat situation has caused the cost of fats to fall below the price of meat. Again, the findings of colleges and experimental stations indicate that the meat-type hog can be produced as efficiently, economicaclly and productively as other types."

"Many of the nation's swine experts are strongly urging producers gradually to switch their breeding to the more desirable meat-type hog."

(The fat, corn-fed American hog has been steadily losing favor with consumers, and the preference for the lean meat has been increasingly recognized by the packing industry and retailers.)

"An Institute member company recently made comparisons of meat-type hogs with the regular-run hogs which showed that the percentage of principal lean cuts—hams, loins, picnics and butts—amounted to 33.93 per cent of the total in the case of meat-type hogs, while the regular-run hogs yielded only 31.92 per cent of the total.

It is believed that this comparison would have been more striking if a group of "over-fed" hogs had been included in the tests.

Another reason that concerns the producer, packer, and retailer alike, for leaning toward the meat-type hog is "Mrs. Housewife". They realize that she is still the "boss" when it comes to deciding what will go into her market basket. She is demanding leaner pork, and many fear that if she isn't supplied with it, the time will come, and it may not be too far off, when she will pass up pork for something else."

That quotation from the U.S. "Provisioner" stresses the factor of consumer demand which has ben directed to producers by Department representatives and the trade in this province.

With lean bacon for the British consumer went the same lean type for Canadian tables, and having developed that preference, farmers are being advised to maintain it and its place in the retail market at home.

Griffith Grant Warms Brethen

"Praise from Sir Richard" is the quality of approval significant in the action of Belmont-Methuen council by doubling their grant to Norwood Fair.

That is the grateful opinion expressed by the chairman of the fair board, G. A. Brethen.

The B.—M. annual grant to Norwood Fair (Oct. 10-12) has been $25, but this year it is being doubled to $50.

Presumably this is a voluntary increase of aid to the neighbouring village fair. In any event, the cheque bearing the signature of W. E. Griffith will be an expression of recognition of the community activities of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society which should be a stimulus to the enthusiasm of its directors, rating next to a crowd of that Brethen goal or 25,000 registered at the gate.

CONSTRUCTION PROGRESSES

Two construction jobs are moving along well at Lakefield. One is the building of the parish hall for the Church of St. John the Baptist. The other is the cement block building to be used soon by the Lakefield Canoe Co., burned out last April 14.

CANADIAN STARS

Ross Powless and Roger Smith of Trailermen were guests of Frank Calder, Indian CCF member for Atlin, B.C., at Wednesday's sitting of the British Columbia legislature. In the Canadian Press report of the event, they were called, "two of Canada's greatest Indian lacrosse players."

KID'S DAY

Kiwanis members directed by Bob Bastable are planning an outing for more than 30 children on Saturday. Some of the children will be from St. Vincent's Orphanage and the rest are from broken homes, or homes where one of the parents is dead. National Kid's Day will be spent by these youngsters boating on Stony Lake and will end with a dinner at Juniper.

TWO INDUCTED

Dr. Ralph Green and Bob DeGrace were inducted into Kiwanis Thursday night at that club's annual fall outing, held at Theona Lodge on Chemong Lake. Dr. Green is a dentist recently established in this city and Mr. Grace is sales manager for Timber Structures of Canada, Ltd. The induction was performed by Walter Howell.

RESUME NEGOTIATIONS

Negotiations between Dominion Woollens and Worsteds and Local 1301, Textile Workers' Union of America (CIO-CCL), resume next Wednesday, September 30. The union want a 10-cents-an-hour general wage increase, another two cents per employee to make up wage inequities, and a reduction of the work week from 45 to 40 hours with no loss of take-home pay. Negotiations for the union are being headed by Ray Ruggles, TWUA representative, and Gerald Wood, president of Local 1301.

Inventory

All in one day the Canadian General Electric plant is taking stock, counting its equipment and parts and material that will eventually find their way into CGE products. About 80 per cent of the workers are on the job.

100 Champions Eligible For City Crests

Peterborough — city of champions—is going to honor the athletes who have brought it fame.

But it's going to cost a lot of money. That's how it is when a city has five championship teams.

Council decided some time ago to present honor awards of some kind to members of all city teams who won Ontario or Canadian championships. The nature of the awards was left to Ald. Syd Black's reception committee.

When Peterborough's ornamental swimming team won the North American championship in Florida last month, pressure was put on the committee to arrange some official recognition of the accomplishment. But it was pointed out at the time by Ald. T. D. Miller that the city hadn't yet done anything for four local teams that had won championships in 1952—one of them a Dominion title.

BUFFET LUNCHEON

So the committee arranged a buffet luncheon for the swimmers and promised there would be a dinner of champions later this year for all those eligible in 1952 and 1953. The awards were to be presented at that time.

What the awards were to be posed another problem. In the past, the city had sometimes presented its champions with rings but this seemed too expensive a proposition with so many champions about. Ald. Gordon Farquharson thought maybe illuminated scrolls would do the trick but this idea was rejected by the other members of the committee as being unworthy.

So Ald. Black had a chenille crest designed and presented a sample to the committee for its approval. The original quotation on the crest was $8.50 and the proposal was held over while a lower price was sought.

Ald. Black called a special meeting of the committee Thursday afternoon and a quotation of $7.30 apiece for the crests by the Albion Knitting Co. was approved. About 100 will be ordered.

The crest is a chenille replica of the city's official crest in five colors. It is seven inches in diameter and around the circumference are the words: "City of Peterborough Honor Award" with the year in which the championship was won appearing at the bottom.

The crests will be awarded at a dinner of champions to be held in November when all the city's Ontario and Canadian championship teams of 1952 and 1953 will be honored.

More than 100 citizens are eligible.

Trailermen Delayed In Vancouver

Fog Grounds Plane Returning With Mann Cup Champions

Fog and mechanical trouble in Vancouver have delayed the arrival of Peterborough's Mann Cup champions.

Don Grant, Examiner reporter-photographer, who covered the series, telephoned from Vancouver today to say that the second flight, which would carry most of the players and Grant himself, would not leave the west coast city until tonight.

POSTPONED 24 HOURS

Celebrations planned for greeting the Canadian lacrosse champions have been postponed a full 24 hours, James Fraser, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce, said today. They will go ahead as planned at 7 p.m. Saturday.

The first flight, which included mostly club officials, left Vancouver about 8 p.m. Thursday and landed in Toronto about noon today.

The plane that was to carry the second flight was held up by mechanical trouble until after midnight, the scheduled time of departure. Then fog set in and a further postponement was made.

At 3.30 a.m. today, the flight was cancelled.

Grant said TCA officials expected the players still in Vancouver—living in a posh hotel at TCA's expense—would be flown from there at midnight tonight. That would bring them into Toronto about noon Saturday.

WELL WHISKERED

Incidentally, the players are well whiskered. Their shaving equipment and almost all their luggage went in the first plane.

Schedule for picking up and greeting the Mann Cup champions is still roughly the same.

They will be met in Toronto by bus, and brought to Peterborough. Convertibles will meet them outside the city and bring them to the Armouries, where minor league lacrosse players and others will have gathered for the parade.

From the Armouries, the parade will go—via George St.—to Miller Bowl, where all the Trailermen's home games were played. The civic reception there will begin about 7.30 p.m.

Mayor Hugh Waddell and members of city council will greet the champions there, as will other prominent citizens. George Ludgate, of CHEX, will introduce the players. The official ceremony is expected to last about half-an-hour.

Workers Vote To Hold Strike

PORT HOPE (ENS) — Three hundred and fifty workers at the Port Hope Sanitary Co. voted overwhelmingly Thursday to strike if necessary, local president Stan Mead said Thursday night.

The vote was held from noon until 6 p.m. among members of Local 4115, United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL). They are awaiting the report of a conciliation board which met Tuesday at Belleville.

Implication of union officials' statements was that the union would strike if terms of the report were not satisfactory to them. With the vote favoring a strike if necessary, the executive is free to call one.

FRIENDLY RIVALS, UNTIL MONDAY, are the two presidential candidates of St. Peter's High School student council, Dorothy Duignan (left) and Margaret O'Keefe. Motorcyclist, 16, Dies 16 Hours After Accident

A car-motorcycle crash on Stewart St. Wednesday night claimed the life of a 16-year-old motorcyclist, Ronald Pavey of 255 Woodbine Ave., the third to die as a result of traffic accidents in Peterborough this year. Pavey sustained brain and head injuries in the crash and died 16 hours later at Civic Hospital. A companion, Robert Clarkson, 16, of Buckhorn, also received head injuries in the accident but is in satisfactory condition, according to hospital authorities.

The youth's home address was RR 1, Lakefield, where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Pavey reside. He was employed at Boorman's Beverages up until the time of his death.

COLLIDED WITH CAR

The accident occurred when the teen-ager's motorcycle met in collision with the side of a turning car at the corner of Stewart St. and Aberdeen Ave.

Pavey was born in Smith township where he attended SS 10 before coming to Peterborough to work. Surviving besides his parents, is one brother, Gerald of Peterborough. He was a member of Wesley United Church.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday afternoon from the Hendren funeral home, Lakefield by Mr. Kenneth Stewart of Wesley United Church, assisted by the Rev. W. B. Day of the Church on the Rock, Burleigh Falls.

Burial will be in Lakefield cemetery.

Uranium Ore Proves Better Underground

The district's first potential uranium producer, Ventures Limited-controlled Centre Lake Uranium Mines at the northwest corner of Paudash Lake, is turning up ore of better grade than indicated by preliminary surface work.

Staked by Garnet Burns and Bob Steele of Peterborough a year ago July, diamond drilling since last October has indicated a consistent ore body.

Development switched from surface to underground this summer when a uranium-bearing dyke was intersected from an adit tunnel. Fourteen hundred feet of lateral work has been completed and of the section driven along the ore body, more than 400 feet has been in uranium-bearing rock of good values. A second dyke 60 feet away has revealed three shoots of still higher grade.

Mine officials say that the ore picture should average 1,700 tons of valuable rock per vertical foot with an overall grades worth $13 to $14.50 a ton. These results were obtained by car sampling and are now being checked by bulk sampling.

Mrs. Robt. Stuart Dies In Chicago

Mrs. Margaret Jane Stuart, widow of Robert Stuart, founder of the Quaker Oats Company, died Thursday at her home in suburban Hubbard Woods, Chicago. She would have been 98 years old today.

Mrs. Stuart was the mother of John Stuart, chairman of the board of Quaker Oats Company; Robert Douglas Stuart, United States ambassador to Canada, and Mrs. Margaret Stuart Macdonald.

Mrs. Macdonald is the widow of George A. Macdonald, who was manager of Quaker Oats Company in Peterborough, and is the mother of Mrs. Mary Waddell, wife of Mayor Hugh F. Waddell. At the time of the rebuilding of the Quaker Oats mill after the fire of 1917, she spent some time in Peterborough with her husband who was directing the plans for the reconstruction of the milling plant.

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—Australia's great sprinter Marjorie Jackson has announced her engagement to Peter Nelson, champion cyclist. City Lawyers Tight Lipped About Ultimatum

A tight veil of secrecy surrounded a meeting of the Peterborough Law Association Thursday when members gathered to discuss an ultimatum from their stenographers that they would not work Saturday mornings.

W. C. Grant, president of the group, said today he was "not authorized to say anything." Prior to the meeting Thursday, however, he stated there would be an announcement of the association's conclusions.

It has been determined through conversation with members of the law group that many were not able to attend the meeting, and the feeling was that no decision was made because of this.

The stenographers who have formed a group called the Peterborough Law Association Stenographers, met Monday night to resolve they would not work Saturday mornings.

Throughout the year they have Saturday afternoons free and during the summer, all day Saturday.

Accident Pleasure

MIAMI, Okla. (AP)—Roy Red Eagle, 26-year-old Quapaw Indian, is tickled pink today over his broken jaw and mangled hand received when a tire exploded in his face. The accident, says his doctor, resulted in Red Eagle's speaking his first words since childhood. The doctor said the Indian spoke despite the broken jaw while under anesthesia. He said he plans research into the case.

Students Campaign At St. Peter's H.S.

Election of executive members to Student Council at St. Peter's High School will take place on Monday. Dorothy Duignan and Margaret O'Keefe are heading their respective parties and their campaigns so far have consisted of skits, speeches and campaign posters.

Frank Gooley and Byron Philcox are contesting for the position of vice-president and the secretary's position is being sought by David Twomey and John Martyn.

The O'Keefe policy is proposing action for better teen-towns, more good movies in the auditorium and greater union between junior and senior forms. The platform of the Duignan party is better organized assemblies, dramatic and debating evenings and square dancing for the country students during the noon hour.

Crown Attorney Bradshaw Asks Adjournment To Check Witnesses' Stories

Leonard Taylor On Trial In Robbery With Violence Of Elderly Lakefield Store Clerk

After hearing six Curve Lake Indians testify in defence of 21-year-old Leonard Taylor, also one of the Curve Lake band, Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw on Thursday afternoon asked for an adjournment until Monday afternoon. Mr. Bradshaw made no secret of the fact that he doubted the credibility of the defence witness. He wanted the adjournment to prepare the Crown's case in rebuttal, and to do "a little checking" on some of the alibi evidence on Taylor's movements during Friday morning, May 1.

Taylor was arrested May 13 and charged with robbing Charles Smith, 80, of Lakefield, of some $50 in cash, and with giving him a brutal beating. Smith, a First World War veteran and a Quaker Oats Co. pensioner, was alone in the A. J. Hudson second-hand store in Lakefield when he was assaulted and robbed.

The Crown filed a claw hammer and a heavy iron spike as possible weapons which were used to knock Smith unconscious as he was stooping over to do some work. No fingerprints were found.

IDENTIFIED TAYLOR

On Thursday morning Smith identified Taylor as the man who had come into his shop, sometime before noon on May 1, and walked around behind him as he was preparing to do some drilling. Smith told the court that he doesn't remember being hit.

Amos Forbes, of Apsley, and James Scott, of Coe Hill, entered the store for a visit later in the morning and found Smith wandering about in a daze in the rear of the store. His head and shoulders were covered with blood.

Though articulate, Smith gave them no explanation of what happened. After treatment by Dr. H. E. Gastle, he was taken to Civic Hospital suffering from a fractured skull. The injury was so serious that Dr. Gastle didn't think the 80-year-old man would recover.

(The medical evidence was read into the court record from a transcript of the preliminary trial. Dr. Gastle is in the United States, temporarily, and was unable to testify.)

Examined by Defence Counsel Edward Fanjoy, all six defence witnesses said they saw Taylor at the Curve Lake Reserve on the morning the Crown alleges he was in Lakefield—15 miles away by road.

BEST FRIEND

Ray Taylor, who described Leonard Taylor as "my best friend," said he went to the island at Curve Lake where Leonard lives and found him eating breakfast in his tent. He said he stayed three-quarters of an hour and while he was there two other Indians, Stanley Taylor and his son Roy, came to borrow a fish spear.

Stanley Taylor corroborated this and put the time at 10 to 10.30 a.m.

However, Judge John de N Kennedy would not allow 16-year-old Roy Taylor to testify under oath after Crown Attorney Bradshaw put this question to him:

"Isn't it true, Roy, that if it came to a question of protecting one of your Curve Lake band,

Man Sentenced One Year For Drug Theft

Joseph Harold (Bud) Redmond, 27, formerly of Peterborough, on Thursday afternoon was sentenced to a year in Burwash Reformatory after he pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering the General Medical Clinic on Nov. 9, 1952, and stealing $20 worth of drugs.

Judge John de N. Kennedy said that he would recommend every facility available at Burwash "to assist (Redmond) in breaking away from the drug habit."

Redmond said that he was a drug addict and claimed that this addition was at the root of his troubles.

He was brought to Peterborough from Burwash to stand trial where he is already serving a one-year sentence for being found in possession of narcotics in Toronto. He still has 11 months of that sentence to serve, and as his Peterborough sentence is to run concurrently, this means that he will have one additional month to serve.

Redmond broke into the General Medical Clinic, 234 Romaine St., and stole $20 worth of morphine tablets, nembutal capsules and other drugs from the dispensary. He had previously been seen around the premises and he also slipped up by leaving his thumb prints on one of the bottles in the dispensary.

Postpone Talks To PoWs Until At Least Thursday

PANMUNJOM (AP)—The Korean repatriation commission, apparently wrangling over rules, today postponed until as late as next Thursday the start of Allied and Red efforts to coax home prisoners refusing repatriation. No specific new date was set for the start of prisoner interviews, a phase of the truce which an Allied spokesman called "the psychological battle of our time."

The UN command agreed to postponing the start of interviews, scheduled to begin Friday or Saturday.

It was not clear whether the neutral commission agreed to an Allied demand that the delay be deducted from the 90-day interview period, which the UN command said must be counted from the time all UN-repatriated prisoners are in neutral custody.

But a commission spokesman's statement that "it is understood" the 90 days will begin on the actual starting date of interviews would indicate that the Allied position may have been rejected.

During the 90-day interview period, 22,600 former prisoners of the UN and 359 prisoners captured by the Reds are to be questioned by their original side.

The five-nation neutral commission, composed of India, Sweden, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia and Poland, said the delay was necessary because "arrangements and facilities" for the interviews had not been completed.

TRY RECONCILE DIFFERENCES

The commission is reported to have been trying to reconcile widely different recommendations submitted by the Allies and Reds on rules to govern the operation.

Brig.-Gen. A. L. Hamblen, head of the Allied team of explainers and observers, agreed to the delay, but said it must be deducted from the 90-day explanation period, which the armistice terms say must start Sept. 25.

There are these main points of conflict between the Allied and Communist views:

1. The Communists insist on interviews with individual prisoners; the Allies demand groups of 25.
2. The UN command wants the prisoner to have the right to refuse to listen to the explanations; the Communists demand that all prisoners listen.

WANT MASS INTERVIEWS

The Allies object to individual interviews on the belief that a prisoner appearing before Red explainers might be intimidated by threat of reprisal and other means.

The UN command says a prisoner should be allowed to refuse to go to the explanations on the ground that he already has made his choice and that any reversal must be done by "an overt" act on his part—that is, by applying to the repatriation commission for repatriation.

The Communists also demand that the explainers be allowed to talk to the prisoners repeatedly.

The Allied command is prepared to let the prisoner make his decision after one explanation. Those still undecided could be interviewed as often as they wish but only voluntarily.

The UN command has called on the repatriation commission to guarantee that no force, threat or affront to personal dignity be permitted against prisoners. Terms of the agreement on prisoners attached to the armistice document clearly state that no intimidation should be permitted and only Thursday the repatriation commission gave prisoners such assurances.

TEMPER UNCERTAIN

The temper of the nearly 8,000 North Korean and 14,600 Chinese anti-Red prisoners is such that some will resent efforts by the Communists to win them back and may event resist appearing for the explanations.

Gen. Hamblen pointed out that three-fourths of the Chinese "volunteers" captured by the UN in Korea are among the 22,600 Red soldiers refusing repatriation.

In a special statement, Hamblen said:

"In the event these (anti-Communist) prisoners remain loyal to the cause of the free world during the period of explanations by the Communists, we feel that we will have won the psychological battle of our time.

"We hope and pray, that this is the last battle of the Korean conflict."

Hamblen has named the explanation period "operation freepatriate."

The 23 Americans, one Briton and 335 South Koreans listed by the Reds as refusing repatriation arrived at the demilitarized zone Friday, singing the "Internationale," anthem of world-wide communism.

UNANIMOUS DISBELIEF

Announcement of their names by Red China's Peiping radio brought reactions of almost unanimous disbelief from their families.

There was no indication of what they will be told, but Gen. Mark Clark, UN Far East commander, said last week:

"We plan to interview these men and explain fully their rights and privileges. . . ."

Communist correspondent Wilfred Burchett once more today admitted there may be some Allied prisoners held in Red Manchuria.

More than a week ago, Burchett indicated some American airmen were in Manchuria. He said the Allies would have to negotiate for their release "through diplomatic channels."

This morning, three Chinese and three North Korean prisoners were returned to the Communists by the repatriation commission.

It raised to 35 the number of Allied-held captives returned to the Reds after a change of mind when being turned over to Indian custodial forces.

Labor MP Dies

LONDON (Reuters)—Dr. Santo Wayburn Jeger, 55, Labor member of Parliament for the London constituency of Holborn and St. Pancras, died Thursday night. His death will mean a by-election.

Jeger was a founder member of the Socialist Medical Association.

Evangelist Ordered Out

MARKHAM (CP) — Markham township council has ordered a full report from police chief Clarence Wideman following a complaint by an evangelical preacher that the chief ordered him out of nearby Gormley last Friday night. Alfred George Barrett of the Glad Tidings tabernacle, Toronto, told the council the officer ordered him to stop a sermon and hymns from his sound truck parked in a private lane.

NO PRIVACY — The odd three-point sleeping posture of an Indian adjutant, a stork-like bird, excites the over-the-fence curiosity of a giraffe family in the neighboring pen at the zoo in London, England. The long-necked Peeping Toms, mama and papa giraffe and their two offspring, appear puzzled by the adjutant's landing gear mechanism.

Money Biggest Problem At Municipal Conference

MONTREAL (CP)—The moneyman looked over delegates' shoulders throughout the five days of the International Municipal Congress held here this week.

The 800 mayors and representatives of Canadian and American cities also debated traffic problems and issues of municipal government, but always with the question of money in the immediate background.

The chief conclusion of this convention was that the cities of the world can't pay their way.

Experts from Canada, Britain and the United States all told the same story. Cities, though collecting more money than they did before the war, are not getting as big a share of tax revenue as they used to do.

NO LET-UP IN SERVICES

Meanwhile, the experts said, there is no let-up in the demand for city services, particularly in growing communities. Citizens want new roads, more street lighting, better water supplies, and extended police protection.

The money isn't there, they agreed, and only large grants from federal and provincial governments keep cities from going bankrupt.

It was the first time the Canadian and American mayors had got together for a joint convention. Apart from one afternoon when the two groups met separately to elect officers and debate resolutions all their sessions were attended jointly.

The Canadians stayed on and held the rest of their business session Thursday, although the congress formally ended Wednesday night.

LITTLE OPTIMISM

Few of the speakers at the congress were optimistic about the future.

Dr. Cyril James, principal of Montreal's McGill University, told the mayors "civilization as we know it will collapse" if cities don't lead the way.

But transport experts painted a black picture of the creeping paralysis traffic is causing in central city areas as people move into the suburbs and downtown areas become blighted.

Moreover government administrative specialists — particularly from the U. S.—held out little prospect of quickly achieving a new metropolitan pattern in city government which would see independent suburban communities and cities joining forces to plan and pay for certain central services.

No one came up with an overall solution of the traffic question, although many ways of tackling individual traffic problems were suggested. One delegate—the director of traffic for Baltimore, Md.—advised the mayors: "It's amazing what you can do with what you have."

ASK FOR ACTION

Both organizations passed resolutions calling on their respective governments for action. The U. S. mayors wanted Washington to make its mind up about civil defence and foot the bill, and they asked Congress not to scrap the present system of federal grants-in-aid.

The Canadians decided they still don't like the exemption of crown property from federal tax—even though in certain cases part of their loss is made up by federal grants—and decided to demand its removal and exemption of municipal purchases from the 10 per cent federal sales tax.

They also called for a federal-provincial conference to consider the financial plight of Canadian cities.

Thursday—in a show of independence—the Canadian mayors asked the federal government to let them pay half the bill for civil defence if their province won't put up the money.

At present if a province doesn't match the federal civil defence grant by an equal amount of money, the city gets no grant at all.

Four Essentials Required In Perfect Apple

VINELAND (CP)—Three men at this Ontario horticultural experimental station are on a search for the perfect apple. They want a tasty, rosy kind so hardy it will suit all climates and will last in storage all winter long.

"When it looks right, smells right and tastes right, we'll be satisfied," said Dr. J. H. L. Truscott, laboratory director at the station. The experiments are believed to be unique in Canada.

After three years of research, he and his associates, George H. Dickson and E. F. Palmer, have reduced 160 varieties to 16. From this number they hope to find the perfect one.

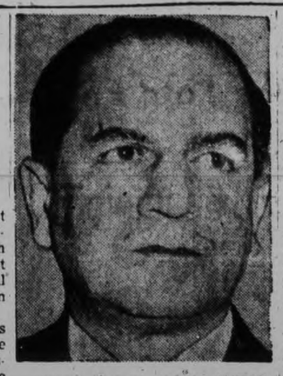
It may take years of cross-breeding, grafting and transplanting.

"The experiments are baffling and sometimes downright exasperating," said Mr. Dickson, who has been working with apples since 1913. "We might find a tree which will fulfil all our expectations in Vineland, then discover it won't grow on the other side of Lake Ontario." (Vineland is in the Niagara peninsula, about five miles from St. Catharines.)

"I'm looking for a champion which may only turn up once in a generation, one which is good anywhere," he added.

Seedlings have come from Idaho, Ohio, New Jersey and New York. Wanted is an all-weather apple, able to stay good in a 32-degree storage temperature and capable of filling in vacant periods between ripenings of certain varieties.

Mr. Dickson said McIntosh Reds, for instance, need a storage temperature of 54 degrees. McIntosh Reds are ripe at Christmas, but Spies are not ready until March. Picked in the fall, they ripen in storage.



TO OTTAWA — Mirza Osman Ali Baig, former secretary of the Pakistan foreign ministry, has been named Pakistan's High Commissioner to Canada. He succeeds Mohammed Ikramullah, who has been appointed Ambassador to France. Date of his arrival in Ottawa has not been announced.

Pilot Drowned

LONDON (Reuters)—The pilot of a British naval plane was drowned Thursday when his plane crashed into the sea off the west Scottish coast while he was trying to land on the British carrier Eagle. This was the second air accident of NATO's Exercise Mariner. Earlier an American jet plane crashed and caught fire while landing on the United States carrier Bennington. A member of the Bennington's anti-aircraft crew is missing.

Some Progress In Producing Polio Virus

By JOHN TRACY

TORONTO (CP) — Connaught medical research laboratories here report progress in producing polio virus in quantity, a necessary step towards production of any polio vaccine.

A team of workers at the laboratories, which are part of the University of Toronto, has been able to grow the dread virus in containers of almost two-quart size. Previously the virus had been grown in flasks or test tubes little larger than a man's thumb.

No polio vaccine is yet available and scientists say that it will require extended trials before any vaccine which may be developed can be offered for use. The virus itself has to be turned out in quantity to facilitate further vaccine studies.

CAN CAUSE CHANGE

To produce a vaccine, the virus which causes the disease has to be killed or made harmless. The result, when injected into the body, can cause changes which will bring about destruction of the disease germs when they later enter the body.

To increase the yield of virus, Dr. Leone Farrell and Dr. William Wood devised a method of culturing, including the rotating of the containers while these were incubated in a room maintained constantly at the temperature of the human body.

The work on polio at the Connaught laboratories is being conducted as part of a program of studies planned and supported by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., of New York.

Development Of Iron Mines In Labrador Told Engineers

The discovery and development of the Labrador Mining and Exploration Company was outlined to members of the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada Thursday night at their first meeting of the fall, by W. C. Wright, Harold Wilson, Ted Boote and C. B. McKenzie, all engineers with the C.G.E.

Iron ore was first discovered in the Labrador area in 1896 by a prospector, who was looking for gold, but nothing was done about it until 1936. The terrain of the country was so rugged the only possible way in was on foot or by air.

20,000 SQUARE MILES

In 1936, explained Mr. Wright, the Labrador Mining and Exploration Company was formed and they bought 20,000 square miles of land around Burnt Creek. But they were still looking for gold and again they found signs of iron ore but didn't do anything about it until the Second World War started.

In 1942 Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines bought controlling interest in the company and began prospecting for gold. They failed to find any, but they did discover that the area was loaded with iron ore and started to plan development. During the first couple of years they spent 5 million dollars alone on prospecting the area.

By 1948 three million tons of iron ore had been discovered and the Iron Ore Company of Canada was formed.

To transport the ore, a railway had to be built from the mines down to Seven Islands, a distance of 350 miles and will be completed some time this year. Two bridges and two tunnels had to be built, besides power and dock facilities at Seven Islands, which cost a total of $200 million dollars.

From Seven Islands the ore is shipped to Montreal or around by the eastern seaboard to steel mills in the United States.

So far there is an estimated output of 10 million tons a year but it is hoped to raise that figure to 20 million tons explained Mr. Wright. The range of the field is 160 miles long and 10 miles wide and all the ore is high grade containing 60 percent iron. Ninety percent of the ore is exported to the United States, because Canada cannot consume any more.

It is the largest body of iron ore in North America, and except for the field in Brazil, the largest in the world.

110 CARS A MINUTE

Unloading of the freight cars at Seven Islands was explained by Ted Boote. They are capable of handling 110 cars an hour. A car is emptied in less than a minute. The ore goes from the freight cars to the lump breakers to break up the frozen ore and from there to the waiting boats by conveyor belts.

Mr. McKenzie explained the functions of the docking area. It stretches a half-a-mile back from the St. Lawrence and it is a mile wide. Enclosed in this area are ore stackers, bins, a dumper house, two lump breakers, transfer points, 21 belts and conveyors and electric shovels.

Harold Wilson explained that all the equipment at Seven Islands is designed especially for handling the ore. The power is supplied by a 44 Kilovolt and is stepped down by a transformer to utilization voltages of 4,160 volts and 575 volts. There are six load centre unit sub-stations and they supply the power at 575 volts to all the equipment.

There was a question and answer period following the speeches.

HEADS CONSUMERS — Mrs. H. E. Vautelet of Montreal has been elected president of the Canadian Association of Consumers at the sixth annual convention in Toronto. She succeeds Mrs. W. R. Walton, Jr. Mrs. Vautelet was one of the three leaders in a 13-year fight in Quebec to get the vote for women and founded the women's voters group.

Strong Tremors

VIBO VALENTIA, Italy (Reuters)—A fairly strong earthquake which lasted several seconds but caused no damage was felt in this south Italian town and its surroundings Thursday night.

Immigrant Arrested

FORT ERIE (CP)—A 25-year-old Hungarian immigrant Thursday was deported into Canada and promptly arrested by Fort Erie police on a charge of stealing the rowboat in which police said he crossed the Niagara river. Lajos Pats-Kovacs, who was taken to Welland county jail, blamed his problems on love.

Cutting Hair In Same Shop For 25 Years

"Cut another head of hair" is the motto of Roy Orde, a barber in the city who has been cutting hair at the same spot, at Sherbrooke and Reid Sts., for 25 years.

Mr. Orde was born in Peterborough and first started to cut hair when he was 17, with Archie Breaulton on Simcoe St. back in 1926. He worked for Archie Breaulton for three months and then left for Stratford, and barbered there for three months.

When he returned to Peterborough barbering jobs in the city were scarce. He finally landed a job on McDonnel St. and cut hair there for two years and five months.

It was 25 years ago on September 19 that Roy moved into his own shop at Reid and Sherbrooke Sts. At that time the roads in that part of the city were not paved.

BORROWED $100

When he opened up his own store all the capital Roy had was $6. He had to borrow $100 so he could equip his new store.

Roy's plans for the future are to keep right on cutting hair and he spends most of his spare time gardening, fishing and horse-back riding.

Roy attributes his success over the years to his faith in God and the help he received from his wife, who also assisted him in cutting hair. The Ordes have four children. They are Mrs. William Fisher (Shirley) of Peterborough; Robert, Gary and Wayne Orde. Another son, Keith, died last fall. Both Mr. and Mrs. Orde are members of the Gospel Hall.

HON. LESTER B. PEARSON, Canadian Minister for Foreign Affairs, tells the United Nations General Assembly in New York that Canadian troops would fight in Korea only in "a United Nations action." Mr. Pearson, making his first UN speech since he retired as president of the assembly, specifically excepted military unification of Korea as a UN aim for which Canada would battle.

Bancroft Choir Makes Fall, Winter Plans

BANCROFT (ENS)—The choir of St. John's Anglican Church met recently to discuss plans for the fall and winter. Those present in the parish hall were: Mrs. E. Schram, director, D. Smith, D. Sudbury District Contributed $750,000 New Wealth To Canada

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Every day, northern Ontario's Sudbury district contributes some $750,000 of new wealth to Canada from the rock which lay beneath it.

This wealth, in its most commonly-known forms, is nickel, copper, cobalt, gold and silver—but the list also includes platinum, palladium, iridium, osmium, sulphuric acid, and iron.

He gave the detail to delegates of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and accompanying newspaper men returning from last week's annual meeting in Edmonton.

Tours had taken the delegates to Winnipeg, Saskatoon nd Wainwright, Alta., prior to the four-day meeting in Edmonton; then to Yellowknife, N.W.T.; to Alberta's Peace river country and, also in Alberta, to Ponoka, Red Deer, Calgary and Medicine Hat; to Regina in Saskatchewan; and to Fort William, Port Arthur and Sudbury in Ontario.

MISSING SOMETHING

At the Lakehead Wednesday night the visitors, fresh from western hospitality, thought they were nearing home until some one in Fort William used the phrase: "You people down in eastern Canada."

That reminded them that when easterners travel west, they more often than not go right through without stopping at Fort William and Port Arthur, with their great grain terminals, iron ore docks, pulp and paper, aircraft and shipbuilding industries.

It was about dusk and we had only brief glimpses of Fort William's 1,800-foot Mt. McKay and the city's wide western-style streets, and of Port Arthur's lovely homes and Mariday Park's lookout over Thunder bay.

At the station, pipers Avis Kettridge and Sandra Stewart of the Fort William girls' pipe band, greeted ups. Then, after quick views of the twin cities, we were guests at dinner.

LOOK SUDBURY OVER

Thursday, Sudbury, surrounded by rock and with 35 trains a day passing through the centre of the city, was inclined to be modest on the subject of beauty.

But we found considerable beauty in its tree-lined streets, hard-won lawns, and in the vistas of surrounding country, with flaming autumn colors contrasting against the rugged terrain.

We were given a quick look at Falconbridge's operations and then were taken to dinner, where Mr. Lockhead rather tickled his business-man audience by saying:

"I have always felt that business and professional men must know very little geology—otherwise who would be putting up the endless requirements of risk capital for mining ventures?"

Amend Pension Plan

DETROIT (AP)—Recent amendments to the Ford Motor Co. pension plan will give retired Ford workers an extra $1,000,000 the first year, the CIO United Auto Workers Union said today. The changes were agreed upon last May 25. The revised schedule of benefits raised maximum monthly pensions from $125 to $137.50, including federal social security.

Critics Find New Play Disappointing

NEW YORK (AP)—A provocative and thoughtful study of a boy growing up and discovering race and sex simultaneously is undertaken in "Take a Giant Step," Thursday night's dramatic arrival on Broadway.

The play, coming in at the Lyceum Theatre, is the work of a new playwright, Louis Peterson, who has admittedly borrowed certain autobiographical details in depicting how a Negro lad comes face to face with the facts of adult life in a predominantly white neighborhood in a Connecticut city.

Peterson's dialogue shows a superior feeling for humor in early scenes as he takes his protagonist from schoolroom escapades through flurries of adolescent melodramatics and out for an abortive night on the town.

Later, as the problem of color grows in importance, Peterson attempts a major shift of his writing level, and although it is thoughtful and honest, the ingredients don't quite come off with desired dramatic effectiveness.

The production, by Lyn Austin and Thomas Noyes, has been provided with superior setting and lighting by Eldon Elder, and a thoroughly skillful cast in which Louis Gossett, as the 17-year-old, Estelle Hemsley as the grandmother and Frederick O'Neal as the father are particularly impressive.

"Take a Giant Step" in general however, leaves a feeling that somehow its purpose was never too clearly worked out.

You can't go "ALL-OUT" If you feel "ALL-IN"

These days most people work under pressure, worry more, sleep less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Promise Inquiry Into Transient Workers Homes

KETTLE POINT (CP)—The Ontario legislature's committee on Indian affairs Thursday promised an investigation into sanitary facilities in transient workers' quarters on fruit and tobacco farms.

Chief Brissette of the Kettle Point Indian band raised the issue as one of the points in a brief presented to the committee.

J. E. Morris, regional supervisor of Indian affairs for southern Ontario, said complaints have been received from the Oakville and Brampton areas.

"DEPLORABLE" SETUP

"Conditions for temporary workers on some of these fruit and tobacco farms are deplorable and disgusting," he said. "The farmers are not interested in their Indian workers. In some cases, one or two families live the year round in one-room shacks without baths or plumbing facilities. They should have good plumbing and separate rooms for the children, at least."

As at other hearings held by the committee, the liquor question again was raised. During the discussion, no voice was raised against giving the Indians full liquor rights.

Until 1940, Chilkoot barracks was the only U.S. Army post in Alaska.

Barons Of Cinque Ports Enjoy Meeting In Dover

DOVER (Reuters)—The boys of Sir Winston Churchill's favorite organization met Thursday in Dover's 700-year-old town hall.

But they gathered regretfully without "Grand Master" Winston. The 78-year-old prime minister is busy taking the sun and painting seascapes in the little French Riviera town of Cap d'Ail.

Nevertheless the five "barons" of the ancient Cinque Ports carried on in style. They stalked into the town hall wearing black silk suits, white vests embroidered with flowers and scarlet cloaks with blue-and-gold facing. And on each right shoulder were two gold bars, for the rank of baron.

Churchill is Lord Warden of the ports and constable of Dover Castle. He wore the uniform of the office when he attended the Coronation last June.

BUSY MEN

In the 1100s the barons of the five ports—Sandwich, Dover, Romney, Hastings and Hythe—were busy men. They gave the king a free navy and handled the prosperous Yarmouth fishing business.

Over the centuries various grateful monarchs gave them special privileges, including the right to attend coronations.

They have been meeting off and on for 600 years, but nowadays the meetings are mainly to give five civilians a chance to parade in medieval finery.

CPA Plane Sets Pacific Air Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — A speed record over the great circle route from Tokyo to Vancouver was set Thursday by a Canadian Pacific Airlines DC-6B airliner.

The four-engined plane, carrying 50 passengers and a crew of seven, covered the distance—4,734 miles—in 15 hours, eight minutes at an average speed better than 315 miles per hour.

A short stop for refuelling was made at Shemya in the Aleutians.

Library Board To Sponsor Poster Contest

LAKEFIELD (ENS)—The public Library Board will sponsor a poster contest in connection with "Young Canada Book Week" November 15 to 22, for pupils of grades 5 to 9. This decision was reached at a meeting in the library with the chairman, Mrs. W. H. Fife, presiding.

The aim of the poster will be to arouse interest in good literature for boys and girls and to stimulate pleasure in reading. The subject will be "an original picture, including title, to illustrate some book you have read".

The size of the poster for grades 7-9 will be approximately 14 x 22 inches and for grades 5 and 6 the size is 9 by 12 inches. All posters must be handed to the grade teacher by November 2. Prizes will be $3, $2, and $1. Winners will be announced and prizes distributed during "Book Week."

Librarian Mrs. J. W. Ridpath reported circulation for June as 842 books. This figure, while lower than most months, is 257 more than June, 1952. July circulation was 335 and August 301. This is an average of 70.7 per cent a session, compared with 65.3 for the same period last year.

SEEK GRANT

A request to Smith and Douro township councils for a grant, since so many of the pupils of these townships use the library, resulted in a letter from Douro stating that the matter was being given attention. But it was felt that it was a matter that should perhaps come through the High School Board. A special noon hour session was added more than a year ago to accommodate these children who are not in the village during library hours.

The government grant, received in July, was 65 per cent on 81c per capita, or a total of $1,050.50. While this grant is a little more than last year, the full grant was received, which is not always the case. Increase over last year was $185.50.

The librarian was asked to purchase an atlas from the Encyclopaedia Britannica and to obtain the necessary material to be used in connection with "Young Canada Book Week".

Accounts payable totalled $408.04.

Present were Mrs. Fife, Miss Grace Yonge, Mrs. L. J. Delaney, Mrs. Kenneth Jakins and the librarian, Mrs. Ridpath.

Pageant Feature Of Anniversary

HASTINGS (ENS)—Feature of the celebration of the 90th anniversary of St. George's Anglican Church, Hastings, was a pageant staged Monday night at the congregational fowl supper.

The pageant, written by Miss D. P. Child, dealt briefly with the history of the church and the men and women largely responsible for construction. It told of the stained glass windows arriving barely in time for the first service in 1863.

The pageant showed the part played by a wealthy Hastings cattle drover, Henry Johnston, who paid for half the parsonage, and most of the present church. Mr. Johnston, on his death, left $40,000 to the church's mission board.

For the present church, built in 1908, a Peterborough firm contracted the brick work and all outside construction at a price of $400. Doxsee brothers of Hastings supplied window frames, sash and door frames for $27.

Among the gifts presented to the church were the baptismal font, from Samuel Beamish, which was in the original church, the pipe organ given by Mr. Johnston, and the chancel window—a memorial to Mr. Johnston—given by the W.A.

The WA also gave the bookrests, the communion set, the Sunday school presented the altar prayer book, and the lactern Bible. Many other groups and individuals contributed to the furnishing of the church.

Digging For Natural Steam To Generate Electricity

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — The natural safety valve of the geyser country, which for centuries gave Maoris a constant hot water supply may help change the economic future of New Zealand.

The government's spectacular gamble in spending big sums in digging into the ground to find natural steam for electricity will pay off, says Works Minister Stanley Goosman.

For more than three years engineers have been boring for steam, producing dozens of man-made geysers which dwarf the age-old natural ones of the thermal region in the centre of North island.

Now, Mr. Goosman says, the Wairakei area, where drilling has been going on, has been shown to have the highest geothermal steam pressure in the world. The investigation period is over, he says, and New Zealand can press ahead with development.

LIMITED SUPPLY

New Zealand is not well supplied with coal for power plants, and though a big hydro-electric program is in progress it is likely that before many years have passed all available sites for dams on North island will be developed.

It was this prospect that prompted the government to take a gamble on being able to use the steam of the thermal areas for electricity.

Large numbers of tourists visit the region of geysers, blowholes, boiling lakes, steaming cliffs and bubbling mud pools in the centre of the island every year, but until now little economic use has been made of the vast steam power trapped deep below the ground.

Lengthy investigations by geophysicists, volcanologists, drilling engineers and other experts led to the choice of Wairakei as the most promising area for geothermal tests. Dozens of shallow bores were first put down to examine the strata below the earth, the quality of steam produced and the shape of underground steam caverns. Pressure and output tests were made and the effect noted of drilling several bores in close proximity.

HUGE STEAM AREA

The steam was not as "dry" as that at Lardarello, in Italy, where electricity is successfully produced, but it was more free from impurities and ways were found of extracting excess moisture. In addition there were soon indications that an infinitely greater area of steam was available for development than at the Italian plant.

This prompted the drilling of larger and deeper bores, with spectacular results. Until they are silenced they give off steam with an ear-splitting roar that drowns all other sound for hundreds of yards, and they hurl jets of steam at great pressure far higher into the air than the best shots from natural geysers.

The two latest bores, which are down to over 3,000 feet, have such pressure that they cannot be played until special super-strength valves have been manufactured abroad to control them.

BUILD TEST STATION

The government will build a power station in the area. It will have only a small output compared with stations eventually planned, but will be used to examine the problems of practical operation.

Mr. Goosman says geothermal steam can be made available to produce power at only $6 to $9 a kilowatt outlay on construction, compared with $100 a kilowatt needed to build dams for hydro-electric power.

No one yet knows the full extent of the steam belt which runs at least half way across North island, he says, and it is still impossible to guess what the ultimate development will be.

If electricity can be produced cheaply in sufficiently large quantities, a whole battery of large power stations may be built in the thermal region.

Recommend Life Sentence For Youth Guilty Of Murders

CANANDAIGUA, N.Y. (AP)—Fred Eugene McManus, the 19-year-old Valley Stream, L.I., youth who confessed five killings, Thursday was found guilty of first-degree felony murder.

But a state Supreme Court jury recommended life imprisonment, and it is probable that Justice H. Douglass van Duser will honor the recommendation in passing sentence Saturday.

McManus was poker-faced as the verdict was announced. A moment later, however, he flashed a bit of the devil-may-care nonchalance that he showed last spring when he and his 'teen-aged sweetheart were captured in Dubuque, Iowa, after a crime spree through the eastern and midwest states.

He squeezed the shoulder of his father, brewery executive Mose McManus and then grinned broadly as he was led away to jail.

A felony murder is one that occurs during the commission of another crime—in this case, robbery McManus has said he killed the five persons in order to get money and a car to take him and 16-year-old Diane Marie Weggeland west to a state with less-stringent marriage laws than New York. They did not get married. The killings netted about $60 in cash.

Van Duser still can sentence McManus to death in the electric chair for the pistol-killing last March 27 of William Allan Braverman, 18, a Hobart College student from Rochester. However, in most cases, the jury's recommendation is followed.

Dog Epidemic Over

Plowing Match "Tent City" Overcrowds Site

COBOURG (ENS) — Heart of the international and world plowing match to be held here on October 6 to 9, the "tented city" where exhibits, headquarters and various facilities will be centred, is overcrowding its boundaries. There are around 200 exhibit areas, the location having had to expand into land intended for other use.

W. McTaggart, Ontario Plowmen's Association official, told a meeting of the committee chairmen on Wednesday night, that the progress to date of the tented city had set a new record. Exhibitors' areas had been completely sold out. The meeting, which did not finish until close to midnight, was a busy one and the next is scheduled for October 1 in the counties' council chamber here.

HUGE TASK

The tremendous task of adequate sanitation, which was undertaken by Glenn James of Port Hope, has required extensive sanitary arrangements but the committee is confident that it will be handled so completely that there will be no cause for criticism. There will also be four men whose job will be to see that garbage from the concessions is disposed of.

School children who are under supervision or come in buses, will be admitted to the plowing match free of charge. The banquet for the contestants will be held in Grafton Community Hall, October 9 at which the guest speaker will be the Hon. F. S. Thomas, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario.

Tractors and plows have arrived from Denmark, Norway, Ireland and Germany and more are on the way, it was reported by Pat Lappin, chairman of the tractor committee.

General chairman Harry Campbell said he was satisfied that all committees were keeping their arrangements up to schedule.

Robertson Case Expected To Go To Jury

GUELPH (CP)—The case of 21-year-old Jeffrey Robertson, a Glasgow-born Erin Township farmer charged with killing his uncle, Jo... Mackie, during a family argument Sept. 5, is scheduled to go to the jury today.

After two days of hearings in which Robertson claimed he did not know the .22-calibre rifle was loaded and that it went off when he swung round and pointed it at Mackie, all that remains today is for Mr. Justice R. I. Ferguson to address the all-male jury.

Crown and defence have stated their cases, the latter declaring Robertson acted in self-defence.

DESCRIBES ARGUMENT

Robertson Thursday told how Mackie had hit his stepfather, Ross Overland, during an argument and threatened to tear him apart and "fill me full of lead".

He said he grabbed a rifle hanging on the wall to keep Mackie from it and when Mackie moved toward him, pointed it at him.

"I swung the rifle around," he said. "I held it at my waist away from Mackie. After I swung, the gun went off."

Mrs. Catharine Overland, mother of the accused, said her brother, John Mackie, was "a very unreasonable man." She said she had not let her son fight back in previous brawls with him because she was afraid Robertson would get hurt.

Typhoon Skirts Southern Japan

TOKYO (AP) — The season's 13th typhoon skirted the coast of southern Japan today, flooding farmland and causing at least one death.

Winds of 57 miles an hour whipped the Itami area by noon and were expected to hit Tokyo during the night.

Kyodo news service said more than 1,930 houses and 2,850 acres of farmland had been inundated in southern Japan.

MRS. MARTHA WRIGHT

Mrs. Martha Wright, of Emily township, died suddenly early today at the home of her son, Lockhart Wright, lot one, concession 4. She was in her 89th year.

Even on Thursday she appeared to be in usual health for her advanced age, and it was mentioned today that she was active in knitting and interested in the affairs of the family.

Born in Emily township, a daughter of John Guthrie and his wife, Katherine Jackson, Mrs. Wright was the last of an old Emily family of thirteen members. Her husband, John Wright, died in 1922.

Mrs. Wright spent her life in the Bethel section of the township. She attended its school, and all through her active years she was a member of Bethel United Church.

She leaves her only son, Lockhart Wright, two grandchildren, Alberta Wright at home, and Mrs. Melville (Margaret) Wood, of Millbrook; and two great-grandchildren, Paul and Judith Wood.

The funeral will be Monday, September 28, at 2 p.m., from the residence of her son, and will be conducted by the Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, of Omemee United Church. Burial will be at Little Lake cemetery.

Further Shakeup In Georgia

LONDON (Reuters)—A further shakeup in the government of the Soviet Republic of Georgia—already purged of a premier who was an intimate of Lavrenty Beria—was announced today by Tiflis radio.

The radio said three cabinet ministers have been dismissed following the ouster of Premier Valerian Minayevich Bakradze, a close associate of Beria, former Russian interior minister. Their political fortunes had all been linked with Beria's rise and fall.

Michael Fenwick, district union organizer, said the increase brings the basic wage rate at the plant up to $1.32½ cents an hour.

M.R.A. Key To Problems Within Labor Movement

BY ANGUS MUNRO
Windsor Star Staff Writer
Special to the Examiner

CAUX - SUR - MONTREUX — M.R.A. is not an alternative to the legitimate trade union struggle but it can be a key to the problems within the labor movement, Frank Swift, head of the British Civil Service Union, said at the World Assembly for Moral Rearmament here.

KEY TO PROBLEM

"If they (organized labor) approach Moral Rearmament as the alternative to the legitimate trade union struggle, then they will probably go away feeling disappointed and frustrated," he said. "So I urge them, like myself, to approach Moral Rearmament not as an alternative to the organized struggle in the labor movement but as the key to the problems in the labor movement."

A Socialist and a former Communist (17 years a party member in Britain) Mr. Swift said that to him the tragedy o fthe 20th century was that people everywhere want the same thing but are preparing to blow each other to pieces in an atomic war because "we wear different labels around our necks."

"The world," he said, "can only be changed through existing social, political, governmental and trade union machinery. Moral rearmament and the practice of absolute moral standards is something that can be embraced by all creeds, all political faiths, all religions. It is like a great circle, with everyone approaching the centre from a different point on the perimeter. At the point where these paths converge we will have achieved the kind of world for which we are all fighting.

"What we have to do, whether we are socialists, conservatives, trade union leaders, industrialists or anything else is to go back to our homelands and fight to infuse Moral Rearmament principles into every sphere of our activity. If you look upon Moral Rearmament not in place of what you have got, not as an alternative, but as something to add to what you've got something to purify it, then you have nothing to lose by coming here to Caux but a whole world to gain."

Two Canadian industrialists, Richard Flood and Fred Foster of Toronto, said they were leaving the assembly after a stay of several weeks pledged to do whatever they can to further the message of M.R.A. in Canada.

SOLUTION FOR KENYA?

Two farmers from Kenya both of whom have just returned from the fighting in that part of Africa (they were officers in a regiment fighting the Mau Mau) said everybody was blaming the other fellow in the Kenya trouble.

Major Peter Anderson and his second in command, Walter Shuster, admitted they saw no way out of the problem and came to Caux because they heard it could be helpful. Here, they said, they realized that a big part of the African trouble is the sense of superiority the white Europeans flaunt continually in the face of their neighbors.

"I only found unity with the Africans when I was honest about my sense of superiority," Major Anderson said. His family have been Kenya farmers for 50 years. "We have made many attempts at inter-racial unity through sub meetings and conferences, but it can only be built on the basis of absolute moral standards."

SWISS CHARACTER

Mountains and valleys of breathtaking beauty, though they help, do not make a nation great and none know this more certainly than the Swiss. It is people and character that matter most in a nation; and the Swiss seem to have learned that, too.

In many ways Switzerland is a land of paradoxes. It does not begin to produce what its people need, yet it has such a large national surplus, its funds must be invested abroad or lie idle. And the Swiss, say those who know them best, never let money lie idle when it can be put to work.

In this corner of Switzerland one cannot survey the whole scene. Nor is it fair for visitors with so short an experience in the country to comment with finality on the things that make the Swiss folk different. One can say this, however, they are frugal people here There is little waste in evidence anywhere.

The Swiss franc has maintained its high place in world money markets because it has been carefully managed. (One U.S. dollar is worth 4.25 Swiss francs. In France the same dollar is worth 3.30 francs.)

TRAINED FOR DEFENCE

The Swiss haven't been tested in modern warfare for more than half a century. Yet they have an army of 500,000 which can be brought to arms within 36 hours if need arise. There is no standing army to speak of but every Smiss male from 20 to 60 is trained to defend his nation. He puts in three weeks a year from age 20 to 32. From 32 to 40, he must serve three training periods at least, and from 40 to 50 he must serve at least one.

Every soldier in this civilian army has in his home a rifle and 48 rounds of ammunition at all times. He has all the necessary equipment ready in his home if the call should come. You see no armories in Switzerland. Every home is a small armed camp.

Well, the non-Swiss might say, a lot of good that would do in an atomic war. And that's true. But knowing the Swiss, authorities in defensive warfare say they have plans for that, too. And few countries are more suited for sheltering their peoples in the event of atomic bombing. The nation's 4,000,000, which is the number left after mobilizing the army of half a million, could be dispersed in Switzerland's mountains and valleys and live there without great difficulty for long periods.

AIDED INTERNED BRITONS

At the tiny railway station here in Caux, there hangs a plaque. It is a tribute to the Swiss people of this area who during the war cared for interned British prisoners of war. The Swiss at one time had as many as 154 giant bombers of the R.A.F. interned in these parts. Within sight of the room where this is being written three members of a squadron of RAF bombing planes, on a return flight from Italy, crashed in full view of the residents of Caux and Montreux. A village in French territory, little more than a mile distant and plainly to be seen from the same window, was burned to the last house during the war because the Gestapo retaliated for the assissination of a German S.S. leader. The valiant villagers have rebuilt their beautiful valley town.

A few more minutes distant and romantic history rises with its own peculiar beauty. The Castle of Chillon, where Byron got the inspiration for his famous poem, lies just east of Montreux. Byron, according to the story told here, actually wrote from his place of residence at Vevey, but he visited the castle frequently. It juts into Lake Geneva at the entrance to the beautiful Rhone Valley.

The Swiss have not spoiled these beauty spots. Nor have they hidden them behind roadside billboards. The Swiss nature would consider that desecration.

First Atomic Artillery Embarks For Europe

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)—The United States' first artillery unit capable of handling atomic guns embarked Thursday for Europe.

About 900 men of the 868th field artilltery battalion went aboard the navy transport Gen. J. H. McRae, assigned to carry them to Europe for training in West Germany with NATO forces.

None of the 280-mm. guns, capable of firing high explosive or atomic shells, was visible. Spokesmen said they were shipped from another port.

PlanSubscription For Gordon Graydon Estate

TORONTO (CP)—Friends in the Ontario constituency of Peel are taking a private subscription for the estate of Gordon Graydon because the late parliamentarian had little or no time for his own affairs while serving 18 years in the House of Commons.

Mr. Graydon, foreign affairs expert for the Progressive Conservative party, died in hospital here last week at 56.

"He was a lawyer but he never had time to build up a practice," one friend said. "He had to rely mainly on his MP's indemnity of $4,000 and his expense allowance of $2,000. But everyone seems to think an MP should be a soft touch, and demands for charity and other purposes are constant."

Political friends said Mr. Graydon's case is not unusual.

"These men often spend a lifetime, or the best years of their lives, in the public service only to find when they are at the end of the road there is nothing for them."

Crackdown Promised

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost said Thursday that unrelenting pressure on traffic violators has been ordered by the province. Although traffic accidents have not been reduced despite a continuing campaign against reckless drivers and speeders, the premier said he felt it was due to increased traffic rather than failure of the campaign.

Of Interest to Women

Fabric And Line Delineates New Slenderness; Grace And Luxury Evident

A wealth of grace and luxury, adapted to the needs and budget of the American woman whatever the life she leads, has made its appearance in every phase of fall fashion. With less opulence in line, with a new silhouette that is narrow and easy, luxurious details, treated with discretion, have a background for effective play.

The news—luxury this year is at the reach of every woman. One sees mink and Persian trims, silks, brocades, imported laces and jeweled embroidery adding richness everywhere. But the same effects are being achieved with baby rabbit furs, leather trims, delicate machine-made laces and embroideries, and cottons, wools and rayons shot with gold and silver thread.

For the woman who leads a busy life with a heavy social calendar, this elegance has a practical meaning, and one which will focus in the majority of her clothes. On the other hand, a woman who prefers to limit luxury touches to special occasion costumes will find her casuals enhanced in line and rich in fabric to impart an equal graciousness and beauty to her daily life.

INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR

Behind this important trend is the increasing internationalism of fashions in America. New design ideas from every corner of the world are being channeled into the great manufacturing and distributing centres of this country, some brought straight from the source, most adapted to the needs of our women at every economic level and blended into the essence of American style.

Many Parisian, British and Italian designers, once approachable only by a trip acros sthe sea, are taking fashion residence here. Even more significant is the talent of new centres. Witness the exciting treatments of fleece fabrics from Netherlands coat and suit designers, the pure, slender influence of mandarin sheaths from Japan, the supple knits of Israel, and exotic tones that Spain has brought into our casual apparel this season.

THE FALL LOOK

Parisian influences now pervading our fall fashion picture are found in the easy look of lines above the waist, with slenderness predominant in the skirts. The tulip of last season is still strong, though greater fullness tends to appear in the chalice draped silhouette. Slimness from the front view is often varied with back interest or side movement in skirts. Waistlines look higher, often melting into crushed midriffs.

In general, the trend as translated and originated by American designers is slender, though not skimpy; slimming, but not restrictive to action. The appearance of simplicity in cut, in actuality often complex in structure, is an important complement to the splendor of detailing which is still being stimulated by the late Coronation.

LUXURY FABRICS

Fabrics with a rich look, a luxurious, supple feel, follow naturally. With the advent of the insulated lining, long-hair and tweed coatings can be created with less bulk, and given more opportunity for exciting manipulation. Suits and dresses, too, are lustrous and polished on their surfaces.

The costume look has gained a solid position, with coats, suits, dresses, blouses, skirts and weskits in a variety of combinations brought to unity through co-ordinated fabrics.

Brown in all its values, from light creamy shades to deep camel, cognac, and dark African tones, is top news in color. With it are the pitch colors: Blues, greens, deepened with black, and solid black itself, of course. Importance, too, is found in neutrals: Pastel colors hued down with grey. Bright shades appear clear and jewel-like in temperament.

FASHIONS THAT FIT

New prominence in design for tall, petite and short women styles that fit without alteration is news to gladden the hearts of the largest proportion of our fashion-wise women.

For example, fashions cut for those who measure over 5' 7" minimize the long look of the fall silhouette with hip tucks and drapery, and much emphasis on top width through diagonal closings and shoulder fullness. For the 5' 5" or under, there are clothes designed proportionately smaller in detail, daintier in effect, with skirts a trifle fuller for the very thin miss or slightly heavier woman.

Clothes defined in mood for every hour, each activity have been developed this exciting season, emphasizing fashion for a purpose, fashion for your purse, fashion with a beautiful meaning to the American woman.

Slim, Well-Fitted Coats Slenderize, Enhance Figure

The fall story in coats is a creation of many characters, with an over-all theme of greater slenderness. Within this theme there is a variation from a straight, almost tublar look to a somewhat fuller coat, often with wrap-around properties. Uniformly, beauty is in construction and fabric with abundant stitching details that are functional as well as decorative.

Shorter lengths are springing into prominence, varying from 23" to 26", to between 36" and 40", and playing an important part in the unified costume look which holds the spotlight for the season. These appear in cashmere camel and fleeces, and act as elegent little wraps for late day and evening as well as for casual wear.

LINES FOR FALL

Major interest centres on the narow coat with the accent on a small or non-existent collar. Stand-away, neck-framing bands, exciting three-way propositions that can be worn open, buttoned to one side or high under the chin, as well as long, thin shawl collars are proportioned to this delicate look.

Where the coat is wider, there are often smart devices for accomplishing a pulled-in look. Bias cuts seamed diagonally or worked in a spiral taper fabrics to give a wrapped impression. Tiny side and back belts, too, are used. Sleeves still tend to emerge from large armholes, although many are stitched tighter at the cuff.

Here the collars go to two extremes, either very large and drapable or small and clever. Directoire and contour shapes, petal-shaped for soft effect, deep cape and Quaker treatments are alternating with tulip band closings, mandarin collars and square or triangular flaps with jeweled buttons. One handsome treatment simulates a collar through two folds draped away from the neck.

The fitted coat is back, but with a different air. Lines are straighter in the skirt, figure moulding in the bodice and unbelted like the princess coat of years ago. Tiny buttons, lots of them, narrow shawls and small velvet Chesterfield collars accompany.

ADDED BEAUTY

Stitching has taken on a new dimension. Utilized as emphasis on yokes, it creates a shoulder spanning width or an illusion of a lowered or lifted waistline. Slot seams, welt and cord stitching also add a new interest.

Linings have come out from under with extremely rich and interesting effects. Used in short and long coats, they co-ordinate a blouse or suit to make a costume through matching fabric, show themselves as facings on cuffs and collars in leather, satin and velvet or achieve elegance by themselves through an unexpected print on tafefta or crepe.

Fur is chiefly an accessory this season, which is good news for suits as well as coats. It is usually found as a detachable trim, small, preferably flat, and worn snug about the neck. Too, cygnet collars that look like over-sized lampshades can be slipped about the shoulders; soft ascots set into a slightly open neckline; deep or narrow cuffs attached to sleeves.

HIGH POLISH FABRICS

Coat fabrics lean to the luxurious side, with long and short fleeces, vicuna and cashmeres showing off their silken surfaces. Camel coats are way out front, followed by muted tweeds and polished looking worsteds.

Perfume A Must For All Brides

Your wedding day would scarcely be perfection with out fragrance. And so, fall brides, take care to select your perfume well in advance. You'll want to be sure that your groom is fond of your scent. Take note, during your engagement period, of which scent he seems to like the most. That's the one for your wedding day.

Gather together the matched fragrance items, toilet water, dusting powder or talc, bath softener, sachet, and soap, to carry out your perfumes scent. Drop hints to your girl friends before your shower and you'll be sure of these luxurious things for your wedding and honeymoon.

CLOUD OF SCENT

To walk down the aisle surrounded by fragrance, spray the air around you last thing before you leave your dressing room. Walk through this mist and it will cling to your gown. Your veil will be already scented with the same fragrance if you'll tuck a sachet pillow into it's box the moment it arrives form the store. Do the same for your gown. Or saturate a cotton ball with your perfume, let it dry thoroughly and use it for a satchet.

When you pack for your honeymoon, make sure that dusting powder won't spill by placing a cleansing tissue on the powder, with edges extending beyond the sides of the box, before you put the lid on it.

New Shapes Punctuate Shoe Styling

This fall, fashion's look of elegance has inspired a new and exciting flair in shoe styling. This is definitely the year of the pretty foot.

Shoes glitter with jewelled trims. They gleam in dramatic burnished leathers. They're slim . . . tapered . . . elegant.

Perhaps the most dramatic departure is the staccato note of shining satin on suede. This satin trim, an important part of fall's polished look, appears throughout the showings.

Rhinestones, braid, nailheads, and embroidery add interest to shoes from glamorous at-home flats to lofty-heeled after-five styles.

The ever-increasing trend toward at-home evenings and entertaining, has led to a new and popular field of shoe fashion — the evening casual.

The only casual things about these shoes is the easy comfort and flat heel. There, any similarity to the daytime casual ends. For these at-home shoes might have come from an exotic harem —with their heavily-jewelled and embroidered designs . . . their slim thongs . . . their look of glamor.

Jewel-ladden black velvet . . . gold or silver kid . . . lustrous satin—all lend themselves beautiful to these shoes fashions designed to spark at-home lounging outfits.

In daytime shoes, silhouette interest ranks high. Equally fashion-important are the elegantly-pointed toes and the more tailored square toe.

The trim pump is perennially a favorite and is being shown in the shell. square-throat, V-throat, and sling D'Orsay.

Brown holds top position as the strongest color and appears in a wide array of shades, from vibrant tones to deep walnut browns. Black suede is, as always, a favorite and is often high-lighted with a gleaming trim.

Heels are extremely important as part of the shoe design. A planed-back heel is liked for the square-toe shoe, and a rounded triangle for tapered toes. Cone-shaped heels are attracting much attention.

Coordinated shoes and handbags are featured fashions for all occasions. Camel hair and brown calf, patent and suede combinations, tweed and leather are striking duos in daytime styles.

Handbags reflect the same feeling for elegance that characterizes shoe fashions. The tapered shoe silhouettes have inspired handbags with a new longer, slimmer line. Softer styling in handbags complements the pretty look in shoes.

The fall evening sandals are open in styling — and open to compliments. Thin straps, often sparked with rhinestones, give the shoes a delicate feminine look. Tall, slimly-tapered heels and the newly-important and so flattering T-strap design do much to emphasize the elegant note in shoe fashions.

HANKY NEWS

To thicken eyelashes or brows, brush every night with castor oil. Add a few drops of perfume if the odor bothers you.

Fall Features Brown Tones

Brown is the color keyword this autumn, whether it's a creamy beige in blouses, a smoky tan tunic coat or a dramatic sable cocktail dress.

The new long-hair tweeds feature a brown-toned background. In accessories from leather to velvet, the hightest browns are highlighted. Two shades of brown make the most exciting harmony news; a wonderful oatmeal is a "must" to play against darker tones.

Especially keyed to the regal trend in feminine fashions, however, are the lustrous deep jewel tones. Emerald green, ruby red, sapphire blue and amethyst purple star in almost every popular fabric, in every group of feminine attire from formals to sportswear and even into high fashion lingerie.

Black is at its glossiest this fall and a pastel movement provides a fascinating coat story. Small, asymmetric prints in linings contribute to the ensemble look when they are matched to a dress or a blouse.

Paisleys, bold stripes and print-and-solid combinations are newsiest using two or three shades of one major color. Even staple corduroys, wools and velveteens offer new color interest in prints, flocked patterns and stripes.

While women of fashion will dress for an under-stated elegance in color, the younger set will experiment with more daring combinations.

but not the full story

UNTIL YOU READ these words you might not know that these girls are nurses . . . Navy nurses . . . and that they have been taking swimming lessons . . . and that the final lesson consists of jumping fully clothed into the water to learn how to swim under emergency conditions.

A picture, a headline, a brief announcement can whet your appetite for news, but cannot satisfy your hunger for the whole story.

It takes words—sometimes many—to satisfy your curiosity about the who, what, when and where of any picture or headline.

Words bring meaning, words bring understanding, words bring news. Newspapers bring news.

Only the newspaper brings you full stories day after day—pictures and sufficient words.

Only the newspaper can bring you the full story as soon as your appetite is aroused. Fast, without delay.

● This goes for advertising, too. The brief message that hangs in the air . . . or the brief headline here or there . . . may indeed have a momentary interest.

But the newspaper ad carries the brass-tacks quality, the urgency of the newspaper itself.

Like a news item, the ad can be examined and re-examined. Can be read any time. Anywhere. Can be clipped and carried in a pocket or pocketbook.

Like the news, the ads themselves have the same important local quality. No other medium can match this quality.

Add to all this the fact that the newspapers reach everybody in town, and you know why the newspaper is the nation's most powerful advertising medium.

The newspaper is always "first with the most"

Formula For Fall Plays Up Soft And Narrow Look, Extra Details Add Elegance

By LEE AMES

There's a wondrous exciting mobility to the fashion themes for fall. News-making in detail . . . richness of fabric . . . elegance of color . . . brightness of trims . . . all point up a Fashion scene, that is ever moving—never constant in its total mood.

First introduced by Christian Dior in his last spring's showings, this gracious silhouette has stem-slim skirt lines that follow the torso closely up into a moulded, fuller, bust line.

Definitely a "new" look, the "tulip" has blossomed forth into dresses, suits and sportswear collections.

The column look . . . the tulip . . . and the sheath variations—all stress the narrow. narrow line. But this fall—it's narrow with "know-how."

Deep drapings, panel pleats "inverted pleats" back, low flares—all accent the narrow look without sacrificing one iota of flattery or shapeliness.

To further accent these narrow skirt lines, come a new blossoming of flattering, uncluttered necklines. Yoke detailing, seaming construction, pin tucks . . . framed, deep-dipping necklines and stand-away treatments—all flatter milady handsomely.

The slim, fairly-long bodice shown in many a collection—eases its way into the slender tunic—often with a neat skirting of pleats a-plenty.

The tiny waist is played up with midriff lacings, nipped-in detailing . . . arched fullness at the hipline — molded belts — draped and wrapped effects—for an enchantly feminine look that belies that crisper slimness of the column silhouette.

To further dramatize the silhouette story for Fall '53 — are figure accenting fabrics — many of them borrowed from fashion history's richest eras.

Brocades ... Peau de Soie's... richly-surfaced crepes.....crisp taffetas....crisper failles....dramatic laces.....rich, luxurious velvets and velveteens.

Sparkling with fiery splendor are trims of the season! Jets, sequins, rhinestones, metallics, embroideries and pearls — all enhance the smartest fashions in suave simplicity or in regal elegance.

Black once again comes sveltly into its own! Keynote of the simplest to the dressiest fashions, black takes on new polish in a host of exciting new treatments.

No fashion story would be complete without the talking point of fur! Watch it frame necklines from the simplest sweaters to the most elegant suits. See it take on importance in the accessories picture — with tie slides....little muffs....tails for collar trim.... little bow ties....the little fur purse....and in a dozen other luxurious ways.

And, it's a rich season of winning combinations! Look for leather and tweeds....tweeds with knits... wool with satin....satin with velvet....plaids and solids ....wool with velvet....fur with everything.....tweedy cottons with white linens. Place your money on any of these combo's and you'll pick a fashion winner every time.

More and more of the costume look is pre-eminent in Fall fashion showings....there is the winter suit — skirt, co-ordinated blouse and a fur-lined short coat. You'll find the soft wool dress, complete with fully lined column or wrapped coat....there is the gently-bared shoulder with its own little bodice jacket or short coat!

The matching or contrasting weskit adds grace notes to fitted or boxy suits....the sweater now vies for attention with the jersey blouse as fall-into-winter suit components.

Separate stoles still are integral parts of the ensemble theme —whether teamed in matching wools for coats or suits....in furs ....or match-mating skirts or dresses!

Fashion is never still this Fall—it's a mobile mood....a dramatic feeling—that spells luxury and elegance for Mrs. and Miss America!

Winged Look Makes News Fall Dresses

Nonetheless, this constitutes a half measure, for the sylph-like symmetry of the sheath remains, while jutting panels, bursts of pleats and bustle illusions are concentrated at the back or side.

Bodice tops, influenced last spring by tulip treatments, have increased their femininity through drapery. Newest is the chalice silhouette from Paris, which enhances shoulders by using crosswise or hammock drapes, giving fullness to the bust line.

High marked midriffs are designed in many ways to break the stark simplicity of slenderness: curved belts at the natural waist in back proceed forward just under the bust line; short half jackets, ending at the sides, jut out in back or front; inserts of fabric and color contrasts further the impression of top width.

Crepe returns for afternoon in almost every key collection. With it comes the favorite black dress of simple, effective lines, plus the season's newest luxury ideas in the details. Satin is the gleaming point that highlights black, and its lustre can be found in bibs and scarves of pastel shades that set into the new softened, widened necklines.

Wools for daytime wear are supple, with soie de laine, jersey, chiffon tweed and broadcloth important. Silk barathea, taffeta, peau de soie and satin interpret dresses for later hours.

PARIS INFLUENCE

Fall Fashions Palette Strikes Bold, Polished Color Schemes

The flowing richness of jewels . . . the smoky radiance of mist . . . the sparkle of vintages . . . the nudeness of the blonde tones and the color-magnificence of an autumn flower garden—are the focal points of this magnficent fashion season.

From the soft nudeness to the rich, golden blondes of cashmere and its family . . . come the pace-setting accent colors of the season.

Beautiful blues—forget-me-not shades to deep and regal, vivid hues . . . show up in key collections.

Rosey-reds —scarlet—geranium —are top ranking hues that take to the lavish trims of fur, jet and contrast fabrics.

Aqua . . . turquoise . . . emerald . . . ruby . . . topaz—are but a few of the precious jewel tones interpreted in the sumptuous fabrics for Fall!

The "well-browned" look is a colorful one as Fashion does the brown theme to a turn! Look for chutney tones . . . walnut . . . cognac . . . desert earth . . . and amber—to set your brown theme. And, there's thrilling color refreshment in the cocoa, coffee and brandy browns.

Moss . . . fern and olive — as well as bronzy and citron green —are the "go greens" of the new season!

Rust . . . ginger . . . mocha and mustard are the spice tones that get special emphasis in coat and suit collections.

White gets special emphasis as a frosting color—in crisp brightness against black . . . in soft flattery against grey and in pure splendor against all the rich-toned shades of 1953's spectrum.

Bright and blazing — soft and misty—regal and rich—whatever the interpretation—they are the colors that give the sparkle, the elegance and the lustre to a gay, exciting fashion season!

Brims Generally Small, Curvaceous On Hat Styles

Rich materials and important silhouettes add formality and elegance to new hats for fall and winter. Even the most casual styles are dressed up by careful detailing and the use of beautiful fabrics.

A subtle increase in bulk gives more significance to smooth head-hugging silhouettes. Two basic crown shapes share the spotlight—one shallow and wide from side-to-side above the temples; the other narrow oval with interest concentrated deep at the back. The deep back silhouette is particularly effective in youthful off-face berets and dramatically draped turbans, but it also appears in extension—back pillboxes and sou'wester-type cloches.

Brims are generally small and curvaceous. The roller-breton, the cuffed pillbox and the "riding habit" cloche have a neat, demure look for tailored wear. For dramatic contrast, there are large, shapely "picture bonnets" of silky beaver, soleil or velvet.

The newest millinery texture is the sleek, polished surface. Slick and, gleaming satin and shiny felts are shown off in smoothly sculptured shapes, detailed with rich pleats and folds of turban-like swirling. For effective contrast with costumes of polished fabrics, there are smart hats of matte-finished velvet, felt, wool jersey, velveteen and suede.

Nothing takes color more beautifully or makes complexions seem smoother by contrast than a shaggy textured hat. Many will be fashioned of velvety velours, silky long-hair felts, angora and novelty materials with curled or combed softness. Among the appealing new felts are those with "frosted" surfaces of lighter-toned rabbit's hair and exotic iridescents with deep pile tipped by contrasting darker shades.

Warm golden yellows, bitter orange, scarlet and mossy greens make hats as bright as autumn leaves. All of the spice tones, ginger and cinnamon browns and a new blackened brown will be leaders. Beige tones are especially smart alone or in combinations.

For dressy wear, in addition to the jewel tones and glossy black, there will also be snowy whites and soft pastels, incluidng a flattering new apricot tone.

Trimmings are elegantly understated, blending into the design of most hats. But dressier millinery is elaborately embroidered with passementerie, pearls, jet, real-looking jewels and like tassels or pompoms of yarn or silk floss in all-over designs.

Leather is a new costume accent; and leather-trimmed hats are news along with all-leather ones. In the more formal mood of the season, these are usually fashioned of delicate dyed kidskin or supple doeskin.

Newer than rhinestone or sequin trim for daytime, is the use of subtly gleaming cut-steel, jet or copper beads in simple bandings of ladylike small buckles and pins. Feathers are used more often as a basic material than as soaring quills.

Autumn Hats Spotlight Complexion

BY ALICIA ART

If you are following fashion's dictates this fall you are hiding your locks under cloches, turbans or helmets. And this, of course means attention is being called to your complexion. Is your complexion all it should be?

Basic to facial skin care is frequent cleansing with thick soap suds. A quick lick with a face cloth once or twice a day will not do the trick.

You need to scrub well around the danger areas, chin, nose, hairline, and to cover the face and neck with the suds. After you have rinsed away every bit of soap, splash cold water on the face to stimulate circulation and bring a rosy glow to your cheeks. This routine should be followed at least once during the day as well as at night and in the morning.

Use a soap that contains lanolin if your skin is dry, and after the bedtime cleansing apply some lanolin lotion. If your skin is oily use an astringent, and should any blemishes mar the skin, apply a medicated lotion that heals and conseals before putting on your make-up base.

In applying cosmetics, remember you want to draw attention to your skin and your most attractive features. The new hats do have a dramatic air which you will want to match in your make-up, but take care that your cosmetics do not eclipse you.

FALL'S CLOSE-FITTING HATS demand lovely complexions. The first step to clear, smooth skin is (left) a thorough sudsing of the face at least three times a day. This girl is giving particular attention to the hairline, a danger spot. After rinsing away all suds and carefully applying her cosmetics, she dons her new helmet hat and exposes her brow and is ready (right) to put her face in the limelight.

I learned long ago that only Monarch Flour can get the best out of a non-yeast recipe

Several of my newly married friends have asked me, "Is there a secret to baking cakes and pastries so deliciously tender and light?" There is no secret, of course, you just need to know there's a difference between flours, and use the only flour that can give such splendid results.

The difference that Monarch Flour makes is quite noticeable. You see, Monarch Cake and Pastry Flour is specially milled from the softer kinds of wheat, so it's an extra fine flour. This means it's perfectly suited for all non-yeast baking.

For bread and rolls, an all-purpose flour is quite satisfactory, but only Monarch Flour can get the best out of a non-yeast recipe."

Record Crowd At YWCA For Open House

A record crowd of 175 onlookers was at the YWCA "Open House" Thursday evening to see exhibits of clubs and educational classes, a sample of the gymnasium activities, a swimming demonstration and to enjoy several ballet numbers as presented by ballet pupils from Port Hope.

Increased interest in the YW program, as evidenced by the much larger than usual attendance, is extremely gratifying to the staff members who have spent many hours planning details to please the public. Anyone who has a desire for a special class or club that was not listed should approach new program secretary Miss Orra Henan who may be able to fit them in, or will put the request on file for the mid-winter term.

She has already a ten-week class in oil painting with Mrs. Madeline Hambly as teacher, starting September 30th, a four-week aluminum tray course by Miss Marion Pound, starting October 26th, and instruction in smocking is to be given by Miss Helen Gerrard, commencing October 19th.

It was thought that the ballet exhibition was one of the main drawing cards of the evening. Ballet classes by Mary McMillan, director of the Bluestone School of Ballet at Port Hope, are to be given Saturdays at the Y this year. Previous to open house there were 27 registrations for the dancing which would make up two classes for the morning. Further registrations will be provided for in a third class.

Miss McMillan presented pupils from her Port Hope school in ballet to "Excerpts from Chopiniana", then joined them in "A Flirtatious Hoedown" and in "Hits From Oklahoma."

Miss Bea Pelsis gave a sample of her advanced gym work, also in the gym, and Miss Roselyn Stone, had arranged a swim demonstration in the pool by members of the Y Senior Swim Club and by the Peterborough Ornamental Swim Club under direction of Mrs. James Forbes.

Folk dancing by the Heather Club, a group of Scots who have been meting the past year at the Y, was the active interest feature in the recreation room display.

Members' Council of the Y provided the refreshments which were served in the Green Room with Mrs. C. A. Craig, convener, and members of the social committee assisting. Mrs. S. L. Smoke and Mrs. G. A. Gillespie poured the tea and coffee.

Of interest was the announcement that So-Ed is to start October 15th this year with registration on that date at the Queen Mary Auditorium, and John Fisher as the opening speaker.

Miss M. Preston Tells Soroptimists How To Plan Trip

The Soroptimists were given an outline of what one can see and do in a month's carefully planned tour abroad by the after-dinner speaker at their first fall meeting Thursday evening.

The details of her own most enjoyable tour during August were told by Miss Muriel Preston. She spent ten days in London, England, "and I loved it," she said; then went to The Hague, Holland, Brussels in Belgium and Geneva and Bern in Switzerland. A planned visit to Paris had to be taken off the list because of the railway strike there.

Re-crossing the English Channel, Miss Preston went first to Dublin, Ireland, and then to Edinburgh where the Festival was in progress. She concluded her sightseeing at Glasgow and flew home from Prestwick airport in Scotland.

She gave the resume with the suggestion that "now is the time" to plan a similar tour for next summer. Mention of interesting meetings with tourists from various other countries strengthened her theme that travelling alone is more educational, as well as more fun.

"Being a librarian, I started the right way—with books," said Miss Preston. After reading up on what there is to see, she decided what she wanted to see and made a list. As she wished to see all the plays she could and some concerts, she allowed for this and planned accordingly. Other people would suit their own tastes, she suggested. She also had numerous art galleries on her list.

"It is important to know roughly how much money you can spend and the approximate cost of the activities and accommodations you plan," she advised. "Starting at least a year ahead enables you to book for the things you are interested in and the places you want to stay, and cut costs."

Miss Preston observed that Holland and Switzerland were more reasonable economically, and that "They made you feel welcome, not as though they wanted your money but not you, as was the feeling tourists had in some places."

Peterborough merchants might take note of the tourist's enthusiasm for window boxes of colorful geraniums and gay summer flowers that were on all the store windows in England. In London there were many that had been worked out in a red, white and blue color scheme for the coronation, Miss Preston noticed.

She was introduced to the club by Miss Musa Cox and was thanked for coming by Miss Myrtle Sargent.

President Mrs. Eva Brackenridge held a brief business session at close of the dinner meeting.

ST. PETER'S AND ST. MARY'S

St. Peter's and St. Mary's Parent-Teacher Association held their first meeting of the current school year in St. Peter's grade school, Tuesday evening. President M. H. Glover was in the chair. Rev. Sister Anna Marie opened with prayer.

The Parent-Teacher councillors appointed by the executive for this year were announced as follows: Miss M. Downer, Mrs. F. Dorris, Mr. J. Guerin and Mr. John O'Brien. Mrs. C. Whibbs was appointed chairman of the visiting committee.

Guest speaker, the Rev. L. M. Dubbery, gave an interesting talk on "Schools in England." Teachers are scarce in England, stated Father Dubbery, and to cope with the situation, the educational requirements for teachers have been minimized. Although the government pays the teachers, the church must finance their school buildings and equipment, which do not meet the standard of Canadian schools.

The speaker was thanked by Mr. John O'Brien.

Room attendance prizes were won by grade one, St. Mary's School, and grade seven, St. Peter's School.

Lunch was served under the supervision of Mrs. H. C. Ephgrave and her committee, assisted by the room mothers of the various grades.

Boundy of Port Perry again displayed her superiority as a competitive cook, as she captured 29 first prizes in the domestic science classes at the Lindsay central exhibition. Her entires ranged from bread to preserves to frozen products as she scored even higher than last year, when she was also the leading entrant in the class.

Mrs. Edgar Martin had 11 first placings, Mrs. Aileen Gregory of Lindsay eight, Mrs. W. D. Wilson of RR 1, Peterborough, five, Mrs. P. Edwards, Blackwater, F. A. Reeds, of Lindsay and Earl Brethour of Blackwater, two each and John Hogg, Lindsay, Mrs. W. E. Stewart, Lindsay, Mrs. N. R. Brigg, Ida, Mrs. R. C. Card, and Mrs. L. Corley, both of Lindsay, one first each to round out the scoring in the large class.

Mrs. Donald A. Elborne of Regina, Sask.; and Lloyd Ayre, of Bowmanville shared first honours in the ladies work competition. Both had eigth first placing for their entries in the various classes of knitting, crochetting and sewing. Next in order of first placing was Mrs. Golden Andrews of Norwood with six.

Mrs. Irwin Smith of Regina, and Mrs. L. Killingbeck of Peterborough, both had first places while Mrs. Edgar Martin, of Fenelon Falls, Mrs. Reg Boundy, of Port Perry and Mrs. Roy Parker of Norwood had three each. Mrs. Mildred Neal of Lindsay had two firsts, while Miss Hane Magee of Omemee, Barbara Miller of Lindsay, Carlos Tamblyn of Orono, Mrs. George Baird, of Blackwater, Mrs. M. Niblett of RR 1, Peterborough and Mrs. B. Wendover, Orillia had one first place each.

In the Women's Institutes special, for various group projects, Fenelon Fall, W. I. was first, followed by Fowler's Corners, North Mr. and Mrs. Allan J. Payne caygeon and Lindsay.

Style-Conscious Girls Purchase "Trial" Lines

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—It's fun to shop here for winter fashion in early autumn. Then smart women snap up those "trial" lines that don't appear again.

When the season's couture secrets are made known at the end of July, manufacturers pick a few special lines for experimental purposes. These are not repeated if they don't catch on.

Such "flops" are generally styles a little too chic, a little too out of the ordinary, to win acceptance with the multitude who make a best-seller. When popular coats and dresses sell as low as £8 and £3 respectively, manufacturers try to avoid repeating any style that is not quick-selling.

STYLE-CONSCIOUS GIRLS

Thus, there are good pickings for London's keen-eyed style spotters, particularly mannequins, show girls and society hostesses. They go after the lines which didn't quite make the grade.

For the girls who get them, they are often winners. If they are repeated at all, it is usually in quality lines prices at double the original cost. A royal lady with a love for roaming the London stores in search of such special items is the Duchess of Kent.

With her keen appreciation of good styling, the duchess may often buy a manufactured article at a price working girls could afford. Worn under a mink coat, with a spray of diamonds and some of the clever accessory touches that make her one of the world's best-dressed women, the dress would be hard to spot.

The Queen took a tip from her aunt when planning her wardrobe for the Australian-New Zealand tour, cancelled by her father's death. Some of the cotton prints in her luggage then came from a British manufacturer, Horrockses, who also supplied dresses for the 1952 visit to the Far East made by the duchess.

ACCESSORIES HELP

It's no longer a "disgrace" for women in all walks of life to wear manufactured, rather than couture, fashions. No one blushes if two women turn up to the same affair in the same dress—but there are bad moments for the woman who picks the same dress as someone with no fashion sense in accessories.

Manufacturers predict this year's best-sellers will be the stylish wool jersey dresses priced at slightly more than £3 and up. For under £5 it's easy to pick a slim, button-neck dress in jersey that might be mistaken for such couture styles as the beige and brown herringbone tweed by Mattli, one of London's "big 10."

Canadian visitors to London frequently comment on the scope for bargains.

Typical is 25-year-old Jeannine Locke of Saskatoon and Ottawa who stopped off here on the way back to Canada from a tour that took her to Switzerland, France, Germany, Austria and Yugoslavia. "I think coat prices here are wonderful," she said, adding that she found fashionable tweeds at half the Canadian price.

Meet At Cottage

Members of the Excelsior Bible Class of St. James' United Church motored to Mrs. Gerald Cuffe's cottage at Fife's Bay Wednesday evening for the September meeting. They began with a devotional period in charge of Mrs. R. Booth. Appropriate readings were given by Mrs. S. Agnew and Mrs. N. Brown. President Mrs. Q. Dantzer welcomed all the members and took charge of business. Plans were made for a tea and bazaar to be held November 4th in the church school. Of Interest to Women

DOROTHY DIX

Confused By Two Romances Not Sure Which Man Wants

DEAR MISS DIX: Bert and I went steady for three years, though we had several breakups during that time. Three months ago, by mutual agreement, we parted to see if we were really in love. I began going out with Ray and Bert went with other girls. Then Bert came around one night, said he knew I was the one he loved, and asked me to marry him. We went together for a while and though I was sure I loved Bert, I missed Ray. I broke off with Bert again, am now going with Ray and wish I were back again with Bert. Do you think I have messed my life up completely, or would Bert go with me again if I wrote and told him how I felt? I am so mixed up, but hope you can unravel the problem for me. L. T.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Surely you realize yourself that it's always the man you aren't going with that holds the big attraction for you. When you're going with Bert it's Ray you hanker after, and vice versa. No one in the world can overcome the indecision for you. You must settle down to a session of fact-facing, to discover where your heart really belongs. It's very unfair to Bert to keep beckoning him on, then throwing him aside when you know he loves you. My conclusion is that neither boy has a permanent hold on your heart, but that some third young man will step into the picture with a charm that will leave absolutely no doubt in your mind. Vacillating affections, such as yours, have very dangerous implications. If you married one of these two lads, you'd spend the rest of your life wondering whether you made the right choice and yearning for the rejejcted suitor. My advice would be to drop both boys for a while and circulate among a new group.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My children are widely separated in age, my daughters being 19 and 21, while my little boys are 2 and 4. In dealing with the younger children, I find the parents of today vastly different than they were years ago. Mothers think nothing of getting right into the children's quarrels, always, of course, taking the part of their own small fry. My boys expect me to do this but I refuse. MRS. A. H.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: The change is not a fundamental one in parents, as you seem to think, but a difference in the individuals you are encountering. Its absurd for parents to get mixed up in childish squabbles, which usually end with the children's arms around each other and the elders in a fued. The rseponsibility of teaching youngsters right from wrong is a prime requisite of parenthood; the lessons are certainly futile when older folk can't see the distinction themselves. Continue your way of rearing your boys and ignore, as much as possible, those who disagree with you.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband is a handsome man. Before I married him, he had many girls and many dates. We often meet these "old flames," and I get very irked at the obvious attention they still pay my man. Should I divorce him, although he claims these women mean nothing to him?—Mrs. M. W.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Yours is a penalty that women pay for grabbing the catch of the season. You were mighty proud of yourself when this handsome Romeo capitulated to your charms. Be equally proud of him as a husband. You can't expect him to retire to solitary confinement just because he's married. Since he loves you, and is true, don't begrudge the also-rans the slight attention he gives them.

Guide To Miracle Fabrics

Characteristics	General Care	Special Handling
Nylon Durable, high abrasion and sun-resistance. Dye penetrates fibers. Curtains may tend to yellow eventually.	Hand wash if possible. Use lukewarm water. Machine wash in mesh bags. Minimum agitation. Don't spin or wring. Try to avoid ironing. If needed, use lowest temp. possible.	For yellowish cast use two tbsp. vinegar per gallon water in last rinse to dissolve detergent built-up in fibers. If this fails, yellowing due to iron heat and can't be erased.
Orlon Strong fibers, long-wearing, high abrasion and sun-resistance. Holds dye well. Natural ivory cast of fibers tends to show up after repeated washings of white curtains.	Hand wash if possible. Use lukewarm water. Don't spin or wring. Dry indoors or out. Use lukewarm iron if needed.	Spinning or wringing may set deep creases. Fabric doesn't absorb moisture so you can't dampen to iron out wrinkles.
Glass Fiber Excellent wear, fire-proof, dirt, dyes stay on surface. It is thought that chemical reaction of soot on white curtains turns fibers grey in time.	Wash separately from other clothes by hand in lukewarm or hot water. Use any detergent. Don't wring. Don't iron. Dry over clothesline.	Don't rub. May rub off surface dye or break off tiny glass fibrils when washing. Use swishing motion. Use care in slipping curtains on rods to avoid poking holes or breaking threads.
Vinyon Excellent wear, usually slick, dirt-resistant surface. Good for upholstery.	Washes easily with cloth dipped in warm water, all-purpose detergent.	Don't let fabric come in contact with much heat. Don't try to press or iron.
Dynel Blankets won't felt or shrink. Warm and lightweight. Will take fast color dyes. Fibers may tend to shed under friction or when wet.	Wash in conventional or automatic washer. Avoid prolonged agitation. Shorten spin cycle or loosen wringer tension. Use warm water, any good detergent.	Won't stand heat. Will tend to shrink up under satin blanket binding if warm iorn is used to press binding.
Acetate Solution-dyed acetate should have good resistance to sun-fading. Spun acetates have rougher texture, more resiliency than filament acetate. All take beautiful dyes in wide range fast colors. All much weaker when wet.	Wash in lukewarm water using mild detergent. Use gentle touch to avoid tearing. If necessary for stain removal, use one-quarter amount of bleach used for cottons and dilute with cool water. Don't soak in bleach.	All acetates have a low melting point. To avoid fusing fibers which produces shiny spots, set iron for low temperature, then disconnect when iron warms up.
Acetate Taffeta Wears well. Takes wide range of fast dye colors.	Dry clean.	Don't try to spot clean or iron at home. May permanently damage taffeta effect.
Rayon Wears well. May be dyed in fast colors. May be pre-shrunk. Much weaker when wet (up to 70 per cent).	Dry clean heavy drapes or when in doubt about washability. Spun rayon may shrink with machine agitation so handwash if possible. Filament rayon should be hand-washed. Use lukewarm water.	Apt to tear easily when wet so take it easy. When rayon combined with other fibers, treat as though all rayon.
Crease-Resistant Finishes Do impart a fine "hand" and fabrics treated with resin finishes tend to shed soil, wrinkle less. Will survive indefinite washings.	Wash according to type of fabric treated. AVOID THE USE OF CHLORINE BLEACHES. Synthetic finish retains chlorine. Iron heat converts chlorine to acid and fabric apt to fall apart.	If stains make mild bleaching imperative, get small packet of photographer's hypo from camera shop, dissolve in water, add to last rinse water. This reduces chlorine action. Let dry before ironing.

Readers' Friday Column By Mary Moore

Question: Would you look up your recipe for peach conserve with maraschino cherries in it? My copy was lost when we moved last fall. You might like to pass this one to your readers. When I'm caught short for dessert vanilla ice cream with peach conserve spooned over it is as quick and easy as anything I know. . .my grandmother used to preserve crabapples. They were whole in a thin syrup and I think had cloves and possibly other spices. They were a fruit, not a relish . . .done open kettle method. When I'm making crabapple jelly I use pectin but I think it make the jelly a shade too stiff. Have you a recipe that yells without pectin? . . . will Bartlett pears can satisfactorily in the oven? . . . Ethel S.

Answer: This recipe is the one which appeared August 21, 1953.

EXOTIC PEACH CONSERVE

Twelve large peaches, 3 oranges, 1 medium-sized bottle maraschino cherries, white sugar. Scald, peel and slice peaches. Peel oranges carefully and scrape off white pith with spoon. Shred it as fine as you would for marmalade. Cut the orange pulp finely. Cut the cherries in halves and add them and their juice. Measure. For each cup of fruit add 2/3 cup sugar. Bring to boiling point and boil about 25 minutes or until it has a transparent and slightly thickened appearance. Pour into sterile sealers and seal. I jam jars are used they must be sealed with new clean paraffin, and jars should be rolled to make a seal and second coating added when first is cold.

The only preserved crabapple recipe I have contains 1 cup vinegar. For those who are interested in Spiced Crabapples this could be increased to 2 cup vinegar and 1 cup of the water left out.

PRESERVED OR SPICED CRABAPPLES

Wipe 3 lbs. crabapples and steam until fairly soft. In a cheesecloth bag tie 1½ teaspoons cloves and 1½ teaspoons allspice berries. In the preserving kettle put 3 cups water, 1 cup each vinegar and sugar (or 2 cups each water and vinegar if you want it more of a pickle than a preverve). Add 1½ teaspoons ginger and bring to boiling point with the bag of spices in. Add cooked crabapples and let simmer 20 minutes. Remove spice bag and let stand overnight. Remove apples carefully with sterile spoon to sterile jars. Boil syrup until somewhat reduced, then pour it boiling hot over apples and seal.

This is an exact method and aaples must be weighed, for Crabapple Jelly:

CRABAPPLE JELLY

Wash crabapples, remove stems and blossom ends, weigh. Put in kettle and add an equal weight of water. Bring to boiling point, and boil gently until fruit is very soft. Strain through cheesecloth or jelly bag, Return the pulp to kettle, add water to cover and cook 15 minutes, stirring to prevent burning. Let stand 10 minutes and strain. Add first extraction of juice to this juice and strain again through 4 thicknesses of cheesecloth. Measure and boil down to two cups of juice for each 1 lb. of apples originally used. Put in kettle and for every 2 cups juice add 1¾ cups sugar. Stir until sugar is dissolved and boil rapidly to 220 deg. Fahr. Skim and pour into sterile glasses and seal with paraffin. If desired 2 cups juice and 1¾ cups sugar may be made into jelly at one time—this reduces risk of it being overboiled. This makes clear tender jelly.

Bartlett pears may be canned successfully in oven.

Question: Would you please give me your recipe for dill pickles in a crock?

Mary I.

Answer:

CROCK DILLS

Fifty dill-size cucumbers, ¼ cup salt, 8 cups water, grape leaves, dill blossoms, 20 cups water, 4 cups vinegar, 1 cup salt, garlic, 2 small hot peppers. Wash cucumbers and leave whole. Make brine by adding ¼ cup salt to 8 cups water. Cover cucumbers with brine and leave overnight. Combine vinegar, 20 cups water, and salt and bring to boil. Let this stand overnight. In the morning drain brine from cucumbers. Line crock with grape leaves, put brined cucumbers in in layers, with grape leaves between them, adding dill and garlic and the hot peppers as you layer the cucumbers. Pour vinegar-water-salt liquid over to cover. Weight down with plate, and protect with cover. These keep indefinitely in cool place and are ready in about 5 weeks.

There is no death

"For many years," says Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, "I have been recording a series of incidents which bear out the conviction that life, not death, is the basic principle of our universe."

October Reader's Digest brings you a condensed excerpt from Dr. Peale's best-seller, "The Power of Positive Thinking." Teen Fashions Have Detail

Look to the little things in teen fashions. They're making news this season on every dress, coat, suit and hat a girl will wear.

Take angora, for example. This favorite fuzzy knit is trimming edges on collars and cuffs, showing up on hats, and appearing as embroidery on her favorite sweaters and soft blouses. Pretty complement to tweeds is fringe, edged along a front seam or sewn in several rows to flatter a coat closing.

Leather in capeskin, suede and patent is lashed to pockets and buttons or applied to a dress or coat for a lustrous look at the neck or belt line. And its smartest use is in the linings of jackets and coats.

Fur in inexpensive varieties is being used accessory-wise for a softening addition to top a collar on a suit or dress, even as you will find it in mother's fashions. Little furry pom-poms can also be attached to the shoulder like a decorative pin.

GLOVES WILL CO-ORDINATE

Gloves can go hand in hand with coats or hats, and the Fall styles rate high in comfort and interest. Deerskin palms with hand-crocheted back, two-tone leather effects, whip-stitched sidewalls, slip-ons, deep centre slits and button backs provide the right gloves for the right time, place and purpose.

THE EXPERTS SAY:

Cosmetic Trade Booming Big Stores Increase Space

By JOAN BARBERIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The cosmetics trade is batting in the big-money league with the shelves loaded.

The head of the cosmetics section of a large Toronto department store said he had just increased the space given to cosmetics for women, and the next to expand will be the cosmetics section for men. This expert incidentally said the men's cosmetics such as powders and shaving lotions should be called just that, not "toiletries."

Novel packaging, itself a big industry that goes hand-in-glove with cosmetics, is getting a firm grip on the men's cosmetics. There are jars of after-shave lotion that look like cocktail shakers, and shaving soap in what looks like a miniature ice-bucket.

FANCY STUFF

An enormous black bottle of after-shave lotion, with handsome gold lettering, was selling at $12.50.

But the cosmetics department chief, H. C. Peacock, said that while prices of some cosmetics are high, the industry has increased prices as a whole by only about 20 per cent since 1939.

Hair tints, shampoos and tonics have soared in popularity during the last year. "There is also a trend back to natural bristles in tooth and hair brushes," he said. "Many persons feel the bristles do a better job."

A soft plastic brush for washing hair is new on the market, and there is a comb with a thick slab of lanolin in its teeth "to tone up the hair." Soft nylon face brushes, about 3½ inches long, are also on the counters.

Among other new ideas found in a survey in Toronto, nylon has been put into nail polish "to make it more durable." There are also emery boards in shades of soft grey, yellow and pink.

Elastic rayon mitts with nylon trim to wear over creamed hands while sleeping, have a matching nightcap to cover curlers.

Perfume, of course, is still a top attraction. The most expensive bottle we could find in a short trip was $75—contents 1¾ ounces.

"Girls love to work in the cosmetics section," said Mr. Peacock. As if we didn't know.

FINISHING TOUCHES

Trousers hang best when supported by suspenders, and you can choose from a wide variety of styles and colors to suit your taste. To complete the picture of the well-dressed man there is a wide array of new designs in leather belts, new buckles, elastic belts, smart-looking cuff links and the new smaller tiebars.

PETERBOROUGH PROUDLY SALUTES YOU

THREE-TIME WINNERS OF

THE MANN CUP

Emblematic of Canadian Senior Lacrosse Supremacy

1951 - 1952 - 1953

All Canada Is Proud Of Your Record!

Trailermen Second Team To Capture Mann Cup Three Years In Succession

The Petes now, must be rated a co-e of the two best senior "A" box lacrosse clubs in the game's history. The Peterborough squad of the past three seasons has compiled a record that only one other club—the Orillia Terriers of the middle 1930s—can match in Canada. In the world, too, for that matter, but then the boxla sport is played only in this country. That record is three straight Mann Cup championships — Canadian senior "A" lacrosse titles three years in a row.

Orillia Terriers did it in 1934-35-36 with such great players as the Curran brothers, Piper Bain, McArthur, Kelly and the rest. The Petes did it in 1951 and 1952 as Peterborough Timbermen and this year as the Petes' Trailermen, under new sponsorship.

TWO OF THE BEST

There have been other great boxla teams in the last two decades, teams like New Westminster, Vancouver, Brampton and St. Catharines, and some took the coveted cup twice, but only Orillia of the mid 30s and Peterborough of the early 50s accomplished this feat three straight years. The Petes, under Coach Don Crowe, won it for the first time in '51 in Vancouver over the Combines four games to three. The next year, under Coach Bob Thorpe, they ousted Vancouver Pilseners, in four straight games in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens. Bob Thorpe again led them to the crown this year in Victoria against the Victoria Shamrocks.

Arguments in lacrosse circles will rage for years to come on the comparative strength and greatness of these two winners of the Mann Cup three years in a row, Orillia and Peterborough. But it is an endless and unsatisfactory argument. They were both great clubs. The present Petes are great lacrosse champions. They are better now than last year's team or the 1951 championship squad. If they stick together, they should be greater still next year. The reason is that these all-star lacrossers are just at their peak now and gaining experience every campaign. They work together perfectly, there being no jealousies or bickering among the players. And they are still in the prime of life as athletics go, averaging about 25 years in age. They should star for several years to come.

GOOD EXECUTIVE

The Petes had a fine executive this season—and a good sponsor in Harry McGinness, manufacturer here of trailers. The club president for the third year running was Bob Peirson, who sponsored the 1951 and 1952 teams. Vice-presidents are Paul Irwin and Gord Dobbin. Mick Magee acted as secretary and co-manager, the other manager being Bob (Pup) Curtin. Howard McLean again was the capable treasurer. Others on the executive were: Pete King, Ken Kingston, Jack Gainey, Gar Braund, Jim Goldie and Dave Kerr. The team trainer is Gunner Lynch. Dr. Jack Epping acted as club physician.

The Trailermen's schedule started early in May, and they played steadily, two and three games a week until the eastern final playoffs were over, having a week's rest then before flying west for the Mann Cup series. They lost but five games in the 30-game senior schedule, finishing in first place, ahead of St. Catharines, Orillia, Fergus, Mimico and Brampton in that order.

MADE IT FAST

Proving they weren't playing for big home playoff gates, the Thorpe team swept Orillia Yorks (a Toronto team transplanted) into the discard in four straight of the best-of-seven eastern semi-finals. St. Catharines did the same with Fergus. In eastern finals, the Petes dropped but one game, winning the set 4-1. They were just too powerful for any lacrosse club in Canada. Several of their schedule losses came early in the season before they got rolling right, and another in late July when they were short a number of regulars due to factory holidays.

The team used four former juniors from time to time, Gary and Brian Robinson, Grant Burns and Rock Batley. They also used several present juniors a few times during the holiday period. But mainly they stuck to their regulars of the previous year, though adding Derry Davies of St. Kitts and Ken Croft of Orillia as Mann Cup series replacements for Jerry Fitzgerald (who was teaching in school) and Ike Hildebrand, off to the pro hockey training grind.

SUITED THEM

The six-man style of lacrosse, tried out by the OLA the last third of the schedule and all through playoffs, was the Petes' dish. They took right to it and played better lacrosse than when seven men were on the floor at once for the team. In fact, all season they used but one defenceman at a time on the floor, preferring to field four forwards, all being good checkers and two-way players.

They had jovial Lloyd (Moon) Wootton in goal again, gunning for his fourth straight Mann Cup—as he, Russ Slater and Curly Mason had helped Owen Sound win it before they came to Peterborough for the '51 season. Moon is still tops for senior lacrosse goalies in Canada. Their defencemen included such young but experienced aces as Harry Wipper, Nip O'Hearn, Jerry Fitzgerald and Lou Nickle. Any rival club would lay a lot of money on the line for this quartet of defenders, everyone being a competent attacker, too.

BUNCH OF STARS

Look at the galaxy of star forwards the club used: Ross Powless (who led the club in scoring), speeding young Roger Smith, tricky Ike Hildebrand, Curly Mason—who is tops at getting faceoff draws—canny Russ Slater, hustling Don Ashbee, Coach Bob Thorpe, experienced Dootch Vitarelli, and, of course, the four ex-juniors. Mick Magee was used a few times, also, though he had supposedly retired a year ago. Joe Hickson was the valuable subgoalie. Bev. Groves dropped out during the first half of the season.

This is the team which has brought honor to Peterborough capturing three Canadian senior sports' championships in three years. This is the team that has the largest following of any sports club at any time in this city. These are the champion Petes.

LOVER OF STEAKS—Rotund Lloyd (Moon) Wootton, Petes' ace goalie, is seen here smiling broadly as he sits down to a big steak after a lacrosse match. High on the list of likes of Mr. Wootton comes steaks, the bigger the better.

Technical Talk

CHINGFORD, England (CP)—The Walthamstow and Chingford Chess Club is sold on chess by telephone. The club engaged a telephone line for four hours for a match against Southend at a cost of 32 shillings. It would have cost the players three times as much for rail fares for an ordinary match.

Eat Honey For Energy

Lacrosse, Canada's national game, has long been recognized as requiring more stamina and endurance than almost any other sport. Peterborough Trailermen, newly crowned 3 time Mann Cup Winners, give a great deal of credit for their success to the fact that their players have been receiving regular quantities of honey—the ideal natural food for athletes.

Sports College, the nationally known organization for the promotion of Canadian sport, in a recent survey announced that honey was the best energy-producing sweet to give to athletes.

The Detroit Red Wings, World Hockey Champions, regularly have honey on the training table.

If you are a member of an athletic team, ask your coach to serve honey regularly and see the difference in your performance. In fact everyone should eat plenty of honey, nature's own energy producing food. Make honey a regular part of your diet. It helped Peterborough win the Canadian Lacrosse Championship. It will give you more energy too.

Some Memorable Lacrosse Games Between Great Teams

When One Team Had Scored 3 Goals Game Ended In Early Days of Lacrosse

Ten years after the first lacrosse club was organized in Peterborough the local teams were taking on the best in the country and one of these games took place in 1882. It was a Monday early in October and the game was played in the PAAA grounds in Ashburnham. The opposition was none other than the Montreal Shamrocks, hailed as one of the great teams of that day.

Bill Rudkins scored the only Peterborough goal in the two games with the famous Irishmen. A game in those days ended when one team had scored three goals. Although the team that played here was the Shamrocks' Intermediates, that is the second of the club's four teams, they held the world championship for their class. Probably they were not the peers of the great senior team that included Paddy Green, Mike Creegan and the Lally boys, but they were fleet and rugged and expert exponents of the game.

LOST IN MONTREAL

Peterborough had made a trip to Montreal and lost by 3-0. Such was the preliminary to the Shamrocks' visit to Peterborough, and for the occasion the town shut up shop. For lacrosse then was the public's favorite game, although cricket had a large following, and baseball, too, was quite generally played.

The Shamrocks were welcomed with every hospitality, and at 3 p.m. the two teams paraded from the City Hall, with the Fire Brigade band in the lead, across the Hunter Street bridge to the old cricket ground. Ahead of the Shamrocks went their [illegible]nner, symbolic of the world lacrosse championship and a perpetual challenge to all comers.

PETERBOROUGH TIED SCORE

The game began at 3:30 o'clock, and from the outset the Shamrocks displayed the smartness that was their reputation. They scored their first goal at the end of 33 minutes. The visitors' defence was like a stonewall, so Rudkins tried a shot from outside, the ball bounding between the flags, tieing the score. Shamrocks went ahead again in nine minutes, and it was after five o'clock when the teams faced off for the fourth game, as the goals were then called.

George Giroux dropped back into goal, and Peterborough played the foe on even terms for another 30 minutes, when the match was declared a draw, because neither team had scored three goals. Besides, it had been decided beforehand to cease hostilities at 5:30.

For Peterborough the result was a moral victory, with only a score of 2-1 against them. After supper as guests of the Peterborough Club the Shamrocks left for home at 7:40 p.m., and so delighted were they with the reception and entertainment that they sent a letter of appreciation a few days later, acknowledging the cordial hospitality of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club and the citizens generally.

On November 10 of that year the club gave a farewell dinner in the Choate House to its secretary, William Baillie. The president, A. D. Braithwaite, was chairman. J. R. Stratton was one of the speakers as were also Henderson, Robertson, McEntee and John Corkery.

TIED THE METROPOLITANS

Another memorable engagement was with the Metropolitans of Ottawa on September 8, 1884. Peterborough had gone to Brockville in July on an excursion with the IOOF and were completely routed. It was one of those poor games which the best of teams sometimes get "out of their systems." Ottawa's goals came quickly in three minutes, seven minutes and three minutes, hardly a workout, and play over in 13 minutes. On their way home Peterborough drubbed the Okas of Belleville in three straight goals. Their team was composed of Joe Giroux, Percy Myles, Mike Tierney, Jack Howden, W. J. Scott, Dr. A. Yelland, Jim Sheehy, Dick Kelly, "Dod" Fortye, Kit Rutherford, W. Rudkins and George Giroux.

SCORED ON OWN GOAL

Well, the Mets came to Peterborough on September 8 and won a most inconclusive game by 3-2. All the customary formalities, of band, procession crowds, including many women, were observed, and Ottawa went out and scored two goals, the first four minutes, and the second in five. It seemed a repetition of the Brockville disaster. However, a Peterborough attack produced a goal in 17 minutes, the ball finally going to Yelland who shot as Rudkins momentarily held the goal tender's stick.

That goal was a tonic to Peterborough and they battled away for an hour and eight minutes finally tieing the score. And then as the town's supper hour was overdue, the Petes scored on their own goal from a scrimmage near the flags, and of course Ottawa was declared the winner. Rudkins suffered a broken collar bone, and many of the players showed red and blue souvenirs of the long struggle.

WON IN OTTAWA

And after that setback Peterborough went right down to Ottawa on Sept. 25, 1885 and trimmed the Mets on their own field. They rolled away from Russell House in a big omnibus singing "Goodbye My Lover, Goodbye," the big song hit of that time, "Jersey City", "Star of the Evening" and other favorites that invited basses and tenors to do their worst.

The Marquis of Lansdowne Governor-General, had faced the ball at 10:45 a.m., and Ottawa scored first in three minutes. Kit Rutherford evened it up in four minutes. The "Mets" went ahead again in seven minutes, and Peterborough with a full share of the play again tied the score, Rutherford getting his second goal. The fifth and deciding goal was scored by Billy Scott, and Peterborough had wiped out the disgrace of Brockville. It was a great day. The team saw all the Capital had to offer and arrived home at 6:45 o'clock the next morning.

At that early hour they were greeted at the station by a crowd of supporters who with the city band blaring in triumph marched up to the Windsor Hotel, and sometime afterward the players went to their homes, and so to work.

On August 11, 1885, the Shamrocks of Montreal defeated the Ontarios of Toronto here by 3-0. It was a feature of the Civic Holiday celebration. On August 20 of that year the Excelsiors of Brampton, champions of the Northern District, came to town and trounced the Petes in three straight "games." But the second team that day beat Perth by 3-0. The Juniors were: Joe Phelan, J. Hall, P. Arrands, J. Caninng, A. Rose Frank Larone, F. Traynor, Wm. McAvelia, T. Giroux, Joe and Bob Begley and Harry Neil.

BEAT U. S. CHAMPIONS

On August 26, 1885, the senior Peterboroughs won from the St. Paul team, champions of the United States, by 3-0. Ruf Stevenson was in goal, and Joe Henderson scored all three for Peterborough. In September they beat the Checkers of Beaverton 3-0, Henderson getting two goals and Dick Kelly one. The victory wiped out the trimming by Beaverton in June of that year, when the supporters of the team were recalling the splendid period of 1882-4 when they had first won the Midland championship from Orillia and thereafter ran out a great string of victories until the Checkers demonstrated one early summer day that even the mighty can be tumbled from their high places.

However, the September score in Beaverton restored the team to Peterborough's confidence, and they were welcomed home that night with a great parade, with fireworks and band, and George Giroux presented a bouquet of roses to Harry LeBrun on behalf of the girls who worked in the Le Brun tailor shop.

TIE WITH CANNINGTON

Peterborough had received a challenge from Cannington, the home of many fine lacrosse players in those days and Peterborough faced them here on September 22. The visitors scored the first goal in 22 minutes; Kit Rutherford put the locals on even terms in eight minutes, but Cannington forged ahead with another goal in six minutes. Dick Kelly tied it up in 12 minutes, and the game ended 2-2, but according to the rules, was awarded to Peterborough. Incidentally one of the Cannington goals was disputed, but it was allowed, and the goal umpire was displaced.

And in the final game of the season, on October 7, 1885, at the Driving Park, now Exhibition Park, which had been opened in 1884, Richmond Hill brought down a strong team for an Ontario championship game and went home with a 3-0 victory.

A JUNIOR TEAM

In one match they defeated Norwood 3-2, the goals being scored in 18 minutes; 20 seconds, 36 minutes; 23 minutes and 51 minutes. Another day they beat Millbrook by three straight goals in just six minutes of actual play. The teams were on the field only 12 minutes.

Two local junior teams played on August 18, 1884 for the W. A. Sanderson Cup, the Independents winning by 3-0, from the Cretes, a northend team. The Independents were: Joe Phelan, J. McDonald, C. Robinson, T. Mehar, F, Goyette, W. Holdaway, J. Allen, A. Mitchell, W. Kelly, Joe Begley, F. Traynor and O. Watson. And the Cretes lineup was K. Kincaid, R Parnell, F. Metheral, Jim Connal, R. Duncan, A. Robinson, H. Foote, H. Dixon, F. Larone, T. Duncan, J. Harvey and F. Sherwood.

The calibre of the Peterborough seniors may be indicated by the fact that Dick Kelly afterwards went to Montreal and became one of the stars on the senior Shamrocks.

GREATEST GOALIE OF ALL — Petes' Goalie Lloyd (Moon) Wootton, generally rated the greatest lacrosse goalie of all, is shown in typical action as he robs Victoria's Archie Browning of a goal in the first game of the 1953 Mann Cup series out west. The Moon's stellar work had much to do with the Trailermen taking this opener 13-12 to snap Victoria's 22-game win streak at home this season. —(Examiner Staff Photo).

Fewer Fish Fillets

OSLO (CP)—Export of frozen fish fillets from Norway to the United States have dropped sharply this year. Total in the first six months was 2,200,000 pounds, compared with 4,900,000 pounds in the same period last year.

Box Lacrosse Operated As Pro League

Dave Kerr, proprietor of the Empress Hotel here, played professional box lacrosse back in 1931, the first season of the abbreviated game, as field lacrosse bowed off the Canadian scene. The pro boxla loop operated for two summers before folding due to the high cost of paid players.

Many National Hockey League stars performed in the pro lacrosse circuit in 1931-32, including that all-time great, big Lionel Conacher. Dave Kerr, an outstanding NHL goalie with New York Rangers and Montreal Maroons, was playing hockey for the latter team in '31 and he played centre that summer in lacrosse. However, a groin injury later in the season put him out and his hockey bosses wouldn't let him return to the gutted-stick game the next summer.

FOUR CLUBS IN

Team in the lacrosse league were Montreal Maroons, Montreal Canadiens, Toronto Leafs and Cornwall Indians. The latter played at home in an outdoor bowl, while the Forum was used in Montreal, and the Mutual St. Arena in Toronto at first, with the Gardens next year.

"It was mighty good lacrosse," Dave ercalls, "and they had some big, rough fellows as well as experienced lacrossers, men like Conacher, Ted Reeve and so on. It was tough on the goalies as only a small crease, like they used in NHL hockey then, protected the net-minder as the big fellows tore in on him. But we had a lot of fun out of it and kept in shape for hockey."

U.K., Australia Favor Field Over Box For Lacrosse Play

Other countries than Canada play lacrosse, there being organized associations in England, Australia and the United States. A few years ago, G. H. Bark of the English Lacrosse Union visited the States and Canada and discussed organization of an international lacrosse association. However, they play more field lacrosse in those countries than box lacrosse.

The game started in the south of England back in 1882 with Canadian rules used. Some rough-and-ready sort of lacrosse actually was played there five years earlier. Apart from war years, the game has been played continuously in certain parts of England, though not on a large scale. Recent years have seen crowds ranging from 500 to 2,500 at games, and it was demonstrated in 1949 before 30,000 soccer fans at a game.

L. L. Mount, a Canadian, is credited with introducing lacrosse to Victoria, Australia, in 1874. The sport became quite popular and the championship of the country is decided every three years when the Australian Lacrosse Carnival is staged in the capital cities of various states.

Just before the last war, there were 163 teams in Australia, taking in 2,614 players, so it is not one of the lesser sports in that country.

PLAYED IN STATES

Lacrosse was played in the States back in the 80s, and it now has a number of college teams playing every summer. Syracuse University played Oshawa, Canadian champions, in 1930 at the Maple Leaf Gardens, and the Canucks barely won the exhibition.

Lacrosse in the States is pretty much a spring field game, played mostly by colleges and universities, though some border teams have used Canadian players and some have tangled with Canadian teams. A few years ago there were more than 70 college teams in the sport. Rochester and Geneva have gone in for return visits with Ontario teams in recent years. Back in the 30s, several border teams were seriously considered by the O.L.A. as possible entries. And there is an international league operating around Windsor, Sarnia and Detroit, playing a brand of intermediate lacrosse.

In Canada, the game is mainly popular in British Columbia and Ontario, with a fair amount of interest in the game in Quebec and in recent years in Manitoba.

More Players, Larger Pitch Used In Field Lacrosse Recall Some Of Old-Timers

Lacrosse around Peterborough back in 1893 was quite a bit different to the abbreviated boxla sport of today. It was, of course, field lacrosse then with everything on a larger scale, except perhaps the crowds. More players were in the starting lineup and the playing pitch covered a considerably larger area than the present one does.

In those days there was no goal netting, just two thin upright posts or flags and a ball shot through had to be chased a long distance to retrieve it and start play again.

Jack McDonough played then. He was a sturdy boy who later became quite a boxer and wrestler. Jack Mein was the original "Shockey," brother of the late George Mein, who played up to the days of Fred Goodfellow and who was an uncle of Keith (Shockey) Mein, local businessman today. There was a Jack Adams, too, who worked in the CGE and later became head of the Canada Cycle and Motor Co. in Toronto.

Rollie Glover was one of the best around the turn of the century both in lacrosse and hockey. He and Jack McCabe travelled far afield to play starry lacrosse, being invited to perform around Ontario and in the States. George Lipsett was another fine stickhandler in this long-ball game.

There was Joe Phelan, also a fine, husky young lacrosser who later became the Rev. C. J. Phelan, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral before transferring years later to Campbellford.

ONE OF OFFICIALS

Oldtimers will recall W. A. Sanderson as an official of the game then. He had a jewellery store where Ostrander's are now. He also was a keen cyclist when that was a highly popular sport and pastime in those quieter and happy years.

Frank Packenham was another active supporter of lacrosse. He was in the shipping and customs department of the CGE for many years. Fred Dobbin of the old Review starred for years as a senior goaltender. Ernie Wasson was another good player as well as being an ace hockey goalie.

George Lipsett's father kept a hotel on the north side of Hunter St. in Ashburnham, abutting on the PAAA field where many a game was played. He held down one of the hot spots on the home field, inside the enemy's defence. This PAAA field was often called Cricket Field, and is now a residential street known as Cricket Place.

SOME OTHERS

Fred Heaps was an Examiner printer and Billy Borland was another fine player but he retired earlier than many of his mates of the time. Walter Phelan usually played about third home near centre field, and he moved later to Winnipeg. Wm. E. Lech was a strong follower of the game. He was uncle of Keith and Cyril Lech, local furriers.

Jim McCabe, for years with the Trent Canal, was not only an excellent playmaker at centre but a rugged checker, too. Joe Begley was field captain at that time and stayed with the game a long time. There were many others of an earlier era and many stars who came along afterward, but group pictures of these old lacrosse teams were few and far between. The McCoys, Creightons and many more shone in the old field game down through the years, each one a hero in his day to many followers of this rugged Canadian sport, which finally was supplanted by box lacrosse in 1931 as the modern tempo in sports as in many other things stepped up.

SCENE FROM HOT THIRD TILT—Dootch Vitarelli of the Petes is seen here firing a hot shot at Victoria's Goalie Jim Hetherington in the rough third game—which the Vics won 8-7—to trail the Mann Cup series 2-1 at the time. Dootch has Norm Coates breathing down the back of his neck, while Don Ashbee is shown taking Duff McCaghey of the Shamrocks out of the play neatly.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

FINE GOATS

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — A boom in breeding of milk goats has resulted in record entries at Australian agricultural shows. t one New South Wales government farm the highest producer, a Saanen goat, gave 1,686 pounds of milk and 54 pounds of butterfat in 150 days.

Box Lacrosse Started in 1931; Field Lacrosse Folded

Box lacrosse in Peterborough owes a lot to Doug Miller—now on the city council. He and Pete King had more than anyone else to do with starting the game here in 1931, several years after the field game had folded up in this district. They were active players and also acted as officials in those early formative years of the boxla sport.

Doug also was the driving force twice in having a box or bowl built on the present site on George St., opposite Little Lake. He canvassed for funds, supervised the building work each time and swung a capable carpenter's hammer himself in each case. The first box was built in 1937 but was torn down by the city during the war when lacrosse—like most local sports—was dormant.

BUILT AGAIN

After playing a year for the local senior "B" club in Omemee after the second world war, Doug got busy again in an effort to rebuild the bowl. The city gave permission for use of the grounds but refused to aid financially. Doug then lined up four other chaps along with himself, Pete King, Verte Reynolds, Harry Tudhope and Ken Kingston, and each went good for a note of $1,000 at the bank to start the project. Later they found they needed as much again, so they stuck their necks out—as the saying is—once more. This plus some donations received from friends, proved enough to built the fine modern lacrosse box now in use here.

In a gesture of recognition the efforts in getting the box built, the executive of the senior lacrosse club voted to call it Miller Bowl. With fine support from the fans and good local teams competing, the notes were paid off in a few years and even the friends reimbursed, so that not a cent was owing on the project.

STARTED YOUNG

Doug Miller is now 49 years old. He started playing when he was 12 and quit in 1947. Which means he played field and box lacrosse continuously—but for his stretch in the R.C.A.F. during the war—for more than 30 years. He broke in as a kid in Millbrook and his first stick cost him 50 cents, meaning many weeks of scrounging and saving before that sum was raised. He played here at the age of 14 in the minor circuit, coming up from bantam, midget, juvenile and junior to intermediate and senior ranks.

At one time, Miller played junior O.L.A. and was also with the champion Crescents in a large City Lacrosse League. He was good enough to be imported for senior play by Oshawa and later by Wallaceburg as a junior and senior field lacrosser. He was in the latter place in 1924, returning the next year to field lacrosse here. The game folded up then, and returned in the abbreviated boxla form here in 1931.

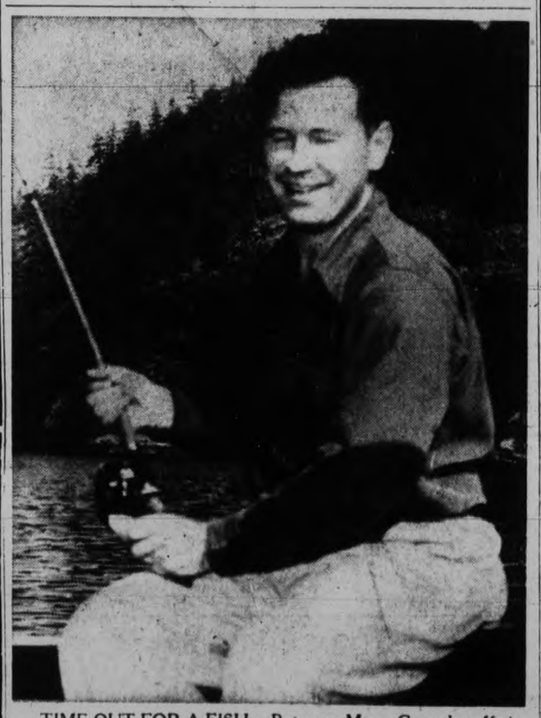
Doug played at the Brock St. rink along with Fred Goodfellow, Bud Fisher, Ira Dundas, Meyette, Shine Bovin, Buster Whitton, Red Creighton, Fred Shaw, Mick Magee, Pete King, Red Dallin, and other aces of the early '30's. They later played outdoors at nights in Riverside until the box was built. Doug was a strong defenceman and good rusher when the Petes won three successive senior "B" titles just before the war— using Omemee for "home" games— when his son, Doug Jr. played along with him. Doug Sr. decided to hang up his gear after that.

He has served as president, vice-president, O.L.A. representative, treasurer, secretary, executive member, and manager of the Petes' lacrossers for many years. His cup of happiness was filled to overflowing October, 1951, when he sat in the stand in Vancouver and saw Peterborough win its first Mann Cup and become Canadian senior "A" lacrosse champions. He could ask for no more.

Ald. Doug decided then that he would resign from the club's executive and devote all of his time to his family, his own construction company and his duties on the city council. He has done that this year, but is always on hand at Miller Bowl cheering the present champions along. Lacrosse will always be Doug's game.

Gandhi Memorial

NEW DELHI (CP)—A model prepared by the central public works department has been accepted by the Mahatma Gandhi memorial design committee, set up in 1950 to advise the government of India on a design for a Gandhi memorial at Rajghat. The memorial is estimated to cost the equivalent of $360,000.



TIME OUT FOR A FISH—Between Mann Cup playoffs in Victoria, some of the Petes did a spot of fishing. Moon Wootton is seen here sitting in the stern waiting for a strike. Usually the poles are hung up on hooks and fishermen sit back line comfort, knowing when a fish strikes as a small bell on the end of the pole rings.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

TWO POPULAR OLA REFEREES—Left is Lou Vipond and right is Piper Bain, two of the more popular referees (if refs are ever popular) in the senior Ontario Lacrosse Association. Both are former players and are well-known arbiters to the thousands of Peterborough lacrosse fans who view the Trailermen in action at Miller Bowl during the summer months.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

Merchants Gave Lacrosse Stick With Purchase Of Every Boy's Suit

There was a time in Peterborough when lacrosse was so popular with young and old that clothing stores were giving away a lacrosse stick with every suit sold.

That offer was made in the early years of lacrosse in Peterborough when fans were stirred by the town's team, then in the race for the Northeastern championship.

Rockville, Kingston, Ottawa and Peterborough, each team packed with colorful stars, battled for the honors. But, backed by nearly every one in town, Peterborough pushed its way through the tough opposition to the championship in 1918.

The same lacrosse fever that swept the small town in those days is back as Peterborough Timbermen were playing Vancouver Pilseners in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens for the Mann Cup last year.

Two years ago, the Timbermen won the Mann Cup for the first time from substantially the same team, then known as the Combines. Since those early days, lacrosse fortunes have come to Peterborough often in 68 years.

Players like Michael Halpin, George Joyle and Ab Rose, members on the 1888 team, started lacrosse on its winding path through the years in Peterborough.

TOP PLAYERS

By 1897 the players that developed carried the game along with the same form and class as their predecessors. Just before the turn of the century outstanding players like Jack Mein, E. S. Clarry, Dr. A. W. McPherson, Rollie Glover, Fred Lynch and others made Peterborough known as the "best lacrosse centre in eastern Ontario" by winning the Ontario intermediate championship.

Tempers often flew high, wide and handsome both at home and away; often not all the action was on the playing field. In towns such as Orillia and Port Hope where feeling was high in lacrosse matches, the Petes had a rough time dodging not only their opponents but the fans as well.

The home town fans retaliated with a home stand against out of town teams to make up for any discomforts the Petes suffered on away games.

On more than on occasion, visiting teams were escorted to railway stations by angry fans loaded with rotten eggs and over-ripe tomatoes.

Although not at the same high pitch as before the turn of the century, lacrosse flourished for two decades after. Players like Dillon, Meagher, Hurtubise, McPherson and McCoy kept the lacrosse fan's blood boiling.

But life began to change as radios and cars became more plentiful and field lacrosse faded slowly, finally flickering out.

CHANGED GAME

Everyday life quickened throughout the twenties and during that time lacrosse was altered to meet the fans' desires.

To make the game faster, the field was shortened and fewer players were used, to meet the convenience of the fans the games were played under lights at night.

Doug Miller and Pete King promoted the new game which was catching fire across the country. Johnny Sutherland, Jack Creighton, Bud Fisher and Ches Mowry helped support the sport in Peterborough, and another lacrosse era began.

Present lacrosse fans will recall and know some of the players: Red Creighton, Ira Dundas, Fred Goodfellow, Mick Magee, Fred Shaw, Red Dallin, Buster Whitton, and Shine Bovin. These men, some still active today, in the Brock Arena reached the provincial finals and the finals proved they were among Ontario's best.

Before the war, Peterborough lacrosse received another boost when the games were changed to the outdoors. The club built an outdoor box with lights opposite George St. wharf.

Lacrosse thrived for several years in that outdoor box. During the late thirties, the Creightons, Vitarelli, Magee, King and others again brought Peterborough to the fore in Ontario lacrosse circles winning the senior B crown in 1938.

The war then called a halt to the rejuvenated offshoot of the sport, started hundreds of years ago by the Indians. The box was torn down and lacrosse forgotten for the duration.

No sooner had peace been declared than the lacrosse players were rebuilding again.

BUILT BOWL

After a dismal year of using Omemee as home base, the Petes moved back to Peterborough. Financed by interested lacrosse fans, a new box was built opposite George St. wharf and lacrosse in Peterborough was off to the races.

During the spring of 1947 the club devised a five-year plan which included building minor league players into seniors and bringing in star players from other centres. At the end of 1951, they had the Mann Cup for the first time in Peterborough's history.

Sports - hungry Peterborough snapped at the chance to see a game filled with body-contacts, a game full of hot-tempered fights and a strong competitive spirit.

So, in 1947, crowds packed the small wooden stand, called Miller Bowl after Ald. Doug Miller. The team was against all opposition and found a crowd-pleasing rival in Fergus. Finally the Thistles and the Petes ended in the Ontario senior B championship series and before 4,000 fans the Petes brought the title to Peterborough once more.

The Creightons, Ozzie Tott, the Breakspeares and Vitarellis were city-wide heroes and the same squad returned in 1948 for the same fans and won the same title, although against weaker opposition.

Thus, in the first two years of the five-year plan, the Petes brought the Ontario senior "B" championship to the city twice.

JUMPED TO "A"

Realizing another year in the weak senior "B" league might ruin the rise of lacrosse in the city, the club decided to make the big jump into the "A" league, the finest lacrosse in the world today.

Changed little from the 1948 team, the Petes went into "A" play for the first time in 1949. The fans backed the team throughout the year, although they were only a second-last place team.

The Petes squeezed into the last playoff position in the second last game of the schedule, dropping Weston by only one point. But the Hamilton Tigers sank further playoff hopes in only four games.

Without any major changes, the Petes returned in 1950 in the senior "A" league, beginning with a burst of wins, then staying fairly high in the league standing for most of the year. But again the Petes met the first place team, Owen Sound, and went down in the first round.

SIGNED UP STARS

Faced by the final year of the five-year plan the club in 1951 signed players such as Ike Hildebrand, Moon Wotton, Curly Mason, Russ Slater, Harry Wipper, Bob Thorpe, Don Ashbee, Gerry Fitzgerald, and home-town brews Dootch Vitarelli, Arn Dugan and Mick Magee.

Before the season ever began, other clubs realized the Petes would be the team to beat. They swept through the Ontario championship, and then Eastern Canada honors easily.

Then they went to Vancouver, where they took the Combines, but only after seven games.

Last year saw the Petes' Timbermen again dominate the senior setup to finish the schedule in first place. They had a sizzling final series for the Eastern Canada championship with the packed Toronto West Yorks, and the Petes barely pulled it out in the final game before more than 4,000 roaring fans at Miller Bowl. Young Roger Smith, up from the juniors, was the only addition to the 1952 local squad. The Mann Cup series, played in Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens, was an anti-climax, since the Timbermen easily swept through Vancouver Pilseners in four straight to retain the big trophy.

This past season, the Petes operated under new sponsorship — trailer manufacturer Harry McGinness taking over —and they were known as the Trailermen. Losing but five OLA games, they finished first again and ousted Orillia four straight in eastern semi-finals, and St. Catharines 4-1 to go west once more, playing and defeating Victoria Shamrocks to take the famed Mann Cup for the third straight year, tying the record of Orillia Terriers of the middle 30's. Bob Thorpe had the same lineup as the previous year, though from time to time he used a few juniors and ex-juniors the latter including Garry and Brian Robinson, Rock Batley and Grant Burns.

So, success beyond the dreams of those early organizers of the Petes' boxla team came to the Peterborough lacrosse club, and today for the third straight season they are rulers of all they survey.

THOSE HAPPY LACROSSE CHAMPIONS—This jubilant scene was shot in the Petes' Timbermen's dressing-room just after the local lacrossers had downed Toronto Yorks in 1952 to capture the Eastern Canada senior championship, putting them into the Mann cup finals for the second straight year. They won the cup in four straight over Vancouver Pilseners in Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens. It is pretty much the same squad which won out in 1951 and again this year. —(Examiner Staff Photo)

LOADED DICE

The use of dice can be traced back to antiquity and loaded dice have been unearthed in Pompeii.

Indians Lead In Making Lacrosse Sticks

Where do lacrosse sticks come from? Most of them have been made by the Indians ever since the white man took over this truly Canadian game from the Indians. According to the CLA year book, no one can make a lacrosse stick as well or as quickly as an Indian, since Indians are natural-born whittlers. Plenty of whittling is needed before a lacrosse stick is shaped properly.

Joe Lally, associated with the game for more than 50 years, long supplied his famous sticks to every country where the game was played, and these sticks all were made by Indians in his shop. When Lally sold his factory to the Chisolm Lacrosse Manufacturing Co. on retirement it was still run by Indians, the plant being on the St. Regis Reserve near Cornwall. More than 97 per cent. of the world's production of lacrosse sticks were manufactured by this company just a few years ago, exports going to England, Australia and the United States, as well as the home industry in Canada. There are a few home competitors in Canada, but not in the export trade for lacrosse equipment.

OLD AS THE GAME

The book says: "Their methods of manufacturing lacrosse sticks are as old as the game itself, and little modern equipment can be found in this busy little factory where every workman is an Indian."

It is always a problem to secure the proper hickory. There is no big growth of hickory in any area of Canada and a great deal of territory must be covered to get enough for the year's buy. A tree has to be a certain age and size or the wood will not bend properly and this failure can result in much waste and breakage. Only the butt of the tree is suitable for use and six or eight frames can be secured from each butt.

With hickory becoming scarcer, the present factory owner is not too optimistic of the future of these Indian-made sticks.

Stern Reminder

ANSONVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Calvert council was in session in this town near Timmins when the new night constable appeared. One of the councillors halted his oratory when he learned he must remove his car, double-parked in front of the town hall. The session was held up while the councillor reparked his car.

ROUGH ACTION—Some rugged action is depicted here from the opening game of the Mann Cup playoffs. Larry Booth of Victoria, squeezed in behind Browning (5), is body-checked hard from behind as sticks go flying in the speedy going. Curly Mason (15) is right handy for a loose ball but it goes the other way and Goalie Moon Wootton tears after it.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

"Red Stockings" Of 1872 Began History Of Lacross e

The Peterborough Lacrosse Club was first organized in 1872 in Johnston's tailor shop on Water St. This shop was located immediately north of where the Sun Life building is now. The game was only slightly known in Peterborough but Millbrook had had for six years an All-Star team. One member on that Millbrook team was a youth by the name of Sam Hughes who later became member of parliament for Victoria and Minister of Militia in the First World War. Sir Sam Hughes' two brothers, John and James, were also on the team and other players were named McBain, Hetherington and McCartney.

The game was actively introduced in Peterborough by Robert J. Lee who had come to the town from Cavan village where he had been one of the stars of that hamlet's team.

At the organization meeting Bob Lee was elected captain and Tom Quincy secretary. Quincy was a clerk in Robert Hamilton's hardware store, which was situated two or three doors south of the premises now occupied by Correll's store. Among those who attended were John Corkery and Billy Green, and it was from these two 56 years later that the Examiner is indebted for these reminiscences.

FIRST GAME IN 1872

The Peterborough team adopted the name "Red Stockings", possibly because that was the distinguishing item on their uniforms. As the club roster attracted quite a number of the young men of the town there was ample material for several teams and so it came about in the spring of 1872 that the Red Stockings and the "Blue Rosettes", a second team drawn from the club, staged the first game of lacrosse in this community.

The teams were as follows:

Red Stockings—T. S. Quincy, captain; T. Maloney, T. E. Bradburn, John Corkery, W. A. Sanderson, Harry LeBrun, G. B. Sproule, W. C. Spence, and Alexander Elliott.

Blue Rosettes—Charles Malloy, captain; Patterson, C. McKercher, Duchesneau, W. Croft, Jim Dolan, Nap Lemay, Bob Lee, A. Robinson, and W. Shaw.

The Red Stockings won by three straight games and later in the season the first Peterborough lacrosse club appeared on a foreign field when those pioneering Petes went to Millbrook and were defeated by three games in a row. The local team was composed of Quincy, LeBrun, T. E. Bradburn, Croft, John Corkery, J. Dolan, Duchesneau, C. Malloy, J. Lee, W. Shaw, Spence and Sanderson.

PRACTISED IN DEWY MORN

The first lacrosse team turned out for practice in the morning from about 5 to 6 o'clock or later. All that was required of them industrially was that they report to their respective stores at 7 a.m. for most of them were clerks and the hours of the clerk in the '70s were long and usually full of work. The clerks arrived before the "boss" took down the shutters, which were cumbersome slat affairs, cleaned the lamp glasses filled the lamps with oil, trimmed the wicks, swept up, and generally made themselves useful. And they had to work until 7 and 8 o'clock in the evening, leaving no time for athletic diversions.

LONG WORKING DAYS

Merchants believed then in keeping their stores open, and anyway there wasn't much else to do but work. Hence, 12 and 13 hour days were the established custom. Of course, the clerks could go out about 8 a.m. for breakfast, and were otherwise well treated, but there was no yielding in the first years to the requirements of lacrosse. Some years later the town used to close up its stores for the afternoons of big games.

And while the seniors were finding their feet and learning the technique of the game and the art of stick-handling, some of the boys were watching them, as for instance Jim Stratton, H. Uin, Harry Phelan, Henry Pengelly W. Morgan, E. McCabe, J. McGregor, N. Caisie, Arthur Rowntree, Jewett, and others. So apt were they that they went down to Millbrook and partly redeemed the name of Peterborough by trouncing the village juniors and holding their own in several fights that broke out. Then they wound up the day with an evening trip to Lindsay, and another victory.

REORGANIZED IN 1880

The team carried on until the end of that decade, but interest wore thin because the game was not generally established in this district. Reorganization in 1880 was productive of new enthusiasm, and in 1881 Peterborough won the Gildersleeve Cup in Kingston. That team included Mick Halpin, Kit Rutherford, Dod Fortye, Billy Rudkins and others. About that time Harry LeBrun was elected president of the Dominion Lacrosse Association, an appointment that stimulated interest throughout Central Ontario. Then began a long period of victories, battles up and down the Trent territory and often far beyond it.

John Corkery hung up his stick about 1880. "Evvie" Bradburn was also through, and Billy Green was definitely included among the spectators. But they had done their bit for Peterborough athletics as promoters of the game which for several generations stirred the blood and usually the passions of the whole community, men and women alike.

And in turning over that page once more let us stop to wonder at the strange aspect George Street must have presented on a summer morning as the lacrosse team, fresh from practising on the Market Square, started off for the wooden-shuttered stores in which they worked. Two rows of stout wooden fronts, barred and bolted, symbols of their business age and its seeming stagnation.

Training For Many Boys Minor Lacrosse

The Peterborough Minor Lacrosse Association caters to several hundred boys ranging from little fellows in grade school, the peewees, up through bantam, midget and junvenile brackets. Aided some by the senior club financially the PMLA also stages and annual life-saver day to raise funds, and then some of the teams in the well-run organization have sponsors.

Ken Kingston, hustling member of the senior club executive and an OLA vice-president, heads the PMLA and he has a good bunch of helpers in various offices and as coaches and managers of the many boys' teams. Don Ashbee of the seniors was this year's chief coach (a full-time summer job) of the association. He succeeded other first-rate coaches like Harry Wipper, Jerry Fitzgerald and Jack Foote.

TEACHING THEM

The role of the minor association is to take green youngsters and teach them to play organized lacrosse. They are advanced through the various age groups and step into junior OLA company if capable, after the juvenile category. The lads play all summer and have all-star squads then picked for provincial playdowns in the fall. While the local juveniles—OLA winners a year ago—didn't go so far this season, the Peterborough midgets, bantams and peewees are all awaiting OLA final playoffs, the peewees going in a tournament. At least, these three clubs were when this article was written during the tail-end of the Mann Cup series.

The PMLA has been operating for eight years now, with a better system showing each season. Officials frequently predict that in time the Peterborough seniors will consist of all Peterborough players, who learned the rudiments of the game as youngsters in the PMLA.

GET A GRANT

The Recreation Commission in recent years has recognized the value of this large minor lacrosse organization and has taken steps in the way of a financial grant annually to help the boys keep playing. With the possible exception of St. Catharines, there is no better kids' boxla organization in the province, or elsewhere.

Fans at senior games often get a big kick out of watching little tikes—some little more than toddlers ready to start to school—dashing about the pitch in abbreviated games between periods of OLA fixtures. They are certainly learning Canada's national summer sport from the ground up here, and this will pay off in the in healthier, cleaner citizens, as first-rate athletes.

Two City Boys Play B.C. Boxla

Two Peterborough boys played senior "A" lacrosse in the British Columbia league the past summer, Jim Heffernan performing there for the second straight season with Nanaimo.

Arn Dugan went west to play for the first time this season as playing coach of the Nanaimo club. While the team was in the thick of contention all through the schedule, it failed to make the western finals which were fought out by Vancouver Pilseners and the victorious Victoria Shamrocks.

According to various clippings received from Nanaimo, both Heffernan and Dugan had a good season, being well up in the scoring and Arn playing mainly on the defence as field general. He was a former Petes' senior player—and a senior hockey star—while Heffernan learned his lacrosse with the local juniors before heading westward.

Junior Lacrosse Provides Stiff Group Competition

Junior "A" lacrosse has flourished here for the past four years under coach Lou Vitarelli. Not financially flourished, of course, as the junior games don't draw many fans, but the boys have had good competition after graduating from the PMLA juvenile setup, and learn a lot as they prepare to step up to senior ranks. Quite a few have made the senior grade in that period.

Lou and Walt Murphy had much to do with re-organizing junior lacrosse here in the spring of 1950, with Frank Patterson a genial sponsor ever since. They received financial assistance from him for equipment and travelling expenses, having lengthy trips through the schedule and in playoffs. The juniors have their own dressing room in Miller Bowl now.

JUNIORS' COACH—Lou Vitarelli, former senior lacrosse star here, has coached the local OLA juniors for four years and in that period has developed a number of good senior players. His squad this season lost out i nsemi-finals to Long Branch, the Canadian Minto Cup junior finalists. Lou's boys handed Long Branch two of their three losses in the 1953 schedule.

CLUB OFFICERS

Dr. Jack Epping is president of the 1953 junior Peterborough Pats, with Al :kington and George Tuly vice-presidents. Jack Sackville is secretary and Howard Doolittle treasurer, John Lynch being club manager. Others on the executive include Walt Murphy, Clare Galvin, Harley Carr, Bob Outram and Dwain Knox.

The team finished the OLA schedule in third place and lost out in semi-final playoffs to Long Branch, the team that took the OLA title and were Minto Cup junior Canadian finalists this year. Long Branch lost but three games all through the schedule, and two of those were to the good Peterborough Pats. However, the locals - stronger than in previous years— found the group a stiff one throughout. Even the addition of four Indian boys from around Brantford (Ivan Thomas, Ray Hill, Willie Logan and Gary Smith) didn't get them into loop finals. But they have a lot of good material left for next year, though they also lose several aces. The junior team hasn't been out of playoffs for the past four years.

GOOD GRADUATES

Some of the junior graduates to senior OLA ranks from here during the past several seasons include: Bill Killingbeck, Joe Whitnall, Jim Heffernan, Lou Nickle, Gary and Brian Robinson, Grant Burns, Rock Batley, Bev Groves, Joe Hickson, Roger Smith and so forth.

These players, some of whom moved to other centres because it is hard to catch into a spot on a star-studded senior squad like the Petes, but others remained here and will gradually get their chance with the Trailermen.

The junior club holds an important place in the lacrosse organization of this good lacrosse city. It fills a gap between minor ranks and senior competition. Well-organized and handled, the junior club is a credit to the OLA setup and should continue to serve a most useful purpose here for years to come.

It's a pleasure for such a worthy team to represent all of us here in Peterborough.

Well done, "Trailermen"! We are indeed proud of you.

CANBERRA (CP)—Australia has proclaimed its sovereign rights over the sea bed and subsoil of the continental shelf in order to control pearl fishing in waters surrounding Australia. Commerce Minister John McEwen told Parliament a licensing system will be imposed to protect the pearling industry.

FEEDER FOR THE SENIORS—The Peterborough Pats, OLA junior "A" club, has been a consistent feeder of fine young players to the senior Petes the past few years. Coach Lou Vitarelli's Pats had a good 1953 season, but lost out in semi-finals to Long Branch, the Canadian junior finalists. Above are shown the four Indian boys on the Pats this year, left to right: Ivan Thomas, Goalie Ray Hill, Willie Logan and Gary Smith, the latter a brother to Roger Smith of the Trailermen.

Peterborough Hot Lacrosse Town In Days When Field Variety Flourished

Seventy years ago Peterborough first became known as one of the "hot" lacrosse towns in the province and ever since then Peterborough teams have been greatly feared wherever they played. The teams have been noted and respected for their speed, ability and gameness, and, yes, fight. Year after year they paraded through heavy opposition to championships and near championships, the highest crowns of the lacrosse world.

In 1888 Peterborough won the Northeastern championship after a season of hectic struggle. Included in the league were: Brockville, Kingston, Ottawa and Peterborough.

The men of that team were: Michael Halpin, afterwards a grocer at George and Perry Streets; Joe Joyal; Dr. Brennan, who enlisted with the Canadian force that went to South Africa in the Boer War at the turn of the century; Tom Meagher, an older brother of William Meagher; Abe Rose, father of Lornie and Abbie, one of the fastest men on that team; Joe Phelan, afterwards Rector of St. Peter's Cathedral; Michael Coughlin in the monumental business with his brother John, here and later in Toronto; Frank Larone, John Donoghue, Tom Duncan and Joseph Begley.

The only member of that team still living is believed to be Mr. Duncan of Peterborough.

The popularity of lacrosse was maintained through the decades of that time, continuously until the outbreak of the First World War.

NEW TEAM

That was one of the cleverest teams Peterborough ever produced, and of their company only Jack McCabe, Eddie Hickey, Billie Borland and Jack Mein are survivors of the years since their games in the late 1890's.

Dot Brown went to Seattle, Fred Lynch to New Westminster, B.C., and played on two world championship teams; Rollie Glover and Jack McCabe had a lively career at home, and abroad they played in Chicago and New York.

In those days nearly every small town in Ontario had a lacrosse team, and not the least of them was the village of Madoc, and also neighboring Millbrook.

The files would probably show that even Keene was prominently in the game.

SMALL RIOT

Orillia, Beaverton and Port Hope were three of Peterborough's tough contenders in that period around 1898. After a rough game in Orillia, the team of which Mickey Curran was outstanding played a return game here at P.A.A.A. grounds (the houses on Cricket Place occupy that athletic field). It ended in something less than a riot, and rather than face the hostile local fans at the C.N.R. station, the Orillia crew caught the 5:15 p.m. train up at Brock St.

Peterborough developed its players from teen-age, but in 1879 the club brought in Don Hogarth who became a Brigadier-General in the First War, and Conservative M.P.P. for Port Arthur, and Jack Mooney also from that town.

Officers of the Club included Mayor A. L. Davis, Dr. Edward McGrath who lived in the house now the Kaye funeral home, and Fred Sullivan. Lionel King, afterwards a Doctor in Prince Alberta, Sask., was outstanding among the stars of those years in the 1890's. In athletics, he was a "natural" as they say in sports. He showed as much class in hockey as in rugby and perhaps baseball, and also played a fine tennis game. And he was an ace on the lacrosse field.

Toronto Civic Employees ran special trains to Peterborough July 1, 1897, one of the biggest events in the old town's sports history. The senior lacrosse team trounced Toronto Elms, but the second team lost to Toronto Maitlands 3-2.

The Examiner reporting that game said: "Peterborough ran in six goals before Elms counted one. The dazzling combination of Jim McCabe, George Lipsett, Percy Rubidge, Walter Phelan and Jack McCabe overwhelmed the Toronto team."

There wasn't a weak spot on that team. Its personnel was: Goal, Dinny Dobbin; point, Dot Brown; cover point, Borland; 1st defense, George Mein; 2nd defense, Glover; 3rd defense, Lionel King; centre, Galley, 3rd home, Jim McCabe; 2nd home, Lipsett; inside home, Jack McCabe. Field captain, Joe Begley; unpires, R. F. McWilliams and Fred Might.

Something is jumbled in that line-up. It doesn't mention Rubidge and it leaves out 1st home and outside home. Both Rubidge and Phelan, previously mentioned, should be included, and probably completed the team.

Ted Reeve of the Toronto Telegram has rated field lacrosse the best and most exciting of Canadian games, and that Peterborough team of around 1900 was just about the smartest that ever wore the blue and white of the old lacrosse club.

The second team, defeated by Maitland, was composed of: Moncrief, Craig, Ruckey, Archambault, McDonagh, Kelly Thompson, Lou Dobbin, Adams, Crossby, Wasson and Vic McWilliams, with Carise LeBrun, field captain.

LACROSSE TRAINER — John (Gunner) Lynch has acted as the senior lacrosse trainer here for years, being a handy man in the first-aid department, as well as looking after equipment for the Petes. The Gunner has been trainer for local hockey clubs in the past, also.

Pete King Great Player Of The Early 30's

Pete King is rated one of the best lacrosse players ever to represent Peterborough in OLA intermediate "A" and senior "B" competition. The veteran retired in the late 30s after a lengthy career, which included holding down various offices with the Petes: president, secretary, treasurer, executive member and club manager.

Pete started as a 13-year-old gaffer out in Manitoba, where his folks lived a short time, though he was born in Norwood. He returned a year or so later and played for Norwood as a junior until moving to Peterborough in 1920. He shone in field lacrosse then till the game folded, and he returned to be a leading scorer for years in the boxla game which started in 1931.

PLAYED AROUND

Not all of his intermediate and senior stuff was strutted for local teams, King going senior with Wallaceburg in '24 after a year with Toronto senior Shamrocks, and he later did a turn for a summer with the senior Oshawa entry in OLA competition. He has been on a number of winning clubs from junior up to and including senior "A", and he helped the Petes amass several crowns, always being one of the top snipers. He generally played rover.

The genial hotelman, along with Doug Miller, had a great deal to do with putting box lacrosse on the local map. He toiled tirelessly in 1931 and '32 and had the satisfaction of seeing his beloved game become a major Peterborough sport. Pete also was one of the five men who backed bank notes in order to have the box built which is now known as Miller Bowl.

Loans Began It, Miller Bowl Paid Debts, Brought Honor

Miller Bowl since the spring of 1947 has been the nest from which tremendous sport honors have sprung in this city.

Three consecutive Senior A lacrosse championships, which might easily be entitled World Championships, are the most prominent of the bowl's produce and all the work that is necessary for such an honor has been accomplished there.

The bowl or box that we now know as Miller's Bowl was preceeded by one on George St., opposite Little Lake in the late 30's. As is the case of the present bowl, it was built with the help of players and other lacrosse enthusiasts and some high calibre intermediate and senior B lacrosse was played there. But the bowl was torn down when the game died during the war.

Doug Miller aided by such men as Ken Kingston, Pete King, Vert Reynolds and Harry Tudhope began a move in 1946 to collect funds for a new bowl. They signed bank notes to finance the building and also obtained money from friends with Bob Pierson writing many prominent people for loans. Considering that many of those parties interested, players, officials and citizens helped in the actual construction of the 4,000 capacity bowl, the cost was kept down to about $12,000. More than three years ago the borrowed money was paid back, even the gifts from friends. The place was a going concern.

In the year immediately following the end of the war, the Petes were in senior B competition and doing exceptionally well. Then Red Creighton and group decided to step up to senior A level. The first year they ended in last place, and the next year advanced to second last. But officials kept pushing and by 1951 the Peterborough team blasted their way to the championship. They're still blasting, and Miller Bowl, named after the man who was the driving force in the project, has become a monument to perserverance and resultant honor.

PETERBOROUGH TRAILERMEN CANADA'S TOP LACROSSE TEAM

These are your 1953 Peterborough Trailermen, Canadian senior "A" lacrosse champions for the third straight year. These are those capable, colorful stars who thrilled you thousands of city and district fans from early May throughout the summer and into early autumn at home games in Miller Bowl. These are the aces who swept through all Eastern and western opposition in this wide country to once again bring honour to the "Litflock City". These are your champions:

GOALIE LLOYD (MOON) WOOTTON, the best boxla goalie today and perhaps for all time. What other one has starred for four Mann Cup winners — Moon aiding Owen Sound take the title in 1950 and the Petes for the past three years? He played from minor lacrosse up to senior in Owen Sound before making Peterborough his home, and he has a bucketful of trophies to prove his greatness in the game. The genial moon-faced Wootton plays intermediate hockey on defence in winter to keep in shape for lacrosse campaigning in the summer. A few years ago a Toronto columnist referred to Wootton as "the Turk Broda of lacrosse"—and the Turk then was rated tops for NHL goaltenders. The Petes will always have winning clubs as long as the Moon shines.

Towering HARRY WIPPER is another great defenceman with the Petes' Trailermen. The lanky dental student at McGill came here three years ago from St. Catharines and has been a big asset offensively and defensively ever since, in league play and throughout playoffs to the Mann Cup. Harry checks closely and he is a good ball-carrier, often being used to rag the ball indefinitely when his team is a man short. Though a popular, good-natured fellow, big Harry has proven more than once that he can handle his dukes like a pro boxer when opponents decide to throw aside gloves and start punching. Big Whip was PMLA coach for the kids here one summer, and they thought he was a great guy. He is.

ROGER SMITH is still of junior age but this is the second time he has played in the Mann Cup finals, stepping up from junior ranks late last summer with the Petes. This fast-stepping young Indian from Brantford—a cousin to team-mate Ross Powless—is definitely senior material. He is a great competitor, a hustler all the way, who fights for the ball every minute he is on the floor, travels fast, checks effectively, passes well and has a hot shot. In fact, young Roger has everything and should become an outstanding star in a few years. He is really good right now. He and Powless team up well together.

LOU NICKLE the other member of the Trailermen's defence department. Large, well-built Lou is only out of junior lacrosse ranks a couple of years, but he fits in fine with the senior champs. He is very solid and speedy, backing up from no one in bumping exchanges, and Nickle hands out a jolting bodycheck. A year ago he was voted most valuable player in the Mann Cup series in Toronto, though Lou usually isn't a high scorer. He plays football for the intermediate Orfuns after the lacrosse season finishes. Lou came here several seasons ago from Toronto to play junior lacrosse, graduating then to the Petes.

DON (NIP) O'HEARN is the "policeman" of the Petes' defence —the strong fellow who softens up unruly rivals. If they want to play it rough, the Nipper will oblige them. He is a genial, good-looking Irishman, hailing from down St Catharines' way, but he'll mix it with any opponent looking for trouble. Nip can take it as well as hand it out—and he never squawks when bumped hard or dumped. He just grins and figures his turn will come again. O'Hearn is an effective checking defenseman and scores his share of goals, also, being a fine team player In the winters he wanders off to play pro hockey as a goalie in Ed Shore's chain. But Nip's home is here.

ROSS POWLESS led the local senior lacrossers in scoring this season with a grand total of 105 points in the 27 OLA games he played. This was the best season yet for the likeable big Indian wingman. He comes from Brantford, but has played in many centres such as in Vancouver a season, over in the States, and in intermediate and senior spots in Ontario. Yet he is only 24 years old: Ross is a hustler after loose balls and he can certainly handle a stick nice going in for a quick shot on goal. The past two years he has received the Tom Longboat Memorial Medal as the best Indian athlete in Ontario. He should be in line to take it again this year.

RUSS SLATER an Owen Sound product, playing lacrosse and hockey there before coming to Peterborough in 1951. He, Curly Mason and Moon Wootton have played on four straight Mann Cup teams. The poker-faced Rusty is one of the finest stallers in lacrosse, taking a terrific beating from rivals but holding onto that ball in uncanny style till he gets a break. Then—bingo!—he is in like a flash to whip his bullet drive into the net. Always well up in scoring, Rusty fools a lot of fans who think he is slow—he is only slow and deliberate when he wants it that way. Otherwise, he can sure roll. Slater is one of the smartest senior lacrosse wingmen in the business. He makes his home here now and plays some intermediate hockey in the district during the winter months.

JOE HICKSON is spare goalie for the Petes. It is an uneviable job because he seldom gets into a game as long as Moon Wootton is available. But Joe is ready in case of injury or absence of the Moon for any other reason, and he is a fine young goaltender, a former junior star, and a native of Peterborough. Hickson keeps in shape and works all the practice sessions, and starred last summer for Hamilton when loaned to that club in an emergency by the Petes. In fact, Joe just about beat his mates himself. A handy young chap to have around the club.

LITLE IKE HILDERBRAND is about the smoothest senior lacrosser in the country. Hailing from New Westminster, B.C., this short winger is a picture to watch when he has the ball. Very deceptive, he knows all the answers and makes rivals look silly frequently as he dekes them out of position to waltz in and score a goal. While still of junior age, he was voted the best player in the Mann Cup series of 1949 when New Westminster Salmonbellies took the trophy. Ike later came east to play hockey for Oshawa Generals and he has strutted his lacrosse stuff for three season with the Petes. However, he always misses Mann Cup series now as he is playing pro hockey for Cleveland Barons of the AHL and must report to them by the middle of September.

JERRY FITZGERALD is generally regarded around the OLA senior circuit as about the best defenceman in the game. This former St. Catharines' star has been of invaluable aid to the Petes the past three seasons, though he missed two of the Mann Cup series. They flew him out late in the 1951 series at Vancouver—Jerry being engaged at Western U. then in football—but Fitz contracted appendicitis and was lost to the team. This year he couldn't make the trip west as he was starting his career as a high school teacher in Toronto. He is a husky, hard-hitting but clean defenceman, very fast, and smart. Fitz sets up a lot of plays and is well up in assists each year. And few rivals get around his side to score.

DON ASHBEE could only play the first three games of this Mann Cup series for the Petes as a valuable wingman, since he had to report then for pro hockey to the AHL Cleveland Barons' training camp at Barrie. He has been with the local club three summers but departs for professional hockey each winter. Don was PMLA coach this summer and taught Lacrosse B Copy Don Ashbee con the minors a lot about the game. He is a scrappy, hustling player who tears into corners after loose balls and checks closely, as well as being a good passer and shot on the offensive. He loves fishing, and one noon hour the past summer caught two nice muskies off the George St. wharf. He also had

Money Waiting

WESTERHAM, England (CP)—Trustees of the Nicholson charity founded by Bishop Nicholson of Carlisle in 1716 are short of beneficiaries. Costly Weeds

VEGREVILLE, Alta. (CP) — A farmer in this district was fined $50 and costs for allowing weeds to grow on his land. He had previously been ordered by an inspector to get rid of the weeds. In addition, he was ordered to destroy about 25 acres of crop that was overgrown with weeds.

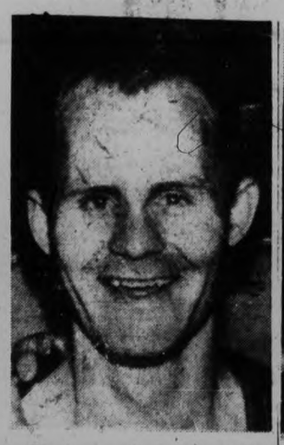
CANADA'S TOP LACROSSE TEAM



Playing coach BOB THORPE is a Port Dalhousie product and played hockey and lacrosse in many centres before coming here three years ago to make his home. This is his second season as playing coach, and he is a star centre and a heady, fast player. Thorpe dropped out of pro hockey a year ago to play in the TVL for pastime, but he had been all over the States as a puckist for some years in Ed Shore's large chain. The canny Thorpe doesn't try to score too many goals himself but likes to build up plays and he also gives youngsters every chance in league play. But he can go in there himself and light that lamp when a goal is badly needed. Bob is quite popular with players and fans, and will likely coach the club again next year.

JACK (CURLY) MASON is the ace centre of the Petes, bewildering opposing club by invariably getting about two-thirds the face-off draws. While Bob Thorpe is very good at this, too, no one anywhere can touch the former Owen Sounder at drawing that ball to a teammate. Short and heavy, it takes Curly a time to work into shape but he is very hot the last half of the season and one of the aces up front for the Thorpe team the past three years. This is his fourth straight Mann Cup title, as he helped Owen Sound capture it in 1950. Curly, who makes his home here, is a former senior "A" hockeyist, too, and played the past two winters for the senior "B" Petes.

GARY ROBINSON is one of the ex-juniors carried by the Petes, and he saw quite a bit of senior action this past season as a forward. He is an aggressive young player and starred in junior ranks before moving up. A faithful attendant at all practices and games, he is likely to fill a regular berth with the senior club in the not too distant future. Gary plays hockey in TVL during the winter.

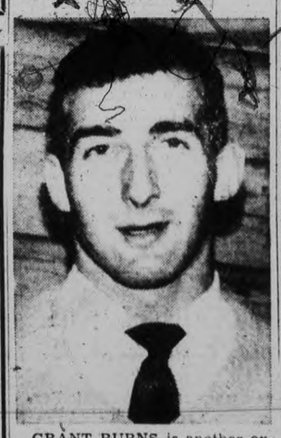
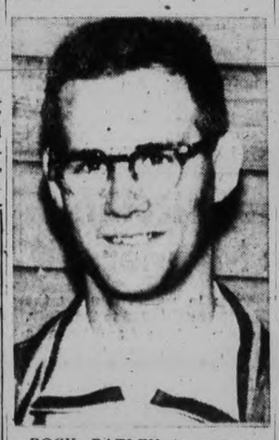
DOOTCH VITARELLI (like Mick Magee) is a Peterborough lacrosse veteran with a lengthy list of valuable service to his credit. He has been threatening the past few years to put away his equipment for good, so this may be his last active season. Dootch is a heady forward, a real scrapper and is always in fine condition. He formerly played hockey and was with the Legion squad several years ago when they won the provincial senior "B" championship. He also is a first-rate golfer at the Kawartha Club.

BRIAN (RED) ROBINSON stepped up to senior lacrosse with the Trailermen the past summer after shining in junior company for Lou Vitarelli's squad. The redhead is a natural athlete and should soon make a regular senior when he gains the experience necessary. He is fairly husky and quite speedy, and was a star in OHA junior "B" ranks and in Trent Valley League hockey during the cold season.

MICK MAGEE only played a few games for the Petes this year but then he wasn't expected to play any—as he had hung up his gear a year ago. Felt he was too old, and Mick is in his 40s. But he came out to help them several times when the team was short-handed, due to summer vacations. Mick is co-manager with Bob Curtin this year, and he turned down an OLA offer to referee. A first-rate all-around athlete, Magee is always in perfect shape. He plays defence in lacrosse now when needed, but feels he is nearly finished. Mick shone for years in senior lacrosse and football, and he went in for a dozen other sports in a colorful career, once playing hockey in Florid... A fine fellow.

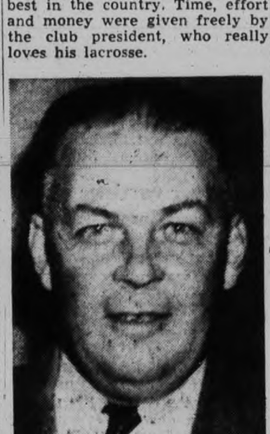


GRANT BURNS is another ex-junior carried by the senior Petes' Trailermen this year and used fairly frequently in league play. Like other youngsters of the team,



ROCK BATLEY is a former junior lacrosser acting as a sub on the senior squad this year. He played quite a few OLA games with the Petes and gave a good account of himself. The Rock packs a hard shot and he is a rugged youngster who fights fiercely every minute he is in the fray. He often helps out in the PMLA as a referee, and he plays a good game in goal in hockey, performing in the TVL last winter.

DERRY DAVIES of St. Catharines joined the Trailermen for the cup series out west as one of the CLA replacements allowed for Jerry Fitzgerald and Ike Hildebrand. The husky Derry goes equally well on defence or the attack, and was one of the Athletics' stars during the season when St. Kitts led the locals till the final few weeks of the 30-day OLA campaign. Davis gladly accepted the Petes' bid to make the trip and get into the big playoff series.



KEN (WEINER) CROFT went west with the Petes as one of the two replacements the club was allowed for the Mann Cup series, since Ike Hildebrand and Jerry Fitzgerald didn't make the trip. Croft was a star all season with the Orillia Yorks and gave the Trailermen plenty of trouble in scheduled and playoff games, so they promptly invited him to travel to British Columbia with them. He is a speedy, experienced forward, always well up in league scoring.

3 Mann Cups In Three Years As President

President Bob Peirson of the Peterborough Trailermen has the proud distinction of having headed the club for just three years—but three Mann Cup winning years. He took over the presidency in 1951, held it last year, and tried unsuccessfully to step down last spring, being urged to stay in office for one more Mann Cup triumph. He did and is quite happy about it.

Mr. Peirson sponsored the senior lacrosse club here twice as the Timbermen, but the team was taken under sponsorship this year by Harry McGinness, well-known local manufacturer of trailers. And the crew became know as the Trailermen.

Along with his executive, Bob Peirson has put a lot of behind-the-scenes work into fashioning this powerful playing team— the best in the country. Time, effort and money were given freely by the club president, who really loves his lacrosse.

PETES' PRESIDENT — Bob Peirson, president of the Petes' senior lacrosse club, has held that post for the past three years—and every year the club has won the Mann Cup and Canadian championship. Bob has been a member of the club executive here for some years.

Railway Builder Presented $2,500 Solid Gold Cup To Canada Lacrosse Champs

The Mann Cup was presented by the late Sir Donald Mann, builder of the Canadian Northern Railway. It is a solid gold cup valued at $2,500, and is one of the most valuable trophies in sport. The Mann Cup originally was a challenge trophy.

Following are the winners to this year since the cup was first put up for competition: 1910, Young Toronto, Toronto; 1911-12-13-14, VAC of Vancouver; 1915-16-17, New Westminster; 1918 Coughlans of Vancouver; 1919 Foundation Club of Victoria, B.C.; 1920 to 1925, New Westminster; 1926, Weston, Ont.; 1927, New Westminster; 1928. Salmonacs Capture Lacrosse Minto Cup

By BILL SENYK

TORONTO (CP)—The Minto Cup found a new home Thursday night.

New Westminster Salmonacs claimed the Canadian junior lacrosse trophy from the East, where it has been for three years.

The Salmonacs won with a decisive 14-8 victory over Long Branch Monarchs, eastern junior champions, in the suburban Mimico lacrosse bowl.

A capacity crowd of 1,400 saw the Salmonacs break loose with a seven-goal uprising in the fourth quarter to turn the see-saw battle into a runaway. The victory gave New Westminster a 3-2 edge in games in the best-of-five series.

New Westminster won the opener 16-14 in overtime and stretched their season's winning streak to 27 with a 14-10 victory in the second game of the final. Then the Monarchs won the third game 16-6 and forced the series to the limit with an 8-7 decision in the fourth.

GAVE EARLY JUMP

The determined Salmonacs gave Long Branch a 2-0 jump early in the game Thursday night but recovered to take a 3-2 lead at the end of the first quarter. Long Branch never again got the jump on New Westminster.

In 11 years of fighting for the Minto Cup, the West has won it three times. All winners were British Columbia teams and two of their championships were decided on eastern grounds. British Columbia won the last title in 1949. Last year's winners, Ontario's Brampton Excelsiors, this year were eliminated by Long Branch in the semi-finals.

Salmonacs' goaltender Ron Delmonico was their ace. In four of the five games he turned away more drives than his rival netminder Porky Russell.

CARRIED BRUNT

Ivan Gujar, speedy Negro forward, carried the brunt of he scoring for New Westminster before he was injured late in Thursday's game. He set a goal-a-quarter pace and assisted on another marker to earn five points during the night. In the fourth quarter, he suffered a gash under his left eye when he missed a check and flew headlong into the boards. He did not resume play, but it was learned after the game that his injury was not serious.

Gujar's effort was aided by Jack Barclay, Barry Pfaff and Cliff Sepka, each with two counters. Don Sepka, Stan Cowie, Murray Duncan and Harry Kelleher scored singles.

Howard Smith, Denny McIntosh and Peter Ruse paced the Long Branch attack, each scoring a pair. Singles by Larry Ruse and Jack Walton completed Monarchs' scoring.

HAD TO FIGHT

Arriving in the East with a clean slate of 25 successive victories, they won two more and then were stricken by food poisoning just before their first loss last Friday.

The fourth game was postponed twice.

They shook off the illness, but while practising for the game were weakened when key forward Barry Pfaff injured his ankle and missed that game.

The playing field also was strange to the westerners. New Westminster had previously played on wooden or concrete floors. The Canadian final was held in an open air arena on an earthen floor.

But the Salmonacs had no beefs.

"It was worth it," coach Truck MacDonald grinned after the final game.

FIGHT SECRET OUT

NEW YORK (AP)—It's almost a secret in the big town but lanky James J. Parker, the Toronto heavyweight, and Jimmy Slade, New York heavyweight contender, are going to meet in a telecast 10-rounder at St. Nicholas Arena tonight.

Thursday night's Rocky Marciano-Roland LaStarza heavyweight title bout has completely blanketed out news of any other fisticuffing activity around here.

Slade just got the bout the other day when Danny Nardico, Parker's original opponent, was forced to bow out because of illness. Jimmy is the fifth ranking light heavyweight and a legitimate 175-pounder. He will spot the six-foot-three Parker about 25 pounds.

Kawarthas Almost Beyond Restoring To Former State

Peterborough Kiwanis held their annual fall outing at Theona Lodge on Chemong Lake, Thursday evening. Hugh Plowman, president of the Peterborough Fish and Game Association addressed the group of 54 with a talk on conservation.

"Conditions in the Kawartha Lake district have reached the stage where it is difficult to ascertain whether the lakes and forests can ever be restored to their former state. The natural habitat of fish and game has already been seriously depleted. Excessive and unplanned timber clearing have caused many areas to dry up with the consequent loss of fertile topsoil.

"Not only is the fertile soil disappearing from the land, but, it is being washed into the lakes and creating such a fertile lake bottom for weeds, that soon the fish will be "literally squeezed out."

PLANKTON BEING LOST

All young fry live on microscopic organisms in the water called plankton. This plankton is being buried in the silt that washes into the lake every time it rains. Nuisance fish, such as carp, rock bass and sunfish make their home in the sheltered weed beds and eat all the surplus plankton which may escape silting.

"We must face the problem in an unselfish manner," said Plowman. "The results of our work will not be seen in our time but in that of our children and grandchildren. Cottage owners and farmers can improve conditions on their own lake fronts by planting bushes. Anything to hold the ground firm against the rush of rain water and wind.

"Many excellent trout streams have become uninhabitable for that particular game fish because of timber clearance. Steady shading can lower water temperatures 10 degrees and more, and since speckled trout cannot live in waters over 60 degrees, this is an important factor. Many of the streams that have been stocked by the government in this area are giving up a lower number of fish than that put in, indicating that the streams are not fit habitat for the fish.

PLANT WILLOWS

A simple means of restoring these streams to their former coolness and clearness, is the planting of willow trees. "This can be done simply," said Plowman. "Willow branches placed end first in the shore soil will take root quickly and soon provide the shade and protection that the fish need. Another thing that is helpful is the placing of old logs in a half submerged position. The current will form an eddy at such a spot and eventually create a deep pool which the speckles will seek for cover and food.

"Many trout clubs will rent a stream and once it is fished out, will move on to another without spending $10.00 to restore the old one."

Mr. Plowman pointed out that there were two and a half million acres of land in Ontario not fit for farming and should be timbered. "The government will plant trees free of charge and if the township or county wishes to purchase the grown trees, they merely have to pay for the labor. Otherwise the government will bu ythe land if the county or township so wish.

Forest fires in Ontario this year were the worst in history and if something isn't done soon, there will be no timber left and this country will become the desert that so many others have in the past. But long before the eventual desert, the tourist trade will die. Fish and game, the big attraction here for steady tourists, is being rapidly depleted and no gain will take place until something is done about the reforestation of this country."

"The time has come to enlist everyone's aid," he concluded. "The job is getting too big for the official conservationists alone."

Lindsay Fair Keeps Rolling In Bert McLean Manner

Probably the dairy cattle show was not the only attraction at Lindsay Fair, Thursday, for Norman McConkey, Manson Cathcart and Harold Millen.

There is also a midway up there under the name of Conklin Brothers and Patty Conklin was reported around the grounds in the afternoon in addition to a trip to Peterborough in the morning. Seven gets five, as they say in midway company, that one or more of these directors happened to meet Mr. Conklin and drift into discussion of the Peterborough show.

Apparently the Conklin rides and games and various other stuff occupy nearly one-quarter of the Lindsay park.

Autumn haze and a clear, blue sky wove a perfect backdrop for the fair. The grandstand was about half full, and the attedance generally was about enough to show a profiti. The peak days at Lindsay are usually Friday and Saturday.

Three or four Peterborough merchants and manufacturers have display booths in the exhibits building.

LEFT VACANCY

The death of Bert McLean, manager of the fair, a few months ago, left a vacancy at the helm that has been only temporarily filled. Ray Weldon, Lindsay business man, was pressed into the job in the emergency of finding a successor to Mr. McLean.

Mr. Weldon is on the top level of Lindsay's successful business men, and appears to have all the qualification required to keep the fair moving at its present momentum. He may be lacking the gift of ballyhoo with which Bert McLean pushed the Lindsay Exhibition into the Ontario forefront, ballyhoo, plus industry, friendliness, courage and decision in taking chances, all hooked up with getting around the country and taking his show in all directions.

Junior Champs Presented With Minto Cup

The Minto Cup is emblematic of the junior "A" lacrosse championship of Canada and was won last year by Brampton after series in Winnipeg and Vancouver. Peterborough played against Brampton in junior competition during the O.L.A. season.

It is a beautiful silver trophy donated by Lord Minto in 1901 for lacrosse competition in the Dominion. Lord Minto was then the Governor-General of Canada. It was amateur competition until 1904. The cup was placed under trustees. The present Lord Minto of England, whose father donated the cup, was advised of it when the donor died, and he officially transferred the cup to the care of the Canadian Lacrosse Association. It was then placed into competition for the junior championship of Canada.

The Duke and Duchess of York —later King George V and Queen Mary—were present at the first game played for the Minto Cup, between Capitals of Ottawa and Cornwall in Ottawa in1901.

For a time the Minto Cup was put into competition for all-star teams selected from each province. Now it is a case of the best eastern team playing the winners in the west for this prized junior lacrosse trophy, the final series being in the east one year and in the west the next. It was won by Brampton in British Columbia last autumn.

After a keen series the past two weeks in Mimico, New Westminster defeated Long Branch three games to two for this year's Minto Cup title.

Grattan B Wins Lindsay Race

LINDSAY (ENS)—Grattan B, owned by W. L. Ireland and driven by Wally King, was the winner of the 2.17 pace on Thursday's harness program of the Lindsay Central Exhibition, placing first, with the fastest time in the second heat and finishing in place position twice. Buddy C. Grattan, owned by Clarence Budd and driven by Ross Dowson, was second with a first and two thirds, while the third heat winner, Daisy P. Grattan, was third with a fourth, second and win.

The times were good on the fast track with the winner turning in a 2.12 1-5 timing in the second heat. Buddy C. Grattan was clocked in 2.15 4-5 in the first heat and Daisy P. Grattan in 2.13 1-5 in the final heat.

In the 2.25 class, Ann Sultan, owned and driven by L. M. Blight, of Brooklin, was a three-heat winner in the four-horse race. Second was Virginia Fleet, and Dr. Director placed third. Times were 2.29, 2.25 4-5, and 2.24.3-5.

Chuck Rayner Signs With Saskatoon

SASKATOON (CP)—Chuck Rayner, former goalie with New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, has signed with Saskatoon Quakers of the Western Hockey League.

Rayner, regular goaltender with Rangers until a knee injury sidelined him twice last season, has been in the Quaker training camp here since Sept. 14. Rayner said he now is physically fit.

KEYSTONER WINS JUG

DELAWARE, O. (AP) — Keystoner, owned by George H. Tipling of Cleveland, Thursday won the Little Brown Jug $55,000 race for three-year-old pacers.

Keystoner, first Ohio horse ever to win the classic, won the third and fourth heats. The final heat was a three-way event between Keystoner, Newport Chief and Hillsota, who had divided the first three heats.

Keystoner picked up $21,255.93. Newport Chief was second in the run-off heat and Hillsota, which broke just before the wire, was third.

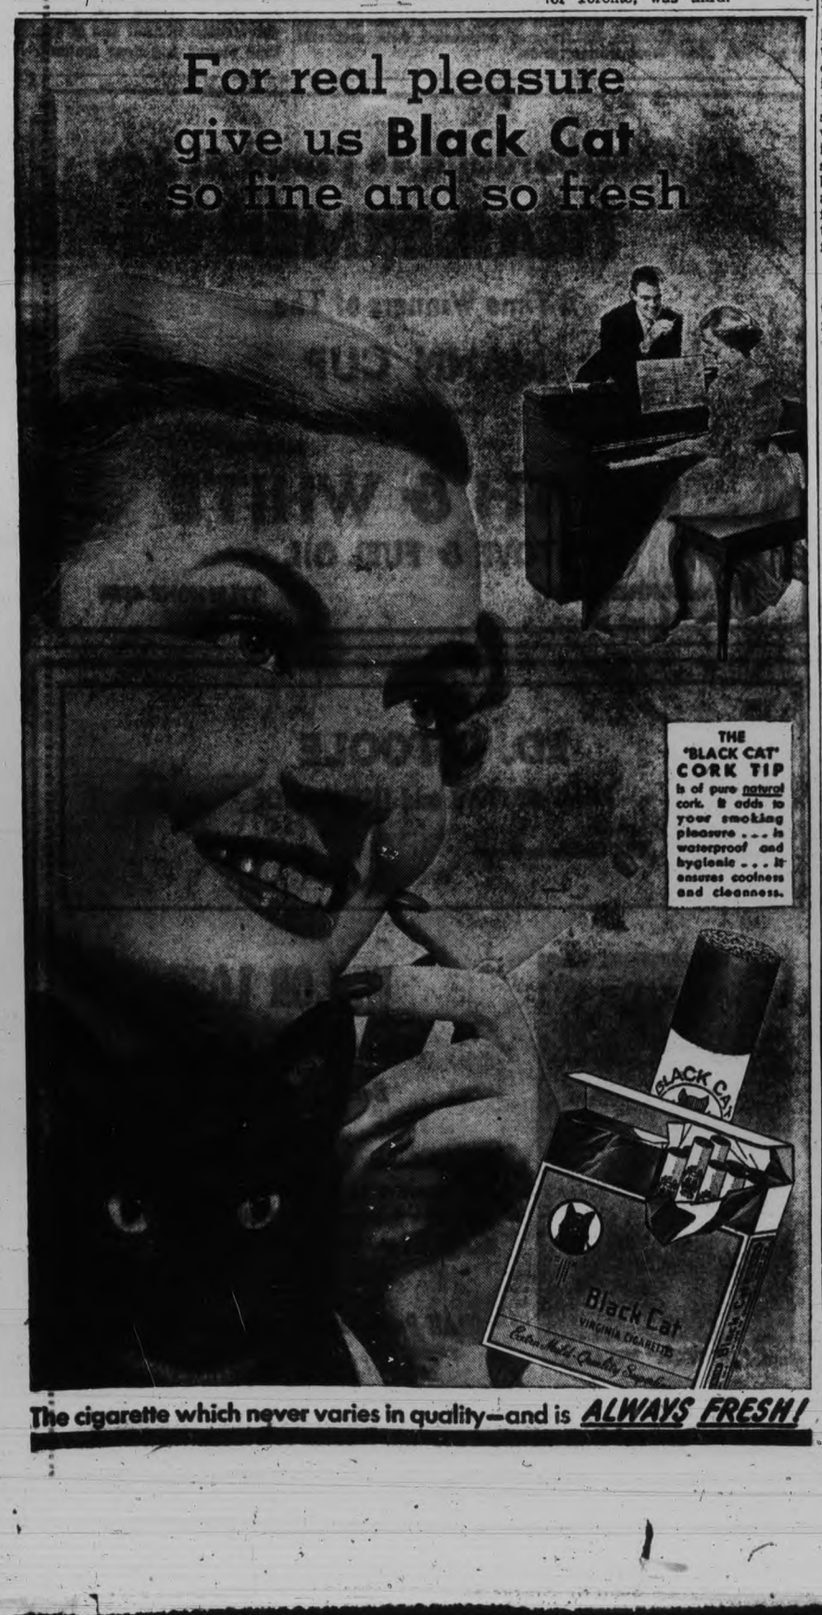
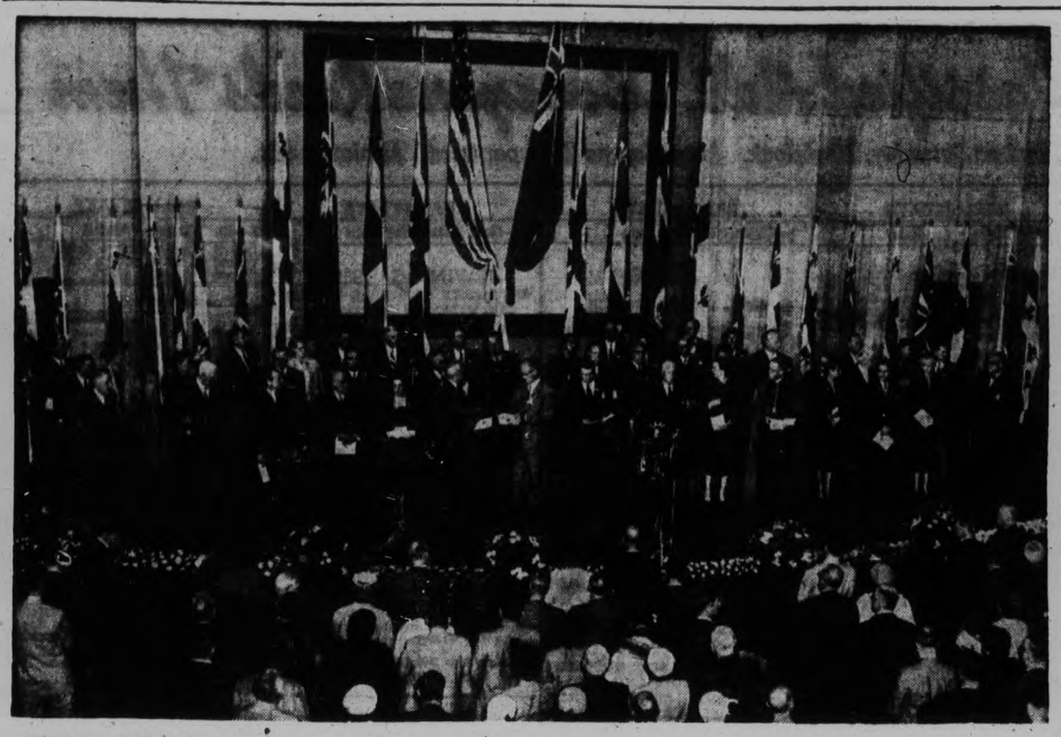
TRAILERMEN





PRIME MINISTER LOUIS ST. LAURENT and J. O. Asselin, chairman of the city of Montreal executive committee and president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalitjes, chat briefly as distinguished delegates and guests to the International Municipal Congress take their places at the University of Montreal, for the closing meeting of the congress. The Prime Minister made the main address to the assembled Canadian and American Mayors and their wives and publicly greeted for the first time R. Douglas Stuart, newly appointed American ambassador to Canada, fourth from Mr. St. Laurent's left.

Australians Measure Worms In Feet And Pounds

WASHINGTON—In Australia, where odd beasts are the rule rather than the exception, even the lowly earthworm is unique.

Of the world's 1,800 species of worms, the Australian Megascolides holds clear title as the world's largest. The giant crawlers average four to six feet long and occasionally span 11 feet. Some are an inch thick and weigh a pound or more.

Originally believed to exist only in Victoria's fertile Bass Valley, the creatures have also been uncovered recently in several sections of Queensland. Naturalists excavated them from tunnels large enough to house snakes and lizards.

NOISY TENANTS

Loud gurgles and weird bubbling sounds beneath the ground first attracted the scientists. The groans are caused, they later discovered, by contracti[illegible] of the worm's body as it b[illegible] into the soil.

Pulled from its hole, the crawler is apt to break into numerous segments. But once unraveled to full length above ground its tough, elastic skin is difficult to cut with a knife. A muscular, bulbous head used in locomotion and digging is slightly fuller than the rest of the body.

When captured, the giant worm sprays jets of fluid like a leaky hose. Secreted from dorsal pores, the coelomic liquid is normally used to lubricate the burrows for easier passage. It also serves as a defense against soil bacteria and parasites.

Its cocoon or egg capsule, measuring up to an inch and a half in length, is glossy, sausage-shaped, and olive brown in color. Newly hatched worms are a mere six inches long.

PLATYPUS DELICACY

The giant worms are a favorite food of the duck-billed platypus, another member of Australia's cross-word puzzle menagerie. The platypus gulps down a half-dozen Megascolides at a sitting.

To make life at New York's Bronx Zoo worth while for three platypuses brought from Australia in 1947, the zoo developed the world's biggest earthworm-breeding farm in the cellar of the lion house.

Proposals to import the Australian earthworm to America to help fertilize farmlands have been vetoed by United States authorities. They fear the giant may carry plant diseases inside its body.

Someone Tinkers With Sun Dial

OTTAWA (CP)—Someone's been tinkerng with the Parliament Hill sundial.

Thursday it was running two hours behind the Peace Tower clock and, making an allowance for daylight saving, that makes it still an hour off.

Dominion astronomer C. S. Beals said "this matter has not come to our attention," but added:

"Normally a sundial is not too bad a teller of time. If properly constructed and located, it should be accurate to within five minutes."

Tourists or children playing in the vicinity are believed to have knocked the sundial's gnomon. That's the triangular piece of copper which throws a shadow on the sundial's base, giving the time.

FREEDOM SINCE 1912

Freedom of the press has been guaranteed in the Swedish constitution since 1912.

Search Called Off

HALIFAX (CP) — RCAF Maritime air command announced Thursday night that the search for a Mont Laurier Airways plane missing in northern Quebec since Aug. 25 has been discontinued. The plane, carrying seven men, disappeared on a flight from Fort Chimo, near Ungava Bay, to Roberval, 100 miles north of Quebec City. A last effort spurred by reports of faint radio signals that might have come from the lost plane found nothing.

Beaver Policy Paying Off

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec fish and game department announces that a plan enforced in 1932 to prevent extinction of beavers is beginning to pay off.

Quebec's beaver population reached 150,000 this year, according to an official count, while 21 years ago they were so scarce the government invoked a complete trapping ban.

Out of Quebec's thriving beaver reserves last year $265,000 worth of furs was trapped by Indian tribes living in northern regions extending from James bay to the western rim of desolate Ungava.

Compared with last year's 19,300 skins this year's total is expected to reach a record production of 21,500 skins, perhaps even more, and this increase "will continue from year to year," a department spokesman said.

GOLD MINERS ON STRIKE—Members of the striking United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) huddle in a sleet storm as they picket McIntyre Mines at Timmins, one of Canada's biggest gold producers. Employees of five other mines in Timmins and Noranda, Que., also are on strike over wages, working hours and union security.

St. Aidan's WA Plans Fall Rummage Sale

SELWYN (ENS)—Mrs. Elizabeth Bland was hostess to the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Aidan's Church, Young's Point, at her summer cottage on Lake Katchewanooka, on Tuesday evening. Co-hostesses with Mrs. Bland were Mrs. Freid and Mrs. Edwards.

Mrs. D. Darling presided. The secretary read the minutes of the last meeting and gave a financial report of the past year's activities. In this report it was stated that $445.76 had been realized from the summer garden party and the total amount for the year that was raised by the WA totalled almost $700.

Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Freid were given a vote of thanks for their help at the summer bazaar.

All who can, were asked by the president to attend the deanery meeting at St. George's Church, Peterborough on Oct. 8. A rummage sale was planned and will be held in the parish hall on Oct. 24. Mr. Bevan Monks presided for the election of officers which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. D. Darling, returned by acclamation; secretary, Mrs. B. Berry; treasurer, Mrs. K. Piercey; Dorcas secretary, Mrs. A. MacNaughton; cent-a-day convener, Mrs. B. Monks; visiting convener, Mrs. Leo Traynor; educational secretary, Mrs. B. Monks.

Mr. Monks spoke briefly to the ladies and praised them highly for their work.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mr. Monks and a delightful supper was served by Mrs. Bland and her helpers.

The moving pictures are being started again for the winter and the first one entitled "War Path" will be shown in the parish hall, Young's Point, on Saturday evening, Sept. 26th.

Euchre parties are also planned for the winter and they will begin on Oct. 7, sponsored by St. Aidan's Church.

Polio Declines

WINNIPEG (CP)—Sixteen new cases of polio and no deaths were reported Thursday by Manitoba health officials. Dr. M. R. Elliott, deputy health minister, said the decline of the polio incidence in the Winnipeg epidemic area is encouraging. Of all cases reported last week—first week of school—only three were children of school age.

No Religious Knowledge

WINNIPEG (CP)—The head of the Salvation Army in Canada said Thursday the youth of today is a generation that cannot recite the Lord's Prayer. Commissioner William R. Dalziel of Toronto said youth is not any worse than the youth of other generations, but "they are the second and third generation of a people who have grown up with no attachment to organized religion."

Crown Attorney

you would tell the story they decided?"

"Yes," replied Roy.

He was allowed to testify—not under oath—and gave the same evidence as his father. Pressed by Crown Attorney Bradshaw as to who had given him the essential parts of the story (time and circumstances of the visit), Roy said: "Dad told me."

Albert Taylor, a guide and fisherman, said he also had called around to the island where Leonard lived by himself on the morning of May 1. He said he wanted to borrow a fishing pole.

"What!" exclaimed Crown Attorney Bradshaw. "You make your living by guiding and fishing and you have to borrow a fishing pole. Do you expect us to believe that?"

Albert Taylor said he wanted a steel pole but he couldn't remember any details about the pole—or even if it had a reel.

"I saw Leonard Taylor coming down a hill on the reserve with his dog, before dinner," said Mrs. Margaret Knott. "It was about 11.30 a.m."

Mrs. Knott said that she also saw him about 5.30 p.m. after she came home from Peterborough where she went to pay a bill.

Leonard Taylor will testify on his own behalf when the case resumes at 2.30 p.m. Monday.

Deny Buying Site

TORONTO (CP)—The T. Eaton Company today denied a Sarnia report that it has plans for buying a site for a department store there. A company spokesman said today the report may have been caused by a visit of an Eaton real-estate man to the city Thursday but "the only thing he bought in Sarnia was his lunch."

Will Produce Ammunition

PARIS (AP)—The North Atlantic council, government body of NATO, today announced plans to produce a billion dollars worth of ammunition in Western Europe. The United States will pay part of the bill, but U. S. officials asked the amount of the American share be kept secret.

Britain's Lord Ismay, NATO secretary-general, called it the "biggest single program ever presented to the Atlantic alliance."

Object of the plan is to get West European factories to manufacture ammunition so the Allies can stop depending on U. S. output.

"It will be financed by producing countries and by offshore procurement under the United States mutual security program," Ismay told reporters.

Each country will have to decide whether to go along with the plan.

Five Companies Fined $10,000 For Combine

TORONTO (CP)—Five Canadian rubber companies were fined $10,000 each today for operating a combine and price fixing since 1936.

The five companies, Goodyear, Dominion, Gutta Percha, Dunlop and B. F. Goodrich, had pleaded guilty April 8 before Mr. Justice R. W. Treleaven, who read the judgments today.

An injunction restraining them from any further combine activities was granted to the crown. The companies said they will appeal against the order.

Child 8, Awarded $25,000 Damages

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—A fall assizes jury here Thursday awarded $25,000 damages to eight-year-old Linda Anderson for injuries suffered when struck by a Bell Telephone Company truck Sept. 18, 1951. The jury also awarded Douglast Anderson, father of the girl, $3,367.90 in medical expenses.

It laid blame for the accident to negligence by the company and Richard H. Linklater, driver.

Injuries to the child which despite 30 operations will result in permanent lameness, impaired sight and partial paralysis were described in medical testimony.

Young Cheerleader Dies After Game

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—A 15-year-old East 2Lansing high school cheerleader collapsed and died Thursday night shortly after a football game between her school and a Lansing school.

Diane Rinkes was walking off the field with three other cheerleaders and her father when she complained of being dizzy. The girl was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

Her father said the girl had passed the physical examination required of all cheerleaders.

Industrial Display By Booming Germany

BONN (AP) — Disarmed West Germany showed American and West European military officials today how its booming industries can produce supplies for the future European Army.

With army, navy and air force officers of seven countries watching, the Germans unveiled an exhibition of equipment ranging from portable tents to massive trucks capable of transporting heavy artillery.

There were no weapons on display since the Allies still prohibit the production of guns and planes in West Germany.

100 Champions

couver in the Canadian finals for the Mann cup.

This year, under the title of Trailermen, Peterborough's senior lacrosse team again won the Mann Cup by winning four games in a five-game series against Victoria Shamrocks.

Peterborough's juvenile lacrosse club are also eligible for the awards because, although they lost out in the Dominion finals in Winnipeg last year, they had already won the Ontario championship.

One of last year's championship teams, Peterborough Orfuns, who took the Ontario Rugby Football Intermediate A title, look as though they may repeat that performance this year. Like the senior lacrosse team, they'll be eligible on both counts if they pull the trick.

Also eligible from last year are the UEW soccer team who defeated Kingston to win the Ontario Intermediate title for 1952.

Two more people qualified for the awards last year. They are Mrs. Maurice Charlton and Verna Rose who won the Ontario ladies' doubles B badminton title in Toronto.

Dr. Ralph Clark's curling rink, who won the Ontario title last year, would have been eligible for the crests but the city presented them with rings earlier.

Add the 12 members of the Ornamental swimming team and you find there are 102 people eligible for the crests—20 on the senior lacrosse team, 18 juveniles, 36 members of the Orfuns squad, 14 on the UEW soccer team and two badminton players.

2,300 Workers Laid Off At Ford

WINDSOR (CP)—A union official said Thursday that some 2,300 Ford of Canada employees have been laid off because of the shift of final assembly operations from here to the new Ford plant at Oakville.

President Charles McDonald of United Automobile Workers (CIO) local here said the company's offer to help these men in securing jobs at Oakville or in other plants here was "just a gesture at the most" because "less than 10 per cent of the Windsor workers made unemployed have been accepted at Oakville."

The president of the largest one-plant union in Canada said in a statement that he was notified that some 980 more workers will be laid off Oct. 5 and their jobs transferred to the Oakville plant.

Impact of the move to Oakville was "already greater than company officials promised it would be."

After Oct. 5, he said, there will be no Ford production employees on the job with less seniority than August, 1948.

Three Nations In Agreement On Policy For Truce Talks

Believe U.K. Pilot Sets Second World Speed Mark

CASTEL IDRIS, Libya (Reuters)—British jet pilot Michael Lithgow today flashed across the Libyan desert in an attempt to better his 737.3 mph world air speed record set Friday. After completing the attempt, the pilot zoomed into a double victory roll over the Royal Air Force field here, showing he believed he had bettered Friday's effort. Lithgow had carefully checked overnight repairs made on instruments of his Supermarine Swift in a trial flight earlier today. The plane's cooling system and fuel supply had developed defects on his record run.

He had to fly the cigar-shaped, stubby little fighter at least 734.876 miles an hour to take the laurels away from Duke. Duke piloted his Hawker Hunter to 727.6 mph, but international regulations demand one per cent in excess of that speed.

IN FOUR PASSES

Lithgow made the record in four lightning passes over the three-kilometre course set up along a scorching-hot road through the desert near here.

Royal Aero Club observers immediately went to work to calculate the plane's exact speed, and several hours later announced the victory for Lithgow and the Vickers-Armstrong Company which manufactures the Swift.

The Royal Aero Club's communique said Lithgow made these speeds in his four passes: 743.6, 729.5, 745.3 and 730.7—for the average of 737.3 mph.

The Swift was powered by an F-4 Rolls-Royce Avon engine.

Lithgow said the tensest moment came when his face mask filled up with sweat and he had to take a hand off the controls to rip it away while he thundered low over the course.

U.S., Spain Sign 20-Year Defence Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Spain today signed a 20-year defence agreement giving the U.S. the right to develop and use naval and air bases on Spanish soil and assuring Spain military equipment from the United States.

The action brought Franco's Spain into partnership with the United States in the West's defence against the danger of Soviet attack.

Ambassador James C. Dunn and Spanish Foreign Minister Alberto Martin Artajo also signed economic assistance and mutual defence assistance agreements, the latter spelling out the specific conditions under which Spain will receive military aid.

The state department released the text of the three agreements together with a statement saying that assistance to Spain totalling $226,000,000 will be supplied under the mutual security program during the fiscal year ending next June 30.

$85 MILLIONS

The announcement said that $85,000,000 will be for defence support assistance — meaning various uses in some way contributing to the development of military strength —and $141,000,000 for actual military equipment.

A major aim of the U.S. aid to Spain is to modernize, in some degree and over a period of years, the Franco government's army and naval forces. The army now is estimated at 30 divisions.

The specific bases, to be initially developed by the United States at a cost in addition to the $226,000,000 for Spanish aid, were not named in the defence agreement.

The agreements became effective upon signature and the main defence agreement stated that it would be in force "for a period of 10 years, automatically extended for two successive periods of five years" unless formally terminated by either party.

Bandit, FBI Man Shot To Death In Gun-Battle

BALTIMORE (AP) — A west coast desperado was killed and a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent fatally wounded Friday night in a blazing gun battle at a downtown movie house.

Most of the movie audience, absorbed with the crime picture on the screen, didn't realize a squad of FBI men was shooting it out with the trapped gunman.

Shot to death in a phone booth as he tried to place a call to Los Angeles was John Elgin Johnson, 34-year-old former bank robber wanted for parole violation and as a murder suspect.

Agent J. Brady Murphy, 36, of the local FBI office, was shot in the lower abdomen and died today at hospital. Agent Ray Fox, 39, was shot in the hip.

They were leading a squad of FBI men up the steps when Johnson — being stalled by a Los Angeles operator on his call until officers could get there—suddenly turned and opened fire through the glass door of the booth.

Settle Saar Tiff Then EDC Treaty

CAEN, France (Reuters)—Premier Joseph Laniel said today his government will not ask Parliament to ratify the European defence treaty until France's quarrel with Germany over the Saar's future is settled.

He told a meeting at this Second World War battle scene his government also wants further guarantees from Britain on its association with the six-country army before the EDC treaty is ratified.

Britain has refused to contribute troops directly to those of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands in the proposed international army, but has signified willingness for close association with the organization.

New Mineral Find

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Duplessis Friday announced discovery of "between 50,000,000 and 60,000,000 tons of high-grade iron ore" 80 miles north of Havre St. Pierre, about 400 miles east of Quebec City. Mr. Duplessis told his Friday press conference the discovery is another proof the whole Ungava territory is rich in mineral ores.

A RENFREW MAN, 63-year-old Rupert Hewlett, died in Civic Hospital about 1:00 a.m. today when his car (top photo) skidded out of control and crashed into the side of a towtruck on Number 7 highway, about a half mile west of Havelock. J. A. Jewell of Havelock ,driver of the tow truck (bottom photo), looks over the damage to his truck. He was siting in his tow truck with the driver of another vehicle that had skidded into the ditch, when the accident occurred. The truck was well off the highway, and flares were set out as the pair waited for the arrival of Provincial Police from Campbellford, before removing the first car from the ditch. Rain was falling at the time of the crash, making the highway slippery. —(W. W. Reid Photos)

Champs Straggle Back To Peterboro'

They're back. After straggling into Toronto on three different flights from Vancouver, the Peterborough Trailermen slipped into the city today with the Mann Cup, symbolic of the Canadian senior lacrosse championship. Tired after waiting two days for plane reservations out of Vancouver to Malton, the Trailermen will take a couple of hours out for some sleep, then fresh and happy they'll appear at the civic reception being held tonight in their honor.

Most of the Trailermen have had only a few hours sleep since winning the Cup on Wednesday night.

Immediately after the title-winning game, the Trailermen were the guests at a party, held near the Peterborough club's hotel, the Strathcona. Incidentally the party was arranged either as a victory or goodwill banquet by the Shamrock lacrosse club before the series even began. The final arrangements were made just prior to the fifth game, indicating that the Rocks fully expected the Trailermen to end the series that night.

The Trailermen's victory dinner lasted into the wee hours of Thursday morning and ended on a keynote of friendship, any ill feelings between the teams forgotten.

The Trailermen didn't spend Thursday morning and afternoon sleeping. Alarm clocks and telephones began to buzz at 7 a.m. calling the first group of players to breakfast before leaving Victoria for Vancouver at 9:15 a.m. The second group was awakened at 9 a.m. leaving the Rocks' home two hours later.

There in Vancouver the trouble began. The TCA asked the club to break up their 24-seat block on a midnight flight from Vancouver into two groups, one leaving at 8.45 p.m. Thursday and the other at 12.45 a.m. Friday. The club agreed.

Harry Wipper left early Thursday afternoon and then the first group including Rock Batley, Ross Powless, Rog Smith, Gary Robinson and others took off Thursday night. It appeared that everything would go according to plan, a Toronto get-together and then a Peterborough home-coming. Friday night.

But Mother Nature just didn't like the team's plans.

Renfrew Man Dies In Accident Near Havelock

HAVELOCK—(ENS) — Rupert Hewlett, 37, of Crumb St., Renfrew, died at 1 a.m. today from injuries received when his car skidded out of control on the wet highway near Havelock and crashed into a tow truck. He was treated by Dr. D. J. Holdcroft of Havelock and taken by ambulance to Civic Hospital where he died nearly four hours later of a fractured skull and other head injuries.

The accident occurred at the end of a dangerous curve on Highway 7, a half mile east of Havelock. A 1949-model car, driven by George Charles of Carlotta St., Eastview, had previously rolled over in the ditch and a tow truck from Jewell's Garage was standing by waiting for the Provincial Police to arrive when Hewlett came around the curve.

His eastbound car skidded and went off the paved surface, striking the tow truck on the platform. Hewlett was thrown forward against the windshield receiving fatal injuries. The front end of the car was badly damaged and the side of the truck was damaged as well.

J. A. Jewell, who operates a garage in Havelock, and who was sitting in his tow truck at the time of the accident, said the highway at this point is treacherous when it is wet.

"I've pulled at least six cars out of the ditch this year at that curve," he said. "The roadway gets awfully greasy when it is wet, and cars often skid out of the curve and into the ditch."

He said his truck, which was parked with the brakes on, and in gear, was shoved ahead 15 feet by the impact. "I think the two and a half inch solid oak planks with steel braces on the back of the truck is what saved us," he said.

Mr. Jewell hailed a passing motorist to summon Dr. D. J. Holdcroft, of Havelock, immediately following the crash, then left to get another wrecking truck to clear the cars off the roadway.

OPP Constable George Rose of Campbellford said both the Charles car and the tow truck were well off the paved surface of the highway; and flares had been put out during the heavy rain to warn oncoming motorists of an accident.

Charles' car, which was not involved in the second accident, was damaged on the right side as it rolled over. The driver was shaken up but unhurt.

An inquest will be held to determine the cause of the accident and the surrounding circumstances, but no date has yet been set for it.

U.S. To Aid U.K. In Atomic Tests

CANBERRA (Reuters) — Australia today welcomed signs that the United States and Britain are drawing closer together on atomic co-operation.

It was learned here that highest-level agreement was reached between Washington and London for the dispatch of two U.S. B-29 "flying laboratories" to aid in Britain's forthcoming atomic tests at the Woomera rocket range. Australia announced today that the planes are due in this country Monday, and will help secure final data on atmospheric conditions.

The weather findings will play a large part in setting the actual time for the two major atomic explosions slated for early October.

Australian experts, who have been kept closely informed on British-American negotiations over the last months, pointed out this is the first break in the close security guard the United States has kept.

30 Trapped Reach Top; None Injured

Timmins Mine Blast Blocks Exit; Escape By 2nd Mine

TIMMINS —(CP)— Thirty gold miners, trapped from half a mile to a mile underground by a surface explosion, climbed to safety early today.

The men were trapped when two large compressed air tanks, used to operate hoist machinery of the Coniaurum mine near here, exploded with terrific force last night.

At 2 a.m. today, with the hoist that ordinarily would take them to the surface knocked out of operation, the last of the men reached ground level following a long, hard climb up part of the mine shaft.

It was nearly six hours after the blast at 8:15 p.m. that the last of the miners reached safety. They were caught underground on various levels below 3,000 feet all the way down to the 5,250-foot level.

They came up the shaft in twos and threes to the 3,000-foot level where a passageway connects with the adjoining McIntyre mine. They were brought the remaining distance to the surface by the McIntyre mine hoist.

RELUCTANT TO TALK

No injuries were reported and the men, although haggard and tired, were in good spirits. They were reluctant, however, to talk of their experience.

The first man out was Lambert Taylor, 50-year-old hoistman, and following him came two cage tenders. All were on the 3,250-foot level when the blast cut off all power.

The men at no time were in danger. Mine officials, although they had no direct word with them for some time, expected them to follow the procedure they used to get out.

Mine superintendent J. W. Ashton descended to the 3,000-foot level at Coniaurum through the McIntyre shaft and sent shift boss G. Napier down to inform the workers to climb the mine shaft and then take the McIntyre hoist.

SANCTION NOT NEEDED

McIntyre is one of the six mines in the rich Porcupine gold area closed by strikes. It was at first believed that permission would be necessary from the United Steel-

Sharp Quake Hits Nevada Capital

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A sharp earthquake shook Reno last night and police were flooded with calls reporting crashing sounds, explosions and rumbling.

But gamblers only paused, and then continued their games.

The desk officer at Reno's new central police station said he thought the roof was coming down, but checks later showed little damage occurred anywhere in the immediate Reno area.

The quake was felt in Sacramento, Calif., about 150 miles west over the Sierra Nevada. Police there received reports of rattling dishes and swaying lamp cords.

Speeches By Lloyd, Pearson Show Accord With U.S.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Canada, Britain and the United States—divided a month ago over whether India should be invited to the Korean peace conference—now appear to be in general agreement on their approach to the task of turning a Korean armistice into a permanent peace. Speeches in UN General Assembly by Canada's L. B. Pearson and Britain's Selwyn Lloyd indicate they are satisfied for the present to abide by last month's assembly decision to confine the UN side of the conference to those countries which fought the war under the UN command.

But at the same time they feel the question of makeup of the conference should not be allowed to wreck any chance of it ever being held.

"The urgent and important thing is to get the conference started," said Lloyd. "The verdict of history will indeed be harsh if, because of difference of opinion on composition we fail to get the conference going."

SHARES ATTITUDE

This attitude is shared by Canada, which favors maintaining a flexible attitude in the face of Red demands for such nations as Russia, India, Pakistan, Burma and Indonesia to attend the conference as "neutrals."

Canada and Britain last month led the move to seat India at the conference. The U.S. opposed inclusion in the UN side of any country which did not send troops to Korea. The UN voted for the American position, and since then Canada, Britain and others of the 16 Korean allies have agreed to stand by this decision.

An impasse resulted and some delegations became pessimistic over whether the conference would ever come off.

U.S. CONCESSION

Last Tuesday, however, Henry Cabot Lodge of the U.S. offered what appeared to be a concession when he suggested the conference itself could decide whether it wanted to invite other countries to sit in.

Canada and Britain welcomed this proposal as an indication the U.S. was easing its position and improving chances of breaking the stalemate.

Lodge's proposals were not altogether clear, however. For one thing, it was not explained when the neutrals would be invited to attend. Would they be asked to sit in for discussion of, both the specific item of Korean peace and

Canadian Sabres Join In Norway's 'Defence'

OSLO (AP) — Oslo caught an aerial attack today as British, American and Danish jets piled in on the defending Norwegians and Canadians in NATO's "Operation Heads Up."

A major portion of Denmark's jet strength was in the saturation strike.

In bright, clear weather, radar-directed Norwegian F-84s and Canadian F-86s swarmed up from Gardermoen fighter base near Oslo to meet the attackers. Air raid sirens wailed up and down Oslo fjord as radar detected the invaders moving into this area at high altitude.

Doctor Stabbed To Death In Quebec Town

ROUYN, Que. (CP)—Dr. Andre Ozegonski, 40, a prominent Rouyn doctor, was fatally stabbed in his office here Friday night.

Police later took 26-year-old Mike Kozar into custody as an important witness pending a coroner's inquest.

Dr. Ozegonski was stabbed after a brief argument with Kozar who told police he wanted the doctor to treat him, but didn't have any money. He said he killed the doctor when he refused. However, police said they were checking for other motives.

Mrs. C. Czerniak was in Dr. Ozegonski's office at the time of the stabbing. She heard the scuffle and entered the doctor's consulting room in time to see the two on the floor.

DIES IN AMBULANCE

Kozar ran out past her and she followed, calling for help. Another doctor and an ambulance were summoned, but Dr. Ozegonski died in the ambulance en route to hospital.

Kozar ran up the street to a nearby garage and told the attendant to call the police because he had "just murdered a man." The attendant thought he was joking and referred him to a priest Father Luke Meunier, who was getting his car filled with gas.

Father Meunier asked Kozar to get in the car. Then they both drove away and police picked Kozar up a short time later as he and Father Meunier talked in the parked car a few blocks away.

Officials said an inquest will not be held before next Tuesday.

JOBLESS

Police said Kozar, a Ukrainian displaced person, had previously worked in Virginiatown, 27 miles west of here, where the giant Kerr-Addison gold mines are located.

Winds Kill 1,000 In Indo-China

SAIGON, Indo-China (AP) — Nearly 1,000 persons are known to have been killed by a typhoon which struck the coast of central Indo-China, Pham Van Giao, governor of central Viet Nam, announced today.

It was feared that the death toll may reach 2,000. The typhoon Friday pushed flood waters over the whole region around Hue. The governor's announcement was only a preliminary report on the casualties.

At least 200,000 were left homeless after the winds and floods swept away their straw huts.

Doukhobor 'Wrestles' with Spirit, Decides To Quit Sons of Freedom, Freed By Court

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP)—The word Doukhobor means "spirit wrestler."

And a country courtroom sat silent Friday and learned why from a tall, hawk-faced Son of Freedom.

Because of the way it all worked out, Magistrate Graham Ladner asked that his full name not be used, that he just be called Pete.

He had been charged 11 days ago with being found nude in public. Four days ago he was convicted. Friday, when no previous record could be found, he was remanded a week for sentence.

It was then that Bob Kidd came forward. Bob, now a safety engineer with Kootenay Forest Products, had been a B.C. police officer three years ago and Friday supplied much of the evidence which sent Pete's relatives and friends to prison for three years.

"Pete drove a 'cat' for me," Bob told the court. "He always did an honest day's work. As long as he's away from Krestova, you'd never class him as a Son of Freedom. I believe he was driven into this by others.

"I would give this man a job again at any time."

He turned to the bearded, tanned man and the court forgot legal procedure as he walked to him, speaking low.

Phrases such as "stand up . . . speak, Pete," and ". . . tell them . . ." reached the audience.

When he walked back to the witness box—a corner of the draft meeting hall where the trials were being held—there were tears on Pete's face. He looked from the magistrate to the witness.

Magistrate Ladner sent Pete to his chambers—in this case a pantry off the hall's kitchen—to think things out and wrestle with his spirit.

It was hours later when Helen, Pete's wife, faced the court. "No record in this case," crown counsel John Farris said, and she was taken to join Pete in the pantry.

The court was close to adjournment when they were brought back to face it together. Bob spoke to the magistrate and the magistrate spoke to the crown counsel.

"I sentence you both to the time spent in custody," Magistrate Ladner said. For Helen, that was one day since conviction, for Pete, four.

An easy decision for Pete? Not for a Doukhobor.

"He's a traitor to them now," said a reformed Doukhobor girl who has watched the trials since they started. "the Sons won't forget."

For the radical sect, it is a form of martyrdom to go to prison for what they profess are their religious beliefs.

They go proudly and—since they claim they have broken none of Gods laws which alone rule them—they go silently, refusing to recognize man-made law.

Sullen and silent, 35 male Sons and 10 women, dubbed enemies of society by the magistrate, drew the maximum of three years for nude parading "and I'm sorry it can't be more," the magistrate said. Twenty-seven men and 42 women were remanded a week for probationary reports. One man drew a two-year term and two women were sentenced to one year in Oakalla prison farm.

One aged woman was given a one-day sentence to return to her Slocan valley home where her husband lies desperately ill.

'Dead' 38 Years, Briton Suffered Amnesia After Mine Blast In First World War

By KEN BOTWRIGHT

CHESTER, Eng. (Reuters) — Fred Walker, 60, "returned from the dead" to his home and family here 38 years after he was reported killed in the First World War.

His homecoming Friday was a miracle for his relatives, who received a telegram back in 1915 notifying them that he was missing, presumed killed, on the bloody battlefields of France. Later they also saw his name carved on an honor roll of fallen heroes.

For Fred Walker suffered from amnesia from the time he stepped on a German land mine at Loos Sept. 25, 1915, until his sister and brother discovered him, ill, bearded and penniless, at a local hospital earlier this week. He wandered about Britain, unable to recall anything about his past—except what his mother looked like.

Friday, as he celebrated the 38th anniversary of his "death" at his brother's home, Walker tried to look back over the [illegible] years which have [illegible] since he sailed away to war as a youth of 22.

He said that after he was blown up by the mine, the Germans captured him. He was badly wounded —his skull, one arm and one leg were shattered. And his memory was gone.

"After treatment in hospital, I was transferred to a prison camp," Walker continued. "There a Prussian NCO beat me over my injured head—I still have two silver plates in my skull—with his rifle butt for not disclosing military information.

"I knew nothing—not even my name and number—until 1922 when I was taken to a military hospital in England. The hospital authorities told me who I was and demobbed me in 1923."

Walker didn't go home because he could not recall having a home or a family and his mother who died 20 years ago, did not learn he was back in England because of an administrative slip-up.

Walker tried to build a new life for himself as a forester, truck driver and laborer. But mental and physical illnesses caused by his wartime ordeal dogged him. He drifted in and out of hospitals, lost job after job.

Six months ago, he found it impossible to obtain steady work. So he became a tramp.

This week he shuffled into Chester, became ill again and entered hospital here.

In hospital, a scrubwoman saw him and was excited by his face which reminded her of Walker's father, whom she had known years ago.

She reported her find to Fred's sister, Mrs. Margaret Doman, 49, and his brother Joe, 52, who hurried to the hospital and identified him.

"Slave" Charges Unfounded, Say Investigators

OTTAWA (CP)—Government investigators found "no substantiation" for charges that immigrants suffer hardship from poor working conditions on a railway construction job in northern Manitoba, the labor and immigration departments said in a joint statement Friday.

The investigation was started soon after the Chamber of Commerce of The Pas, Man., reported complaints by five German immigrants employed by the R. F. Welsh Company Limited in building a new railway line to Lynn Lake, Man.

The departments' statement said immigrants to whom federal investigators talked said they were well satisfied with working and living conditions.

COOK FIRED

"The investigators did find that a cook in the camp in which the complaining immigrants were employed had not been satisfactory and had been discharged, and that an accident involving one of the work cars had resulted in the dismissal of a foreman."

The departments said charges that men had to repay $500 to cover transportation costs from Europe to the work site were unfounded. Italian immigrant workers paid half their $225 fare before leaving Italy and the remainder in monthly deductions.

German immigrant workers are repaying $128 for the cost of ocean transportation to either the immigration department or the organization which aided them in coming to Canada.

Pay deductions also were being made to cover repayment to the company of $75 for inland transportation to the job but the amount is returned if the worker remains on the job for one year.

Pope Proclaims 1954 Marian Year

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Pope today proclaimed 1954 a Marian year to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the pronouncement by the Roman Catholic Church that the Virgin Mary was immaculately conceived.

The dogma of the Immaculate Conception was proclaimed by Pope Piux IX on Dec. 8, 1854. The Marian year will begin Dec. 8, 1953.

In an encyclical today to Catholic bishops throughout the world, the Pope called upon Catholics to perform special devotions and recite special prayers to the mother of Jesus during this commemorative year.

The dogma of the Immaculate Conception proclaimed as a tenet of Catholic faith that the Virgin was conceived without the stain of original sin. Catholic belief is that all other human beings are born with this stain due to the sin of disobedience of Adam and Eve in the garden of paradise.

The encyclical was entitled "Fulgens Corona," Latin words meaning "shining crown."

It said Catholics should pray for three main objectives during the Marian year: Peace in the world, unity in the church, and "the church of silence." By this latter, he referred to the Catholic Church behind the Iron Curtain.

The Pontiff urged the clergy to devote special sermons to explaining the dogma of the Immaculate Conception.

The Pope also asked that Catholics gather in groups and pilgrimages in each diocese of the world. In all of them, he said, there is a shrine or at least an altar especially dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

In dioceses where a church is named for her—and there are hundreds throughout the world — that church should be made the centre of prayer for the Marian year.

Delay In Defence Payments Makes Surplus $283 Million

OTTAWA (CP)—A delay in making some "substantial" defence payments in August helped push the government's surplus in budget accounts for that month to $52,846,000, the finance department reported Friday. Th surplus for the first five months of the 1953-54 fiscal year was increased to a total of $283,253,000.

"Some substantial payments which would normally have been made in August were made early in the month of September," the financial statement said, commenting on a $26,000,000 drop in defence expenditures from August, 1952.

The August surplus compares with only $1,752,000 in the corresponding month last year. The five-month surplus figure was down $53,415,000 from $336,668,000 in the same period last year.

FORECAST $11,000,000

In the last fiscal year, government expenditures increased in the closing months and the final surplus was $24,000,000. The surplus forecast for the current year ending next March 31 is $11,000,000 and finance officials suggested the actual figure will be close to that.

The yield from personal and corporation income taxes and indirect taxes all increased during August, with total revenue increased to August last year. The five-month total increased to $1,763,90,000 from $1,683,242,000 in the same period last year.

Government expenditures in August dropped $3,539,000 to $271,200,000 from $304,739,000 in August, 1952. The five-month total expenditures were still above last year, however, at $1,480,651,000 against $1,346,574,000.

BIGGEST DROP

The biggest drop in defence spending during August was for the air force, where expenditures fell to $10,803,000 from $50,394,000. The five-month total for that service was higher than last year, however.

Expenditures for mutual aid to North Atlantic Treaty countries jumped to $36,818,000 from $17,774,000 in the month and to $50,167,000 from $38,532,000 in the five months.

The health department's payments for family allowances increased to $29,109,000 from $27,743,000, raising the five-month total to $143,954,000 from $137,426,000.

DST Becomes ST In Changeover

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Arguments over daylight saving time subside for another year this week-end when most of the centres that moved the clock an hour ahead last April 26 revert to standard time.

In Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba and other provinces, the change will come at midnight Saturday, a Canadian Press survey shows. British Columbia, where the change was province-wide, returns at 2 a.m. Sunday.

Two provinces, Prince Edward Island and Alberta, where the change is forbidden, remained on standard time throughout the summer. B.C. made the change compulsory after a 1952 plebiscite strongly favored daylight saving time. Alberta, just as strongly opposed, made standard time compulsory in 1948.

OPPOSE FAST TIME

The opposition to "fast" time also extended to some major Canadian centres which retained standard time, including Windsor and Brandon, Man.

Daylight time is criticized by farmers because of the difficulties encountered in visiting nearby cities which may be an hour ahead. Farmers also say their cows don't know the difference and still have to be milked at the same time.

Other criticism has come from those who during the daylight-time period attempt to read railway time-tables. Railways and airlines hold to standard time to avoid muddled schedules. Bus lines however, change to daylight time in most regions.

the broader issue of peace in Asia? Or would they be invited to attend only for the latter discussion?

Some delegates have expressed the hope privately that an explanation of the new U.S. proposals would be made, helping to clear the air.

Another point on which the three nations now appear in agreement is the need for some arrangement whereby Korea would be unified by peaceful means and its neutralization guaranteed by the major powers.

RULES OUT FORCE

Pearson, in his speech, ruled out force as a means of unifying Korea. He envisioned a settlement providing for a "free and united Korea" with a government elected under UN supervision; withdrawal of all foreign forces and international and supervised guarantee of Korea's security and neutrality.

Lloyd echoed this attitude and State Secretary John Foster Dulles of the U.S., in a speech last week, made a similar point in general terms when he said:

"The U.S. itself seeks no pretext for using Korea as a place for building up a military outpost on the Asian mainland. We are eager to bring our troops home. . .

"If Soviet Russia and Communist China are willing to renounce ambitions which would be served by control of North Korea, then it should be possible to unite Korea under conditions which will enable the Koreans to manage their own affairs."

There is optimism among some UN delegates that the guaranteed internationalization of Korea might appeal to the Communists.

This doesn't take into account the insistence of South Korean President Syngman Rhee for unification of the country on his terms. And the chances of success for any program may well depend on whether Rhee can be persuaded to alter his attitude even in the slightest degree, a prospect that doesn't look too hopeful at the moment.

"Help the Kiwanis silver mile," was the slogan used today by the Peterborough Kiwanis Club to raise funds for underpriviliged children in the city. This is an annual event of the club and is also put on by every other Kiwanis Club in Canada. Besides the silver collection campaign, members of the club have taken 30 children from St. Vincent's Orphanage and the Children's home to Stoney Lake for the afternoon and will have a picnic supper for them at Juniper Island. Early indications were the citizens were supporting the appeal.

Seek Egyptian Official Disguised As Woman

TEHRAN (Reuters) — Former foreign minister Hussein Fatemi has disguised himself as a woman, even to a face-covering veil, to evade arrest, police said today.

A police spokesman said Fatemi, dressed in women's flowing robes, has been darting from one home to another in Tehran with only his eyes exposed since Premier Faslollah Zahedi's forces began hunting for him last month.

On the day Mossadegh's regime was overthrown, Tehran radio reported Fatemi had been "torn to pieces" by infuriated crowds. Reports since then claimed he had fled to Iran, Egypt and Syria.

Typhoon Kills 115 Near Tokyo

TOKYO (AP)—A roaring typhoon swept over Japan's main island Friday night and early today, sideswiped the teeming Tokyo area and left in its wake millions of dollars in property damage and at least 115 dead.

Skies cleared today as the storm swirled into the north Pacific where it began breaking up.

Japanese national police said the big storm, with 90-mile-an-hour winds at its centre, also left 288 missing and 259 injured.

Hundreds of thousands of Japanese were left homeless.

U.S. bases in Japan suffered damage at Camp Otsu near Tokyo which will run to $1,900,000.

Communications between Japan and Korea were disrupted by the storm. One army teletype line was temporarily repaired this afternoon, but it broke down again.

Some news copy reached Tokyo from Korea via a British commercial telegraph firm which routed messages through Hong Kong.

The Japanese coast guard said 10 small ships or boats were sunk, but only two seamen were known dead.

The 10,000-ton tanker Chigusa Maru, which called for help during the height of the storm Friday night, radioed today that she had repaired a disabled engine and was heading for port under her own power.

MiG Pilot Said Gone From Korea

SEOUL (AP)—The North Korean pilot who flew a Russian-made MiG-15 jet fighter to a Seoul air base Monday was reported today to have left Korea.

His whereabouts could not be learned but one unverified report said he was flown to Okinawa to advise U.S. pilots who will test-fly the MiG.

The Communist plane was disassembled and placed aboard a C-124 transport last Tuesday. It was en route to the United States for detailed study when it was stopped on orders from Washington.

There were unofficial reports earlier today that the MiG had been taken to Okinawa.

U. S. Army and Air Force officers here and in Tokyo would say only that the MiG is "being held under security conditions pending establishment of its rightful owner."

5 Rubber Firms Fined $50,000 For Price-Fix

TORONTO (CP)—Despite a defence counsel argument that the penalty should be considerably less than the maximum fine, five Canadian rubber companies Friday were fined $10,000 each for operating a combine and fixing prices since 1936.

Mr. Justice R. W. Treleaven said in reply to counsel: "Is it not fortunate for all of you that $10,000 is the maximum fine? Is it a very severe penalty for something that has been going on for 25 years?"

The five, Goodyear, Dominion, Gutta Percha, Dunlop and B. F. Goodrich appeared for judgment after pleading guilty April 8.

Crown counsel T. M. Phelan during the three-day trial last April submitted 1,526 documents on the case. He said the accused companies from 1947 to 1952 did business amounting to $118,000,000 and that if the companies advanced prices by five per cent during that time there was an illegal tax on the public of $6,000,000.

The companies said they will appeal an injunction granted by the crown which restrained them from any further combine activities.

J. J. Robinette, counsel for one company, asked for a stay of the prohibition order for 30 days.

J. D. Arnup, counsel for Dominion Rubber Company, said: "with great respect to Mr. Justice Treleaven, we do not think this was a proper case for such an order and in any event we still submit that the legislation respecting such orders of prohibition is invalid."

Arguing for the prohibition order last April, Mr. Phelan said that some of the acts he wished prohibited were not in themselves criminal, except when they were directed toward restraint of trade.

Dootch Vitarelli, Mick Magee, Curly Mason, and Bob Thorpe, started for the Vancouver airport. When nearly there a fog bank moved over the area.

When they arrived at the airport, they were told that the flight, number 12, would be delayed an hour at least to make engine repairs. By the time that work was done the fog was thicker than ever.

The Trailermen waited until 4 a.m. before the flight was finally cancelled and they were taken to the swanky Sylvia Hotel for a few hours sleep.

At first TCA said the players wouldn't leave until Monday at the earliest. But they finally began working on cancelled reservations on Friday's flights. This meant that the Trailermen couldn't leave their hotel; they had to be ready to leave at any moment.

The Vancouver TCA office worked four then six seats on flight 6, leaving Friday at 3 p.m. Minutes later they came through with reservations for the remainder of the group to leave Vancouver at 6 p.m.

By those times the players were more than ready to say goodbye to the west.

Apparently the first group had their troubles too. At Winnipeg their plane had to have engine repairs, causing an hour-and-a-half delay in reaching Toronto. There they were received by parents, wives, girl friends and friends. Even the relatives of the players just leaving Vancouver were there. They hadn't been told of the day-long delay.

So today the first six arrived at Malton at 5:30 a.m.; there was only Russ Slater's wife, children, and Mr. and Mrs. Herb Johnston to greet them.

An hour-and-a-half later the last of the players landed. They were given a welcome home by the earlier arrivals, at this time the only Peterborough people there to greet them. Then the players after another delay in waiting for transportation to Peterborough left Malton for home.

Tonight their fans will have a chance to welcome home the three-time winners of the Mann Cup when the team will be paraded down George St. to the Miller Bowl from the Armories, beginning at 7 p.m.

At the Bowl, Mayor Hugh Waddell and the aldermen will greet the champions who will be introduced by CHEX anouncer, George Ludgate.

workers of America (CIO-CCL) to operate the hoist. Later it was learned union sanction would not be needed since a non-union maintenance man has been operating the hoist since McIntyre workers went on strike.

Coniaurum, 1½ miles east of Timmins, has not yet been affected by strike action and there has been no indication, police said, that there was any connection between the blast and the dispute, now raging between the mine operators and the union for weeks.

The explosion will shut down Coniaurum for an indefinite period until the hoist can be repaired and compressed air pumped underground.

CAUSE UNCOMMON

Acting mine manager W. O. Lafontaine said he knew the cause of the explosion but it was one not common to mines.

One tank was blown 100 yards, ricocheting off the ground and the side of warehouse building into the panel room of the hoist building. The other half flew 200 yards in the opposite direction and landed at the mine gate. A 10-inch pipe also exploded, causing severe damage to the shaft house and a short distance down the shaft. All windows in a nearby machine shop were shattered and some machinery damaged.

Lumber Worker Held In Death

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — Police said today they are holding 25-year-old Arne Hautamaki, a pulpwood cutter, in connection with the death Friday night of Mrs. Hutamaki at the couple's farm home at nearby Sunshine.

The dead woman is Aune Hautamaki, 29. Police said they are holding the husband pending the result of an autopsy scheduled for later this afternoon.

Police said that the couple entered a steambath on their farm home. The steambath — a wooden building with a stove — was unheated. Mrs. Hautamaki apparently fell to the floor of the bath and the husband carried her into the farm house.

Police were called and found her body.

Auto Accidents Up By 15.2% In Province

TORONTO (CP)—The number of auto accidents in Ontario during the first six months of 1953 totalled 29,267, an increase of 15.2 per cent over the same period last year, the Ontario department of highways announced Friday.

A total of 352 persons were killed in these accidents, seven more than in the first half of 1952.

The Manitoulin, Sudbury and Algoma districts led the province in the increase with 44.2 per cent more mishaps than last year. Next highest counties were Dufferin, Simcoe, Parry Sound and Muskoka, where the jump was 33 per cent.

Hold One, Seek Three Others In Shooting Spree

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Police have arrested one man and are seeking three others in connection with an early-morning break-in at a nearby Embro store and a wild shooting spree later at a rural home.

In custody is Donald Longchamps 19, of Ottawa, a soldier stationed at Wolesley army barracks in Lon-Embro by constable Cecil Pollock.

The officer said he surprised a gang robbing the Oxford Farmers' Co-operative Building. He stepped aside when they tried to run him down with an automobile and fired three shots at the fleeing car.

Longchamps was left behind and Pollock said he thought another man had fled on foot. He believed two escaped in the car.

The shooting came towards dawn at the home of George McBirnie, who answered a knock at his door and found himself staring into a gun muzzle.

McBirnie slammed the door in the caller's face, ran to another room and threw himself flat on the floor. A burst of gunfire, which police said appeared to have come from a Sten gun, riddled the door and killed McBirnie's dog. Fourteen bullet holes were later counted in the house and four more in a car parked outside.

Earlier, farmer Harry Birtch had a visitor who asked to use his phone. The caller pulled a gun and asked for a car. When Birtch told him he did not own a car, the gunman ripped out the telephone wires and left with a warning to Birtch not to call police.

The army at London reported to police today that two Sten guns were missing. Army officials said they had the names of two soldiers absent without leave but refused to disclose them.

Motorists in the area were warned against picking up hitch-hikers.

All Leaders Win In League Soccer

LONDON (Reuters) — All the leading clubs in the First Division of English league soccer won their games today, leaving West Bromwich Albion out in front in a tight race.

West Bromwich, defeated for the first time this season by Charlton last week, came back today with a 3-2 victory over tough Sheffield Wednesday.

Two points behind the division leaders are Huddersfield and Wolverhampton, both of whom won today. The Wolves scored an impressive 8-1 victory over Chelsea.

Charlton and Aston Villa, both four points off the pace, also won their matches.

Arsenal, defending champions, whipped Cardiff 3-0 to pull out of the cellar.

The Second Division lead changed hands. Everton, unbeaten this season, defeated Derby County 3-2 and moved past Doncaster who lost 2-1 at Bury.

Unbeaten Norwich City maintained its lead in the Third Division by blanking Newport County 2-0.

Union Leaders Ask Acceptance

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP)—Night-shift workers from the Upper Canada mine met today to hear union leaders recommend that they accept the majority report of the conciliation board in their wages and hours dispute with the mine.

Day-shift workers heard a similar recommendation by leaders of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), local 4639, Friday night.

The conciliation board, headed by Professor C. H. Curtis of Queen's University, Kingston, this week submitted its report recommending that the working week in the mine be cut from 48 to 44 hours with no loss of take-home pay and that there be a check-off of union dues and an amended vacation plan.

Bill Mahoney, assistant national director of the USW, addressed the meeting. He suggested the workers reopen negotiations with mine management next week.

Intervention Said Only Hope

TIMMINS (CP)—The shaken economy of this Porcupine district remained in jeopardy today as more than 5,000 miners continued their walkout, tying up seven major gold producers. Community leaders saw government intervention as their only hope in the battle to force a union-company conference. The mines and the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) appeared still hopelessly at odds over the issue of wages, working hours and union security. The 1,600 union members at the giant Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines, whose $10,000,000 yearly output rates it among Canada's major producers, joined the picket lines Thursday night. Union officials said Hollinger went out because of "a conspiracy of mine operators seeking to destroy unionism in the gold camps."

The same reason was given earlier when members were called out at Broulan Reef, Hallnor, Preston East Dome, Selnite and McIntyre.

C. H. Millard, USW national director, said he had offered to submit the Hollinger dispute to arbitration, but the company refused. He said it was fruitless because company directors had already taken a firm stand on the disputed issues.

STRIKE ILLEGAL

Hollinger manager E. A. Perry termed the strike unlawful, but added: "In order to keep conflict at a minimum, operations at the mine have been suspended until the situation is clarified."

In Toronto, Mayor J. W. Spooner of Timmins conferred with Mr. Millard, but neither would discuss their talks.

Mr. Spooner told reporters that an economic crisis had not as yet been reached at Timmins for most of the miners were receiving union benefits. Mr. Millard said the benefits amounted to about $20 a week, depending on the size of the miner's family.

Term Guelph Cell Nearest Thing To Real Dungeon

TORONTO (CP)—A small cell used for punishment at the Burtch industrial farm was described Friday by W. J. Stewart, Progressive Conservative legislature member for Parkdale as "the nearest thing to a dungeon we have yet seen."

The cell, Mr. Stewart told members of the legislature's select committee on reform institutions, is about 4½ feet square, with a nine-foot ceiling, has no window, no lights and is closed off with a solid door.

"Even on a bright day the cell would be dark," the committee chairman agreed.

"It is just a Black Hole of Calcutta," declared Rev. A.W. Downer PC member for Dufferin-Simcoe.

Although vacant when examined by members of the committee, the cell had recently been used for five or six unruly prisoners, Mr. Stewart said. "It is really a punishment cell," he added.

The Burtch reform institution, located about seven miles from Brantford, came in for considerable criticism as a winter resort for men who worked all summer and had nothing to do during the winter.

At the time the committee visited the institution there were 205 inmates, five below capacity, and most of these were found sitting or standing around the corridors, Mr. Stewart said.

LINDSAY (ENS)—Several classes of short wool sheep, with one long wool class, were judged at the Lindsay Exhibition Friday. Entries were heavy in some classes but only one class offered any real competition, the others being taken in clean sweeps by the winning owners.

In the one long wool class, Cotswolds, T. C. Glaspell of Oshawa won all honors, including the champion ram, champion ewe, junior flock and flock.

Oxford honours went to H. Skinner and Sons, Tyrone, who scored a clean sweep also, taking ten first places. H. Skinner and Sons also won the Shropshire class in a clean sweep.

The Southdown class was won in a clean sweep by Lloyd Ayre, of Bowmanville, and the Hampshire showings were dominated by their entries of R. B. Glaspell, Bowmanville.

Prizes Worth More

STOCKHOLM (CP)—The Nobel prizes this year will be worth about $34,000 each, or $1,000 more than last year. The prizes, awarded annually for those contributing most to the benefit of mankind in various fields, come from the interest on the $9,000,000 bequest left by Alfred Nobel, inventor of dynamite.

Native Singers

DURBAN (CP)—On recommendation of Durban's director of music, Edward Dunn, the London Guildhall School of Music has accepted a South African native singer as a pupil. The African is Ignatius Tembu, a tenor, and a committee here is raising funds for his visit to Britain.

A NEW SPEED RECORD was set Friday in the Supermarine Swift F4 jet fighter, above, by Lt.-Cmdr. Michael Lithgow in four passes over a desert course near Castel Idris in Libya. The record, not made official yet, stands at 737.3 miles an hour. In one pass, Lithgow reached well over 740 miles an hour. Lowest of the four was 729 miles an hour.

Jailed Six Months For Incest

COBOURG (ENS) — George Vesterveldt, Castleton farmer, charged with incest on August 3, was sentenced Friday by Magistrate R. B. Baxter to six months definite and three indefinite in the reformatory. The sentence is to date back to September 2.

The magistrate said that he had taken into consideration the fact that Vesterveldt was a war veteran and of previous good conduct and also the representations made on his behalf by his counsel.

"It was a very serious act against your own child, a matter which courts are inclined to punish severely as a deterrent to other parents. It can go on for a long time undetected and lead to serious consequences. I feel that your record should be considered and I also feel that you are mentally sick to some extent and I use this term to indicate a lesser degree than mentally ill. Otherwise I would be inclined to impose a much more severe sentence," said the magistrate.

Charles Finnie, of Hope township, was found guilty on a charge of theft of three tires and rims from Victor Beatty, and was given a month in jail by Magistrate R. B. Baxter. The magistrate said that he was aware of the domestic situation, which he didn't feel was entirely the fault of the accused, but it had perhaps had some influence in the course of action taken by Finnie. However, the accused must be shown that he could not take the law into his own hands, he declared.

Ronald Runions, of Ajax, 17-year-old youth, was allowed on suspended sentence when he pleaded guilty to the theft of some wire from the HEPC warehouse in Seymour township on January 27 of this year. He had no previous record and promised to make restitution. Jack Allen, also of Ajax, charged with the same offence, was remanded a week at his own request, in order to secure counsel. Value of the wire was $61.00.

Collective Farm Supporter Gets New Power In Russia

By EDDY GILMORE

(The writer of this article left Moscow in June after serving 11 years as an AP correspondent there).

The selection of Nikita Khruschev as first secretary of the central committee of the Communist party strengthens the hand of Premier Georgi M. Malenkov. It could be the forerunner of important changes in agricultural policy in Russia.

Khruschev, 59, is said to be one of the easier going comrades of the high Communist brass. He is generally known as Malenkov's brother-in-law.

It was also Khruschev, the son of a Kursk miner, who got kicked in the pants two years ago for suggesting the time was ripe for "agro towns" in Soviet agriculture.

Some years ago—perhaps 15 or 20—Malenkov was reported to have married Khrushchev's sister, a comely woman now in her 40s who has many friends in Russia's world of arts, particularly the opera and ballet.

COLLECTIVE FARMS

Khruschev long ago interested himself in the collective farm system—or else was assigned the job of being interested in it. This may be more logical, for he never was a farmer.

When he was party boss of the Soviet Union's giant southern republic of Ukraine, agriculture was naturally the subject which concerned him mightily, for the Ukraine is the country's greatest producer of wheat.

It was after he got to Moscow four years ago that he received the kick in his commissarial trousers for the suggested innovation in agriculture that backfired:

The Moscow press came out one morning saying the small individual collective farmer was not the solution to the Soviet Union's agricultural problem; that the real thing of the future was big collective farms and the way to bring this about was to consolidate the small farms and small farmers into new and bigger collective farms.

HAD TO BACK DOWN

This new theory generated a collective peasant grumble heard from the black earth of Kursk to the tundra of Siberia. The Russian peasant, one of the most conservative of all people, resents anything new almost as much as he resents the collective farm system itself.

To the peasant, the suggestion for the consolidation of small collective farms into big collective farms meant he was going to have to work harder for the government, endure tighter control over his life and work by the state, and see an opening stroke in favor of something he always had feared—transformation of all collective farms into state farms.

There are two kinds of farms in Russia—collective farms and state farms. The collective farm is a grouping of peasants who till a certain amount of land and raise a certain number of cattle, sheep, hogs, chickens, etc., collectively. The government sets a production target for them to meet and when they do this what is left over belongs to them. They also have private plots of land, privately-owned cows, sheep and chickens and what they earn from these is theirs.

LARGE TRACT OF LAND

The state farm, on the other hand, is a big tract of land owned and operated by the state. Farm laborers work for the state for salary and bonuses.

But this didn't make the peasant collective farmer so resentful as Khrushchev's suggestion of "agro towns."

Roughly, an agro town is an agricultural city. But the peasant knew it wouldn't be much of a city and it wouldn't be much "agro" for him.

He saw himself, his family and friends being moved out of their present huts with their adjoining plots of more or less private ground into some barracks room; and he would live in crowded conditions, huddled together like the Russian of the cities.

He didn't like this and said so.

Next thing, the papers came out with a denunciation of the agro town idea and Tovarich Khrushchev was the goat.

Conference Headquarters

Peterborough's capacities as an accessible and pleasant place for conferences were in full use last week-end and the first part of this week. The Ontario Division of the Canadian Cancer Association met in the city during the week-end. The Ontario branch of the Canadian Postmasters' Association held its annual three-day convention here, beginning Monday. On Sunday the Chamber of Commerce of Montreal North arrived in full force, spent three days inspecting industries, the lakes and the amusements of this area, and departed yesterday vivaciously enthusiastic about Peterborough and the Kawarthas.

* * *

We welcome such conventions. They introduce Peterborough's favours to people who have not before visited this district, and increase its renown. There is value for Peterborough people too, in having important and interesting visitors with their views and news and outside air. Further, conventions usually occur outside the regular tourist season. Accommodation and service prepared for tourists can easily—and profitably—be employed to cater to conventions.

The Peterborough Chamber of Commerce is persuasively promoting what might be called the convention business of Peterborough, and civic officials, local industry and commerce are to be congratulated on their hearty co-operation.

Pipe Organs And Ice

In 1892 the Hapsburg Empire bought three Canadian wagons and the Sandwich Islands took $150 worth of Canadian cotton goods. This was a sample of the world-wide trade which Canada then had. This country's total export trade amounted in that year to 99 million dollars. Sixty years later—1952—Canada was selling railway engines to India, promoting the sale of Canadian boats and outboard motors in Venezuela, and sold all told 4,300 million dollars' worth of goods abroad. The story of the far-flung expansion of trade between 1892 and the present is also the story of Canada's Department of Trade and Commerce, which came into being in 1892, with Sir Mackenzie Bowell as first Minister of the Department.

The Department's growth and service have paralleled this country's industrial expansion and promoted the foreign sale of the products. In 1892 Canada was a minor producing nation, and its markets were limited almost exclusively to Britain and the United States. Then Canada's industrial revolution began to take place, and the Department of Trade and Commerce became the handmaiden of it.

When the Department was established Canada had eight scattered agencies designed to promote external trade—five in the West Indies, two in Great Britain, one in France. These were somewhat similar to honorary consulates. It was only in 1895 that the first full-time salaried agent was appointed (to Australia). This gentleman reported some of the self-inflicted troubles besetting exporters; they were so ill-informed about foreign trade, or lax, that they did not properly prepay business letters, and were so indifferent to trade possibilities abroad that they sometimes did not reply to a letter for a year.

Gradually other career agents of the Trade Commissioner Service were established abroad, and today no corner of the globe (except behind some Communist curtains) is without a Canadian commercial counsellor, commercial secretary or some such to help Canadian exporters, their agents abroad, and to investigate foreign markets and contracts for the possibility of Canadian business getting them. The term Trade Commissioner has been discarded, except in posts where Canada has no diplomatic representation. Most of these agents are now foreign service officers, integral to legations and embassies.

It is odd to think that sixty years ago an important export was petroleum to the U.S., sent from Petrolia where oil had been discovered. Perhaps before the century ended, Canada may again have oil to export, instead of importing it by millions of barrels. And in the 1890's coal exports were more than the total of copper, nickel, asbestos and "gold nuggets" being sold abroad. The largest items in the foreign sale of manufactured goods were agricultural implements and pipe organs. Other items of some importance were cotton goods—nearly all for China—and ice to the British and Dutch West Indies. Animals and animal products accounted for thirty per cent. of Canada's total trade, the paper industry did not exist, and wheat was just beginning to pour from the Prairies.

The changes during the sixty years have been remarkable, in types of goods, in quantities and values, and in markets served. An example: In 1892 Canada exported $26,927 worth of goods to Japan. Last year the total was $102,603,245, more than Canada's total exports to all countries in 1892. Sixty years ago Mexico bought $4,549 worth of Canadian goods and services; last year $39,640,575.

It is obvious that the Trade Commissioner Service did not make Canada's foreign trade but it is equally apparent that without it the trade would not have developed as well and fast as it has.

Harvest Moon

The moon rising at 8:40 this evening is the waning Harvest Moon. Her presence was not appreciated earlier in the cold week, but after the equinox and the full of the moon (late Tuesday evening) she made her influence felt, the weather softened and by Thursday evening her mellow light held the age-old enchantment of harvest moons. Full and opulent, but serene and gracious, the pendulous orb sent her benediction over the harvested fields and quiet streets, touching hearts with wistful affection. A golden, dreamy evening in the ripened year. Tonight the moon will be lopsided, for already her supreme moment has passed; there will be a bit of a leer in her countenance as if to warn against lush sentiment; is the air not touched with frost again?

Unsentimental people tell us that the harvest moon is a moony-minded notion. They explain that it has nothing to do with the heart, or even with the harvest, being merely the full moon nearest to the autumn equinox. And they say that the reason people notice this full moon more than others is that it rises at a good hour for people to see it (not for instance in broad daylight), and for several nights in succession close to the same hour. This phenomenon, most plainly seen in high latitudes, is due to the fact that at the time of the autumnal equinox, the full moon, being exactly opposite the sun, is in that part of her orbit which makes a small angle with the horizon at the point of moon rise.

Well, we understand the emotional, sensuous light of the Harvest Moon better than we comprehend this prosaic nonsense. We shall continue to delight in her golden charms and nostalgic beam, and to believe that this Sunday's Harvest Festival in churches has a passing relation to the Harvest Moon now passing over the dear and fruitful land.

Throw Away That Truss, Doggie!

We claim no special knowledge of dogs, but we are interested in almost everything, and the other day we came across an article about the care of dogs, and read it, hoping to pick up something new and interesting. We did. Here is what we read:

"Is your dog about to face an approaching blessed event? You can make a conveyor to help her carry the added weight. Here's what you do. Take an ordinary roller skate. Attach it to the sole of a shoe. Now get a harness. Try it on for size. Attach the skate to the harness. Secure the contraption snugly under her stomach, and watch her as she fairly skates when she takes her daily constitutional!"

As we have said, we claim no special knowledge of dogs, but we have observed that some dogs, like some people—the kind of people who write dog articles, among others—have no sense of humour. A humourless dog might wear such a tummy-trolley as the one described above without cracking a smile. But there are plenty of dogs who have a sense of humour, and virtually all cats have a keen appreciation of the ridiculous. We can imagine a sedate, matronly dog (for the writer of the article quoted shrinks from the horrid, though appropriate term) in an interesting condition, toddling down the street with her maternity corset strapped in place, her wheels humming gently on the pavement. And we can imagine other dogs, rolling in ecstacy, slapping their thighs and barking with laughter, as she passed We can imagine cats falling out of trees, helpless with mirth, and pointing the paw of contumely.

If you want to make a truss for your dog, we have passed on the instructions. But please do not write us angry letters if she becomes the laughing-stock of the neighbourhood animals.

NOTES AND COMMENT

A New York painter says that works of art sometimes reveal causes of insanity. Why confine it to works of art? We have seen plumbing and bricklaying jobs which whispered the same sinister message.

As we indicated yesterday, the New Westminster "Salmonacs" have won the junior lacrosse championship of Canada, commonly called the Minto Cup series. We are relieved to have the assurance that the Cup still exists as a silver thing and not a mere historic reference to an emblem long lost to sight. We are told that the Minto Cup was actually presented to the B.C. team after its final game at Mimico Thursday night.

Margot Fonteyn

By ARNOLD HASKELL

(Ed Note: Arnold Haskell, Director and Principal of the Sadler's Wells Ballet School, gives his impressions of its prima ballerina. Margot Fonteyn, will appear in Toronto this season with the Sadler's Wells Ballet.)

THE PORTRAIT of a dancer, any dancer, is a most difficult one to make: she never stops still long enough. This is not merely a play upon words but the truth, and it is true above all of Margot Fonteyn. Margot Fonteyn IS movement: thrilling movement, harmonious movement, complex movement that seems simple and that not only defies analysis but does not leave one with any wish to analyse it. But that movement is the expression of a personality and of a particular physique; the dancer is both the player and the instrument.

Meeting her for the first time you would know at once that she was a ballerina, the classic racehorse of the dancing world. She is diminutive—five foot, four inches, to be exact—slender but without the hard protruding bones of the slimming faddist, olive skinned and black haired. She has large, dark-brown eyes with the suggestion of a smile about them, and the smile is important. It tells of good humour, pleasure in what she is doing, and a definite trace of shyness.

✧ ✧ ✧

MARGOT FONTEYN, like all the truly great, is essentially a humble person, and humility has nothing to do with that embarrassing, artificial, mock modesty of the would-be great. Congratulate her on some dazzling interpretation—and interpretation and not performance is the word to use—and her reaction, when favourable, is invariably: "It is improving," or "I'm beginning to understand it better". There is always present in her mind a definite, high, and possibly unattainable standard of perfection, and she is essentially a self-critic. All dancers can be divided between the instinctive and the conscious artists. Margot Fonteyn belongs definitely to the group of conscious artists of which, in our century Tamara Karsavina has been the finest example.

BUT BEFORE discussing her as an artist let us take a glance at her career, remembering those daily classes that are essential to perfection. Today, at the age of 33, Margot Fonteyn is at her peak.

She started under the not very theatrical name of Margaret Hookham. She took her first lesson at a small school near her London home and then went on to Seraphine Astafavieva, the famous Russian teacher of Markova and Dolin. As her father was a mining engineer the family travelled a great deal, and wherever they went Margot took dancing lessons. It was in 1934 that her mother—the very ideal of a dancer's mother—decided that she had sufficient talent to turn her hobby into a career.

✧ ✧ ✧

SHE WENT to Sadler's Wells Ballet School, and from that moment entrusted herself to the inspired guidance of Ninette de Valois. The talent was there and so was the opportunity, and a better opportunity could not have presented itself. In 1935 Alicia Markova, first and undisputed ballerina of the struggling Sadler's Wells Ballet, left to form her own company. The great classical ballets had been revived for her, works that call upon experience, stagecraft, virtuosity, and art. It seemed as if our national ballet was faced with extinction after only four years of life.

I remember so well meeting Ninette de Valois in the foyer after Markova's farewell performance and asking her what well-known Russian ballerina she had in mind for the vacant position. "I don't need a guest artist," she almost snapped at me, "I have my own school, and we shall never have a truly national ballet if we have to go outside it." I was not a little sceptical at the time; the company had seemed to me to be merely well-trained background for Markova's brilliance. How wrong I was! I shall never forget my shock of enthusiasm when I saw Margot Fonteyn at seventeen years of age hold the stage in the full-length versions of "Swan Lake" and in "Giselle". My enthusiasm was so great that the paper for which I was then writing headed the notice "Birth of a Great Ballerina".

✧ ✧ ✧

IN THOSE EARLY performances the brilliance and sparkle of the accomplished ballerina had yet to come. There was, however, a sensitivity and in particular a gift for musical phrasing that were incomparable. There was also the building up a detail from performance to performance, minute detail that always added up to a whole. In every classical ballet, however rigid the disciplined technique, there are moments of comparative freedom when one can see the artist's brain at work: for instance, the look upon her face in "The Sleeping Beauty" when she pricks her finger, or the subtle differentiation between the roles of Odette and Odile in "Swan Lake". She is the only I have ever seen who makes this point clear. Margot turns these ballet princesses into human beings.

Then came a series of ballets created for her by Ashton—"Nocturne," "Apparitions," and "Horoscope," among them—where dancer and choreographer inspired one another. So far, every season, Margot Fonteyn has added something both to her technical and artistic equipment. She has a range that no dancer since Karsavina can equal: sparkling virtuosity, pathos, wit, broad humour.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE DANCER has little time to herself. Even the biggest star subjects herself daily to a vigorous lesson in which she takes corrections just as the newest recruit. In a recent interview Margot Fonteyn suggested that most roles become more and more interesting, because, as she put it, "when you first learn a role, particularly a long ballet—for example, "Sleeping Beauty or "Swan Lake"—there is so much, in the role itself, so many steps, that you don't have any time to give to the fine details. And when you've been dancing that role for about ten years you start then to find little improvemens, little nuances, endless things that you can improve when you really have the steps absolutely engrained in your mind. One can always deepen an interpretation. Again, the more you master the "technique, so that you don't have to think about that, the more your mind is free to give the interpretation."

✧ ✧ ✧

OFFSTAGE, Margot Fonteyn is much as one would imagine her from the quality of her work. She dislikes a fuss or the receiving of fulsome compliments. She enjoys travel, reading when she has time, collecting bric-a-brac, Parisian dresses, Parisian hats, and—unusual taste in a woman—vintage wine. When she talks of retirement it is of the sun that she thinks. She maintains that she is fundamentally a lazy person: she can never have had the time to find out.

Most noticeably of all is her sense of humour, a real sense of proportion that allows her to poke fun at herself. She enjoys a popularity in the company that is something quite apart from the admiration that all dancers feel for a great artist. There is always the feeling that honours paid to her are something that she shares—she has identified herself with all her colleagues. In my experience this is the most difficult thing of all, a real triumph of character. Margot Fonteyn has received high honours: the award of the C.B.E. in 1951, and an honorary degree of Doctor of Literature from Leeds University in 1952. She has been depicted in the Boris Anrep mosaics at the National Gallery, with Sir Winston Churchill and other representative figures. When Sadler's Wells visited America in 1951 and 1952 Margot Fonteyn enjoyed an enormous personal triumph.

Her position is unique. There will be other great British ballerinas, but their passage will be made easier through her pioneer work. She had the difficult task, with that great woman Dame Ninette de Valois, of convincing our own British public that an English girl could be a great ballerina by world standards. Ninette de Valois' National Ballet made Fonteyn, and in many ways Fonteyn made the National Ballet.

MARGOT FONTEYN dancing in the contemporary ballet 'Facade', the music for which was written by William Walton. (See Third Column.)

Letters To The Editor

YOU DON'T BARGAIN FOR A HEALTHY CHILD

Sir: I read Mr. Horn's letter published in your paper Sept. 23 with much disgust.

I thought Mr. Horn was the most heartless person I ever heard expressing his views, but apparently there is one more so. He wonders if our attitude would change if we were in that position. Well, Mr. Horn, I am in that position.

I have a little girl who will never be normal, but I have never wished her dead. When you have a baby you don't bargain with God for a healthy child. For God is surely the only One who can grant perfect health. So, Mr. Horn, you better start thanking God for your health and leave the less fortunate alone.

I love my little girl and ask no one to care for her, so why should people who know nothing about it, write such cruel and heartless letters and make our heartbreak a little more complete?

A MOTHER

MR. HOPE AND THE LEGION

Sir: Thank you sincerely for your editorial in Thursday's Examiner re: Mr. Hope. Like a great number of people I had wondered if he was to pass by without one word of praise for all the good he had accomplished during his stay with us.

The hours he put in for boys both in day and Sunday schools will ever be remembered. You have mentioned his church, militia and boy scouts he did so much for each, but let me add another interest very close to his heart—the Canadian Legion. We who had the privilege of working with him on Poppy Day know what his passing means to us, he will always be a symbol to live up to.

He may have been short in stature but believe me he made it up in energy, for he gave his all to make life a little brighter for a fellow comrade and we of the Welfare and Poppy Fund of Branch 52 Canadian Legion will ever remember a sincere and wonderful comrade.

Sincerely yours,
(Mrs.) Kathleen Mason

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

For if there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment; and ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place: and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool: are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him? . . . If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well: but if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors . . . So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty. (James 2: 2-5, 8, 9, 12.)

God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountain be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake the swelling thereof. Selah.

There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the most High. God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her, and that right early.

The Utmost In Paternalism

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

Professsor Benjamin Higgins, formerly of McGill University, writing in the August issue of the Canadian Journal of Economics and Political Science, says that "there is no reason why a strongly supported government should not collect 100 per cent of personal income, and pay it out again in family allowances, pensions, interest on debt, etc., without any economic effects whatsoever". He added that "if the goods and services provided by government yield satisfactions as high as those formerly bought in the market, there is no reason why people should not accept a higher ratio of taxes to income".

We suppose that interpretation of the first statement quoted above depends greatly on what Professor Higgins means by a strongly supported government. We can see no practical or mechanical reason why the Russian Government should not take from each citizen what he or she may be able to earn and give to each according to his or her needs. In fact, such procedure is fairly well advanced in Russia as it is, but with all its tremendous power over the individual citizen, the Russian Government has learned that it is wise to let him retain a portion of what he earns. Three decades of Communism have been unable to eradicate acquisitiveness and the efficacy of earnings as an incentive.

City Garbage Disposal Revolutionized By New Land-Fill Method

By PHIL CALDER

A few months ago, the city dump was a smoking, 25-foot high pile of stinking refuse where rats and flies swarmed by the thousands.

Today it consists of 4½-acres of flat terrain where, in 10 years at the most, there will be room for a new housing subdivision to meet the needs of Peterborough's growing population for housing accommodation.

The garbage? It hasn't been moved somewhere else. It lies beneath the surface away from fire, rats and flies.

The secret behind this startling change is a revolutionary method of garbage disposal known as landfill. It was made possible by the development of a piece of machinery, similar to a bulldozer, known as the Drott bullclaw shovel.

The machine is the brainchild of a United States Army major named Drott. During the Second World War he was faced with the tremendous problem of garbage disposal at a huge army base in Texas.

Sanitation is one of the biggest headaches to an army staff faced with the problem of concentrating large numbers of troops in a single area. An epidemic can destroy the fighting power of a unit just as effectively as an air raid.

The problem of disposing of waste food is a familiar one to anyone who has served in the armed forces. Sometimes local farmers are glad to cart it away as swill for their pigs. But usually, the contents of the garbage pail is such an unpalatable mixture of tea leaves, coffee grounds and orange peels that even the pigs turn up their snouts.

So it wasn't any freak that led an army man to devise means whereby garbage could be got rid of permanently, without any waste of real estate and without the perpetual stench and smoke that emanate from an incinerator.

Major Drott's solution was a machine that could crush the garbage, pack it down and bury it beneath the soil so that in time it became part of the soil itself.

After the war, Major Drott obtained a patent on his invention and has since improved it to the point where it is now used in hundreds of cities in the United States.

The Peterborough sanitation department obtained one of these machines this year and only recently obtained a larger model.

The bullclaw shovel is similar in all respects to a bulldozer except that, protruding from the front, is a device like the claw of an enormous crab, which will hold three yards of material.

When garbage is taken to the city dump, the bullclaw runs back and forth over it, smashing up any bottles, cans and wooden crates with its weight of 20 to 21 tons. Then it scoops this garbage up and deposits it in a low area which it has excavated the previous day. Then it pushes the ground-up refuse into the side of the excavation and packs it tightly, squashing it flat.

Then the claw of the machine is set at the proper level for scooping out another excavation for the next day's garbage. The earth which it takes from here is deposited on top of the current day's garbage and the huge treads of the machine pack it down to form a level piece of ground.

For disposal of garbage during the winter, a number of trenches are dug in the early fall. These trenches are about 15 feet wide and 10 or 12 feet deep. The garbage isdumped into the renches directly from the trucks or, if the mud makes heavy going, it can be carried to the trenches and dumped by the bullclaw. The garbage is then broken down, packed, and covered with ashes or whatever suitable covering is available. In the spring, the whole area is levelled off.

The old city dump has been completely reclaimed in this way. Now the sanitation department has begun the reclamation of two acres of swamp immediately east of the dump. The trees were knocked out and buried beneath the soil where garbage is now being dumped.

The scheme is still experimental as far as the city is concerned. If it succeeds, sanitation superintendent J. E. Pierce hopes that several areas within the city limits can be reclaimed as parks and playgrounds, which are now useless.

The bullclaw can be tilted as much as 18 inches on one side so that it can be used for trenching, ditching and grading. Consequently, it is capable of doing the entire job of reclaiming an area of wasteland, while disposing of city garbage at the same time.

According to some authorities, six years after the landfill job has been done, all the garbage will have decomposed and formed part of the soil, except for bits of crushed glass and citrous fruit peelings. As for fruit peelings, the period of decomposition is 10 years. It is said that such land settles only two to four per cent of the depth of the landfill.

The method has been used extensively in Oshawa, where three fully-equipped parks have been created from swampland. One park area has been created within 100 feet of a group of houses and apparently there have been no complaints from the residents so far.

Some cities in the United States are said to have airports built on nothing but landfill projects.

The garbage from a city the size of Peterborough will fill an area of four to five acres every year. So far the only landfill project here is at the city dump in North Monaghan townsihp, which is four miles south-west of the centre of the city.

Mr. Pearce is enthusiastic about similar projects within the city limits. Apart from the benefits of land reclamation, he points out that there would be a great saving in time spent carrying the garbage from the streets to the disposal point.

GARBAGE NOW, BUILDING LOTS IN TEN YEARS—Peterborough has abandoned its incinerator and adopted the land-fill method of garbage disposal and here is the machine which does it. First it gouges out a gulley. Then it pushes the garbage into the ditch, breaks it up and packs it down. Then earth is put over the top again, and another section of the 4½-acre dump is used.

OLD AND NEW—Across the road the land is level where formerly was an unsightly dump. On the near side of the road, lower right-hand corner, is new land-fill area, to be treated similarly, as waste is deposited, by the new "bullclaw" shovel. By this method garbage is not left exposed to rats, flies and the air.

What Chalk River Atomic Energy Company Does

By an Official of Atomic Energy of Canada, Ltd.

Atomic Energy of Canada Limited operates the Chalk River project on behalf of the Atomic Energy Control Board.

The main functions of the company are the operation of atomic reactors, research into many aspects of atomic energy and the extraction, processing and marketing of the by-products of the reactors.

The Chalk River project operates two heavy water re-actors:

(1) A low energy reactor known as ZEEP, which was the first pile in the world to operate outside the United States. This reactor, which began to operate in 1945, has proved to be an invaluable research tool.

(2) NRX, which is the most powerful natural uranium reactor in the world. This reactor, which began to operate in 1947, has enabled Canadian scientists and operators to maintain the leadership they quickly established in this field of atomic energy.

"The increasing industrial aspects of this project arising out of the construction of the new reactor and the growing view that large-scale industrial application of atomic energy was closer at hand than had been expected," declared Dr. C. J. Mackenzie in his significant report in March, 1952, "have made it desirable that this project be operated by a separate organization without other responsibilities. Accordingly, a new Crown company, Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, was incorporated in February 1952, under The Atomic Energy Control Act, 1946, to take over from the National Research Council, on 1 April 1952, the operation of the Chalk River project."

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Dr. C. J. Mackenzie, President of the Atomic Energy Control Board and President of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

Mr. W. J. Bennett, Member of the Atomic Energy Control Board and President of Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

Mr. E. R. Birchard, Vice-President (Administration) National Research Council, Ottawa, Ont.

Mr. Rene Dupuis, Commissioner, Quebec Hydro-Electric Commission, Montreal, Que.

Mr. G. A. Gaherty, President, Calgary Power Limited, Calgary, Alta.

Dr. A. R. Gordon, Head of the Department of Chemistry, University of Toronto, Toronto, Ont.

Mr. R. L. Hearn, General Manager and Chief Engineer, Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, Toronto, Ont.

Mr. Huet Massue, Engineer Economist, The Shawinigan Water and Power Company, Montreal, Que.

Mr. V. W. Scully, Comptroller, The Steel Company of Canada Limited, Hamilton, Ont.

NEW REACTOR

A more powerful reactor, known as NRU, is now under construction. This reactor will enable Canada to stay in the forefront of atomic energy development. It will make it possible for Canada to meet more adequately the tremendous demand for radioactive isotopes which now have a rapidly growing list of applications to industry, medicine and agriculture. An example of the value of these radioactive isotopes is cobalt-60. One sample of this radioactive isotope produced at Chalk River for a Cobalt-60 Beam Therapy Unit for the treatment of cancer, which cost about $50,000 is the equivalent of $50,000,000 worth of radium.

As graphite reactors, which are the principal type of reactors in the United States and Great Britain, cannot produce cobalt-60 of as high a specific activity as can be made in the Chalk River reactor, the demand for Canadian cobalt-60 is greater than AECL can meet.

For certain experiments related to the development of atomic energy, the United States Atomic Energy Commission has made use of the high neutron flux of NRX.

ISOTOPES FOR USE

And of course the great density of the neutrons in NRX has made it a particularly valuable tool for studying a wide variety of nuclear processes, for studying the effects of neutron bombardment on a variety of materials (a study which has direct application to the construction of power-producing reactors), and for producing new isotopes which have immediate value to industry, agriculture and medicine.

With the application of radioactive material growing so rapidly, we might be said to be living in a "Radioactive Age." What are the effects of radioactivity upon the human body? What can be done to counteract or minimize them? These are questions for which answers are being vigorously pursued by the Medical Research Division and the Biology and Radiation Hazards Control Division.

DIFFERENT WORLD

Personnel working for AECL live in a different world than most industrial workers. Around them are powerful radiations which cannot be seen, smelled, felt, or heard. And though the amount of radiation a worker receives in one year is less than is received from one dental X-ray, he is always conscious of nearby radiations. Health surveyors place warning signs for him, he changes into work clothes so that radioactive material is not carried outside the project, he uses hand and foot monitors, and he sees various protective warning devices around the project. He often has to perform at considerable distance, by special remote controls, jobs which are much less complicated in the usual project.

It is a world in which scientists are weighing samples as small as one twenty-eight hundred millionth of an ounce, are timing events which last for a ten thousand millionth of a second, and are delving into the very essence of life itself.

Canada's atomic energy project is located on the Ottawa River six miles from the town of Chalk River some 130 miles west of Ottawa. Construction of the project began in 1944. At that time it was thought necessary, for safety reasons, to have the plant at some distance from centres of population. To provide for this the Government acquired 10,000 acres of land. The more than 150 structures of the project occupy only about 100 acres within this large area.

Atomic Energy of Canada Limited employs about 1,500 people, more than 500 of whom are scientific and technical personnel. The company manages a unique, modern village — known as Deep River—which is seven miles up the Ottawa River from the project. The village has a population of about 2,500, more than a third of which are children. Employees of the project travel the 12 miles by road to and from the project each day in a fleet of buses.

The project includes eight major divisions: Physics, Chemistry and Engineering, Biology and Radiation Hazards Control, Industrial Operations, Commercial Products, Medical, Administration and Accounting.

Your Garden:

New Soluble Fertilizer

By HENRY PREE (NEA)

Application of a standard garden feritlizer will do much to hasten recovery of your parched lawn and restore the grass to a healthy condition for winter.

If the usual commercial fertilizer can be spread, raked or broomed and then watered into the soil so it will not burn the foliage, the recovery in appearance is likely to be rapid.

One of the newest devices, a soluble fertilizer applied through the garden hose, will undoubtedly appeal to many gardeners.

The flower garden may not be as dejected in appearance as the lawn but the chances are that some plant food worked into the soil around the plants will do much to improve their appearance. A 4-12-4 commercial fertilizer, two or four pounds per 100 square feet of area, will provide the necessary stimulus to growth and flower.

The soil should be moist before applying a fertilizer and it is important not to cultivate it so deeply into the soil as to injure the plant roots.

The fall vegetable garden is more than likely to need extra plant food at this season to insure sizeable harvests of good quality nutritious crops. Summer heat likely depleted the supply of available plant food and a feeding of two to four pounds per 100 square feet of area will do much to improve the growing crops.

Apply the plant food and then wash it into the soil after a light cultivation so that it will reach the root area quickly. Often the faster a vegetable grows, the better is its quality, say garden specialists. An extra dose of fertilizer plant food is recommended to accelerate cabbage, greens, corn, beets, carrots and some of the vine crops.

Strawberries benefit by a feeding at this season since the number and size of leaves is a good index of the vigor of the plants as they go into the winter. There is a direct correlation between the leaf area and the yield the following season.

A good fertilizer will help restore the appearance of your parched lawn

Many home fruit gardeners have found that the usual commercial practice of feeding fruit trees in the early fall increases the size of the crop the following season.

The choice between soluble plant foods and the standard commercial fertilizer mixture should not confuse the issue; both are useful. The soluble plant foods are likely to be the more expensive per unit of plant food.

However, the soluble materials may be in a form readily accessible to the plants and will produce results more quickly. The main point—it's not the brand that counts but the food that reaches the plants.

Gardening Questions

Q—What are the cultural demands of the Madonna lily?

A—Madonna lilies like full sun, a well-drained location, protection from strong winds and gravelly humusy soil to which lime is added. Though the bulbs are planted but two inches deep, soil preparation must be deep to provide ample space for the roots.

Q—The trunks of two good-size maples transplanted this spring are wrapped with burlap. When Donned the old harness this week after gambolling in pasture for the past fortnight, and a bit, and found the chafing sores of the past 50 weeks had healed nicely. I could not help but know immediately on my return that the duck season was going full blast. And that is not a figure of speech.

About a block from home in Hague's Marsh gunners are going to it from 3:30 a.m., with an occasional pop shot, until the great salvo lets loose two and one-half hours later. Same thing each night at dusk and I agree with my tinsmith friend Ed Millage who claims that it's a tough time on crows and bitterns.

"Although," he added, "my son Jack got seven birds and a big hawk the other morning, and the back shed is full of feathers."

Neighbor Stan Burger takes a dim view of the racket on the Marsh, claims since it is ringed on the east and south shores by village and taxpayers' properties, the area should be banned. He's got something there, something for the Lakefield Fish and Game Association to look into.

Fishermen Cyril Lech and Jack Murray, who are also ardent duck shooters when the time is appropriate, caught a freak marsh Bluebill at Pigeon Creek on Wednesday. It was hatched with only one wing and was going nowhere, in circles. They killed the handicapped freak before some hawk did, or, before late ice imprisoned it.

Cyril has a solution to the scarcity of fall ducks over the past few seasons on rice feeding waters. He is sure that carp have destroyed so many acres of plants—he saw a lot of big brutes rooting away the other day—that the large feeding flocks just don't come to some of the old-time Kawartha haunts any more.

An all-out war on carp by conservation-minded associations, would not only correct this situation, but many others that can be attributed to these no-good specimens.

The St. John's Ambulance Association did a very creditable job of work during the cloudburst that ended the Peterborough Exhibition last Saturday night. Stranded grandstanders gave members their car keys and described where their vehicles were parked and had them delivered beside the grandstand. This is over and above the call of duty and a job well done, St. John's.

Place For Man-Sized Fish

The season for taking whopper 'lunge is upon us and already some fine fish have been duly reported and photographed.

Denzile Logan and buddy C. W. Skidmore, both of Brilliant, O., drove into town on Thursday with the back end of their station wagon sagging under the weight of a 30-pounder that Denzile had played to a finish in Pigeon Lake, north of Gannon's Floating Bridge.

"Dog-goned," exclaimed Denzile, "if the fish wasn't just 13 inches shorter than I am."

An onlooker yawned and reminded him that the Kawarthas was the place for man-sized fish . . .

C. E. Cunningham of Elwood City, Pa., landed a 28-pound 'lunge at Pigeon and his pal Steve Chinchi, same address, a 25-er, both on the same day. Steve's prowess with rod and line has made notable newspaper copy each year.

No doubt there have been many fine catches unreported. But the story that broke during my absence of the Ottawa man who displayed the head of a 53-pound 'lunge (????) and who was so overcome by its size that he and his friends carved up the body, stinks. The fish probably did, too, a dead one found belly-up. We all know Ottawans get heady over big figures but they don't need to apply it to conservative Kawarthans, when it comes to fish and fishing.

Private pilot-salesman Walter Kuoni of Marieville, P.Q., flew into the Charlie Kingan Aristrip at Skyboro Airport this week, completed an hour and one-half of business with DeLaval's Andy Purdon and winged off again on his way. He was so enthusiastic about his quick call, and the 2,400-foot refurbished strip, that he has accelerated hopes of those faithful ones who are now engaged in making a landing strip for light craft to land near Peterborough.

"I'll bet it would take a DC3," crowed Kuoni.

And I'll bet it won't, Walter. It is a nice thought but don't let us go off the deep end, or into the raspberries at far side of the strip. The Department of Transport boys will lay down the limits. This is encouraging stuff, though.

People who cuss noisy kickers in summers in these parts will be glad to know that our Outboard Marine Company have come up with a quiet 5½ h.p. Johnson model. It is so silent that the National Noise Abatement Council in the U.S.A. have awarded Johnson a Certificate of Merit.

No doubt there will be other certificates of merit to Outboard president Clarence Neal when he starts showing some of newly-acquired five-by-five Herefords on the Dave (Empress Hotel) Kerr ranch, Lindsay Highway, that he purchased recently.

Watching him getting acquainted with his stalky herd sire, Symbol, this week, C.B. proved he was farm-raised by judging Symbol's weight on the hoof, correctly, at nearly a ton.

No, I didn't do any fishing during my vacation, instead went travelling, by rail, air, Department of Transport pilot service ships, car and even tried hitch-hiking with mild success. Landed a couple of times on the airstrip of Anticosti Island, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and in admiring the island's fresh water rivers found that the pulp company which owns it garners much revenue from millionaire salmon fishermen . The tab, $125 per rod, per day. There is a long waiting list, just to give you an idea that business along this tourist line are excellent. Cruising over Seven Islands, the seven that give the place is name, Capt. Paul Lapointe had me in the cockpit to look below and watch four grey whales. He estimated they were 60 feet long. Port Hope intermediate puckists have been looking for a coach, and we note this recent item from there: "Strongest contender at present is Ned Vitarelli of Peterborough, who led their Legion to a senior title and an Ontario final series since the last war. Ned was one of the top players in Peterborough in his day, but has given up his playing role for the bench job. A heady player himself, Ned could be just the man to mould a winning Port Hope team. Al Burns and Sixty Coombs of Lindsay Muskies have shown the Redmen during the past two seasons the style of hockey they learned under the coaching of Ned a few years back. Three of last year's Peterborough junior entry may play for Port Hope this winter."

Oshawa Truckmen of our OHA senior "B" setup will have several former Bowmanville players aboard this coming campaign. They include Coach Ernie Dickens, Sonny Hooper and Maxie Yourth. Some of the guys trying out for goal with the team are Jack Naylor, Les Colvin, Ken Courtney, Bob Shropshire and Whitby's Phil Burkhart. Several of 'em played goal at one time or another for the Generals. At least 30 prospects have started ice drills for the Truckmen already on Bowman Villa ice. For the size of that centre, they have a real good arena with artificial ice. We'll be seeing the Truckers there.

When COBL was Young

Frank Guy died recently in Port Hope. COBL old-time players and fans up this way may recall this good infielder of the lakeshore town during the 1920s. For a time in those years, the Central Ontario ball loop took in such teams as Peterborough, Belleville, Oshawa, Kingston, Lindsay, Leaside, Bowmanville and Cobourg. All packed with imports, of course. Later, some of the smaller centres found it too expensive and dropped back to intermediate. Teammates of Frank Guy included. Fred and Bob Chalk, Alec and Finnegan Hills, Joe Micks, Johnny Rowden, Bill Dear, Red Friar, Sheeney Moise, George Sleeman, Howard Hutchings, Nick Carter, Harvey Boyd, Bill Brockenshire, Rusty Russell, Harry Baxter and Sammy Hall. Familiar names to many folks here.

There was considerable disappointment locally yesterday when word came through that the Trailermen were grounded by fog in Vancouver and wouldn't arrive home Friday eve as expected. Wives and families of the players especially felt as let down as the team. But one can't control the weather, and the Pacific coast does have somewhat similar weather to the balmy, and often rainy, foggy, clime of England. TCA officials wisely called off flights, that air line having a proud record of no accidents. They just don't take chances. CNR chaps here were most helpful to us and to the Chamber of Commerce in getting information from Malton Airport as quickly as possible concerning the flight bringing our champion lacrossers home.

Welcome Back, Champs!

Reception for the Trailermen goes on tonight as scheduled, the boys having arrived in Toronto this morn. They'll gather at the Armouries at seven p.m. to parade down George St. to Miller Bowl where they'll be officially welcomed back by various dignitaries after the champions have been introduced individually. Bands, banners, etc. All minor lacrossers are asked to assemble with sticks and sweaters at the Armouries at 6.45 to move off with the parade. May we remind our citizens again that this is a celebration for the bringing of a Canadian senior sports' championship once more to Peterborough, so let's really give out with the cheers. It is not a funeral.

* * * * * *

A reminder, too, to the city council's reception committee—when you're setting the table in November for the big championship sports' banquet you'd better lay another 15 or 16 plates. You're forgetting one more provincial crown brought here in the past year. Pat Doherty's local Shamrocks late last March defeated Guelph to win the Ontario bantam "A" hockey title. That's the trouble with letting two years slip around ere recognizing athletic accomplishments, someone is liable to be overlooked. Along with these puck winners, the city's championship list includes the senior lacrossers (twice victors the past two years), the grid Orfuns, the soccer club, the juvenile lacrossers, the ornamental swimmers (as USA open team champs), and two victorious lady badmintoneers.

College Grad, 24, In Bruins' Nets

HERSHEY, Pa. (CP)—A 24-year-old college graduate will be the starting goaltender for Boston Bruins in their first exhibition game here tonight.

He is Ray Picard, graduate of Northeastern University in Boston, named by coach Lynn Patrick as the temporary replacement for Sugar Jim Henry.

Picard, chosen for the United States All-America hockey team a year ago, was selected by Patrick over Marcel Pelletier of the Chicoutimi, Que., Sagueneens and Lorne Howes of the Barrie, Ont., Flyers on the basis of his showing in practice.

Henry, given permission to report late, arrived here Friday and worked out for the first time.

Three other newcomers, centre Cal Gardner of Transcona, Man., winger Lorne Ferguson of Palmerston, Ont., and winger Doug Mohns also received starting assignments from Patrick for tonight's game.

Cricketers And Good Season For P-W Teams

By C. H. IRESON

Local cricketers playing on Peterborough "A" and "B" teams in the Toronto District Cricket Council this year had a busy season, and a most successful one in the case of the "A" team. The Council takes in 20 teams in and around Toronto, including Oshawa and Peterborough.

The Peterborough "A" team will be promoted next year to a higher class of this Council, owing to its success the past summer. The team played 14 matches and won 12, drawing one and losing but one. The loss came in the last match of the season at the hands of the Dovercourt "B" club, whom they had beaten earlier. Grace Church "B" drew with them once.

GAIN EXPERIENCE

The local "B" team won three, drew one and lost eight. Players who didn't make the "A" team played for this squad and gained much experience during the season against good teams.

Following are the batting records of the local "A" players:

	Innings	Not Out	Av.
F. Booth	12	3	47.4
E. Bedford	11	1	25.9
B. Roberts	11	4	23.8
G. Smith	10	0	19.7
T. Clarke	8	2	19.6
E. Cotton	10	2	18.1
W. Cridland	4	2	16.0
W. Wright	6	?	15.6
T. Scott	8	0	10.6

(and C. Boardman av. 7.7, H. Dibben 7.5, and R. Smith 5.7).

The bowling averages are:

	Runs	Wickets	Av.
G. Smith	71	17	4.17
W. Wright	56	12	4.66
F. Booth	187	35	5.34
T. Clarke	227	39	5.82
E. Cotton	101	12	8.41
Boardman	139	7	19.8

THE "B" TEAM

There were 20 players with the "B" team, some of whom will be stepping up next season after their experience. The list is headed by W. Holroyd with a fine average of 22.7, followed by R. Rollwagen with 10., W. Freeman 8.5, S. Jennings 7.1, W. Norman 6.5, D. Dyer 5.8, F. Roberts 5.2; A. Higgins 5., and other comers.

In bowling, F. Dyer leads with 10.2 runs per wicket, S. Jennings 10.3, R. Rollwagen 11.9, W. Freeman 12.6, K. Illingworth 13.3, W. Norman 18., and W. Holroyd 22.7.

These figures do not include various friendly matches, nor the county playoffs when the Peterborough-Whitaker Club as Peterborough County lost out in finals to Lincoln County.

Royals Win 2nd 11-7 Over Wings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Royals, undeterred by Rochester Red Wings' pennant-winning performance in the International League, are cleaning up in the post-season playoffs.

The Royals made it two straight over the Wings Friday night for their second win at Rochester to lead the best-of-seven final 2-0. They scored seven runs in the seventh inning for an 11-7 victory.

Six of the runs came after two were out in the seventh. The key blow was a bases-loaded double by Dick Whitman, breaking a 3-3 tie.

The series now moves to Montreal for games Saturday and Sunday.

NHL Opening Oct. 8, Earliest In History

By GERRY LOUGHEED

TORONTO (CP)—The National Hockey League, streamlined from a tour-team, leaky-roof circuit in its debut 37 years ago, opens Oct. 8, the earliest date in its colorful history.

In 1917, when the NHL was formed, first games were played Dec. 19. That first schedule was a 22-game affair, compared with the present 70.

Through the years the league has seen many teams and players, great and near-great, come and go. It has ballooned from its hit-and-miss days of the First World War era, when only one team—Toronto Arenas—had artificial ice, to a high of 10 in 1926, was thinned out to eight in 1935 and settled down to its present six in 1942.

17 CLUBS IN BIG TIME

In its sometimes-turbulent history when an NHL franchise sold for the ridiculously-low price of $5,000, 17 clubs have hit the big time. Included in the list were Montreal Wanderers, Ottawa Senators, Quebec Bulldogs, Hamilton Tigers, Montreal Maroons, New York Americans, Brooklyn, Americans, Pittsburgh Pirates, Philadelphia Quakers, St. Louis Eagles.

Now a franchise, if you can buy one, costs $50,000 and a prospective purchaser needs another $375,000—$57,000 to the NHL reserve fund and $318,000 working capital. When New York Rangers face off against the Red Wings at Detroit and Montreal plays host to Chicago in the 1952-53 openers, President Clarence Campbell figures each club in the league will need at least $600,000 to break even over the 70-game schedule.

Last season the NHL drew approximately 2,045,000 fans during the regular schedule and another 240,600 in the playoffs. Campbell expects these figures will be increased before the schedule winds up next April.

BETTER BALANCED

"I'm satisfied the league is better balanced than last season," he told The Canadian Press. "There's bound to be an improvement in attendance" and one big factor was the end of the Korean war. Hockey crowds dropped, especially in the United States, when the Korean conflict started.

And Campbell sees no "menace" from television, blamed for smaller attendance figures in various other sports. "TV broadcast of hockey will not hurt the NHL at any time," he said. "TV is promotionally good for hockey. Other programs may affect the attendance but televised hockey will attract new fans for the NHL."

Here is the order the teams finished last spring: Detroit, Montreal, Boston, Chicago, Toronto and New York. With the Rangers and Toronto on the playoff sidelines, Montreal swept through Detroit, then polished off Boston Bruins victors over Chicago in the semi-finals for the Stanley Cup.

Except for New York, all clubs were in the thick of the playoff picture until the schedule windup. The race for the last playoff position wasn't decided until the final night when Toronto lost out by two points.

BRIEF SUMMARY

Here's a brief rundown of the clubs and their main personnel changes for the 1953-54 campaign:

Detroit: Little face-lifting was done on the power-packed team that finished first with a 15-point margin. A few promising farmhands may stick.

Montreal: The Stanley Cup champions should be stronger with the expected signing of Jean Beliveau, high-scoring centre with Quebec Aces last season.

Boston: Virtually no change from the squad that carried Montreal to the seven-game limit before bowing out in the final. Veterans Milt Schmidt, goalie Sugar Jim Henry and Bill Quackenbush may start showing their age.

Chicago—Sid Abel in his freshman year as coach, inspired the Black Hawks to their first playoff spot since 1946. His added experience and the off-season purchase of three Detroit farmhands should help the club.

Toronto—Coach Joe Primeau retired and was succeeded by firebrand King Clancy, a highly-successful coach with Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League. They may miss centre Max Bentley, sold to New York this summer, but appear stronger with the purchase of burly Bob Barons to work on the big line with Teeder Kennedy and Sid Smith.

New York—With Bill Cook released as coach, general manager Frank Boucher stepped back into the manager-coach role he gave up in 1948. If Bentley can escape injuries that plagued him the last few seasons and if goalie Johnny Bower, up from Cleveland, can live up to his minor-league notice, Rangers should be vastley improved.

Armstrong Gets Apps' Sweater

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—No. 10 sweater returned to the Toronto Maple Leaf line-up Friday after a five-year absence.

Former centre Syl Apps presented the sweater to right-winger George Armstrong who will wear it this year in National Hockey League competition. The number was dropped from the Leaf roster in 1948 when Apps retired.

Armstrong came up to the Leafs late in the 1951-52 season from Pittsburgh of the American Hockey League. Plagued by a shoulder separation last season, he scored 14 goals and assisted on 11 others in 52 games.

Howie Meeker, troubled with a sore back, returned to Toronto Friday for medical examination. Doctors recommended a rest.

Meeker is slated to coach Stratford Indians of the Ontario Hockey Association senior A circuit. He will be called by the Leafs should they run into any right-wing troubles.

Goalie Harry Lumley suffered a two-stitch cut over his right eye when hit by a deflected puck during a scrimmage.

TROT RECORDS TOPPLE

DELAWARE, O. (AP) — Two world trotting and pacing records toppled and two others were equalled Friday as the Grand Circuit concluded its annual stand at the Delaware county fair.

Stenographer, owned by Max Hamp of Camp Hill, Pa., won the $10,000 Walnut Hall Farm Stake in straight heats and in winning equalled the world mark for two-year-old fillies on a half-mile track. She coupled a first-heat time of 2:06 3-5 with a second heat in 2:07 3-5 with the combined times recording a new two-heat standard of 4:14 1-5. Del Miller was the driver.

Sally J. MacPherson, competing in a race for non-winners of $2,000 was clocked in 2:03 3-5 and 2:04. The total times represented a two-heat standard for three-year-old pacing fillies. The horse is owned by Ed Jones of Jackson, O., and was driven by Slim Shilling.

Earl's Song took the first heat of the $6,000 Walnut Hall Stake for three-year-olds in 2:04 3-5, equalling the world mark for age and gait. Wayne (Curley) Smart drove the Castelton filly to a straight-heat victory. Helicopter, the Hambletonian winner owned by the Armstrong brothers of Brampton, Ont., was second each time.

BRUNDAGE FOR GERMANY

MUNICH (AP)—Avery Brundage American president of the International Olympic Committee, Friday threw his support behind Garmisch-Partenkirchen's bid for the 1960 winter games and said he is certain the summer Olympics will also be held in Europe.

Brundage said he considers the German Alpine resort as best suited for the winter games. He tentatively ruled out Rome, Budapest and Lausanne as possible sites for the summer contests.

"It's my private opinion, of course," Brundage said. "The final decision has to be made by the committee."

Middleweight Morris Ander of Toronto suffered three defeats on the mat in three successive rounds of the Greco-Roman event. David Silverstone of Montreal took third place in the men's individual epee fencing competition. He had four victories and two defeats.

Canadian yachts competing were Buzzy II, owned by B. W. Newkirk and sailed by William Gooderham, both of Toronto, and Bibis, sailed by Robert Trow of Toronto.

U.S. Contract Jumpers Find Canadian Football Tough

By ED SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—"Up in Canada the competition isn't so tough."

Mac Speedie, former end with Cleveland Browns of the National Football League, gave that explanation last summer as he tore up his contract with the American professional club to join Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Interprovincial Football Union.

Speedie hasn't done much talking since he started playing the WIFU's two-game-a-week schedule. But some of his contract-jumping predecessors could tell a different story.

STARTED IN 1951

The jumpers—not to be confused with the "legal" emigrants on whom the U.S. professionals had no claim—first appeared in 1951. Some fared better than others but they all soon found they had to work for their Canadian gold.

Of the 11 who headed north two years ago, six are still with Canadian clubs and the status of one of these is dubious. Three were traded off by their original bosses and a fourth is attempting a comeback after jumping back briefly to the NFL and staying out of football for a year.

The big migration struck hardest at New York Yankees, who lost quarterback George Ratterman, tackle Martin Ruby and ends Jack Russell and John Yonakor.

Chicago Cardinals and Green Bay lost two men apiece, the Cards giving up centre Bill Blackburn and end Bob Shaw while the Packers yielded end Alton Baldwin and halfback Gene (Choo Choo) Roberts. Tackle Bob Gain said goodbye to Cleveland Browns, end Neill Armstrong left Philadelphia Eagles and Los Angeles Rams parted with tackle Dick Huffman.

CASES IN COURT

Some of the bereaved clubs tried court action. The Rams managed to keep Huffman out of the Winnipeg line-up for most of a season before a Canadian judge threw out their case. The others got nowhere.

But Ratterman, Yonakor, Russell, Blackburn, Shaw and Gain have since found their way back home with a mixed batch of press clippings and a wholesome respect for the competition in Canada.

Ratterman, who left the Yankees to join Montreal Alouettes at a rumored $20,000 salary, had the saddest experience.

His best friends couldn't call his career with the Big Four club a success. After floundering with them for most of a miserable season, he quit the club before the end of the schedule and rejoined the Yanks.

FAILED TO CLICK

But he never won his first-string job back. And coincidentally, Bob Celeri, who took his job, tried his luck with Hamilton this year and was fired by the Tiger-Cats because his passing wasn't good enough.

Yonakor, an Alouette teammate of Ratterman's, departed after a single season, having scored five touchdowns and attracted no votes from the all-star selectors.

Gain was another one-year man, but in his season with Ottawa Rough Riders he sparked his club to a Canadian title and earned unanimous all-star recognition. He returned amicably to Cleveland in 1952 and now is serving in the U.S. Army. The Riders still missed him enough this year to grab Bob Kissell, another contract jumper, from the Browns in an attempt to fill the gap.

UNLUCKY PLAYER

Russell's pass-grabbing led Saskatchewan to the western title in 1951 but his playing career ended with a playoff knee injury.

Shaw set a league scoring record with Calgary last year but was dropped last week because of defensive shortcomings and now is trying to win a job with Toronto Argonauts.

Generally, the big-name jumpers found much of their competition came from little-known Americans who made their reputations in Canada.

Argonauts won the Dominion title in 1952 without a single jumper in the line-up. Their key men included quarterback Nobby Wirkowski, from Miami University, Oxford, O.; halves Ulysses Curtis, from Miami A and M, and Billy Bass, a Chicago Hornet discard.

NAMED OVER ROBERTS

Both Curtis and Bass were named over the highly-touted Gene Roberts to the 1951 eastern all-star team.

The hard-driving Roberts, best man in the Alouette backfield in 1951, was dealt off to Ottawa before he gained all-star ranking the following year. Teamed with Avatus Stone, a 1953 jumper from the Cardinals, he looks like a cinch to repeat.

Armstrong appears to be making a successful comeback with Winnipeg Blue Bombers after jumping back to Philadelphia two years ago and staying out of football in 1952.

Huffman and Ruby have had the best luck. Cleared of his legal troubles, Huffman has been a mainstay on the Winnipeg line, yielding an all-star berth to Ruby in 1951 and reversing the decision the following year. The latter shook off numerous injuries to play close to 60-minute football for Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Rocket, Beliveau On Habs' Line

MONTREAL (CP)—Coach Dick Irvin of Montreal Canadiens, busy shuffling his forward lines for the opening of the National Hockey League season less than two weeks ago, has come up with one line that has all the prospects for top goal-getting.

The line is made up of Jean Beliveau, top scorer in the Quebec Senior Hockey League last year, Maurice (Rocket) Richard, who holds the record—347—for number of goals scored in NHL play, and Eddie Mazur, who can hold his own in any scoring combination.

Irvin's second line is centred by veteran Elmer Lach, with Eddie Litzenberger and Dick Gamble on the wings, while rookie Don Marshall, with Cincinnati of the American Hockey League last season, is at centre between Dickie Moore and Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion on the third.

A number of veterans and rookies are fighting for positions on the fourth line.

Ti-Cat Officials Give Side Of Heath Story

HAMILTON (CP) — Officials of Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Big Four Friday gave the club's side of the story in its dispute with quarterback Stan Heath. The former University of Nevada quarter has launched a suit for $10,000 against the football club for breach of contract.

Heath, obtained from Calgary Stampeders of the Western loop, was released by the Tiger-Cats after playing one game. He said he was signed to a non-release contract calling for $9,500 for the regular season, plus $700 a game for any playoff encounters.

Coach Carl Voyles said after the game which Heath played in and which the Cats lost 17-0 to Montreal Alouettes that the quarterback's passing arm was injured and that he would not play again for the Cats until it was healed.

SIGNED SONGIN

Voyles then signed Ed Songin, former Boston College quarter who had been cut by Baltimore Colts of the National Football League.

Frank Bliss, Tiger-Cats' president, said Voyles strongly denied that any Calgary official told him that Heath's throwing arm was impaired in any way before being brought east.

"Heath threw the ball very well when he appeared for Calgary in the exhibition game against Tiger-Cats in August," said Bliss. "But he reported here on Sept. 4 unable to throw the ball in the same way."

He added that Voyles released him so he could return to the Stamps before the Oct. 1 deadline and have a chance at grabbing a spot on the 1953 team.

Brilliant Pitching Wins Detroit Title

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Detroit won the Amateur Softball Association world tournament Friday night by sweeping a doubleheader from Clearwater, Fla., 2-0 and 1-0 behind the brilliant hurling of 22-year-old John Spring.

The young pitcher helped eliminate Bloomington, Ill., 1-0 in the Friday afternoon semi-final, stopped Clearwater on two hits in the first night game and gave up only three in the nightcap.

Spring pitched 21 consecutive scoreless innings in leading Detroit to its second straight world title.

Major Leaguers Set Records In Last Big Night Of 1953

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

The major leagues used their last big night of the 1953 season to write a hatful of records and best performances into the books. In most instances it was a case of "the best since" or "the first since" instead of just plain "best" or "first" but it still is quite an impressive list. There was something in every game.

Lefty Mel Parnell of Boston Red Sox joined the great Walter Johnson as the only pitchers to shut out the New York Yankees four times in a season. Johnson did it in 1908. In beating the New Yorkers 5-0 Parnell also became the first pitcher to whip them five times in one year since Casey Stengel took over as manager five years ago.

WHIP BROWNS 7-2

Chicago White Sox scored their 87th triumph at the expense of the cellar-dwelling St. Louis Browns, 7-2, and assured themselves of their best won and lost record in 33 years despite a third place finish.

The pennant-winning Brooklyn Dodgers won their 104th game, 4-3 over Philadelphia, equalling the all-time high in victories by a Dodger team. The second place 1942 club also won 104.

Al Rosen continued his hitting rampage for Cleveland Indians. He smashed his 42nd and 43rd home runs as he broke the Cleveland homer record at the expense of Detroit Tigers who bowed 12-3. Rosen also got two other hits and moved within one point of Mickey Vernon of Washington, American League batting leader.

Harvey Haddix became the first rookie on the St. Louis Cardinals to win 20 games since Johnny Beasley in 1942. He breezed to his 20th 11-2 over Chicago with the help of 19 hits, four of them by Red Schoendienst.

Bob Porterfield pitched his ninth shutout and his 22nd victory as Washington edged Philadelphia 1-0 with a ninth-inning run. Porterfield is the first Washington pitcher since 1933 to win as many as 22 games.

Al Dark of the New York Giants set a National League record for home runs by shortstops when he hit his 23rd of the year in the Giants' 6-2 triumph at Pittsburgh. The old mark of 22 was set by Glenn Wright of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1930.

Milwaukee and Cincinnati weren't scheduled.

Speedy Johnny Wilson opened the scoring at 15:20 of the first period, and then Alex Delvecchio made it 2-0. Both goals were scored while Hawks' Larry Zeidel was serving a penalty for high-sticking.

In the second, Red Kelly and Gordie Howe scored, and in the final period Metro Prystai and Ted Lindsay added the rest.

The Hawks played without defenceman Gus Mortson, who is still a holdout, and Bill Mosienko, who arrived too late to get into the game.

GUELPH (CP)—Coach Bill Mitchell says his Ontario Agricultural College Aggies will field one of their best teams in years today as they go against Royal Military College of Kingston in an exhibition game here.

Mitchell was optimistic about his club's chances in the intermediate intercollegiate race this season. Both the University of Toronto Baby Blues and Western Colts have suffered heavy losses. Aggies will be going with last year's team practically intact.

Ed Wladyks will call signals for the OAC club, with hard-running halves Dick Roelofsen and Wayne Gerrie doing most of the passing off a split-T formation. Mitchell is also relying on scatback Dave Francis to gain plenty of ground for him.

The line has been strengthened by the addition of Doug Stephen, a former tackle with Queen's Gaels of the senior college loop. Al Brash will be offensive centre and Ron McDonald defensive captain.

Metras Promises Blues Surprises

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Johnny Metras promises a handful of surprises for Toronto football fans when he takes his Western Mustangs to Varsity Stadium today to meet the University of Toronto Blues in a non-league contest.

It is the first such meeting in history between the two schools who will meet twice later on in the regular senior intercollegiate football schedule.

Metras, whose Mustangs of the '40s were famous for their wide-open style of play that made them the scourge of eastern Canadian college gridirons, plans to open up his bag of tricks for the benefit of Toronto fans.

"We want this game as much as we do any league contest," he said.

The Mustangs plan to unveil several new plays against the Blues and have been concentrating all week on their manoeuvres.

Barrie Fighter Wins By Punch

Parker dropped Jimmy Slade, a 48-hour sub for the ailing Danny Nardico, with a right to the chin in the final seconds of Friday night's 10-round fight at St. Nicholas Arena.

Until the punch landed, Slade looked like a sure upset winner against the lanky transplanted Canadian from Barrie, Ont., now living in Paterson, N.J. Slade took the automatic eight-count although he was on his feet at four.

Referee Watson scored it 5-5 in rounds with Parker the winner on points, 7-5. Judge Bert Grant voted for Parker 6-4, and judge Tony Rossi for Slade, 6-4.

The small crowd of no more than 1,500 booed the verdict against the outweighed Bronx negro who gave away 24½ pounds to his opponent. Parker weighed 201½, Slade 177. Slade was about six inches shorter than Parker, who had won his last six by knockouts.

Thibeault looked impressive in both the fore-checking and body-checking departments.

Club Learns Use Of Soil

OMEMEE (ENS) —Agricultural representative Le Roy Brown of Lindsay was speaker at the regular meeting of the Omemee and District Horticultural Society Thursday evening.

Following the showing of the film "This is our land," Mr. Brown led a discussion on Soil Conservation, which included strip farming, fertilization, crop rotation and prevention of erosion. It was very important, he said, to have soil samples of your fields and garden plots tested to determine the kind of fertilizer required. In answer to a question about the advisability of plowing in combine straw, he said, nitrogen should first be added to the straw.

Mrs. H. Bent, director for the meeting thanked Mr. Brown for his valuable help with the program. In replying, he invited all interested to visit his office and make use of the pamphlets on soil conservation and other subjects of interest.

There was a unanimous vote to give an award of merit this year, the same to be presented at the pot luck supper to be held at the Anglican church on October 29. A committee was named to assist director Mrs. T. A. McConnell with arrangements. They are Mrs. Harvey Laidley, Mrs. H. V. Smith, Mrs. H. Bent, Mrs. R. Brooks, and Mrs. K. Atwell.

UK Guesses Right On Wheat Price

MONTREAL (CP) — Fred T. Rowan, federal deputy controller of transport, said Friday night the United Kingdom "seems to have guessed correctly on the fact the world market price for wheat would drop below the price set" in the International Wheat Agreement.

In an interview, Mr. Rowan said there is an overabundance of wheat in Britain and the grain is being stored in any available space. As a result of the situation in Britain, he said, Canadian elevators are clogged with wheat and coarse grains.

"The United Kingdom is our best customer and when we have trouble there, it's bad," said Mr. Rowan.

Meantime, Canadian shipping officials, who declined to be quoted by name, said the price of wheat will have to be reduced below the IWA price because the demand has dropped sharply.

Mr. Rowan said there are 17,000,000 to 18,000,000 bushels of wheat in St. Lawrence river ports and there is a lull in shipping.

Mr. Rowan said the Prairie farmer is not concerned about the stock-piling and the shipping lull as long as the Canadian wheat board continues to maintain the IWA agreement price on Canadian wheat at $2.05 a bushel. The farmer is leaving the worrying to shippers and brokers.

Are United States and Russia Bluffing?

Controlled Tests, Not A Sign Nation Has Built H-Bomb

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK (AP)—The H-bomb now is something like a hole card in the poker game of international armaments.

No one admits having this hidden ace—having a practical H-bomb ready to use in a war. But his opponents can't be sure. Is it there? Is he bluffing? Will he draw it the next time around? If he doesn't, will he go on bluffing?

Both the United States and Russia have admitted only making tests involving or contributing to hydrogen - type explosions. This means they've shown that H-bomb reactions are technically feasible.

That kind of controlled test is a long step from practical, deliverable H-bombs having 10 to 100 to 1,000 times the force of A-bombs. The peculiar nature of H-bombs raises difficult problems, different from those met with A-bombs.

Each side would like to know where the other stands on these problems.

Despite official secrecy, many scientific facts about H-bombs are known, and many expert guesses and speculations have been published. These offer some guide to a person in his thinking about H-bombs.

TRIGGER FOR H-BOMB

One fact is that the A-bomb is a trigger or match for an H-bomb. The terrific heat and pressure generated by an A - bomb are needed to start the hydrogen chain reaction.

The A-bomb creates energy by splitting heavy atoms of uranium —235 or plutonium. The heavy atom splits into pieces which together weigh less than the original heavy atom. The loss weight or mass is turned into energy, creating the blast, heat and radioactivity.

The hydrogen reaction works by fusing together the cores of two hydrogen atoms into one helium atom. The helium atom weighs less than the two hydrogen atoms. The lost mass again is released as energy.

This principal was known to scientists, including Russians, in the 1920s. But until the A-bomb came along, there was no trigger powerful enough to create the hydrogen reaction.

Ordinary hydrogen, like that in toy balloons, won't work in an H-bomb. It takes too long for its atoms to fuse together.

Special kinds of hydrogen offered the chance of starting a reaction in the millionth of a second before an H-bomb flies all apart.

There is deuterium, or double-weight hydrogen, which can be recovered from water. There is tritium, triple - weight hydrogen, which exists in only tiny amounts in nature, but which can be made artificially.

SEVEN METHODS

Chemists tell of seven methods of making tritium. One is to bombard lithium in atomic reactors with neutrons from U-235 or plutonium.

The big question was whether any combinations of deuterium and-or tritium could be set off before the A-bomb match blew out in a split second.

The answer is yes. While the U. S. atomic energy commission never said so specifically, its announcement about the Eniwetok big blast a year ago is widely interpreted as meaning that some degree of hydrogen reaction was made to work, for a bigger bang on top of the A-bang. The Russians clearly claim to have achieved a hydrogen reaction.

From eyewitness accounts at Eniwetok, one educated guess is that the H-blast was the equivalent of exploding 4,000,000 tons of TNT. The original A-bombs dropped on Japan were equivalent to 20,000 tons of TNT. There is also speculation that A-bombs equivalent to 200,000 tons of TNT now have been developed.

Nothing was said officially about how the hydrogen was incorporated with the A-bomb, how the device or bomb was engineered.

There was no word about the kind of hydrogen used. Many experts speculate that tritium is or must be used as a booster for the hydrogen chain reaction. Tritium and deuterium can fuse at a lower temperature and release more energy than deuterium with deuterium. The tritium-deuterium reaction could come first, giving power for a bigger reaction with deuterium-deuterium. Much less of the very costly, scarce tritium would be needed than in a bomb using tritium alone.

LEFT UNANSWERED

Whether the hydrogen device or bomb has reached a stage of being deliverable was left unanswered too. There is a difference between a test of a reaction and a device which can be put upon an enemy target.

One problem is that hydrogen is a gas and the H-bomb fuel can't be a gas taking up a huge volume. It could be liquid hydrogen, which means keeping it at a temperature of more than 400 degrees below zero, fahrenheit. That calls for a bomb equipped with ultra-cold refrigeration or some similar arrangement, and solution of other technical problems.

One guess is that a truly huge H-bomb would occupy an entire bomber, guided by remote control to its target.

In theory an H-bomb could be 1,000 times as powerful as the A-bombs dropped on Japan. Such a bomb would cause blast damage over a 700-square-mile area, ranging from heavy destruction in the inner circle of 100 to 150 square miles to lesser degrees of damage in the rest of the area, with only slight damage in the outermost sections.

COMPLETE DESTRUCTION

In the inner circle of 100 to 150 square miles, there would be virtually complete destruction of buildings except for those heavily-reinforced, with damage in varying degrees inside the reinforced buildings according to how close they were to the blast. All this assumes that the bomb could be detonated high in the air.

A smaller H-bomb of, say, 50 times the power of the A-bombs dropped on Japan, could cause blast damage over 100 square miles, fire and flash burns over 150 square miles, and spray radioactive rays over an area of seven square miles, physicists calculate.

The H-bomb may not be the last word. Last January President Truman said that even the H-bomb might be dwarfed, but he did not elaborate.

One possibility mentioned several years ago by scientists is a C-bomb. This would be an H-bomb with a casing of cobalt. The cobalt would be turned into a radioactive dust which, if winds were judged right, could settl edown upon an enemy country, poisoning plants and animals and humans. But today, many scientists think such a weapon would be impractical.

U.S.-Spain To Sign Agreement On Bases

MADRID (Reuters)—An agreement between the United States and Spain providing air and naval bases for American forces in return for dollar aid is expected to be signed here early next week.

In return for the bases, Spain will receive $210,000,000 over the next 12 months. The United States is also expected to spend about $100,000,000 building and modernizing bases which will turn the peninsula into a "resistance hedgehog."

Funds will be used to re-equip Spain's armed forces, and improve the efficiency of her roads, rail services, war industry and farms.

Mother Finds Escaped Pilot

SEOUL (AP)—The mother of a North Korean pilot who fled communism in a Russian-built MiG jet last Monday will be united with her son in a few days.

The mother, a 43-year-old woman who was born in North Korea, South Korean army headquarters in Taegu.

The mother fled from North Korea late in 1950 with retreating Allied forces. She carried with her a childhood picture of her only son.

She asked today to see her son, whose whereabouts has been a closely guarded secret since he made his only public appearance at a press conference in Seoul Tuesday.

RoK army authorities contacted American military officials and arrangements were made for a reunion in a few days.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

By CHARLES H. SPEARIN

CHARLES H. SPEARIN

"A Scout is a friend to all and a brother to every other Scout." This Scout law was exemplified last spring when the Canadian Scout Brotherhood sent a total of $3,000.00 in cash overseas to help the flood stricken Scouts in the United Kingdom, Holland and Belgium.

Boy Scouts on the Ionian Islands of Crete erected a village of tents to provide shelter for a large number of people whose homes were destroyed in the recent earthquakes disaster.

The Boy Scout movement since it was founded by Lord Baden Powell about the time of the South African War, has expanded to world-wide proportions and now enjoys the hospitality of nearly all the free nations. At the 14th International Scout conference in Leichtenstein last August, Australia and New Zealand became members of the world Scouting organization, which has now an enrollment of more than five and one-half million Scouts in 57 countries.

An invitation to hold the 8th World Scout jamboree in Canada in 1955 was accepted. It will be the first time Canadian Scouts will have been hosts to brother Scouts from around the globe.

FIRE PREVENTION—In keeping with the motto, 'Be Prepared', special training in fire prevention will be given Boy Scouts across Canada as part of their observance of Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 4 to 10. In many centres Scout groups will visit fire stations and see actual demonstrations of fire fighting equipment and learn at first hand the best methods of preventing fires, especially in their own homes.

TRINITY SCOUT MOTHERS' AUXILIARY

Mrs. W. T. Edmondson opened her home for the September meeting of Trinity Scout and Cub Mothers' Auxiliary.

Announcements were made of Boy Scout Apply Day, Oct. 17 and Scout weiner roast, Sept. 25.

New officers were installed by Mrs. R. S. Hutton: honorary president, Mrs. Charles H. Spearin; past president, Mrs. E. Edmondson; president, Mrs. J. N. Perry; vice-president, Mrs. O. Jamieson; secretary, Mrs. E. M. Malcolm; treasurer, Mrs. H. S. Dunham; telephone convener, Mrs. J. Smith; sewing convener, Mrs. D. Whyte. Mr. and Mrs. A. Legon showed interesting pictures taken on their trip around the Gaspe Peninsula this past summer.

CHEMICAL PLANT DESTROYED — An explosion, which rocked the city of Tonawanda, N.Y., started a fierce fire in the Lucidol Chemical Plant and caused almost the total destruction of the plant. Four persons are reported to have died in the blaze.

Making Most Of Your Lot, Break Down Into 4 Areas

Every lot should be broken down into four areas when developing a landscape plan. These are the street, garden, service and private areas, the development of each being determined by the same factors as the size and number of rooms in a house—by family needs.

THE PUBLIC AREA

Today's community planning has made the approach to the house a public area. Ordinarily there is no reason to make this area any larger than necessary unless it is to save trees. The old "front yard" with its long lawn has yielded in favor of larger private areas at the side or rear. By keeping the house closer to the street, no land is wasted on indirect approach walks or long, costly driveways.

Keep the lawn smooth, simple in shape, unobstructed and all in one piece. Remember, you will have to mow it. Avoid steep banks. Keep hedges, shrubs and trees away from the house so that you can wash windows, put on screens and paint without interference from shrubs and injury to them. Do not plant bushes which will grow so large that they will hide the windows.

THE PRIVATE AREA

The private area of today is the outdoor living space for the family, and nothing like the "backyard" of a decade ago. An expanse of lawn, a porch or terrace, and a play-yard are most commonly included in this area. The terrace should adjoin the living area of the house—or at least be as convenient to it as possible.

Children like to run over the whole yard with their toys, but they will be happy if provided with a corner where they are permitted to dig and build and keep their toys. Try to keep this spot in plain view of the kitchen windows—supervision will be much easier.

THE GARDEN AREA

The flower or vegetable garden is for garden enthusiasts. It may be the major feature of your lot—or omitted entirely if you want to save work. Gardens which are unbroken and rectangular with a slight slope are easiest to care for. Flower gardens should be placed where they can be seen and enjoyed from the indoor and outdoor living areas.

Rock gardens are often difficult to maintain—they look bad when neglected, which they often are. Unless prepared to put in a good deal of time towards their maintenance, it might be well to forget them. If you want a pool, make it shallow—deep pools are a definite hazard to children. And don't build a pool unless you can drain it.

If well placed and well-planned, the service area need not take up much room. It should be accessible to walks and driveways for deliveries without intrusion into the private area.

For clothes-drying, a portable "whirligig" may be used. Clotheslines should be in sun and wind—at least 5' away from bushes and fences. Provide a small paved area to protect feet and washbasket from mud and wet grass.

If the garage is adjacent to the service area withb uilt-in storage space for garden tools, firewood, screens, etc., the service area can be kept as tidy as any room in the house. Keep the garbage can out of sight by building a concrete-lined pit just outside the kitchen door.

Untouchable Ban Ended

CALCUTTA (AP)—A century-old religious ban on Indian untouchables ended today when a party of about 300 untouchable men and women entered Baidyanath temple in Deoghar, Bihar province.

This follows an announcement last Sunday by Bihar's chief minister, S. N. Sinha, that he would order an inquiry into why the temple's officers forbade entry to all but high-caste Indians.

He said the Indian constitution provides untouchables with equal right to entry to all places.

Wood Paneling Can Enrich Any Room

BY MR. FIX
Distributed by NEA Service

Nothing else can transform a room quite so completely as wood paneling. And part of the beauty of it is that it's so easy and takes so little time, to install. Saw, hammer and nail-set are the only woodworking tools needed.

The home handyman who picks tongue-and-grove lumber for paneling has a great vairety of woods and widths to choose from. Narrow widths are becoming popular in modern settings, and are an advantage in that they can be "blind nailed" through the tongues so that no nail heads show on the faces of the boards.

The simplest way to panel with tongue-and-grove lumber is to fasten the boards horizontally. No furring strips are needed on plaster walls, for the boards can be nailed directly to wall studding. Windows and other openings in the walls create no problem, because the paneling, being flush on the wall, can be butted against door and window trim.

Vertical paneling, on the other hand, must be nailed to furring strips that are first nailed horizontally to studs. These 1x2-inch strips bring the wall out nearly an inch, of course, so that it extends beyond window and door trim.

The easy way out is to use vertical paneling only on walls having no openings.

To apply paneling vertically, remove baseboards, then fasten horizontal furring strips two feet apart, driving nails at an angle into the studs. When all strips are nailed, cut paneling to length and lay out boards on the floor (connect tongues and grooves) the length of the wall.

If the space left for the last board in the lineup is much too small to fit the board, it is best to trim a little wood off both this board and the one at the opposite end, for equal balance.

Next, place the first board in a corner and face-nail it at the groove edge. Corner moldings cover this face-nailing. All other succeeding nails can be driven through the tongues. Use five-penny finishing nails.

Horizontal paneling is fastened in much the same way, except that there is no nedd to lay the boards out on the floor to test them for fit. The problem here is to obtain boards as long as the wall. If they can't be had, then staggered end joints butted at wall studs will have to do.

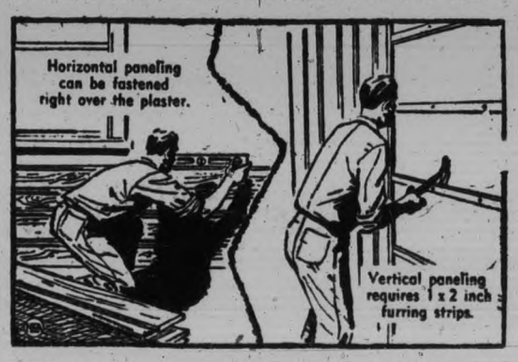
There are many "natural" finishes for paneling. One calls for simple sanding and waxing; another for plain clear lacquer; a third involves staining the boards before nailing, then sanding and waxing after they are in place. Shellac also makes a fine finish when steel-wooled to a dull gloss.

The latest trend is to combine rubbed-on pigmented coatings with final, clear finishes. The color is obtained by mixing oil colors with white enamel undercoat. The mixture is wiped on with a lint-free rag, against the grain of the wood.

Dark wood may be bleached to receive the color. Where a darker finish is desired on light wood, the oil colors are combined with natural-toned wood filler instead of enamel undercoater.

Q—Is there an easy way of applying putty when reglazing windows?

A—Try rolling putty into strips about the size of a pencil, press them into place and smooth down with putty knife. This beats applying putty lump by lump.



IF YOU'RE A HOME HANDYMAN, don't overlook the possibilities of enriching the appearance of your home with use of wood panelling.

Letter Writer Blasts Canada For "Pentagon"

WASHINGTON (CP)—The Canadian government is building a five-storey structure in a restricted residential area of Washington and has drawn the fire of at least one letter writer but some blessing from a Washington newspaper.

The matter got into the public prints Thursday when the Evening Star printed a complaint from a letter writer who signed himself "W", an architect's sketch of the building, an explanation of the District of Columbia zoning laws involved and an editorial saying the building would not be an imposition on Washington's hospitality.

"W" wrote that "owing to diplomatic immunity, this (the Canadian) government is able to violate zoning laws and obtain a building permit which would never be granted to an American citizen."

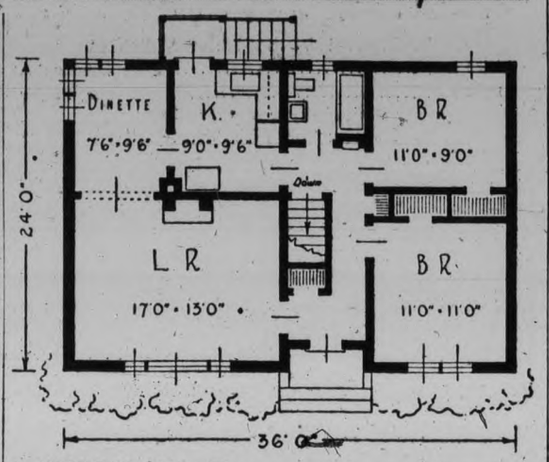
Describing the building as a "smallish Pentagon," he said it would not only be an "eyesore on Massachusetts avenue, but because trees are being ruthlessly cut, it will destroy the beauty of our wooded Rock Creek parkway."

The building is to house military components of the Canadian embassy. It will be on a lot formerly occupied by the residence of a college fraternity.

The site is in an area zoned "residential B restricted," a designation which permits row-house construction, and rooming and boarding houses.

The Star explained that the Canadian government is not legally required to comply with District of Columbia zoning regulations, that the building is being constructed on what is legally considered Canadian soil.

The Star said editorially that "Washington is honored by the decision of a great and friendly neighboring power to build this fine structure. . . as between a former fraternity house, and the building. . . one would think that the new building would improve rather than detract from the character of the adjoining neighborhood."



HOUSE No. 616—There is certainly no pretence about this splendid two-bedroom bungalow — its charm lies in good proportion and honest handling of materials. There's a clean cut quality in the planning also. A straightforward rectangular plan, walls carry through in straight lines for economy of construction. It would be hard to imagine a more compact, convenient room arrangement. The sheltered entrance lends a friendly note to the exterior. Lower walls are of cedar siding, with stucco above. Contains approximately 860 sq. ft. For working drawings, write Home Building In Canada, 2842 Bloor St. W., Toronto.

New Soluble

can it and the three guy wires be removed?

A—For best results retain both for another year.

Q—There are several mossy spots in the lawn in which grass is very sparse. Will an application of lime restore the grass and sweeten the soil?

A—No. Moss is generally an indication of an impoverished soil. So loosen the bare spots to a depth of six inches or more, work in some peat moss and a 10-6-4 or similar fertilizer and reseed.

Q—Would the recently introduced crimson king maple be suitable as a shade tree for a small lawn?

A—The crimson king is a variety of the Norway maple and its low branches and dense habit of growth prevents a thrifty growth of grass under its spread. However if you remove the lower branches to let in sunshine and fertilize the lawn twice a year it should be satisfactory.

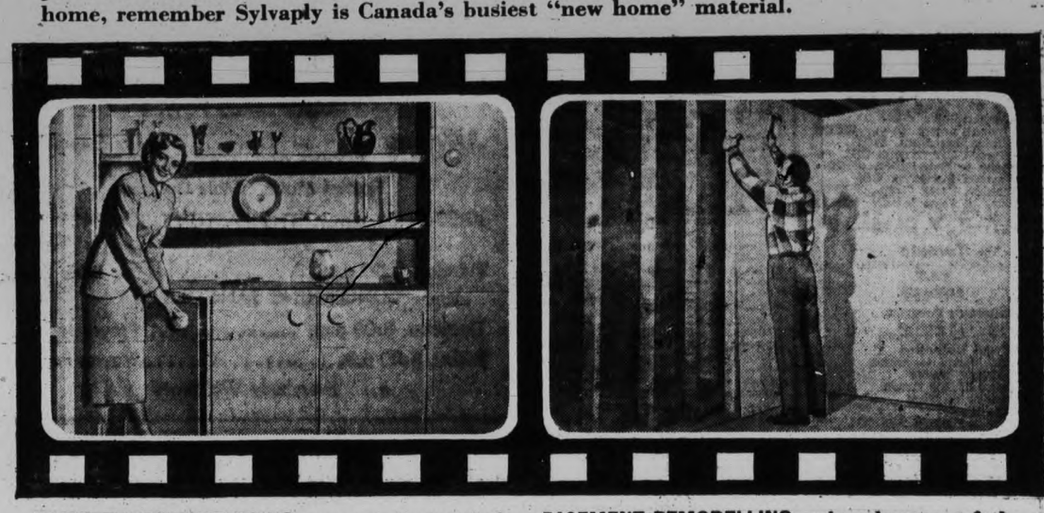
Look what you can do with

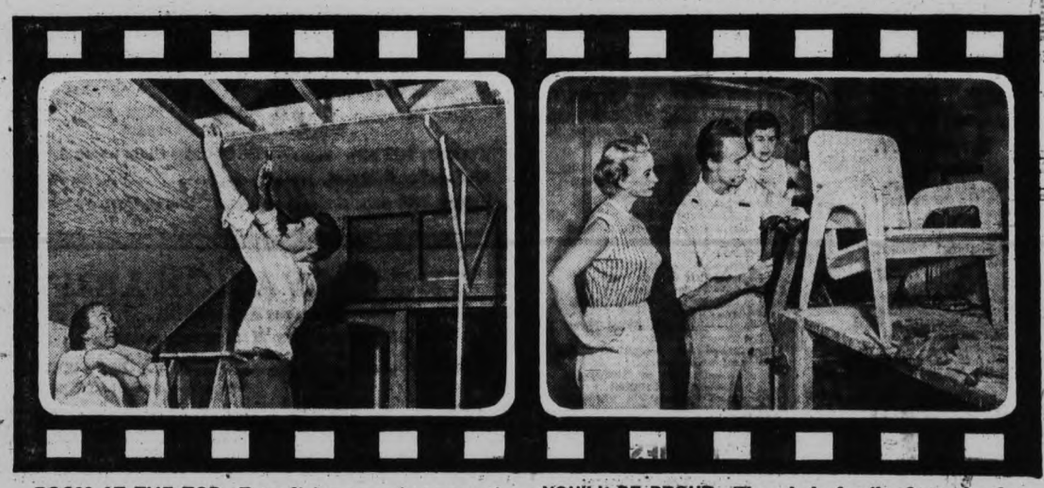
SYLVAPLY DOUGLAS FIR PLYWOOD

. . . you can enjoy the exciting experience of watching an older home transformed into a modern dream home, made into a more livable, more spacious place for comfortable living—with Sylvaply. And, if you're planning a new home, remember Sylvaply is Canada's busiest "new home" material.



WHAT OTHERS ARE DOING—you can do, too. And, that includes a modern built-in storage wall like this. There's no end to the things you can do with Sylvaply to make any home—old or new—more livable.

BASEMENT REMODELLING—take advantage of the "gold mine" of unused living space you can get by remodelling your basement. A bright playroom or useful laundry room are just two ideas—the Free "How-To-Do-It" your dealer has for you will spark others.



ROOM AT THE TOP—Extra living space in your attic is easy when you do the job yourself with easy-to-handle, easy-to-saw and nail Sylvaply panels. Ask your dealer for Free "How-To-Do-It" on attic rooms, and get started.

YOU'LL BE PROUD—The whole family shares in the fun and satisfaction when you make smart living room furniture. Few hobbies are more rewarding than "doing-it-yourself" with simple tools, average skill and easily-worked Sylvaply.

"Do-It-Yourself" with SYLVAPLY

Lightweight and strong, the big 4 feet by 8 feet panels of Sylvaply Douglas Fir plywood are more fun than work for building, remodelling and making furniture. They're just right for the "week-end" carpenter using the simplest tools.

It's FUN—only a few simple tools needed

All you need to work successfully with these easy-to-handle 4 feet by 8 feet panels of lightweight Sylvaply is just average skill in the use of ordinary household tools. Get started by talking over your project at "Handyman Headquarters"—your local Sylvaply dealer. (He has the new "Take Home" sizes, too—smaller Sylvaply panels handy for odd jobs.)

VOL. CVI. No. 225 SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1953

Main Street Topics

HEAVY RAIN

In the last 24 hours 2.19 inches of rain fell in Peterborough; but though the downpour was heavy, and it was accompanied by lightning, there was no reported damage in the city. As a measure of comparison, last Saturday 1.6 inches of rain fell—enough to put a soggy end to the Peterborough Exhibition.

IDENTIFY DROWNED WOMAN

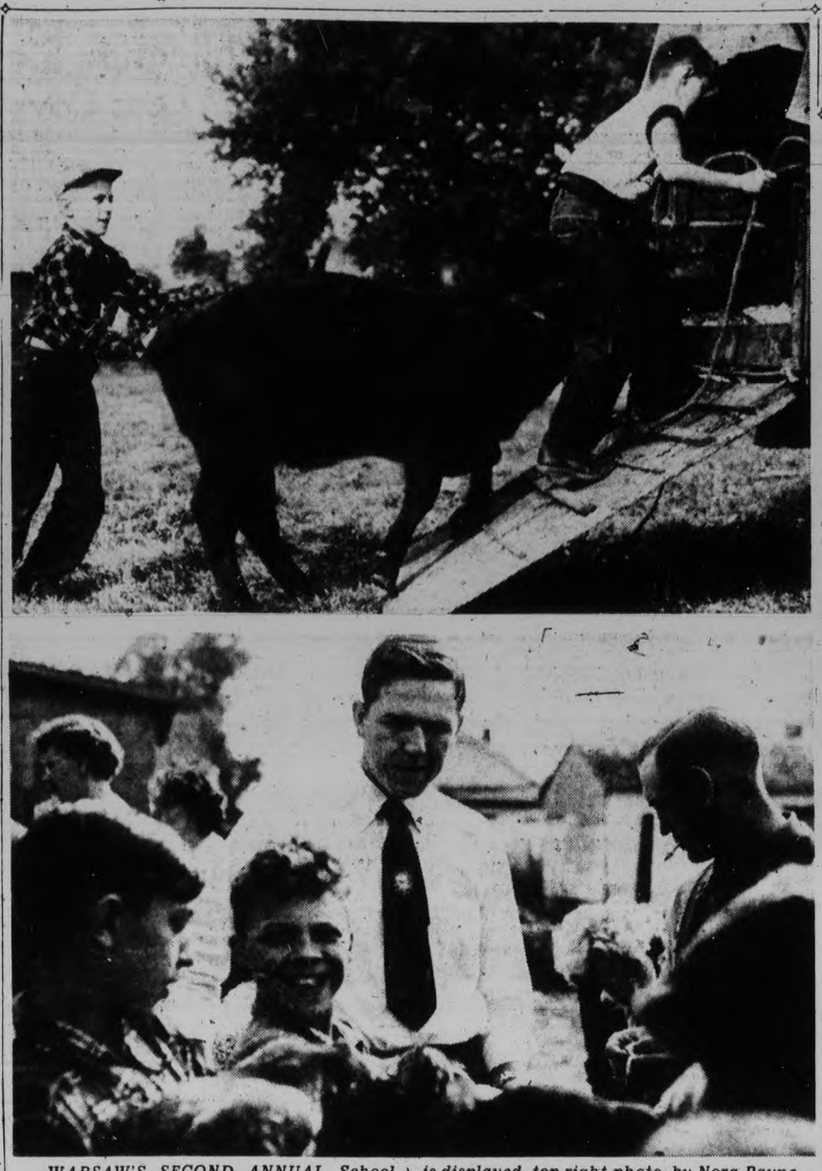
Miss Lillian Watson, 33, of 1574 Bathurst St., Toronto, has been positively identified as the woman who drowned last Sunday in Pigeon Lake. Her brother, Ross McGuirk, of Port Colborne, arrived in Lindsay on Friday afternoon and identified her. The body of her companion on a fishing trip, Glenn South, 40, also of Toronto, is still missing. Some confusion was caused at first because the description of the missing woman given to police did not jibe with that of Miss Watson when she was found.

PASSENGER INJURED

Mrs. Percy Embury, of Marmora, a front-seat passenger in a car driven by William Brown, 40, of 453 Wellington St., received a bump on her forehead and an injured left knee Friday night, when the car ran into the rear of a wagon on Highway 7, half a mile east of Brookside Pavilion. Ralph Fitchet, 33, of R.R. 2, Peterborough, was driving his tractor west on the highway, towing a wagon loaded with lumber. Two hundred dollars in damage was caused to the car; none to the wagon. OPP Constable Wallace Mohns investigated.

Business First

EASTBOURNE, England (CP)—South coast seaside resorts have been advised to forget about scenery and concentrate on measures to offer year-round employment. The government has suggasking for light industries only, and press for any kind that will help employ the winter labor surplus.



WARSAW'S SECOND ANNUAL School Fair on Friday afternoon was a great success, according to teachers' and pulpils' enthusiastic remarks; exhibits were widely represented. A Durham calf prize winner, top left photo, gets the heave-ho into a truck by owner Murray Clifford, on the rear, and Marwood Payne. A scrumptious cake is displayed, top right photo, by Nora Payne, left, and Eleanor Tedford. Principal Bill Nicholls, in white shirt, and judge Harold Clifford, lower left photo, were up to their shoulders in poultry exhibits and exhibitors while little Sandra Tighe, lower right, stands aloof, clutching her pet, second-prize rooster. —(Examiner Staff Photos)

Lightning Ignites 2 Barns In Otonabee; 5 Calves, 25 Tons Hay Lost To Flames

Otonabee Farmer's House Also Struck, Minor Damage Done; Bucket Brigade Saves House From Sparks From Barn

Two Otonabee township barns were struck by lightning during Friday night's storm and burned to the ground. A bolt of lightning struck John Dewart's barn on the second concession, 1½ miles north of the Indian River Station, starting a fire that killed five veal calves and destroyed 25 tons of hay, four tons of straw and 1½ tons of chop and other feed. At the same time lightning struck the Dewart house, coming in on the telephone line and striking the fuse box. Some wall paper was torn but the threat of fire to the house did not materialize.

"I was afraid the house was going to go—that's what I was mostly concerned with," said Mr. Dewart. "When I found that there was no fire here I looked out the window and saw that the barn was blazing.

"I tried to save the five calves but I couldn't get into the barn."

BUCKET BRIGADE

Neighbors are credited by Mr. Dewart with helping save the house and another barn. They formed a bucket brigade to put out any flying sparks or embers that might spread the fire.

"They did a good job," said Mr. Dewart. "I certainly appreciate it."

Remains of the 90 ft. by 48 ft. two-storey barn are still smouldering today. Mr. Dewart believes that the lightning struck the wooden frame building just above the stable, and the flames spread swiftly. Rain did not immediately follow the lightning; it didn't fall until the blaze was at its height.

No estimate of damage has yet been made by Mr. Dewart. His loss is partly covered by insurance.

Only livestock in the barn when it burned were the five veal calves—four of them ready for shipping.

The second fire was when a barn owned by Alfred Reed, R.R. 1, Birdsall, was struck by lightning during the same storm. The 50-foot by 40-foot frame building was in a field, a quarter of a mile from the main barn, on the northwest corner of Mr. Reed's property.

It contained some hay but no livestock.

No estimate of the loss has been made.

Farmers Irked By Puddles On Market Square

Local farmers and jobbers were up in arms today over the condition of the open market this morning after Friday night's storm.

Large puddles covered the square, especially underneath the farmers' stands and in the aisles. One farmer's wife complained bitterly that after every rainstorm this summer, the market on a Saturday morning has just been like a swamp.

The only noticeable increase in prices this week were in eggs, corn and tomatoes.

Farmers were asking 40 cents a basket for tomatoes, an increase of 10 cents from last Saturday. Corn was up five cents in price and was selling for 35 cents a dozen. Grade A oversize eggs were selling for 80 cents, large 75 cents and small and medium 60 to 65 cents. Chickens were still down in price and they were selling from 35 to 40 cents a pound. Up until three weeks ago they were selling for 50 cents a pound.

APPLES PLENTIFUL

Apples were still as plentiful as ever and their prices have remained the same for the last three weeks. McIntosh apples 75 cents a basket; Alexander apples 60 cents a basket; Pippins 70 cents; St. Lawrence 75 cents; Wealthies 55 cents; Baxters 60 cents; Lombard plums 50 cents a basket; home grown peaches 65 cents; crab apples 60 cents; pears 75 cents; grapes 50 cents a basket; sugar plums 65 cents; and 75 cents for a basket of Bradshaw plums; 75 cents for pears; Blue Gage plums 60 cents.

Vegetable marrow was selling for 15 cents; red and green peppers two for 15 cents; pumpkins 10 to 15 cents; green tomatoes 25 cnts a basket; beets four for 25 cents; carrots four for 25 cents; Chinese lettuce, 20 cents; two bunches of radishes 15 cents; onions two for 15 cents; cucumbers 5 cents; turnips five and 10 cents; pepper squash five and 10 cents; squash 10 to 25 cents; cooking onions 20 cents a quart basket; washed Cobbler potatoes 40 cents and $1.65 for a bag; melons 10 to 15 cents; cauliflower 15 to 30 cents; citron 15 to 20 cents.

Police Hire Bus To Handle 67 Found-Ins

KITCHENER (CP) — Police raided a hotel party at nearby Conestogo early today and had to charter a bus to remove all the people involved.

Officers said 67 men were charged as "found-ins" and two women, described as dancers, were held on vagrancy charges.

Two justices of the peace were kept busy for hours as the charges were laid. Sixty-four today paid fines of $25 and costs. One of the 64 also paid $100 for having liquor in an illegal place. Three are out on bail.

About a dozen officers from the Kitchener provincial police detachment and Kitchener and Guelph city forces took part in the raid shortly after midnight.

Police said a Guelph group had rented the hotel room. A large number of the found-ins gave Guelph addresses.

One of the women was engaged in a dance when police entered a room of the trail's end hotel at Conestogo, eight miles north of here, police said. No charges were laid against the hotel operators.

Children Of Warsaw Hold Own Fair, Show Off Pets

WARSAW, Sept. 26 (ENS)—The play yard of the village public school was alive with pupils on Friday afternoon as their second school fair took place amid the squawking of poultry, bawling of calves and barking of dogs, animated exhibits brought by the youngsters for judging. Parents and village folk swelled the attendance and said it was one of the best school fairs they have ever attended. The children had fun, too.

Principal William Nicholls and his assistant Mrs. T. Liscom, had a hectic time keeping the pupils under control while quick judging went on. The pets in crates, boxes, on chains and halters, put on a lively show of their own.

The school building held domestic science exhibits and the girls ran a refreshment bar; they made $12. The final judging and results were as follows:

Slayer Of Five Jailed For Life

CANANDAIGUA, N.Y. (AP) — Fred Eugene McManus, 19-year-old confessed killer of five persons, was sentenced today to life imprisonment for the murder of William Allen Braverman.

The Valley Stream, L.I., youth faced the bench calmly and apparently without emotion as New York Supreme Court Justice H. Douglass van Duser followed the recommendation of the trial jury.

But he smiled as usual for news photographers as he was led quickly from the half-filled courtroom.

The jury Thursday found McManus guilty of first-degree felony murder after deliberating more than 13 hours. But they recommended life imprisonment instead of death in the electric chair.

The youth was tried on a charge of first-degree premeditated murder in the pistol killing of Braverman, a 19-year-old Hobart College student from Rochester. He pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

War's Aftermath

OSLO (CP) — Norwegian minesweepers now have brought ashore, and rendered harmless, a total of 8,825 mines found in the seas around Norway since the end of the Second World War.

Hit By Car Child, 6 Dies In Hospital

TRENTON (CP) — Six-year-old Kenneth Dixon died in hospital Friday of injuries suffered when he was struck by a car, a half mile north of here. He sustained a fractured skull, fractured leg and internal injuries in the accident.

The Dixon lad had been playing on the Wooler road with Harry Semple, Jr., when a car struck him. The vehicle did not stop.

Semple ran into his home and his father drove the boy to Trenton hospital.

Provincial police said they were holding a driver in connection with the accident but would not identify him.

Seek Arsonist In Store Blaze

BRANTFORD (CP)—A new supermarket being built on the northerly outskirts of Brantford was damaged Friday night by fire and provincial police were seeking the man who set it.

Earl Osborne, 62, night watchman, told police that after the men working on the job had stopped at 8 p.m. he had smelled gasoline. He walked around the end of a pile of building material and was knocked down by a stone thrown at his chest.

He said the man who had thrown the stone then pulled a gun and threatened him: "Don't move or I'll drill you."

The man then threw a match on the gasoline-soaked materials and fled.

High winds spread the fire rapidly and firemen received several calls within a few minutes.

Stand Clear, Time Switches Again

By JIM ENGLISH

Oh, blessed Daylight Saving Time,
You're coming to an end;
I get an extra hour to sleep,
Or else to elbow-bend. (Anon.)

That's by way of saying that we return to Standard Time this weekend. By Sunday morning, very early, all clocks should be set back an hour.

Now this means that all citizens affected by the change will have an extra hour to put in.

Traditionally, this hour is spent wrangling over whether to set the clocks back or advance them. That is where this article comes in. Merely set the clocks back an hour and choose another subject.

SPENT IN PROFIT

This hour may be spent at some profit to the intellect by discussing the impact of the ancient Chinese ceramic art on Western culture or the difficulty of removing a beer bottle cap without an opener. You can see the wide variety of topics to talk about.

Perhaps you should get another couple in to play bridge. Suppose you normally break up your game at 1 a.m. Simply follow that pattern, have your coffee and goodies and set the clock back an hour.

Allowing a reasonable time for coffee and chat, there should still be half an hour of bridge time remaining. (Actually, it's still not 1 a.m. yet.) When you stop, take another crack at the coffee, etc.

Your friends, who may be altogether baffled by this, will either declare you're missing something "up here" (finger to head routine) or acclaim you as a clever host and hostess.

You could spend the hour thinking up ways to tell the boss where he can go and what train to take, or you could toy with a relativity equation, trying to figure it out without pencil and paper.

Or you could calculate how much that North Korean pilot will have left after the income tax department gets after him on that $100,000 he gets for flying the first MiG into Allied hands. When you finished that, you could decide on ways to spend the remainder.

For that matter, you could try to estimate your own income tax for 1953. Mind you, don't do it unless you're in a quite cheerful frame of mind. Despondency so often leads to suicide.

NEW SCHEDULES

Couples with infant children could set out the new schedule of feeding times, that is they could if their baby follows any sort of a schedule.

There could be learned discussions on the decline in the art of spittoon making, or just idle chatter about other people. It would be a propitious time for laying bets on the World Series. Afterward, if you lose, you could point out the fact that that hour didn't really exist, so the bet could really never have been made. This argument might be fallacious, so have the money ready.

On Sunday morning, when you awake, you will know that your hour hasn't been wasted. Daylight saving time really did you some good after all, you may conclude. Or you can sing the song to be sung the morning after setting clocks back to Standard Time.

It's a mate to the quatrain that started this article, and it's written by the same man.

I didn't sleep that extra hour;
I chose to elbow-bend.
Blast the return to Standard Time,
It's brought me to my end.
—(Likewise Anon.)

Examiner Will Publish Final Volume Of Winston Churchill's War Memoirs

"How the Great Democracies triumphed, and so were able to resume the follies which had so nearly cost them their life."

This is the theme of the final volume of Winston S. Churchill's magnificent work "The Second World War." First publication of this important volume of the Churchill wartime memoirs will begin in the Examiner on Oct. 24. There will be 30 instalments. The first will be carried in Examiner Weekend Picture Magazine. Following instalments during the week will begin Monday, October 26, in Examiner and appear daily, with the Saturday instalments in the Weekend Picture Magazine.

Prime Minister Churchill, maker of history and a man whose diversity of talents is already legendary, is acknowledged to be one of the great British historians. His command of the language, the famous "Churchillian prose" is unrivalled. In writing "The Second World War" his position has been unique. Not only was he himself at the hub of the activities about which he writes but he has had access to those parts of the documentary record which have until now been kept in the confidential files.

This sixth and final volume, titled "Triumph And Tragedy" deals with that exciting period when the democracies swept to victory and planted the seeds of future uncertainty.

Guelph Farmer ForManslaughter Jailed 7 Years

GUELPH (CP) — Glasgow-born Jeffrey Robertson, a 21-year-old district farmer, was sentenced Friday to seven years in prison for manslaughter in the Sept. 5 shooting of his uncle during a family quarrel.

A Supreme Court jury deliberated more than three hours before reducing the charge from murder and bringing in the manslaughter verdict for the rifle slaying of John Mackie. In addition, the jury recommended leniency.

Robertson appeared calm as he heard Mr. Justice R. I. Ferguson pronounce sentence.

Mr. Justice Ferguson had suggested in his address to the jury that it might reduce the murder charge if it felt the shooting was provoked. In sentencing Robertson, the judge said he would have given him a longer term had the jury not recommended leniency.

TELLS OF THREAT

During the trial Robertson told of the fatal shooting which arose out of a family argument.

He said his uncle had threatened to "tear my stepfather apart and fill me full of lead" during the height of the squabble. It was then that Robertson said he went and took down a .22-calibre rifle from the wall "to keep Mackie from using it."

He said Mackie saw him and made a move toward him. At this, Robertson swung the rifle toward Mackie "and it just went off."

Robertson testified he didn't know the gun was loaded.

His mother, Mrs. Catharine Overland, and his stepfather, Ross Overland, both told the court they considered Mackie "a very unreasonable man." They told of many arguments originated by him.

However, in his charge, Mr. Justice Ferguson told the jurors they "must not allow any half-heartedness, prejudice or sympathy" to sway the decision.

U.S. Business Pick-up Dulled By Production Cuts Flurry

By WALTER BREEDE Jr.

NEW YORK (AP)—Business in the United States picked up in many key lines this week, partly under the stimulus of autumn weather. But the bright sheen of the boom was dulled a bit by a flurry of production cuts.

A lead and zinc mine in the Pacific Northwest changed from a six-day to a five-day week. Layoffs were announced by producers of truck tires, men's summer suits, tractors, stainless and alloy steels, automobile headlights and navy fighter planes. Most cited falling prices, sagging demand or heavy inventories.

Retail trade showed a marked increase over the previous week with volume also comfortably ahead of the year-ago level. Steel production inched up, heavy construction showed a substantial gain stock prices improved and bank clearings set a new high for the year.

Auto production slipped eight per cent, largely because Chrysler was in the midst of changing over to 1954 models.

There was new evidence of a general easing up in the money market. Prices of long-term government bonds climbed sharply while the interest rate paid by the U.S. treasury on its weekly offering of three-month bills sank to its lowest point in more than two years.

The government halted the sale of its new series of treasury savings notes—introduced May 11 at a sharp increase in the interest rate. The treasury said a new series will be made Oct. 1.

Savings notes are securities bought mainly by corporations and other large taxpayers as a method of investing money earmarked for the payment of taxes or reserved for a limited time for other purposes.

The head of one of the biggest consumer finance companies predicted more funds for lending would soon be made available through manipulations (he did not specify them) on the part of the federal reserve board. This, he said, would assure an increased supply of credit for on-the-cuff buying of automobiles, appliances and other consumer items.

Loudest gripe about "tight" money came from home builders who continued to complain about lack of mortgage credit. Albert M. Cole, head of the government's housing and home finance administration, said the government may intervene in the home financing field unless private mortgage lenders supply enough credit to maintain a "reasonably high" volume of home building.

From other quarters came warnings that the significance of cuts and other soft spots in the economy should not be exaggerated. Benjamin F. Fairless, chairman of United States Steel, denounced "prophets of doom" who—he said—"have lost all sense of proportion" in predicting a recession just because steel output is leveling off.

One of the mainstays of the current level of business is high employment. The U.S. commerce department reported that non-farm employment in August totaled 49,400,000—a new high for that month—but that the gain over July was the smallest since the end of the Second World War.

Living costs also set records—up 0.3 of 1 per cent on the government's Aug. 15 consumer price index. This rise will mean wage boosts of three cents an hour for 1,300,000 railroad workers.

Lowest Volume Since August Baffles Bay St.

By BOB JOHNSTONE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Toronto stock exchange can't get off the ground.

It would like to soar, or even settle for a gentle raise. But instead the Bay streeters are just waiting. What for? That's what they want to know. Last week, they thought they were headed somewhere. They couldn't agree where, but they all thought they were at least ready to move.

Now, at the end of the week, they can't figure it. The exchange's Friday to Friday difference in indexes didn't vary a half-point. Volume was the lowest since the seasonal doldrums of August.

Every session of this week's trading opened with the hope that a rise was in sight, but when the market closed Friday all groups were about the same as at the previous week's end. Western oils were down .45, the others less.

UNCERTAINTY

The reason for lack of change is usually uncertainty, and that is probably true of the present situation. Since the Republicans are back in power in Washington, Canadians have been watching for a tariff raise. Any movement will be slow as long as there is the fear that Canada's biggest customer may start cutting imports.

This week, the United States department of agriculture promised American farmers that it would "watch" the volume of Canadian rye imports. The western rye growers forsee a surplus crop and want no Canadian competition on a slow market.

Also in the western U.S., oil producers toyed with the idea of lower prices as over-production and lack of storage space present a marketing problem. Canadian oil issues slipped accordingly.

POOR GOLD SEASON

The gold industry faces what promises to be one of the stormiest blemishes of its boom-and-bust complexion. Mine owners have repeated their refusal to grant increases to striking miners. Profits are already at rock bottom, they contend, and they would prefer to stop operating than to operate at a loss.

The workers say management is, and has been, receiving more than a fair share of profits and they will settle for nothing less than their demands.

Faced with the prospect of a long hard struggle at the mines, traders watched golds drop to their lowest level since 1942.

On the Toronto exchange, Friday to Friday comparison of the indexes shows industrials down .34 at 300.54, golds down .40 at 69.37, base metals down .12 at 139.54 and western oils down .45 at 85.66.

In the Montreal averages, banks were down .25 at 34.06, utilities unchanged at 93.3, industrials down 1 at 175.9, combined down .70 at 148.4, papers up .41 at 701.06 and golds down .49 at 51.20.

In New York, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks made a gain of $3 from last week, rising to $102.50.

Bickle To Buy Food Store Chain

TORONTO (CP)—Shareholders of Hunt's Limited have been asked to accept an offer to purchase their shares by Canadian Food Products, Ltd., E. W. Bickle, president of Canadian Food, said Friday.

The holding and operating company, Canadian Food Products, has offered to buy all the class A shares of Hunt's at $10.50 a share and the B shares at $11.50. The offer has received unanimous approval of Hunt's directors, who have agreed to deposit their shares.

Argus Corp., of which E. P. Taylor of Toronto is president, owns a large number of shares of Canadian Food Products.

H. W. Hunt, founder of the 50-year-old firm and president and managing director, will continue on the board of directors of Hunt's. There are 75,891 class A shares of Hunt's outstanding and 60,000 B shares. Acceptance of the offer would involve some $1,487,800.

Mr. Bickle said the largest chain of candy, ice cream and baked goods shops in Canada will result if shareholders' approval is obtained. Should at least 90 per cent of each class of shares accept, the merger will give Canadian Food more than 100 retail outlets in three divisions.

Weekend Church Feature:

Did Paul Sanction Slavery?

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

The days are long since past when anyone tried to justify the institution of slavery by reference or proof from the Bible.

Now, long after the War Between the States, cleavages between religious bodies, South and North, have been, or are being healed.

Yet there was a time when religion and the Bible had a very active part in the controversies regarding slavery. The spirit of the Bible, with its strong emphasis upon freedom, was invoked by antislavery advocates, while proof-texts and references were cited by the impassioned defenders of slavery.

And strongest on the part of slavery's defenders was the claim that Paul had impliedly sanctioned the institution, or, at least, had not condemned it, though he had urged considerate and human treatment of slaves.

The issue now, thank God, is more theoretical than practical. But it may still be asked whether Paul sanctioned slavery; or why, if he did not sanction it, he did not come out specifically in its condemnation?

The issue, of course, is emphasized in the one-chapter New Testament book of Philemon. It was a definite, practical issue that could not be avoided.

Onesimus, a slave whose master was Philemon, a Christian in the church at Colossae, a city in the Roman province of Asia, had run away from his master, defrauding him, and had made his way to Rome.

Here, in the great city, a haven for runaways and criminals, he had apparently made good his escape, but he came under the influence of St. Paul and became a Christian.

There was the problem. What should Paul do about it? And what should Onesimus do? One recalls what the intense anti-slavery advocates did in the days of the so-called "underground railway," when they harbored and protected runaway slaves. Technically they were law-breakers.

Should Paul have similarly protected Onesimus? Was he sanctioning slavery in sending Onesimus back to Philemon in Colossae?

Here, however, was a situation in which both master and slave were Christians. Onesimus, apparently, was quite willing to go back. It was a matter for Christians to settle among themselves.

We must realize how futile it would have been for Paul to have carried on a one-man war against slavery in that world situation. He had deeper and more underlying purposes.

Yet, in his very attitude, as one writer has pointed out, he laid the ground for the abolition of slavery insofar as Christianity is concerned.

When men become brothers in a truly Christian way one can no longer treat another as a slave.

Publication Slaps Pearson For "Less Coverage" Plea

NEW YORK (CP)—Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade publication, says in its current issue that External Affairs Minister Pearson "shocked us with his appeal for more 'old-fashioned diplomacy' and less-intensive coverage by press and radio at the United Nations."

In a speech to the UN General Assembly Wednesday, the Canadian minister said there should be more opportunities at the UN "for other than public appearances," and that "it is often harmful for the negotiation of policy always to be conducted in glass houses which are often too tempting a target for brickbats."

Pearson added: "It is all too easy to strike attitudes in public, only to find later that we are stuck with them. Open diplomacy now tends to become frozen diplomacy."

Editor and Publisher said that "considering all the time and effort expended within UN councils to promote the free flow of information around the world, this is a disturbing note.

"If diplomats strike poses purely for their effect on the public and then find it difficult to change to a more-realistic position, that is bad.

"If full news coverage can accomplish anything, it should be to expose this double-faced approach to world affairs and force diplomats to say what they mean and mean what they say the first time they say it."

Canadian Signs As Male Lead In N.Y. Play

TORONTO (CP)—Lorne Greene, familiar figure in Canadian radio and theatre, has been signed to play the male lead in a Broadway play opening in December.

Mr. Greene will star with Katharine Cornell in the Howard Lindsay-Russell Crouse play, "The Prescott Proposals."

His signing to the part stems directly from his second appearance on the New York television program, "Studio One." Mr. Greene appeared Monday night in the production of George Orwell's "1984" and on Tuesday was approached by the producers of "The Prescott Proposals." On Wednesday he flew to New York for a reading of the role, and a contract was signed Thursday.

His signing came on the anniversary of his introduction to Canadian radio. On Sept. 25, 1939, he joined the staff of station CBO, Ottawa, following graduation from Queen's University, Kingston. Mr. Greene received his early dramatic training with the Queen's Drama Guild.

In the same year he was brought to Toronto by the CBC to read the national news broadcasts on a D nation news broadcasts on a Dominion-wide network.

In "The Prescott Proposals" Mr. Greene will play the part of a newscaster on a national radio program. The play is expected to open on Broadway Dec. 14.

LONDON (CP)—Rev. John Wedmore, vicar of a Blackheath church is looking for parishioners willing to contribute small amounts in order to make a recording of the choir's performance.

Safety In Industrial Plants Outlined To PCVS Students

A lecture on safety and the work of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association was given to students of P.C.V.S. Friday afternoon.

Thomas Lister, works safety supervisor at the C.G.E. began the program with an historical briefing on the Workman's Compensation development. He told the students of the workmen's lot before 1915, when he required legal proof that employer negligence was responsible for an accident before any compensation would be paid. Even then the amount paid was negligible.

Once the compensation board was established, employers formed an accident prevention association which made investigations throughout factories and advised the workers and employers on safety measures and habits.

The Ontario compensation board and accident prevention association is one of the most efficient and beneficial in the world today, said Mr. Lister.

DIFFICULT TO ASSESS

Mr. Corbett, manager of production at the Peterborough Brinton Carpet Co., said that as in all preventative measures, it was difficult to estimate the amount of good done by a safety program, but he assured that it was a great deal. "It is not the machines, but the operators who are the cause of accidents today. The biggest job that the safety group has is teaching people to think for themselves. He explained that various safety groups had that work in this city such as the punch press section, the wood workers section, etc., visit their respective shops and inspect working conditions and habits of the men. They then supply constructive criticism which is applied and aids in accident prevention.

Works Manager at the C.G.E., R. T. Bogle illustrated to the assembly how a safety organization must grow with the increase of workers, machinery and subsequent hazards. An average size plant has four to six men steadily checking for potential accident hazards. These groups instruct all workers and employers orally and with literature. "But the final result is in the hands of the operator himself. It is he who must do the thinking which saves him from disaster. The machinery and operation is made as safe as possible. In fact statistics prove that today, industrial plants are safer than the home."

B. W. Switzer, director of the industrial department at P.C.V.S. concluded the program with a three step program to be followed in the school. He stressed the danger of practical jokers. "We must have a good attitude toward our work, our fellow man and the school in general. We must develop good work habits. Learn to place things in their proper place, to be considerate of others—and above all take our time." Mr. Switzer has also organized a safety committee in the school to investigate and report on any potential hazards.

"Accident prevention month is in October, but let's not stop there—let's make it an accident free life. We all will be much happier."

Hurricane Rakes Florida With Great Force

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP)—Hurricane Florence swept across the Florida coastline west of here at 10 a.m. EDT today and raked a long but thinly populated area with roaring winds.

Harold Parr, Associated Press reporter telephoning from a Long Beach cottage settlement 15 miles west of Panama City, said winds struck with "very great force."

"The wind is shaking the telephone booth so hard I am getting out of here," said Parr, breaking off his call.

The state highway patrol said it believed all residents had been evacuated from the Long Beach area where the storm struck.

The centre of the tropical storm thundered across an area of small beach settlements on a coastline indented by bays. Inland along its course were a number of small towns, much forest land and a few creeks and rivers which may swell out of their banks with the heavy rainfall.

INCH AN HOUR

Rain fell in Panama City at a rate of more than an inch an hour, totalling 3.66 inches in three hours as the storm's centre moved slowly toward the coast.

No late reports were received from Apalachicola, a fishing town midway between Panama City and the Tallahassee area, which had been isolated by high water.

High tides and pounding waves raked a Long Beach area and at Panacea, 25 miles south-southwest of Tallahassee, a pier appeared to be breaking up and falling apart.

At Panama City a dramatic struggle with wind and water ended happily when a 52-foot motorboat escaped from the North bay into sheltered water.

The hurricane, named Florence for the sixth letter of the alphabet, was the first of the year to touch Florida.

All indications were that Florence still packed a lusty punch but that its force was considerably down from the 135-mile velocity which it developed Friday.

Four Norwegian Plowmen Arrive

MONTREAL (CP)—Four Norwegian plowmen, scheduled to test their skill against the best Canada and other countries have to offer, arrived today aboard the liner Ascania.

The team will compete in the international plowing contests at Cobourg, Ont., Oct. 6. Their trip has been sponsored by the Norwegia government.

Leader of the group which includes a father-son combination is Tore Wiig of Kleppe, Norway. The others are J. Arnoy of Stavanger; Arne Braut and his son Odd, both of Kleppe.

Also travelling with the team is inventor-plowman Ragnvald Skjaerpe. He will not compete in the championship but said he plans to demonstrate special plows in Canada and the United States.

The farmers speak very little English and are accompanied by interpreter Kolbjorn Rostrup who also acts as official team photographer. The team leaves for Cobourg Wednesday.

The six-foot-three pitcher, a 20-game winner this season, was offered a class B contract by the Giants.

New Zealand House Design Patterned After Bee-Hive

By FRANK R. HODGE

AUCKLAND (AP) — While the New Zealand government and the building industry are busy trying to design cheaper houses, a New Plymouth man, unaided, has produced something entirely new in house construction—a home built throughout on hexagonal lines.

Everything in the New Plymouth house is six-sided—rooms, windows, floors, wall and ceiling panels.

Designer, builder, owner and occupier is E. R. Brewster, beekeeper, who is convinced from long experience that everything the bee does is done perfectly.

It builds its comb with hexagonal cells based on six equilateral triangles, a method of construction found by it to be the best. Brewster believes, therefore, that there is every reason why the method should be the best, also, for building houses.

WIDELY APADTABLE

There are no squares in Brewster's house. The hexagon of equilateral triangles is, he says, inherently strong and self-bracing and adaptable to all purposes in construction.

This house, with a floor area of 1,166 square feet, has seven rooms—or units, as the designer prefers to call them—and each unit is of 166½ square feet. Brewster, visualizing factory production, says a "kit set" ready for assembly could be supplied for £1.165 ($3,262) after allowing for working profit and distribution costs.

He says that, guided by "kit set" instructions, the purchaser and eight men could erect the prefabricated parts in 14 days "ready for occupancy" or with the help of only two men and a boy the job could be done in eight weeks.

In appearance the house is unlike any other house. The hexagon is obvious everywhere. The windows are hexagonal, and the hexagonal shape of each of the wall panels is emphasized by a plaster finish.

Inside the house provides some startling effects. The walls are hexagonally panelled with timbers selected for their beautiful grain.

OPTICAL ILLUSTION

There is an inclination of optical illusion with these geometrical patterns, and the observer has to resist a temptation to believe the mosaic walls are not flat. The panelled ceilings are unusual too; and they support fluorescent light tubes.

Meanwhile, New Zealand (pop. 2,000,000) is building non-hexagonal houses at the rate of 16,000 a year. But to meet the needs of the increasing population, to overtake arrears and to provide for the replacement of old houses, 20,600 houses a year for the next 10 years are required.

Much thought is also being given to the financing of home builders. Normally, lending institutions will adance up to two-thirds of the cost. Now the government has offered to guarantee the difference between the normal amount advanced by a lending institution and 90 per cent of the cost of a house, with a limit of £2,000 ($5,600) for the whole mortgage. That means that the home builder must find on an average about £500 to &800 in cash himself and also make provision for furnishing and incidentals.

NOSE-HOLDING PRACTICE—Tootsie Marie Stewart is greeted by thousands of dead fish as she visits the beach at Bradenton, Fla. The fish were washed ashore by a mysterious "Red Tide." Government wildlife men are dumping copper sulphate into the Gulf of Mexico in an attempt to stop the Red Tide, which in a month has destroyed thousands of tons of fish.

Won't Go Home, U.S. PoWs Curse Observers

PANMUNJOM (AP) — American and South Korean prisoners who refused repatriation shook their fists at U.S. observers today and shouted "Go, home, American imperialists . . . go back where you came from, stuffed shirts."

Maj. Edward A. Morrer, one of the Allied observers, reported the show of hostility by captured Allied soldiers held in the Korean neutral zone awaiting final action on their fate.

Morrer said the Americans and Koreans gathered at their approach and started singing the "Internationale," then began their shouts in English.

Morrer said an American prisoner led the group in chants resembling football cheers.

He said the leader asked loudly: "Will we got south?"

"No!" the answer was shouted in unison.

"Will we go north?" asked the leader.

"Yes," the Americans and Koreans yelled.

The major said that in a final show of defiance, the PoWs "clenched their fists and shouted at us."

The major said Indian escorts cut the compound fence to permit the observers to leave without walking back to the main gate where they had entered.

Settled Western Ontario, Canada Company Winds Up

GUELPH (CP) — Some lively consequences of the war of 1812 pop into the news Sept. 30 when the affairs of the Canada Company are formally wound up in London.

A period of Canada's history, when rich land in western Ontario sold for as little as three shillings and sixpence an acre, comes back to life with the announcement that the Canada Company finally is folding up after more than 125 years.

Anyone still having claims against the company should have these sent into England's Candlewick House before Sept .30, said the official announcement some time ago by W. A. Hand, auditor and liquidator of the giant concern which disposed of 4,484,413 acres to a flood of British settlers.

Of the profits that some termed "fabulous," about $150,000 remained to be distributed among the seven remaining stockholders some time after Tuesday. As late as 10 years ago a company representative had sold its last holdings in what was known as the "Huron tract."

OLD FEUDS FECALLED

Even today in the area from Guelph to Goderich on Lake Huron, memories persist of the dissension that the company's operations brought in their wake. Descendants of the original settlers of the tract, a block of 1,100,000 acres, can recall the anti-company sentiment that persisted in their families.

The pioneers claimed that the company's board of directors made themselves rich at the settlers' expense and charged that promised roads, harbors and other improvements were never built.

The figure of an energetic Scottish novelist, striding about through the maple and elm forests that once covered western Ontario, dominates the picture.

He was John Galt, founder of the cities of Galt and Guelph and of the town of Goderich, and prime mover behind perhaps the most extensive colonizing and land-jobbing enterprise in the history of eastern Canada.

It was Galt who suggested the formation of the company after his appointment in 1820 as one of the agents to look after the claims of the inhabitants of Upper Canada for losses suffered during the war of 1812.

Looking for a way to meet a portion of the claims, Galt chanced upon lands reserved to the Crown. He proposed that these be sold to a colonizing company with the proceeds to be applied to the war claims. The proposal was approved and as secretary, Galt came to Canada.

RUGGED PIONEER

The company acquired much of the land at three shillings, sixpence an acre. Galt, beset by complaining letters from his directors, plowed his way through innumerable difficulties. He chose the site of Guelph at the junction of the Speed and Eramosa rivers, building his own log cabin there.

The remains of the rock-elm house still persist today, hidden among a bed of weeds. A cairn on a bluff overlooking the harbor at Goderich commemorates one of his most ambitious projects—the road he and his workers hacked through the bush some 70 miles from Guelph to Goderich.

The road finished Galt. His funds ran out and he made grants of land to his workers to persuade them to go on. His angered directors recalled him. Galt died in povert in Scotland in 1839.

But the company fulfilled its contract and met all its obligations by 1843. Vast expanses of western Ontario were opened to British settlers by the hundreds. The company that becomes extinct on Tuesday had written a stirring chapter in Canadian history.

The doctor, who visited Miss Taylor Friday night, said she is suffering from a nervous ailment following over-exertion.

Foreign Staff Protest Appointments

By ELIZABETH KITSON

OSLO (Reuters) — Newspaper men and other "outsiders" are invading Norway's diplomatic field and the career diplomats don't like it.

The trouble blew up at the beginning of July when new appointments to four legation posts abroad were announced.

One of the new ministers, appointed to the legation in Helsinki, was Hans Olav, a well-known newspaper man who for several years has been head of the foreign ministry's press and information department.

A few years earlier another newspaper man, who had held the same press officer post, had jumped from there to ambassadorial rank, first in New Delhi and later in Moscow.

Together with the new appointments, it was announced that two ministers had been called home and placed on the foreign ministry list of those awaiting assignment. One of these, Carl Marcus Francis Irgens, Norwegian minister in Cairo, at once telegraphed a protest to the prime minister.

WORK RESTRICTED

He complained that he found it particularly galling that one of the vacant posts, Helsinki, had been filled by "an official whose connection with the foreign service has been restricted to work in the press department."

At the same time, the career diplomats in the foreign ministry also sent a protest to the foreign minister to "express their regret that the post in Helsinki had been filled by a man from outside the regular foreign service."

Asked in Parliament what principles were followed in the matter of diplomatic appointments, the prime minister, Oscar Torp, said that the government's principle was simply: "The right man in the right job."

He pointed out that nowadays heads of missions abroad often need specialized knowledge outside of that provided by normal diplomatic training and that therefore it was vitally important that men should be found with the special qualifications which each post requires whether or not they were from the ranks of the regular foreign service.

JUST ADD WATER and wait for the results. An ideal family project for the winter months is the growing of bulbs. Little care, except for warmth and occasional watering, is necessary and the results are gratifying. The added fascination of seeing the flower develop day by day will keep the children as interested as they would be in an animal pet. The winter blooms are easily appreciated also.

Make Bulb Planting A Family Project

By NANCY CLEAVER

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever; its loveliness increases; it will never pass into nothingness." —(Keats)

To create fragrance and color and beauty by growing bulbs is a particularly happy family venture. Planting bulbs both outdoors and indoors can be a very good co-operative parent-child venture. Why not try it this season?

It is important to buy bulbs of good quality either from a store or florist or order them from a seed firm or nursery. To avoid delay in planting, they should be purchased early, and planted as soon as possible. Store in a dry, cool place until they are put in the ground.

PROPER FERTILIZER

Bulbs do well in sandy loam but grow in any well drained soil. Bone meal spread is a good bulb fertilizer and so are rotted leaves. Care must be taken with manure and some commercial fertilizers so that they are mixed with the soil and do not come in direct contact with the bulbs at full strength. Sand mixed in with heavy soil helps the drainage and prevents the bulbs from decaying.

October is usually the favorite month for bulb planting, although some varieties can be planted earlier and some bulbs can be put in as late as late November or early December, if the weather continues to be mild. It is important to get bulbs in before the frost hardens the ground. Do allow some time for root growth.

An approximate rule for planting bulbs is to place them in the soil at least twice as deep as their diameter and allow sufficient room for the mature plant to have plenty of sunshine. Daffodils and hyacinths are both planted six inches apart and six inches deep. Darwin and parrot tulips are placed five or six inches apart and the same depth, but the smaller early tulips do not need to be quite so deep. The tiny bulbs such as crocus, grape hyacinths, scilla, snow drops need go in only three inches apart and two to three inches deep.

COVER WITH LEAVES

In an area where the soil freezes hard, it should be well covered during the winter months with leaves anchored down with evergreen boughs or straw. This mulch is removed when spring arrives, and the soil around the bulbs kept weeded.

Rock gardens have become popular and there are many suitable little bulbs for them. Some of the best liked kinds are miniature daffodils, glory of the snow, crocuses, grape, hyacinths, scilla, and snow drops.

For indoor planting it is best to choose the hardier varieties which are grown most easily. Paper-white narcissi are exceedingly easy to grow either in water, with pebbles or fibre compost around them. Hyacinths can be grown in water too. Tulips, daffodils and the smaller bulbs do best in flower pots. But however, they are grown, bulbs need sufficient time in a dark cool spot in the cellar to grow sturdy roots.

Clean, uncracked pots worthy of good bulbs should be used. Good drainage in pots in essential and it is guaranteed by placing some pebbles or broken pieces of pot over the drainage hole. Plan to have the bulb growing tip protruding slightly. Fill the pot with light porous soil to the depth at which the bulbs should rest. Place the bulb in the pot and fill up around it with soil to within one half inch of the rim. Pat the soil down firmly and water well.

SET AWAY IN COOL PLACE

Good root growth takes time and it is best to set the pots away in a cool place for ten weeks to three months, watering regularly. Do not keep the soil soggy but do not let it dry out completely.

The first few days after they have been brought up from the cellar, the bulbs should be slightly shaded and kept at a temperature around sixty-five degrees, after that a sunny window is the best location for the bulbs. Once they have bloomed, the flowers will last longer if they are removed from the direct rays of the sun.

When the flower fades it should be cut off near the top of the stem, and the leaves should be allowed to remain. Place the bulb pots in a cool dry spot in the cellar and water sparingly, until the folliage dies down. In the early Autumn, remove the bubs, and keep in a dry airy room until planted outdoors. The leaves on the bulbs planted in the garden should be treated in a similar way. If planted at a proper depth, some bulbs can be left in the ground from season to season, and many of them not only continue to flourish but also multiply. But bulbs pay such big dividends in giving pleasure to all who see their flowers that it is well to buy some new ones each Autumn.

SOFT ELEGANCE was stressed in fashions that could be created by the home sewer. This imported cashmere wool coating handled deftly in the "Fleur de Lis" silhouette has emphasis on the wide sleeves, and Italian inspired stand-away neckline. It is buttoned to just above the knee.

Belted Edinburgh Jacket Is High In Fall's Fashion

Over the fashion horizon looms more strongly the fancy type of sports jackets. The latest in this category of apparel is the belted Edinburgh jacket, so named because the Duke of Edinburgh has been favoring this style.

The American interpretation has the salient details which distinguish it from all others. The all-around belt is fastened with two leather buttons. It has two deep patch pockets with flaps which also have single leather button closures. It is a three-button single-breasted model with dome-shaped leather buttons and notched lapels. Down each side extends a panel pleat. Tucks at the sides tend to accentuate the waisted effect. The sleeves have double welt stitching, set back about two inches from the cuff, which is finished with a single leather button.

The fabric for this jacket is of small checked tweed in three colors, such as blue, tan and brown. An accepted axiom in the apparel field of designs is that if a jacket is fancy or elaborate, then the fabric should be of simple effect. Therefore, diagonal and herringbone weaves qualify for this new jacket.

The background of this innovation in sportswear adds weight to [illegible]cance. The Duke of Edinburgh favors this fashion in Scotland as a shooting packet. He has also been photographed wearing the belted jacket with narow knickers at Balmoral Castle. Comfort and free action commend this model for general sportswear.

Allied with the jacket is the new tweed shooting hat, which adds a fresh note in sports headwear. This is a round crown hat with the crown divided into four segments of tweed in the crown and matching band. Of particular note is the narrow brim made to be worn turned down all around. This comes in brown, grey and greenish mixture tweeds.

terns such as checks and overplaids are represented as classic sportswear designs. However, even these are given fresh touches.

New Pockets Add Dash Sport Coat

Well dresesd men, looking for new angles in sports jackets, are casting their eyes towards pockets. Slanted pockets given an added flair to this season's jackets. These are invariably finished with flaps. In some instances the ticket or change pocket appears above the right pockets.

Closely related to the slanting pocket are vents. More and more men are adopting the deep centre vent. And, based on observations abroad, the side vented jacket is moving forward. In England, for example, the majority of men seen at race meets and other sporting events, go in for side vents. The practicality of vents becomes apparent when the wearer reaches into his trouser pockets. This can be done with ease and without distorting the back of the jacket.

The Beau Jacket shirt, worn by the man illustrated, has the bow tie attached to the neckband of the shirt and tied or slipped through a slot if tie is not worn.

Varied Shades Sport Jackets

Blends of basic colors such as two shades of grey or two shades of brown are brightened by red, blue, rust, or yellow splashes which create new overtones and cests for the basic colors of the jackets.

It is all a matter of colors. Pat-

CGE Pipers responsible for the Tartan Ball, the first dance of the fall season and one of the most popular of the year in Peterborough, appear very happy with the result of their work Friday evening. The band led a grand march and then presented a brief floor show playing several request numbers. At left is Bandsman Ed. Young who was chairman of the dance committee. His chief assistants were Bandsman Ross (Bud) Kidd, centre, and Drummer Wally Smith, right.

CGE Pipe Band Sponsors Tartan Ball

Increasing in popularity every year, the Tartan Ball of '53 goes high on the list as the most enjoyable. CGE Pipe Bandsmen in charge of the affair cut the guest list to 260 couples so there would be more room on the Club Aragon floor for dancers, and they curtailed the floor show by the band —to the disappointment of some guests.

However, Scots and their many friends had a grand time throughout the evening, getting off to a good start with a grand march led by the bandsmen. Everyone had a Scottish emblem for his lapel, presented at the door by a piper.

There were a number of prizes given during the evening by emcee Stan McBride. They were claimed by Miss Grace Schiarizza and Messrs. J. Hammell, J. Basciano, D. Hatton, R. Hatton, J. Rogers, R. Allchin, W. Watson, John Black and Stu McLaren.

Tartans draped behind the dance band made an effective background. Bandsmen were dancing in their kilts and many of their friends paid honor by wearing plaid jackets. The ladies were in evening dress, almost without exception, and many were wearing distinctive new gowns for this first dance of the fall season.

The dance arrangements were carried out by Bandsman Ed. Young and committee. Guest registrations were taken by Mrs. Young and Mrs. Wallace Smith.

Head table guests included Pipe Major Alex Milne and Mrs. Milne, Mr. and Mrs. Ian McRae, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Bogle, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Girven, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Crowe, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hardie, all of the CGE, and patrons and patronesses of the dance, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser, the Hon. Harold Scott and Mrs. Scott, and Alderman and Mrs. J. A. Dewart who were representing the city.

Lads and lassies attending the dance included Ron Wallace and Miss Catherine Stewart, Tom Gracie and Miss Betty Merrett, William Ball and Miss Grace Lewis, Roy Gilchrist and Miss Vi Foster, Fred Huffman and Miss Carolee Ferguson, Stewart Taylor and Miss Grace Schiarizza, Andrew Montieth and Miss Jean E. Of Interest to Women

Readers' Saturday Column Conducted by Mary Moore

QUESTION: I read your column all the time for new ideas and recipes . . . is it possible to can potatoes and if so how does one do it . . . Mrs. W.

ANSWER: Yes, potatoes can be canned. They are for sale in tins in large groceries in Canada. But you must have a pressure cooker. It is preferable to can them in tin cans, so you would need hand seaming equipment. But if you are an experienced pressure cooker canner you can process them in glass jars but it is tricky business.

CANNED POTATOES

Select very small potatoes of uniform size and peel or scrape them and drop into very weak salt solution to prevent them discoloring while you peel. Fill into No. 2 size cans and cover with brine in proportion of 3 oz. salt to each gallon boiling water. Brine must be boiling hot Close tins. Process at 240 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes. If you use quart glass jars, which I do not recommend, process them at 240 deg. Fahr. for 35 minutes. Cool tin cans quickly in cold running water. If glass is used exhaust steam with utmost care and cool carefully.

QUESTION: . . . Please send recipe for Apple Mint Jelly . . . Mrs T. S.

ANSWER:

APPLE MINT JELLY

Wash good quality crabapples, remove stems and blossom ends and weigh 3 lbs. Cut in halves and add 4 cups cold water and 2 cups chopped mint leaves. Simmer until they begin to soften, then mash them and simmer 5 minutes longer—taking about 15 minutes in all. Strain overnight, and do not squeeze jelly bag. Measure juice Bring just to boiling point and add three-quarters as much sugar as you have juice, and add the sugar. Add 1 teaspoon mint extract and green food coloring adding the coloring until the jelly is an emerald green. Boiling time differs because of the moisture in the apples. But a dependable test is to spoon a little juice and tip it from side of spoon. If jelly is nearly ready to pour 2 thick drops will form at edge of spoon at once, then they flow together. In another 30 seconds of boiling 2 drops will flow together to form a ½-inch wide sheet at side of spoon. Immediately remove from heat and pour into sterile jelly glasses and coat with hot new paraffin, adding a second coating when first is cold.

QUESTION: I certainly have enjoyed . . . the cakes especially Burnt Sugar Cake and Chocolate Cake. My problem is though my bread is perfect . . . as it cools it loses the crispness on the crust. Mrs. H.

ANSWER: Your recipe is fine. But when you put your bread to rise for the last time, brush it with cold water and let rise. When it is ready to bake brush it with cold water again. (Do not use so much water that an excess of it collects at sides of pan.) Now bake it. When it is baked and cooling do not brush it with butter or any fat, but let it cool uncovered. This gives loaf a delicious crisp crust.

QUESTION: I got a recipe from a friend for a cheese cake and the cake was delicious, but when I turned mine out it was flat as a pancake . . . hoping Marianne gets back from her trip safely . . . Bettty L.

ANSWER: It was very kind of you to think of Marianne. She is well and happy and had a wonderful holiday and is now relieving on senior duty in the isolation ward . . . I cannot vouch for the recipe you outlined. Would you try this:

CHEESE CAKE

(This is more expensive than yours but is most elegant and worth it.) Three ½-lb. packages of white cream cheese (24oz.) Cream these very well to soften them. Beat until stiff 4 egg whites and as you beat blend into them 1 cup sugar until very stiff. Combine the cheese with this meringue. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Butter an 8-inch pan (preferably one with removable bottom) Sprinkle bottom and sides of pan with 2-3 cup zwieback crumbs (about 4 rusks rolled fine). Pour in cheese cake batter and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 25 minutes Mix together and spread over top 2 cups thick sour cream, 2 tablespoons sugar and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Sprinkle 1-3 cup toasted shaved almonds on top. Bake 5 minutes longer at 475 deg. Fahr.—this is a very hot oven. Chill at least 2 hours before serving. This is often served with fresh fruits such as peaches, apricots or strawberries.

Bound By Legal And Ethical Code

How often do we hear the lament, "If I could only live my own life!" or, "If I could only do just as I please!"

Perhaps you have voiced the same longing yourself, but have you ever reflected on what would be involved in accomplishing this desire? To want to live wholly for oneself is usually a fleeting wish, expressed during moments of physical or mental fatigue. A little pondering on the idea is all that's necessary to banish your depression and set you right.

It is impossible for anyone to do exactly as he or she pleases at all times — a fact that's important to emphasize in talking to young people. Adolescents usually are sure that when they're freed from parental control they can live merrily as they choose, accountable to no one. It is, of course, a fallacy. Coming of age may give certain freedoms, but moral responsibilities don't stop at 18, 21, or any other age.

As a matter of cold fact, the most unenviable people in the world are those who can, apparently, "do exactly as they please." They have no family ties, no one dependent on them for financial or moral support, no one to love and no one who loves them! Does that sound like a happy existence? Certainly not! Yet, even these unfettered souls are bound by legal or ethical codes. So you see, everyone is limited to some extent in the scope of their living.

Happiness definitely does not come with living as one chooses. It comes through having responsibilities, being aware of them and being obliged to discharge them to the very best of one's ability. Selfishness never in this world brought happiness; love alone produces a worthwhile existence and only in a creative, productive life can we be really happy. Love for children, parents, family, country, humanity and God—each with its own obligations, its own demands—are the foundations for contentment and happiness in life.

The excuse, often advanced for taking an unfair advantage of a situation, that "The world owes me a living," or, "The world owes me happiness," is a grave misconception. The world doesn't owe us anything we aren't willing to strive for. It might seem alluring, for a while, to consider dumping all obligations overboard but the disillusionment would be swift and bitter. The world was not created for individual enjoyment, but for all men willing to work and live together for their mutual good. Living for each other, not for oneself, has accounted for whatever good humanity has accomplished. The more you can do for others and the more you can depend on them to do for you, the happier you will be. "A life of your own" is a flight of fancy you should never really hope to realize.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have run into a very embarassing situation. Recently, while visiting, I met a girl who had just recovered from a severe and prolonged illness. She is now perfectly all right. However, after I danced with her twice, she cried because I wouldn't have every dance with her. Since then, she has been writing me hinting that she'd like to be my girl. I look upon her only as a friend, but I don't know what to tell her. A. R.

◇ ◇ ◇

ANSWER: The young lady apparently was rather spoiled during her illness and has decided that the world owes her what she wants. She has an adjustment period ahead that won't be too easy for her, but it is surely no excuse for you to be put in such an awkward position. If her letters require answers, write chatty replies telling her of your various dates and the girls you meet here and there. She eventually may draw the conclusion from them that her obsession for you is hopeless. If more drastic means are necessary, don't hesitate to take them.

◇ ◇ ◇

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a widow of 48, engaged to a fine man 14 years older. I have a farm, which my two sons help me run. My fiance has two daughters who live close by with their mother and the man frequently visits them. I know his ex-wife still cares for him and he is not completely indifferent to her. Do you think we could be happily married?

KARIN L.

◇ ◇ ◇

ANSWER: Frankly, no. It would be almost impossible for you to accept your husband's visits to his ex-wife with equanimity. If she cares for him, she will be extremely jealous of you and quite likely won't hesitate to disturb the harmony of your home.

Do You Know?

After applying mascara, allow it to dry and then brush away excess. If you are afraid to put bristles close to eye ball, you can use a pipe cleaner.

◇ ◇ ◇

If you have a broad nose, minimize it by combing your hair up from the forehead and flat over the ears.

◇ ◇ ◇

You may be able to avoid nightly hair setting if you wear a net to bed. Be sure the net is strong and fastened securely.

You are brushing your hair sufficiently each night if you keep going until your arms are tired.

◇ ◇ ◇

To avoid artificial look in tweezing eyebrows, always pluck hairs from underside, never from outer brow.

There is not a day, dear mother,
That we do not think of you.
—Sadly missed by daughters, sons and sons-in-law.

BEER—In loving memory of Ernest A. Beer, who passed away Sept. 27, 1949.
There is a link death cannot sever,
Love and remembrance last forever.
—Ever remembered by wife and family.

GARDNER—In loving memory of our darling daughter, Pauline Gardner, who passed away Sept. 27, 1951.
Two years have passed and gone
Since one we loved so well
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers we place upon her grave
May wither and decay.
But the love for her who sleeps beneath,
Shall never fade away.
—Ever remembered by mother and dad, brother and sisters.

PANTER—In loving memory of my mother, Mrs. Alice Panter, who passed away September 26, 1948.
Peaceful be thy rest, dear mother,
It is sweet to breathe thy name:
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.
—Ever remembered by daughter Hazel and family.

SOLES—In loving memory of mother, Ellen Jane (Nellie) Soles, who passed away Sept. 26, 1952.
Deep in our hearts her memory is kept,
—Always remembered by Lou and Joyce, Oshawa.

SIMPSON—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Simpson, who passed away Sept. 26, 1952.
God has called a loving mother
From our midst away.
But we know that we shall meet her
Up there some happy day.
No one knows how much we miss her
None but aching hearts can tell.
Gone from earth but found in heaven.
Jesus doeth all things well.
—Always remembered by her daughters Jennie, Annie, Bertha and Hannah.

7—Card of Thanks

Mere words are inadequate to express our gratitude to each and every one who helped us through these days of great sorrow and loss, with beautiful flowers, words of sympathy and deeds of in little kindness. We can only say "thank you so very much".
—Mrs. A. Hope and family.

Mr. C. Kemp, Lang, Ont., wishes to thank the Pentecostal Church and the pastor, Rev. F. H. Parlee, De Laval Co., Ltd., De Laval Social and Athletic Club, Beaver Lumber, Howard Hall Concrete Products, Kaye Funeral Home, attending doctors and nurses of Civic Hospital and neighbors and friends for their kindness and expressions of sympathy during his recent sad bereavement.

Non-Profit Unit Wages Slum War In Baltimore

Businessmen of Baltimore are proving that slum clearance need not be left entirely to government—that there is actually a profit to be reaped by private enterprise in the rehabilitation of substandard, urban areas, reports a writer in The Christian Science Monitor.

How can private investors make money on slum clearance? They can't from the buying and selling of real estate. But they can, indirectly, in the raising of property values and living standards which are sure to re-act to the benefit of entire communities.

"FLIGHT BLIGHT"

Through a nonprofit concern caled the Fight Blight Fund, Inc; these businessmen have poured thousands of dollars into the clearing of slums and the aiding of needy families who cannot afford the costs of normal repairs to their homes.

Frequently obtaining mortgages without interest, and acquiring the services of cnotractors for the cost of materials only, this organization has provided the stimulus to rehabilitation effects that have brought to Baltimore the distinction of being one of the cleanest cities in the country.

The National Clean-Up, Paint-up, Fix-up Bureau of Washington classified Baltimore thus in a recent survey naming the city second only to Houston, as the cleanest city in the 500,000 to

The Fight Blight Fund is an outgrowth of the famous "Baltimore Plan" that dictates rehabilitation of older buildings and the enforcement of local building codes, rather than the spending of millions of dollars for new construction, as the blow to be struck for slum clearance.

WORK REWARDED

Guy T. O. Hollyday, a mortgage banker and former president of Fight Blight and the Title Guarantee Company, won recognition for his work in fighting blight here when President Eisenhower recently appointed him commissioner of the Federal Housing Administration.

G. Yates Cook, former head of the city health department's housing bureau and director of the Baltimore Plan since its inception eight years ago, also was honored as director of a campaign against blighted areas by the National Association of Home Builders.

Fight Blight won a Freedoms Foundation award for its community service and a motion picture on the "Baltimore Plan" was produced after Fight Blight had induced the University of Chicago to grant the Encyclopaedia Britannica film department $15,000 for the film's production.

Through the efforts of Fight Blight, the Ford Foundation has granted $10,000 for the preparation of a manual and guide to slum elimination based on the "Baltimore Plan."

Since the fund is not a form of charity, Fight Blight officials give needy home owners financial aid in the form of loans after they have done everything within their means to comply with city regulations. Knowing that the owners can usually do a great deal on their own, Fight Blight aids them only on expensive repairs like plumbing, electrical, and contract work.

ONE EXAMPLE

Fight Blight, for instance, helped a couple who could not meet a $300 payment due on the mortgage and at the same time afford $2,000 contractoral work which housing authorities ordered the couple to undertake. Their only income is $55 a month from social security and $20 a month from rental of a room.

Since July, 1947, more than 100,000 building code violations have been corrected and thousands of violators have been handled by the Housing Court, another key performer in the Baltimore Plan.

Many officials and citizens have been attracted to Baltimore to study its plan of slum elimination. Many of them leave amazed at the role being played by Fight Blight Inc., which is comprised of such leaders as presidents of banks, mortgage and real eestate companies, a director of the Civic Development Bureau of the Association of Commerce, and a Johns Hopkins University educator.

Rival Unions Vie For Power On Waterfront

NEW YORK (CP) — The ever-turbulent New York waterfront, harboring a multi-billion-dollar industry and a multitude of rackets, today seethes with even greater unrest as rival unions vie for power amid a dock strike threat to all Atlantic ports.

At stake are billions of dollars in business and the ultimate welfare of some 60,000 dockers.

High officials of police and coast guard have mapped plans to cope with possible violence.

The crux of the brewing waterfront storm is the ouster of the International Longshoremen's Association from the American Federation of Labor for harboring crooks and racketeers. The AFL has formed a waterfront union of its own—the International Longshoremen's Association, AFL. It's the same name plus the AFL label.

UNDER INDICTMENT

At the same time independent ILA chief Joseph P. Ryan is under indictment on charges of grand larceny of union funds. A federal grand jury, investigating waterfront racketeering, is questioning him.

The newly-formed AFL union has opened a drive to recruit dockers from the ousted ILA. Friday it sent a motorcade along the Brooklyn waterfront and organizers urged dockers to break with the independent ILA.

Independent ILA vice president Patrick J. Connolly charged that the men who came to Brooklyn carried crowbars, pipes, jack handles and other potential weapons.

Anthony (Tough Tony) Anastasia independent ILA chief in Brooklyn, said his men will have to use "dangerous weapons to protect themselves" if they do not get enough police protection.

On top of the union troubles a Congress approved New York-New Jersey waterfront commission has been approved and is set to move in on the docks with full powers Dec. 1. Its objective will be to rid the docks of crime and graft and guide employer-union relations.

Que. Woman Dies In Resort Fire

WAUPOOS, Ont. (CP)—A Westmount, Que., woman was burned to death early today when fire destroyed the main lodge of the Sunnybank Hotel at this Lake Ontario summer resort hamlet.

Mrs. Clara Cases, 70, died when flames trapped her in her second-storey bedroom.

Three other persons believed to be from Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Kees Verbocht, both about 40, and Mrs. Georgina Thompson, 65, escaped by jumping from second-storey bedrooms in their night attire. None of the three was injured by the flames. Mrs. Thompson was admitted to hospital in nearby Picton, with bruises suffered in the 15-foot drop.

The four are believed to have been holidaying together. They were the only persons staying at the main lodge.

The fire, said to have started in the hotel kitchen, spread rapidly and destroyed the building. Damage is estimated at $15,000.

Waupoos is 35 miles southeast of Belleville.

Question Of Chinese Aiding Vietminh Biggest Problem To Indo-Chinese Forces

By FRED SPARKS

SAIGON (NEA)—When it rains in Indo-China it seems as if someone in heaven turned on a faucet. In minutes the streets of Saigon are aswim.

Bicycle - propelled rickshaws hoist their slight awnings and slosh through the gutters like small outboards. Neat Vietnamese girls in tight dresses slit up the sides, Foreign Legionnaires in white pillbox hats, French officers with tanned knees under tropical shorts—all take cover in the fan-cooled cafes.

Then the awful sun comes out like a slap in the face. In Saigon the water is literally sucked off the streets. But in the country, on the Tonkin airstrips next to Red China, along the vital roads feeding French outposts, the whole land is a giant puddle.

At the end of September these rains, the flash floods, will stop. Then will come another flood—the Vietminh Communists.

Carrying fresh weapons issued in China, they will attack French and loyal Indo-Chinese garrisons, ambush convoys, and infiltrate the heavily populated deltas. The seventh dry season of war will flame in this Chinese "year of the snake."

French forces, now fat with American guns, and newly trained light Indo-Chinese infantry promise aggressive actions to bleed Vietminh areas. Except for one thing, a final decision still seems distant. That one thing, in the back of every man's mind, is: "Chinese troops."

Will the forces of General Mao, now relieved in Korea, move here? And if they do what of U.S. Secretary of State Dulles' promise that the war will then be carried to Peking by air bombings and sea blockade?

A decision is hard to come by because the Communist war is in the traditional guerrilla pattern, hidden by vast jungles so thick that movement is measured in yards. You can't kill somebody you can't find.

By sniping, harassing and dynamiting, the Communists have forced French withdrawals and the map of Indo-China has the measmost every city. Even Saigon is les. Red spots of Vietminh ring alsurrounded, and a white man motoring out of town after dark is playing duck in a shooting gallery.

Troopers on garrison duty in the thousands of log stockades are condemned to victory. For them there can be no retreat. A few nights ago, 40 miles from Saigon, a rubber plantation stockade was assaulted by guerrillas in black silk gowns.

A traitor unlatched the gate and they poured in. Thirty defenders were killed, 30 marched off roped together like cattle.

The Communists are everywhere—and they are nowhere. As I walked down rue Catinet, a street hysterical with shouting rickshaw boys, unmuffled scooters and screaming naked children, an old friend said: "The moment you arrived, the Vietminh knew who you were and why you came.

"They have infiltrated every office, every hotel. Most shop-keepers pay two taxes—one to the Government, one to the Communist underground. Oof—it is an insurance."

Certainly, I found French hopes down since my last visit in 1950. Many of my old soldier-friends have been killed. And some politicians in Paris talk about saving money, pulling out.

They want the UN—and that means U.S.—to take over, send our young men, even as now we are sending half the dollars to finance this war.

A sharp blow to French hope was the Korean truce. Red China finances this trouble, and when the U.S. made an armistice arrangement the natives said, well, the Americans and Europeans cannot whip China, they will soon go home, we cannot defend ourselves so we better play it cozy.

But while support from home is ho-hum, the French troops here look good to me. Away from the fashionable pacificism of Paris they are honed as trim as boxers and fight well in shoulder high swamps with quiet determination.

To aid them there is en route from Korea the French battalion which won all the honors— across the board—for bravery and military know-how.

Like American boys I saw carry on in Korea despite disinterest and confusion back home, the French GIs fight for pride in their unit. And in the newly trained Indo-Chinese battalions I find a counterpart to our South Korean allies — bitterly anti-Communist, with Oriental willingness to accept sudden death.

Swedish Trade Union Head Backs M.R.A. Movement

By ANGUS MUNRO
Windsor Star Staff Writer
Special To The Examiner

CAUX, Switzerland—A Swedish trade union leader told representatives of 45 nations at the Moral Rearmament Assembly here that recent ICFTU pronouncements regarding Moral Rearmament "must not go unanswered."

'WILL FOLLOW PRINCIPLES'

Sigurd Lidstrom, national executive board member of the Paperworkers' Union of Sweden, said: "We Swedish trade union leaders cannot and will not accept the criticism made by the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. We will follow the basic principles of moral rearmament."

Among those present were national and regional officials of 50 trade unions from 14 countries.

Continued Mr. Lidstrom: "Many of us are backing this work financially and we have found it hard to understand insinuations about the financing of moral rearmament. All the accounts are supervised by public auditors and available to anyone."

Support for Mr. Lidstrom's view came from Scottish trade unionist Clayton McCormick, president of the United Patternmakers' Society of Scotland, who declared: "Labor without God will wreck the world; labor with God will lead the world."

He went on to deny the ICFTU suggestion that moral rearmament lacked the support of the rank and file of the labor movement.

"The spirit of moral rearmament is effectively at work throughout Scottish industry," he said, "and in 500 British factories, and its rank and file men are the soul of the trade union movement."

Members of national trade union executives in Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Pakistan, India and Iran also affirmed their support for MRA as signatories of a declaration stating:

"Only a solution on a world scale can give meaning to efforts we make in our own spheres of action."

Among signatories are James Haworth, president of the Transport Salaried Staff Association of Great Britain; Maurice Mercier, national secretary of the Federation of extile Workers of France; Hubert Stein, national executive member of the Mineworkers' Union of Germany, and Abu Saeed Enver, president of the West Pakistan Federation of Labor.

Franz Bohn, shop steward at the Ford Motor Company at Cologne, said: "I reject completely any accusation that by associating with moral rearmament we are encouraging yellow trade unionism. The confidence of my fellow workers have in my trade union work since meeting moral rearmament has been shown by the fact they have given me more votes at each election."

CITES BUCHMANN

He referred to Dr. Buchmann's close association with the late Dr. Hans Boeckler, first head of the postwar German TUC, who said: "When men change, conditions change. That is why I am for moral rearmament."

W. O. Frazier, president of Miami Transit Company bus drivers' union, whose union was referred to in the ICFTU report, cited practical gains of his union in negotiations conducted in the spirit of moral rearmament with the president of the company.

"At the time of the Miami bus strike in 1952 I sat down with Mr. Pawley (company president) and within 24 hours we called a truce. Out of that truce came a 14 cents an hour flat raise for the union."

"More recently we negotiated a three-year contract on a share-the-profits plan. Prior to meeting moral rearmament I wouldn't have trusted Mr. Pawley out of my sight, much less sign a share-the-profits plan."

Sven Widerstedt, secretary of the miners' union which produces 80 per cent of Sweden's iron ore, control of the Mineworkers Union of Kiruna, Sweden, was broken through moral rearmament since 60 workers of the industry attend Caux assemblies."

T. V. Anandam of Madras, general secretary of the Southern Railway Employees Union, said that as a representative of 52,000 railway workers he was grateful to moral rearmament for bringing unity to the Indian trade union movement which would provide a common program for the 30,000,000 workers in this country.

Norwood Church PYPS Rally Site

NORWOOD (ENS)—The Young People's Societies of the Peterborough Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church held their fall pre-convention rally on Wednesday evening in St. Andrew's Church. Lorraine McCrory, who has just completed her year as fellowship convener, led the gathering in a few games.

President Arden McNaughton, of Warkworth, opened the worship period with the reading of the purpose of the PYPS. The worship period was conducted by Jerry Finnie, director of leadership training.

Words of welcome to all gathered were given by the president and the Rev. H. W. Huestin, of Millbrook, Presbytery's convener of YP work. Patricia Atkinson extended a welcome on behalf of the Norwood society in the absence of the president, Carl Burtt.

The roll call by churches was taken, showing Peterborough with the most attending (on a percentage basis). The executive gave a report on their year's work and a resume of the activities of the Presbytery Society.

The report of the nominating committee was read by Miss Ruth Curtis, of Peterborough, and the election of officers was held.

The new slate of officers is as follows: Hon. president, the Rev. Gilbert Smith, of Keene and St. Giles', Peterborough; president, Lorraine McCrory, Campbellford; vice-president, Edgar Kee of Peterborough, secretary, Betty Dainard, Hastings; treasurer, Clarance Eagleson ,Centreville; convener of worship, Gerald Finnie, Centreville; convener of missions, Ruth Steinkrauss, Peterborough; convener of evangelism and stewardship, Jean Haig, Campbellford; convener of fellowship, Bob Duncanson, Norwood; convener of publicity, Leona Gordon, Norwood; director of leadership training, Ruth Curtis, Peterborough.

The executive will again be under the leadership of Mr. Heustin, who is the presbytery's convener of Christian education.

There was a competition of song writing among the societies ,and the one chosen by the Rally to represent the effort of their Presbytery at the Convention in Guelph next month was the song written and sung by the Peterborough society.

The film showed the activity in four past conventions including the 1953 meeting in St. Paul's, Peterborough, last year.

Miss Norma Gillies of Toronto a member of the synod executive, spoke on the convention. She stated several reasons why every member of every society should attend. She told the audience that Dr. J. M. Smart, former Peterborough minister, was to be the theme speaker.

Installation of the officers then took place. Mrs. Heutsin then read very appropriate passages of scripture, then addressed the newly elected officers with the privilige and the responsibility that is theirs.

A vote of thanks was extended to the session of St. Andrew's church for the use of the church hall and to the Rev. R. D. Duncanson for his kind assistance in making the evening a success.

Lunch was served by the members of the Norwood Presbyterian Young People's Society and during the serving of lunch, slides were shown of the Glen Mohr work camp carried on last spring jointly between Toronto West and Peterborough Young People's Presbyteries. Miss Norma Gillies of Toronto gave a commentary on the slides as they were shown.

SHOW-OFFS—The agile work of Montreal firemen on aerial ladders and the innovation of having colored smoke pour from the top of the ladders along with three flags, the Union Jack, Canadian Ensign and the Stars and Stripes, took the fancy of 1,500 delegates to the International Municipal Congress and thousands of Montrealers. The demonstration was arranged for the visitors and had been rehearsed for several days.

Eight Canadian Ships Sailed 733,886 Miles, Korean War

By JACK MACBETH

OTTAWA (CP) — Somewhere ahead in the darkness an unknown object was moving slowly along Korea's west coast.

From the bridge of the Canadian destroyer Nootka, experienced eyes followed its progress by radar. Between the warship and the mysterious "contact" lay enemy mines.

Instead of giving chase, skilled hands plotted the object's movement and a report was radioed to the United Nations fleet command.

Next night the Nootka was back again; this time with a minesweeper. Again radar contact was established and more plotting soon disclosed a familiar pattern of movement. The two UN ships closed.

PEREMPTORY ORDER

At a few hundred yards, the silhouette of a large junk appeared. The junk was hailed by the Nootka's Korean liaison officer and told to steer for a nearby island or be blown out of the water.

The junk slowly began to alter course. Almost at once, however, Nootka lookouts reported seeing figures dropping into the water from the junk's stern. The destroyer ordered one of its motor boats to investigate.

Minutes later a flashlight poked from the motor boat's bow pinpointed a pair of feet sticking out of the water. The man who owned them opened fire with a burp gun. So did the Canadians.

After the shooting the Canadian seamen, unharmed, found a dead North Korean officer sprawled across an inflated inner tube. At daylight, five more live North Koreans riding the gentle swell in similar rafts were captured.

The Nootka took their junk in tow and headed for base. The junk turned out to be a Communist minelayer and the inner tubes were part of the equipment.

That was in September, 1952. It represented only one strange episode among many for Canadian warships serving with the UN fleet in Korean waters.

FIRST IN KOREA

In July, 1950, about a month after the Korean War started, three Canadian destroyers arrived at Sasebo, Japan, to begin their first Korean duty. They were the Cayuga, Sioux and Athabaskan.

Since then five other Canadian destroyers have spent varying periods in Korean waters. All told, the eight ships have sailed 733,886 operational miles and fired more than 40,000 rounds of four-inch ammunition.

The main job of the UN navies in Korea has been to seal off enemy ports while guaranteeing complete freedom of movement to and from their own. Never was a blockade more effective.

Against limited opposition it has not been spectacular. But if sufficient warships had not been made available to protect UN supply ships and to deny the enemy use of the sea, the task of stopping communism in Korea undoubtedly would have been longer, tougher and more expensive.

Even though naval losses have been light, it has not been a case of cruising nonchalantly up and down the Korean coasts. Canadian ships, in fact, have put in a greater percentage of time at sea than they did during the Second World War.

DRAMATIC JOBS

Aside from routine patrols, Canadian ships also have been called on for other more-dramatic jobs. These include the bombardment of enemy troops, trains and installations along the coast. A Canadian ship, the Crusader, holds the record for the number of enemy trains destroyed. In her 13 months of Korean service she destroyed four trains, one more than the runner-up, an American destroyer.

Crusader's commander, Cmdr. John H. G. Bovey of Montreal, described his experiences in Korea as "much more fun" than those on the North Atlantic in the last war.

"Actually," he recalled during an interview, "we got four and two half-trains. We smashed a couple pretty hard but did not get credit for their destruction."

Sometimes it was possible to sneak close to shore before opening fire. Other times it was just a case of "steering straight for the train at high speed, firing everything we had and then turning away at the last possible minute."

CRUSADER'S RECORD

The Crusader's experience in Korea can be considered typical to those of all Canadian ships. From May, 1952, to May, 1953, she steamed 70,980 miles; anchored 104 times in enemy waters within easy range of shore batteries; refuelled at sea 68 times; captured three junks and took 15 prisoners; knocked out two enemy guns; went to action stations 58 times and handled more than 60,000 wireless messages.

Canadian ships also participated in the evacuation of Chinnampo in the fall of 1950 after the Chinese onslaught. At that time the destroyers Sioux, Cayuga and Athabaskan were ordered to sail up the Chinnampo channel to take off some 8,000 wounded troops and civilians before the Chinese reached them.

It was a ticklish job navigationally. The Sioux and Warramunga, an Australian ship, ran aground on the mud bottom, but were quickly refloated. Later, Rear-Admiral Turner Joy, commander naval forces Far East, signalled: "Congratulations to all hands for a job well done."

Navigational hazards present UN ships in Korea with one of their biggest problems. Charts, for the most part, are reliable. But shoals shift and off-shore currents are tricky—among the worst in the world.

Other Canadian ships taking part in Korean operations since 1950 include the Haida, Huron and Iroquois. More than 3,500 officers and men of the RCN gained combat experience; decorations were awarded to 42.

THREE LOST LIIVES

The only operational casualties were suffered by the Iroquois when she was struck by a Communist shore battery on the northeast coast of Korea near Songjin. One officer and one man were killed; one man died later of wounds and 10 others were slightly wounded.

Other ships came close. In one duel with enemy guns 15 shells fell close enough to Nootka to send fountains of water over the decks.

On occasion, Canadian ships also were asked to screen bigger fleet units. This is considered something of a break.

There was no ship-to-ship fighting in the Korean war and, so far as Canadian authorities know, no ship-to-air fighting. They state that no Canadian ship has been fired on by a Communist aircraft, although one or two enemy planes were sighted.

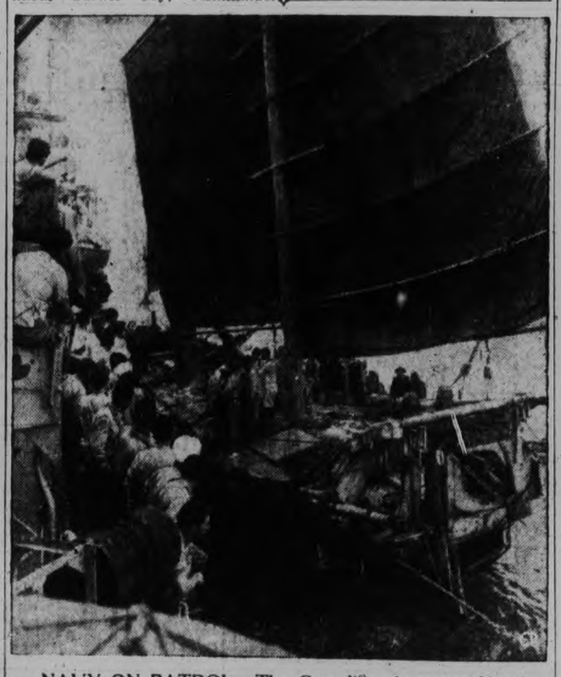
Meanwhile, truce has come to Korea. If peace comes, Canada probably will recall her ships. If fighting flares again, the RCN will be on the job.

Raise For Civil Servants

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal civil servants are to get an across-the-board wage increase by December, Fred W. Whitehouse, president of the Civil Servants Federation of Canada, said here Thursday night. He told a meeting of Vancouver federation members that he had received a telephone call from Ottawa assuring a pay increase, "and it won't be a percentage one, despite reports that have been filtering out."

Presbyterians Train

TORONTO (CP) — The Presbyterian Church in Canada is setting up week-long training courses for young church leaders in 100 centres across Canada. Four groups of lay leaders, missionaries and ministers will visit church districts from Quebec City to Vancouver to hold training courses for the church's Sunday school teachers, youth leaders and adults interested in youth work.



NAVY ON PATROL—The Canadian destroyer Nootka stops and examines a North Korean junk during a patrol in Korean waters. Some of the junks were harmless, others carried away enemy crews or were usd as minelayers. It was part of the patrol job carried out by Canadian warships during the Korean war.

British Minister At Coldsprings

COLDSPRINGS (ENS) — The Rev. Lewis Julian, of Cornwall, England, has been holidaying in Canada, visiting his brother, the Rev. G. W. Julian, at Bracebridge, Frank, in Toronto, and a sister in Saskatchewan. He recently spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lander at Coldsprings.

Mr. Julian, after winning an English scholarship, was given four years at Exeter College, Oxford. Following the course there, he entered a Theological College and early this year was ordained into the British Methodist Church. He left Malton Airport Tuesday for England. Later this month he will sail for Ceylon where he has been appointed by the Methodist Mission Board to teach English, and as Chaplain in a College there for a term of six years.

Mr. Julian was stationed at Ceylon during the Second World War with the Royal Navy. Before leaving he paid a brief visit to the Alderville reserve.

New York Into Ghost City Biggest Raid Drill Turns

NEW YORK (AP)—The biggest atomic air raid drill the world has ever seen made a ghost city of New York Friday, as its millions took shelter from the make-believe fury of two bombs.

Director Clarence Heubner called it the best so far of New York's three city-wide A-bomb drills. Others were held Nov. 28, 1951, and April 3, 1952.

The simulated raid lasted 15 minutes. Theoretically the bombs landed in downtown Manhattan and Queens, killing 1,000,000 people, injuring 500,000 and making 2,000,000 homeless. Civil defence workers carried out assignments as if a real raid had occurred.

One life was lost. Motorcycle policeman Harry Witter, 40, was killed in a traffic collision five minutes after the raid drill. He was due off duty, but stayed on overtime to aid in the drill. A woman was injured in a fall down a shelter stairway.

For the first time, the new "Conelrad" technique of scrambling radio beams was used in a drill. Standard radio stations in the New York area switched to "Conelrad," a system of confusing incoming enemy bombers. Television and FM radio stations went off the air.

Only moments were required to sweep Times Square clear of its teeming thousands as the wail of nearly 600 sirens signalled the alert's beginning.

Pigeons wheeled in bewilderment above almost-deserted streets. Here or there a policeman or an air raid warden stood as solitary sentinel amid the strangely quiet canyons.

Drunk Charge Dismissed

WINDSOR (CP)—A drunk-driving charge against police constable Lloyd Harwood was dismissed Friday by Magistrate A. W. MacMillan, who said evidence did not prove beyond a doubt that Harwood was the driver of a car involved in an accident. He was charged after a car crashed into a parked truck owned by Allan Ouellette. Three police officers testified that Harwood was on the scene of the accident and was drunk.

Polio Therapy Aided By Group

TORONTO (CP)—In an effort to overcome a shortage of physiotherapists for the treatment of polio victims, the Ontario chapter of the Canadian Foundation for Poliomyelitis Friday announced special grants to four young women studying physical and occupational therapy at the University of Toronto.

Two of the students, Madelaine Croggan of Toronto and Sadie Hinatsu of St. Catharines, are in their final year. On graduation they will work in a polio treatment centre.

Diana Speaight of Clinton and Mary Ferguson of Puslinch are starting the first year of the course.

Post-graduate fellowships will send Mrs. Majorie Meredith of Sault Ste. Marie to the Boston children's medical centre. Mrs. Meredith will take a special six-week course in nursing care for polio patients.

Britain To Evacuate Suez In 18 Months, Egypt Says

Early Agreement Not Likely, Says U.K. Official

CAIRO (AP)—An official Egyptian source said today that Britain has agreed to remove her troops from the strategic Suez base within 18 months. This would put Britain and Egypt nearer to a solution of the Suez dispute, but a British embassy spokesman said an early complete agreement is unlikely. The Egyptian informant stressed that a main hurdle was overcome with British agreement that the base would be made available to Britain and her allies only in event of actual warfare against an Arab state. Previously Britain had insisted that the base be made available in event of threat of war against the Arab states or Greece, Iran and Turkey.

The Arab states include the eight members of the Arab League—Egypt, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Lebanon, Jordan, Yemen and Libya.

The informant gave the following outline of the points agreed upon:

1. British troops, estimated to number 80,000, will evacuate the base within a period of 18 months from the signing of the agreement.

4,000 TO STAY

2. Some 4,000 British experts will remain in the base for three years following the 18 - month period. They will be under the command of the Egyptian army commander-in-chief, who will be assisted by a British adviser.

3. Britain will not remove any equipment from or dismantle any installation in the base during the whole period in which the experts remain.

Points of disagreement were listed as:

1. Britain wants to keep 3,000 experts for 2½ years after the three-year period already agreed upon, making a total period of continued British presence of seven years. Egypt wants "a few hundred experts only" to remain in the base after the three-year period for an additional 1½ years only, a total occupation period of six years.

COULD SPOIL OUTCOME

2. Britain wants her experts to wear uniforms. Egypt insists they must wear civilian clothes.

The informant warned that this last point could jeopardize the whole outcome of the present talks if Britain insists that her experts remain in uniform.

"We're ready to break the talks in that case," he said. "The Anglo-Egyptian 1936 treaty provided for 10,000 men to remain in the base. Egypt's people shall not tolerate that almost half that contingent remain in the Suez area wearing British uniforms, thus constituting a continuation of the occupation."

The informant also warned that this may be Britain's "last chance to reach agreement with Egypt," adding:

"We doubt that there'll be another occasion for Britain to conclude an agreement with us."

CANADIAN, NOT DUTCH—This little girl, Ila Moes, has not been long in Canada, but she is already very much a Canadian despite the costume. Deep-Sea Sailors Go On Strike; 30 Ships Affected

MONTREAL (CP)—Members of the Seafarers International Union (AFL-TLC) went on strike at noon today on Canadian deep-sea ships. No trouble was reported as crewmen walked off two ships in Montreal. Capt. J. E. Matheson, superintendent of the Shipping Federation of Canada, said six flag ships in the Gulf of St. Lawrence will be affected. About 30 ships in all will be affected. The shipping federation was notified of the strike deadline Friday afternoon and a meeting held Sunday failed to settle the dispute.

Capt. Matheson said he does not know whether Canadian flag ships in foreign ports will be affected.

Shipping federation and union spokesmen declined to give details of the dispute.

Just a week ago a dispute between the SIU and four Canadian lake shipping companies was settled and a strike averted.

MAIN ISSUE

Main issue was the union's demand for a 40-hour week which the companies agreed to accept.

A labor department official said some 30 vessels will be affected by the walkout. Most of the Canadian fleet in recent years has been transferred to foreign registry.

The TLC official said the SIU had gone through negotiations for a new contract with the shipowners without success and that a conciliation board had rejected union demands.

The labor department official said his office "is doing everything it can" but that the union and shipowners had reached a deadlock and refused to yield.

Meetings to try to avert a strike were held throughout the week-end without success. The labor department would have to await strike developments before further action could be taken.

No Final Plans For Korea's Future, Says U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The state department said today the United States has reached no final decision on a plan for the future of Korea, but is exploring various proposals and still hopes for support from South Korea and other Allies on the issue.

Press officer Lincoln White outlined that position in response to questions about reports that South Korean President Syngman Rhee has assailed a reported plan for the neutralization of his country.

The New York Times reported from Seoul that Rhee also was sharply critical of the Allies for planning a solution to the Korean question without consulting first with the South Korean government.

The Times said Britain, Canada and France were reported backing a U.S. plan calling for the neutralization and unification of North and South Korea and the withdrawal of all foreign troops, together with mutual safeguards against aggression from both the Communists and the Allied and South Korean side.

ONLY ALTERNATIVE

SEOUL (Reuters)—South Korea tonight renewed its call for resumption of the Korean war if the political conference fails.

Acting Foreign Minister Chun Cho told the National Assembly that if the Korean conference does not settle the peninsula's future, "there will be no alternative but war."

Low Tariffs Hurt Textile Makers

TORONTO (CP) — Low tariffs and rising production costs are threatening to force Canadian textile manufacturers out of business, B. K. Gunn, general manager of Penmans Ltd., Paris, Ont., said today.

Mr. Gunn, past president of the Canadian Woollen and Knit Goods Manufacturers Association, told delegates at the association's 31st annual meeting that Canadian mills face a bitter fight to retain a fair share of the domestic market.

"Imports of textiles . . . are usurping an increasing share of the Canadian market," he said. "Unit production costs in major textile producing countries are substantially lower than costs in Canada.

"This factor, coupled with the fact that Canadian tariffs on textiles and textile products are the lowest of any major world textile producer, has robbed the Canadian manufacturer of his opportunity to compete on any reasonably equitable basis in his own home market."

End Sugar Rationing

LONDON (AP)—Sugar rationing ended in Britain Saturday midnight after 14 years. Price and distribution controls over sugar, syrup and treacle were also abolished. Meat, bacon, cheese and butter are the only foods now rationed.

Mosher Favors Gov't Ownership Of All Utilities

MONTREAL (CP)—A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, said today he favors public ownership of all public utilities.

In a speech prepared for the opening session of the fifth annual convention of the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (CIO-CCL), Mr. Mosher said he believes "exploitation of our natural resources" should be in the hands of publicly-owned bodies.

He said there are "just two groups of people—those who are in favor of public ownership and those who are opposed to the public getting what properly belongs to it. . . ."

Instead of referring to public and private ownership, it would be better to talk of "anti-public ownership."

He congratulated the union on "dislodging the Communist-controlled United Electrical Workers" from plants in Canada and the United States.

Baby Sozzled

HONG KONG (Reuters)—A Chinese mother rushed her eight-month-old baby boy to a hospital here because he was red in the face and hiccoughing badly. Doctors held hurried consultations, then announced—the baby was drunk. The mother was shocked. Then she said she guessed she must have poured her husband's white rice wine into the baby's bottle instead of milk.

New Iron Ore Range Found By 2 Bush Pilots In Quebec

By NICK NICKELS

During a recent vacation, which I spent down in the Lower St. Lawrence country, I was invited one day to make a charter flight from Quebecair's main terminal at Mont Joli to Goose Bay, Labrador, if I would act as flight steward on the way. I jumped at the chance. While aloft on the 475-mile haul, after we had touched down for refuelling at Seven Islands, Capt. Paul Lapointe turned the controls over to his co-pilot Bill Awater and came back into the cabin to chat. In the course of his interesting conversation he revealed one of the most lucky, and fantastic, mine-discovery stories of modern times.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Examiner Staff Photographer-Reporter Nick Nickels went on holidays three weeks ago. He went to lower Quebec to see some old friends and uncovered the biggest story to come out of that region since the original finding of iron ore in Labrador. Mr. Nickels tells his own story of how he found it.

It all started when I asked Paul a leading and burning question that is sure to get a rise out of his kind every time:

"Don't you wish you could find a mine from the sky, some day?"

With an amused look on his face, Lapointe told me the following story:

As chief pilot of Quebecair Incorporated, Lapointe with Awater, was assigned to a routine charter flight from Mont Joli to Goose Bay via Seven Islands for fuel.

FLEW LOW

Before take-off they were ordered to fly low over the Seven Islands-Goose radio beam, weather permitting, to see if they could spot the wreckage of a private American craft that had disappeared over the same route early in the winter of 1953.

They took off from Mont Joli in the 28-passenger craft CF-TDK with a full complement of passengers and some freight. They refueled at Seven Islands, and, as weather was clear, flew on visual flight rules at 2,000 feet; Awater took over the controls and Lapointe glued his eyes to the country passing below for signs of any wreckage.

At a point 110 miles northeast of Seven Islands as the plane crossed the headwaters of the St. John River, the cockpit navigating compass spun erratically 90 degrees as it passed over a high tumbling ridge that formed the south bank of the river gorge.

A water nudged Lapointe, who took over the controls turned the aircraft and flew the length of the two-mile ridge and got the same compass reaction. They noted the position of the spot and proceeded to Goose Bay deplaned their traffic and took on another load for the return trip. And they checked the spot again on the return flight and kept its position to themselves.

MADE OWN TRIP

Three weeks later they were able to hire one of their company's floatcraft and went into the St. John River country to have a close look from the ground. They took samples, had them assayed and got very encouraging results—hematite of excellent grade and some titanium.

Commission Denies Charge It Spread Red Propaganda

PANMUNJOM (AP)—The United Nations command today accused the neutral prisoner repatriation commission of circulating a Red-slanted letter among 22,600 Korean war prisoners who have refused to return to the Communists. But an Indian spokesman for the neutral commission quickly denied the accusation, declaring:

"As far as the commission is concerned, they have not indulged in propaganda for any side."

The Indian spokesman added that the letter was broadcast as well as circulated among the prisoners as "a joint effort . . . prepared by a sub-committee of the commission and all nations on the commission were represented."

None of the warring powers is on the commission.

The spokesman added that the message was "completely in accord with the terms of reference" of the armistice and that it was translated under supervision of all five nations represented on the neutral commission.

CITES LETTER

Brig.-Gen. A. L. Hamblen, chief of the UN Command repatriation group, cited a letter he said the neutral commission distributed to the prisoners Saturday. An Allied spokesman said the letter was clearly of Chinese Communist origin and immediately was recognized by "shocked" anti-Red Chinese PoWs as propaganda aimed at persuading them to go home.

A translation released by the Allies showed the letter was sprinkled with Red phraseology.

It specified that prisoners will be required "absolutely, by necessity" to attend interviews by representatives of their old sides—a requirement the Allies have opposed.

PREVENT COERCION

The UN command had urged that attendance at interviews—expected to start Thursday—be voluntary, to prevent the Reds from coercing anti - Communist prisoners to change their decisions against going home.

Release of the letter indicated that the commission may have ruled against the Allies on this point.

Announcement of rules governing the interviews has been expected momentarily since Saturday. An official source said the commission has decided to leave up to each side whether "explanations" are made to prisoners in groups or individually.

Although Hamblen's protest was addressed to Lt.-Gen. K. S. Thimayya, Indian chairman of the five-national repatriation commission,

Russia To Shun Talks: Pravda

MOSCOW (AP)—Tass indicated Sunday the Soviet government will shun Big Four talks on Germany and other international problems because of conditions laid down in recent notes from the three western powers.

The official news agency carried a statement by the Soviet all union central committee of trade unions accusing the western powers of presenting pre - conditions which could make Big Four talks "either impossible of unfruitful."

This was seen as a straw in the wind for possible rejection by the Soviet government of the western bid for a foreign ministers conference at Lugano, Switzerland, Oct. 15. The bid was made in identical notes from the British, U.S. and French governments Sept. 2.

Reynolds To Pitch First For Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Manager Casey Stengel of New York Yankees said today that Allie Reynolds will pitch the opening game of the world series against Brooklyn Dodgers at Yankee Stadium Wednesday.

Reynolds, who has a 13-7 record for the year, had been expected to start for the Yankees.

The Dodgers will work out at the stadium this afternoon and manager Chuck Dressen is expected to name Carl Erskine (20-6) as his starting hurler.

Stengel said Ed Lopat would pitch the second game, with either Vic Raschi or Whitey Ford on the mound Friday when the series shifts to Ebbets Field.

Stengel gave the following tentative batting order for the Yanks: McDougald, 3b; Collins, 1b; Bauer, rf; Berra, c; Mantle, cf; Woodling, lf; Martin, 2b; Rizzuto, ss; and pitcher.

Little Hope Held For Settlement Before Christmas

TIMMINS (CP) — Municipal leaders of this strike-paralyzed town of 30,000 today hold little hope that the dispute which has closed six of the 11 mines in the rich Porcupine gold mining area can be settled before Christmas. Picketing continued quietly during the weekend as the 4,000 miners made idle here by the walkouts looked toward a meeting in Toronto Tuesday between the district's two top municipal officials and provincial government representatives for hope that a long-drawn-out battle can be averted.

Mayor J. W. Spooner of Timmins and reeve Victor Evans of Tisdale township, in which the six strikebound mines are located, will meet with Labor Minister Daley. They probably will confer also with Premier Frost in their attempt to get the government to intervene in the dispute that threatens to shatter the town's economy.

Civic leaders have warned that something has to be done quickly to help the situation, described as approaching "catastrophic proportions" by Earl Barkwell, chairman of the Retail Merchants' Association.

CRIPPLING BLOWS

Further crippling blows will be felt if threatened strikes at three of Timmins' five other mines come off. These three mines are Pamour, Aunor and Coniaurum. The 250 workers at Coniaurum have already been thrown out of work for an indefinite period by an explosion in two compressed air tanks Friday night.

It was also reported Sunday night that a strike may be called

Unfair Competition

FRANKFURT (Reuters)—A court at nearby Hanau sentenced Paul Sonnenfeld, 56-year-old hotel keeper, to three months in prison for waging unfair economic warfare by releasing 30 bedbugs in a rival's hotel.

Expect Release Of A-Secrets For Defence Aid

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Eisenhower administration probably will ask Congress next year for authority to give American allies some secret atomic information as an aid to the western defence build-up.

Administration officials are reported to feel that development of the defences of western Europe against Soviet communism requires disclosures of more information than is currently being given their military people.

The whole question has been under study and debate in the government since before the Eisenhower administration took over in January.

DECISION

The decision on what kind of solution is needed and how to bring it about probably rests primarily with the joint chiefs of staff, but it involves participation with the White House, state department and atomic energy commission in varying degrees.

Informed officials said the most likely line of action to be agreed upon is positive action by Congress to authorize disclosure. How Congress would react is open to question. Many legislators have opposed any relaxation of atomic secrecy.

CANNONS SHIPPED

The United States is now shipping tactical weapons of atomic capability to Europe. Last week the first units of 280-millimetre guns sailed for Europe. This giant cannon was developed to fire atomic shells as well as conventional ones.

Under present law and policy, officials said, they can be used in Europe only by American units assigned to the international command. Some officials argue that from a military point of view it would be desirable to let Allied European military forces have some weapons of their own under controlled conditions.

Against this, however, stands the argument of the greater risk of loss of secrets of Russia, and the knowledge that the United States would be losing some of the control it now has over nuclear weapons.

Queen Flies Home

LONDON (AP)—The Queen flew back to fog and rain-swept London Sunday night from her summer holiday in Scotland. Her twin-engined Viking was brought down to the airport by GCA (ground control approach) whereby the craft's movements were watched on a radar screen and her pilot talked down through the overcast to the runway approach.

Stassen Reports

Western World Cuts Down Russia-Bound War Goods

WASHINGTON (AP)—Harold E. Stassen, United States foreign operations chief, reports the West is clamping down on war-goods shipments to Iron Curtain countries, but is boosting its non-strategic trade with the Reds.

In a 96-page week-end report to Congress he estimated that free-world shipments to Red China of non-strategic goods—that is, those not aiding her war potential—would total $375,000,000 this year. He weighed this against a $257,000,000 total last year.

But he emphasized that "the strategic embargo was being increased in the first half of 1953, not relaxed. The increase was in non-strategic goods."

"The main reason for it seems to be the changed attitude of the Chinese Communists, who had dropped their reluctance to deal with the West and were placing more and bigger orders for the kind of goods that the free governments would have been willing to ship all along."

Stassen's report covered global enforcement of strategic trade controls during the first half of the year under the Mutual Defence Assistance Control Act.

It made clear that, although the U. S. bars all American trade with Communist China, it does not object to non-strategic trade with the Chinese Reds on the part of its allies.

In a letter accompanying the report, Stassen struck out at critics of this policy. He branded as "completely untrue" any contentions that the allies are sending military supplies to the Soviet bloc.

"To try to force a stoppage of all East-West commerce would be precisely the wrong way to assure peace in the world.

"Such a stoppage would be impossible in the present climate, and even if it were possible, it would not conform with the economic and political facts of life in Europe."

Ex-Moscow Reporter Doubts Escape Tales About Beria; Believes Purge Continues

By TOM WHITNEY

LONDON (AP)—Three months ago Soviet Police Chief Lavrenty P. Beria was arrested in Moscow—and his sentence hasn't been announced yet.

The Soviet government promised a trial and turned the case over to the Soviet Supreme Court. But the trial, hasn't materialized, or at any rate nothing has been made public about it.

It could be that Beria is still being worked over to bring him to the point of an adject confession of treason.

It could be that the Soviet government is still looking around for others to be implicated with him.

It's also possible the Soviet government has not yet made up its mind whether it wants to put on a big Beria show trial or not.

And it could also be that Beria is dead.

In the non-Communist world rumors are circulating that Beria has escaped.

These rumors have to be evaluated against the indubitable fact that if Beria was taken alive by Premier Georgi Malenkov's government, he then certainly became the most carefully guarded human on earth. Every one of his jailers would answer with his life.

Beria's arrest was announced July 10, but it is known it actually took place June 26. The official decrees removing him from his posts as minister of internal affairs and first deputy premier were dated as of that day.

And that is the day that Soviet Army tank columns manoeuvred in Moscow, past the new American embassy and past Beria's official residence a few hundred yards away. These tank movements clearly were part of "operation Beria."

There's never been any proof or even any Soviet government statement that Beria is alive.

He is one man who might have had some warning about his coming arrest. He might have prepared himself for this eventuality as did German Gestapo chief Heinrich Himmler—with poison. Or his captors might have shot him on the spot.

But it is a little more probable that Beria was captured alive.

If so, he perhaps presents a particular problem to the Soviet "confession" extraction experts. Beria is tough. He knows their tricks and devices. It could also be that he knows those tricks so well he won't resist. Even in the strongest of cases, however, it seems to take a long time for the Communists to get anyone absolutely ready for a show trial.

If Beria is to be shown at a trial, then it seems likely others will stand trial with him as co-conspirators.

Possibly the purge in Soviet Georgia fits in with this. Old cronies of Beria, including Premier Valerian Bakradze, whom Beria put into power in April in his home republic, and at least four other influential members of the government were fired—and probably arrested—this last week on orders from Moscow.

Beria's trial could start tomorrow, for all the outside world knows of what goes on inside the top Soviet government circles.

But there's no certainty that there ever will be a big Beria trial at all.

Asiatic Typhoons Hit Indo-China Hard, Rake Japanese Coast

TOKYO. (AP)—Asiatic typhoons during the weekend killed from 115 to possibly 400 persons in Japan and from 1,000 to 2,000 in Indo-China.

The latest count of Japan's typhoon was 115 dead, 288 missing and 259 injured.

The governor of Central Indo-China said nearly 1,000 were known dead there and that the toll may reach 2,000.

Homeless persons were counted in the hundreds of thousands, both in Japan and Indo-China.

SOLDIERS HELP

While the 90-m.p.h. windstorm that struck Southern Japan broke up today out in the North Pacific, U.S. servicemen pitched in to aid stricken cities.

The U.S. Army estimated damage to its Camp Otsu near Kyoto at nearly $2,000,000.

The typhoon took its heaviest toll around Japan's Inland Sea. Property damage ranged into uncounted millions of dollars.,

In Indo-China, where there has been a long, bloody conflict between French troops and the Communist-led Vietminh, aerial reconnaissance disclosed that typhoon floods damaged areas held by both sides. Vinh, the Vietminh administrative capital and military base, was heavily damaged.

TOKYO, September 28 (AP)—Last week's typhoon dealt a near-knockout blow to Japan's cultured pearl industry, causing $5,500,000 damage, the newspaper Asahi says today. For the next two or three years no cultured pearl will come from the famous Mikimoto pearl grounds. Some 26,000 rafts from which pearl oysters are hung were destroyed.

New Red Plans Help Peasants

MOSCOW (AP)—A new deal announced Saturday for Soviet peasants dramatically underlines a campaign by Premier Georgi Malenkov's government to focus the attention of the entire Soviet Union on agriculture.

The peasants are getting several breaks by decree. Chiefly, the government will pay them more for the milk, butter, cattle and poultry they sell from their private holdings and, effective in the second half of 1954, it will cut the quotas of meat, milk, eggs and wool they are required to deliver to the state.

The agricultural campaign is full of meaning for both the Soviet people and the people outside the border.

The government has marshalled imposing forces in an effort to ram through on schedule Malenkov's demand that consumer wants must be fully satisfied within two or three years.

This drive is important for the popularizing and solidifying of the Malenkov government. The goal is a prospering Soviet Union whose international authority would grow as its well-being increased internally.

10,000 Visited Stock Exchange

MONTREAL (CP)—The crowds passing daily rarely notice the pillared building housing the Montreal stock exchange and the adjoining building of the Canadian stock exchange (curb market). But more than 10,000 visitors have been "guests" of the two exchanges during the last two years.

A check of the "guest book" in which a signature is the only requirement for a visit to the galleries showed persons from all parts of the world had registered. There were more than 30 countries represented.

Visitors came from several South American countries, as well as many states in the United States, and from every province of Canada. Countries of origin included Russia, China, Egypt, India, Iraq and Australia.

INFOMATIVE PROJECT

Most of the visitors, of course, are Canadians. The Montreal exchanges during recent years have endeavored to acquaint a growing number of people with the physical and technical operations involved in buying and selling stocks.

Group tours now are arranged for such delegations as the staffs of numerous companies and groups of students from universities and high schools. Before these scheduled visits, illustrated explanatory booklets are usually provided such institutions.

The booklets give an idea of what questions may be usefully answered on various aspects of the whole intricate operations.

The general public is welcomed to the galleries overlooking the trading floors during trading hours, in the downtown business section on St. Francois Xavier street, a block west of Place d'Armes.

Railway Engineer Turned Robin Hood

SCHREIBER (CP)—This town about 100 miles east of Port Arthur has a locomotive engineer turned Robin Hood.

Frank Roen is believed to be the first man in this district to kill a full-grown bear with a bow and arrow. Frank has a wide interest in outdoor sports and recently bought a 60-pull hunting bow made of hickory, yew and lemon wood.

He makes his own broad arrow tips, which he says have more stopping power than a rifle.

Frank was with his family on an outing near White Sand lake when the family dog treed a cub bear. He tested his marksmanship by bringing down the cub in short order.

The dog discovered the older bear across the road and she approached. Frank admitted he was excited as he waited until the bear was a short distance away and brought it down.

at Quemont mine, a neighbor of Noranda mines in northwestern Quebec where already 1,700 men have quit their jobs. A strike is also a possibility at the Upper Canada mine in Kirkland Lake whose workers Saturday accepted a conciliation board report as a basis of further negotiations.

KEY ISSUES

The key issues in the dispute that has closed the six mines here —Broulan Reef, Preston East Dome, Hallnor, Delnite, McIntyre and Hollinger—are wages, working hours and union security. Officials of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) have charged that the mine operators have banded together in a "conspiracy to destroy unionism in the gold camps."

The one thing that civic leaders have feared most—miners leaving for employment elsewhere—is under way. Robert Allen, a moving company proprietor, estimated that three or four families a day are moving out of the area to southern Ontario. He said they were going to Sarnia, Toronto, Windsor, St. Catharines and Sudbury.

Hiring agents for mines in other districts are seeking men and Sunday night one was reported to have left with 100 miners for the Algoma Steel's Helen mine at Wawa.

Union welfare for the striking miners amounts to $14 a week in the form of a grocery voucher for a man and wife, with the voucher increased $4 for each child, plus $1 spending money.

Growing Reserve Of Gold Marks Shift Of Policy

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—In subterranean vaults, the government's stockpile of gold grows bigger by the month.

It reached a total value of $951,000,000 on Aug. 31 and likely will go higher — providing Canadian gold production is maintained.

The swelling stockpile represents a shift in government policy: to build up its coffers with more pure gold and fewer United States dollars in the official exchange fund which helps to support the strength of the Canadian dollar in the money markets of the world.

The policy change, says officials, was decided several years ago, but was enacted slowly because the government felt it would be foolish to rush in and buy large amounts of gold to increase its stockpile.

The decision was taken that the majority—if not all—of fresh Canadian production, offered to the mint at the official price of $35 (U.S.) a fine ounce, would be stored in Bank of Canada and other vaults, rather than offered for sale to the world's biggest buyer, the United States.

SEEN IN 1951

Some of the government's intentions became evident in 1951. In 1950, when the official reserves totalled $1,741,500,000, the government held $2 in U.S. dollars for every $1 in gold.

In 1951 when the reserves increased to $1,778,600,000, the government held almost as much of this in gold as in dollars.

Since 1950, holdings of pure gold have almost doubled, while holdings in American dollars have been trimmed sharply.

The gold stockpile last August reached $951,000,000, compared with $580,000,000 in 1950; the U.S. dollar holdings last August were $813,400,000, compared with $1,161,500,000 three years ago.

QUIET SHIFT

While this shift in emphasis from dollars to gold has been going on quietly, the strength of the reserves has been relatively well maintained.

They totalled $1,764,400,000 on Aug. 31, a little higher than the $1,755,700,000 on July 31 and about $100,000,000 below the all-time high of $1,866,800,000 on Jan. 31 last.

While this explains the growth of gold in the reserves, little explanation can be obtained for the government's decision to make the shift.

"It was felt that perhaps we were not holding enough gold for a country of this size," an official said, but declined to go elaborate."

The larger its holdings of gold, the better the government's position would be if the U.S. decided to raise the official price of $35 an ounce.

Officials denied that they had this in mind when they made the policy shift. And the U.S. has made clear time and again that it opposes a price boost.

Asks Wide Open Sale Of Liquor To Indians

OHSWEKEN, Ont. (CP) — Chief councillor James Powless of the Six Nations Indians told members of the Ontario legislature's select committee on Indian affairs Saturday the popular belief that a drinking Indian goes "stark, raving mad" is a lot of poppycock.

He told Welfare Minister Goodfellow and other members of the committee that sale of liquor to Indians should be "wide open."

Powless said he spent five years in the Canadian Army during the Second World War and had watched hundreds of his Indian brethren drink as much beer and liquor as they wanted. He said he never saw an Indian soldier "raving mad" on liquor.

Convertibility Not Feasible Yet, Says Bank

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Sterling convertibility, under which one could change British currency into dollars (or any other currency), is not yet a feasible proposition, says the monthly review of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

If it is to become feasible, the review adds, greater co-operation is required from the United States.

Such co-operation, to be adequate, must assure that Britain will have access to large credits if required; that there be a significant volume of dollar investment abroad and aid to underdeveloped countries; and that there be better opportunities to sell in the United States market.

In any event, the review states, "sterling convertibility is not a cure-all," for the present British objective is not aimed at convertibility in a full sense.

"It is limited to convertibility of sterling currently earned. There is no suggestion of allowing complete freedom of capital movements. Freedom of capital transfers would open up the possibility of almost unlimited drains on the sterling area's exchange reserves if people within and without the area saw fit to remove their funds. . . .

NOT OLD SYSTEM

"Convertibility would not mean a return to the traditional system of meeting a large United States deficit with a large overseas surplus. For it would not significantly alter the basic facts which have led Canada to turn increasingly to the United States market. . . .

"For the dollar countries, including Canada, the British plan for convertibility would not change the existing arrangements, since current sterling in their hands is already convertible.

"The difficulty is that their ability to earn sterling is severely limited by import controls against dollar goods. Thus Canada's direct interest is sterling convertibility would depend on the degree to which it was accompanied by a reduction in these import restrictions."

Canada and other dollar countries have a broader interest in the British plan "in that it would facilitate a freer system of world trade" and perhaps make such markets as those of western Europe more accessible.

Commission Denies

it did not specifically accuse India or any other member of responsibility for distributing the letter. The other members are Sweden, Switzerland, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

LETTERS SHOCK PoWs

Col. K. K. Hansen, a member of Hamblen's staff, said "great bales (of the letters) were distributed in every Chinese compound." He said some "shocked" anti-Red PoWs immediately destroyed their copies, which were written in Chinese and printed on Chinese rice paper.

Hamblen's written protest declared:

"While we are not aware of the language in which it originally was prepared, a careful analysis of the Chinese version has been made; and it appears that the over-all influence is unmistakably one of emphasis on the desirability of repatriation and on the assumption that the principle of free choice, of which the entire spirit of the terms of reference is based."

Hamblen said the letter "does not deviate materially from the literal wording of the armistice agreement . . . yet it definitely disregards the clear spirit thereof."

Hamblen added he assumed the unsigned letter was issued by the neutral commission because it began: "This is the neutral nations repatriation commission speaking to you."

LETTER'S TEXT

The letter to the PoWs continued:

"The reason you are here is to assure you of your freedom to exercise your right to be repatriated. We came here to save you, to protect you from any form of coercion."

Col. Hansen told reporters the repatriation commission and the Indian custodial force was not here "to save anyone."

He pointed out that in one paragraph the document referred to the prisoners' homelands as "the country to which you belong." He said there was nothing in the repatriation agreement which said the prisoners belonged to anyone.

The letter to the prisoners, referring to explanations, said "you are all absolutely, by necessity, required to attend."

Hansen said the Allied command knew nothing of this requirement.

India, which probably would cast the deciding vote on the repatriation commission, apparently has been feeling its way in an effort to draw up a set of rules for interviewing prisoners that would arouse minimum disagreement.

But South Korean government officials have charged often that in any showdown the Indians would line up with the Communist members of the commission.

Encyclopedia Of Peerage Will Soon Be Completed

LONDON (Reuters)—The end is at last in sight for "The Complete Peerage," an encyclopedia of Britain's titled families begun more than 40 years ago.

The first volume in this record of English nobility was published in 1910. The Saint Catherine Press now has published the 12th volume, "Skelmersdale to Towton."

Miss Barbara Moore, manager of the press, has been with the effort since the beginning. She started as a secretary when she was 17 and hopes to see the next and final volume polished before she retires.

"The complete peerage" contains all the scandals—as well as the distinctions—of the peerage. For example, the latest volume reports such items as the 18th-century Earl of Sutherland being described by Jonathan Swift as "a blundering, rattle-pated, drunken sot."

Or there was Lord Teynham, who bought his peerage from James I for £10,000. A later Lord Teynham gambled a large part of his interitance away. And then there was a Marquess of Thomond who had the reputation of being a "six-bottle man."

Work on the "complete peerage" has been hindered by financial difficulties. The last substantial grant was Lord Nuffield's £60,000 gift in 1940.

Some of the original subscribers are still alive and they are entitled to each volume at the 1910 price of one guinea ($2.94 today). But most of the 1,000 present subscribers pay three guineas.

The Manchester Guardian even sees the work as a dollar-earner. It said today: "It is expected that American libraries, which are sometimes reluctant to take encyclopediac works before they are complete, will be eager buyers when the final volume is ready."

Big Bonus

SALISBURY, England (CP) — Philip Reeves, 77, was fired for sleeping on duty 40 years ago, after one night as a bank watchman. Now he has received a £43 cheque. He had refused to collect two weeks' pay offered at the time, and the money has been gathering interest through the years.

Sterner Test

NOTTINGHAM, England (CP)—Lawyer Walter Raeburn told summer school students it sickened him to watch witnesses taking a perfunctory oath on the Bible. He favored abolishing the Bible oath and giving witnesses an admonition that perjurers face heavy fines.

New Iron Ore

Lapointe and Awater made a second seaplane flight two weeks later and staked 10 claims, and on another flight a fortnight after that, took along a Hungarian-Canadian geologist friend, Stefan Melihercsik, to use his staking licenses and get his professional opinion of their showing.

They formed a three-partner syndicate and went shopping for an interested buyer.

Iron Ore Co., which is already developing vast iron holdings in the Knob Lake country of Labrador, didn't take long to show interest in the find, after seeing the assay sheet, and gave the syndicate a 20-year option on the stakings. They named the showing the "Pointwater" field.

Ore have no intention of dropping the option, since a press conference release by Quebec's Premier Maurice Duplessis on Friday said that from 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 tons of new iron ore had been discovered near the Quebec-Labrador boundary.

We found it that day shrouded in fog below the tops of the rugged ridges. On our return flight the ceilings had lifted enough to enable me to take a photo of the range.

The importance of this new discovery changes the ore picture of the famous Labrador iron trough, in indicating that the riches swing from the west side of Ungava Bay, southwest, and now northeast. It places a new field 80 miles from the St. Lawrence River's North Shore at Havre St. Pierre, instead of the 390-odd miles that will next year be tapped by the Iron Ore Company Railway, now building.

The news was officially released cannily at freeze-up time in that latitude when the rat race of a staking rush will not be possible for several weeks, after deep snows cover the country.

Toronto Prices Rise Slightly

TORONTO (CP) — Prices rose slightly in early afternoon stock market today as activity continued at last week's sluggish pace.

Industrials, base metals and western oils showed increases on the exchange's 1 p.m. indexes. Golds took a small drop.

Papers, refining oils and manufactures led the industrials in the biggest rise, less than a point from last week's closing figure. Utilities and finances were mixed with no great changes. Steels, although lightly traded were the weakest industrials.

Golds dropped with the seniors and holding companies mixed and the juniors showing some strength.

Base metals had gained one-third of a point in the early afternoon, climbing slowly. Seniors were strong with juniors mixed. Except for Falconbridge's 50-cent drop, other changes were in the pennies.

Western oils had a few more losers than gainers. Uraniums and New Brunswick base metals mixed with slight gains. Gunnar led with a 20-cent rise.

The exchange's 1 p.m. index showed industrials up .88 at 301.42, golds down .36 at 68.13, base metals up .36 at 139.90 and western oils up .65 at 86.31.

Yugoslavia Gives Italian Bid Flat Rejection

BELGRADE (AP) — Yugoslavia flatly and formally rejected today the proposal by Italian Premier Giuseppe Pella for a plebiscite of the people immediately affected to determine future control over the strategic Adriatic seaport of Trieste.

The Yugoslav government laid down its opposition in an official note delivered to the Italian ministry here. It noted that it had rejected a similar proposal in March, 1952, in a communication to which the Italian government never replied.

The terms of the note follow the same line of argument which President Tito presented in a speech two weeks ago—that a plebiscite at this time would be unfair on the grounds that Italy has pushed Yugoslavs out of the Triest earea since the end of the Frist World War.

In its note, the Yugoslav foreign office contended, as did Tito, that a plebiscite would become possible only if the 'consequences of this denationalization" are corrected and the Yugoslav Croats and Slovenes living in the area are given equal rights with the Italian population.

In a speech in Ruma, Yugoslavia Sunday, Tito pointedly failed to mention the seven-year-old quarrel. Instead, he concentrated on domestic issues. Some observers thought the Yugoslav leader might be anxious not to upset anything being done under cover to ease the tension surrounding Trieste.

India May Remove Troops From Korea

SRINAGAR, Kashmir (AP) — Gen. Maharaj Rajendras Inhji, commander-in-chief of the Indian army, indicated today that India may pull her troops out of Korea if the political conference called for by the armistice is not held.

Explaining to reporters that "we are not expected to stay in Korea forever," he quickly added that "we have taken on a commitment in Korea and we must see it through."

Indian troops are guarding war prisoners who do not want to return to their home countries.

Export Hydro

VIENNA (AP)—Austria began exporting electrical power today to neighboring Italy over a 34-mile high-tension line crossing the eastern Tyrol from the Alpine town of Lienz, Austria, to Pelo in northern Italy's Dolomites. The line will export 25,000,000 kilowatt hours a year.

CO-PILOT BILL AWATER

CANADA'S LUCKIEST BUSH PILOTS, during a routine charter flight between Seven Islands, P.Q., and Goose Bay, Labrador, in mid-June of this year, discovered an important new iron range 110 miles north-east of Seven Islands and 80 miles north of the Lower St. Lawrence River. The new "Pointwater" discovery, above, is optioned by a large company which is spending millions developing a mine 390 miles north-west of Seven Islands at Knob Lake. The two pilots, together with their third syndicate partner, geologist Stafah Melihercsik, may share a million dollars.

Urges Builders Give Leadership

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N.Y. (CP) Henri R. Bastien of Montreal, president of the Canadian Builders Supply Association, said today that industry should give leadership in making it easier for Canadians to own their own homes.

Mr. Bastien, in an address prepared for the association's annual convention, set out these objectives for the average Canadian home: 1. Cost between $10,000 and $12,000; 2. Down payment of not more than $1,000; 3. Mortage payments plus municipal taxes not exceeding $65 a month; 4. Designed to house the average Canadian family of three children, with a garage or planned so that one can be added.

"The creation of a general housing program throughout Canada based on this outline is not alone the responsibility of government agencies," Mr. Bastien said.

"All three levels of government—municipal, provincial and federal—have an important part in such a program, but all segments of our community should be actively concerned. . . .

"Because this problem is so closely related to our own business, we in the building materials business should be giving some active leadership to this sort of thing."

Hold 90th Annual Harvest Thanksgiving

ROSENEATH — (ENS) — St. James' Anglican Church was decorated on Sunday with flowers, fruits and vegetables for the 90th annual Harvest Thanksgiving service.

At 9 a.m. Holy Communion was celebrated by the rector, the Rev. A. J. Patstone. There was a junior choir and Mrs. Frank Brown was at the organ.

The evening service was also in charge of the rector. The choir of St. George's Anglican Church, Hastings, led the singing and Miss Della Plant was at the organ. Miss Margaret Baker sang a solo.

Both services were largely attended.

Mr. E. G. Brown, licensed lay reader, Peterborough, assisted at the evening service. Mr. Brown occupied the pulpit of this church for some time prior to the incumbency of the present rector.

United Counties Plan Immunization Clinics

COBOURG — (ENS) — Fall immunization programe of the Northumberland and Durham counties health unit begins Tuesday, September 29 coinciding with Canada's 11th National Immunization Week, September 27th to October 3rd.

The schedule provides for immunization clinics every two years in all rural schools. In this category are 200 schools in 17 municipalities. Twelve schools in seven urban municipalities are visited for immunization clinics annually during the winter.

This fall, doctors and nurses will be visiting 49 schools in Alnwick, Haldimand, Cavan and Manvers townships. Mothers may bring their infants and pre-school children to these clinics to receive protection against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and smallpox.

Dr. Charlotte Horner, medical officer of health of the unit, points out that since the first use of diptheria toxoid in 1924, there has been a great reduction in the number of cases and deaths from the disease. For example, in 1921 there were 13,239 cases of diptheria with 1,297 death, while in 1951 there were only 253 cases and 37 deaths.

For further information, it is suggested by the health unit that parents consult their own doctor or a member of the health unit staff.

Pope Condemns Birth Control

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—Pope Pius, in a letter published today, has condemned birth control as a means of fighting over-population in the world.

His views were set forth in a letter written by Msgr. Giovanni Battista Montini, pro-secretary of the Vatican's secretariat of state, to the "Social Week of Italian Catholics" meeting at Palermo.

Over-population is "not so much a disorder caused by nature as by the will of men," the letter said.

"It is a crime—which cannot be justified in any way for reasons of the state or under the pretext of eugenics—to attack life on its road from the parents to the cradle."

The letter said efforts to re-establish the balance between means of livelihood and population growth must aim at "educating the conscience of men to the value and responsibility of human life, promoting a more equitable distribution of wealth, exploiting nature's resources in ever more rational ways, and protecting the family in everything concerning its inviolable rights and the exercise of its high function."

Mrs. Kate Aitken And South Africa

Mrs. Kate Aitken, the well-known radio speaker, visited South Africa early this year, and she has since made several speeches to Canadian audiences in which she has expressed strong opinions about that country, and about its Premier, Dr. Malan. Mrs. Aitken was not in South Africa for long, and it may be thought that her opinions are ill-founded. Certainly that is the belief of the South African Information Office in Ottawa, which has sent us a pamphlet in which it quotes from reports of what Mrs. Aitken has said, and then gives what it assures us are the facts of the case. If the Information Office is correct in what it says, we must commend it for the moderation with which it has treated Mrs. Aitken.

* * *

The most damaging statements made by Mrs. Aitken appear to have been based upon an interview which she says she had with Dr. Malan. She quoted him as expressing startlingly inhumane views about the status of the black Africans, and great bitterness and animosity toward the South African Jews. She said that she had prayed with Dr. Malan, and that his prayer was a directive to God. "He gave God a good briefing, laid it on the line, so to speak, about what God should do in his country," she is quoted as saying. The picture Mrs. Aitken has painted of Dr. Malan is a decidedly unflattering one! But the South African Information Office says that Mrs. Aitken never had an interview with Dr. Malan and that her report of it is a fabrication from beginning to end.

* * *

We shall wait for a statement from Mrs. Aitken on this matter. If she cannot deny what has been said against her, and if she cannot bring indisputable evidence that she has been giving a faithful report of a real interview to her hearers, she will lose the confidence of many of those people who now attach importance to what she says, and she will have done a great disservice to her country. Nothing that she has said up to now has effectively countered the South African charges.

* * *

The South African Information Office has this to say, at the end of its indictment of Mrs. Aitken:

> There is something to be learned from Mrs. Aitken's case. It is this: that the outside world is prepared today to accept without question almost any condemnation of the Union. Irresponsible commentators have so conditioned the public attitude that condemnation has become a habit of mind. It is a habit, moreover, which is not resisted; the explanation being, perhaps, that it seems to provide a self-satisfying indication of man's inhumanity to man—of the humanity of White men outside Africa to Black men inside Africa.
>
> The sincere humanitarianism of much of the original criticism has been converted to serve the purposes of sentimentalism and sensation. The most reckless statements can now be made with impunity: their improbability is no longer a deterrent. The critical faculty of the audience has been deadened by the persistently repeated and distorted presentation of one side of the case only. There is little inclination left to reach a fair and independent judgement.

* * *

We are not impressed by this style of argument. Mrs. Aitken may have said things about South Africa which were not true, and she may have claimed an interview with Dr. Malan which she did not have. But if people were ready to believe her, it is because too many well-authenticated reports of what is happening in South Africa, which its Information Office has not attempted to deny, had prepared the public for Mrs. Aitken's sentimental extravagances. We have carried such reports in this paper, written by Canadians, and by correspondents from the London Observer. These reports were not written by sob-sisters, or women's club orators, but by trained reporters of fact.

* * *

If Canada seems to be poking its nose into South Africa's business, we are sorry, but while Canada and South Africa belong to what the Information Bureau calls "the same sisterhood of nations", that is likely to happen. If Mrs. Aitken has been vain and foolish, the South African Information Bureau has got hold of a very good thing, but it should not ride it to death. There is plenty of information about South Africa to be gained from other sources than Mrs. Aitken, and we have been receiving it and publishing it for years There is no plot against South Africa; only a keen interest in a situation which arouses concern in the free world.

The Undismayed U.S. Democrats

United States political history shows that when one of the two major parties takes a bad beating at the polls, several years are required for recovery and a return to fighting form. This was demonstrated in 1920, when Republican Senator Harding trampled on Democratic Governor Cox, with large majorities in the Electoral College and in both Houses of Congress. The Democrats were so groggy they were even unable to capitalize on the Teapot Dome oil scandal, which broke in 1924, after the President's death. The roles were reversed when Democrat Franklin Roosevelt trounced Republican President Herbert Hoover, and all the Republicans could do, as cartoonist Peter Arno put it, was go to the newsreels and boo "that man in the White House."

The Democratic defeat last year, however, was different. Events of last week indicate that the party was only slightly bruised, despite the fact that it absorbed the second worst beating since the Civil War (the worst being the defeat of Alfred E. Smith). Quiescence since then led some observers to believe that the Democrats were suffering the effects of the defeat, but at a two-day celebration in Chicago last week remarkable evidence of the party's powers of recuperation was given. There were demonstrations of vigour and unity matching those of the early Roosevelt regimes.

The main reason for this quick recovery appears to be satisfaction within the party that Adlai Stevenson is remaining as its titular head. He is active in that role, which is an unusual development in U.S. politics, and his report on his world tour was acclaimed at Chicago and throughout the nation. Furthermore, he is proving most acceptable to the South, and there are indications that the breach between that section and the remainder of the party may be closed. And Mr. Truman, whose legislation caused the breach and who was thought to differ strongly with Mr. Stevenson on certain points, hailed the latter as "the number one Democrat in the United States."

It is impossible to interpret the significance of this development as it might apply to next year's elections for the Senate and House of Representatives. It may reasonably be concluded, however, that if Democratic legislators are infected with the vigour and unity displayed at Chicago, the course of Republican legislation will be far less smooth in the immediate future.

Pinning Down The Human Soul

Although most of the proceedings of 19th International Physiological Congress, held at Montreal in the last week of August, were beyond our understanding, we were interested in a typical outburst by the ten-member Russian delegation; Dr. K. M. Byokov of Leningrad made a speech in which he gave the highest praise to the great Russian scientist, Ivan Petrovich Pavlov, who died in 1936; Pavlov's work, he said, began "a new epoch in the history of natural science and the humanities." This may very well be true; we have no right to express an opinion. But we dissent sharply from Dr. Byokov when he runs down the late Sigmund Freud in order to exalt Pavlov; and when he calls Freud's opinions "reactionary and mystical," because they support the ancient idea that man has something which may be called a soul, we think that he is talking through his hat.

What most of us know about Pavlov is that he achieved great renown in the world of science by his discovery of "conditioned reflexes". The classic example of a conditioned reflex is this: a dog is fed for a few weeks whenever a bell is rung; after a while the dog's mouth will water and it will show signs of hunger whenever the bell is rung, whether it is a feeding-time or not. This is a very crude layman's illustration, but it will serve. Pavlov built a remarkable edifice upon his discovery, and physiologists honour his name. But they do not accept the notion that most of mankind's behaviour is founded upon conditioned reflexes, or that a human being works in a wholly calculable manner, like a machine. We do not believe that Pavlov ever thought anything of the kind.

Pavlov, by the way, was a lifelong opponent of communism, and openly made fun of it in his lectures. But his prestige was so great that no action was ever taken against him.

Freud, as everyone knows, sought to discover the workings of the mind, and particularly those areas which lie below the level of consciousness; he attributed many patterns of human behaviour to buried, intensely powerful, childhood impressions which found release into consciousness in disguised forms. Although many of his ideas have been questioned by later psychologists his basic findings have never been successfully challenged, and he must be regarded as one of the great psychological pioneers.

How typical of modern Russian thinking to try to glorify Pavlov by blackguarding Freud. But also, how unscientific! Freud would have had an answer; indeed, anyone who wonders what he would have said may find in his writings, after 1917, calm but trenchant comment upon the origin and pathology of revolutions, not dissimilar in effect from the things which Pavlov used to say to his students.

Musical Notes

By PETER PIPER

MUCH has been talked concerning the relative importance of heredity and environment in the formation of genius. It is one of those never-ending topics that seem to engender more heat than light. This heredity-versus-environme... quabble has even become a political issue in these days, and Stalin himself shortly before his death strode into the arena of biology and laid down the correct "Party Line".

✧ ✧ ✧

FORTUNATELY for the continuance of this controversy the question can never be settled satisfactorily until men have found out how to live their lives over again. In any case it appears at times that even the combined forces of heredity and environment are of little use in determining the character of man. The famous Duke of Wellington apparently had no music in him at all, yet his father was a very accomplished musician. He was an Irish peer by the name of Lord Mornington, and a prominent figure in the musical life of Dublin during the latter half of the eighteenth century. Evidently the Irish capital cut a better figure musically in the eighteenth century than it does today, for it was there in 1744 that the first world performance of Handel's 'Messiah' took place, and ladies were requested to remove their hoops (from their crinoline skirts) in anticipation of the large crowd expected.

✧ ✧ ✧

AT THE time of the first performance of 'Messiah' Lord Mornington was nine years old, but he had already given signs of musical ability and was considered as something of an infant prodigy. He is said to have beaten time to any music he heard "while still in his nurse's arm".

✧ ✧ ✧

HIS father decided to build an organ in his private chapel, the boy promising to acquire the necessary technique by the time the instrument was ready. We are told that in less than eighteen months young Mornington sat down and extemporized a fugue, to the amazement of his father as well as of others. He wrote a number of glees, a type of simple partsong in vogue in those days. Perhaps he is best remembered by an Anglican chant which is still in frequent use "in Quires and Places where they Sing". It may be a surprise to some choristers to know that they have for some time been singing a chant written by the father of the Iron Duke.

✧ ✧ ✧

LAST week I had occasion to congratulate Mr. F. G. Mann, organist and choirmaster of St. John's Anglican Church, Peterborough, on the completion of his thirtieth year of service. I have not heard of any other organist in this area with a comparable length of tenure, but there is a lady in North Wales who has just celebrated her FIFTIETH anniversary as organist of the Presbyterian Church in Wrexham.

✧ ✧ ✧

SIR Walter Alcock, that fine organist, whose clean technique and impeccable taste were a standard and an inspiration to those who heard him, joined the staff of the Royal College of Music in 1893, and was still teaching there up to the beginning of the last war. He was broadcasting organ recitals shortly after the war, when he was in his eighties, and it was evident that he still retained a good deal of his former spryness and dexterity. Amongst his many distinctions he had the honour of playing at the coronation of three monarchs. My chief impression of his playing is one of great smoothness and ease, combined with scrupulously correct part-playing. Throughout his busy life he found time to indulge in the fascinating hobby of model trains. He wrote a certain amount of church music of impeccable workmanship, though lacking in individuality of expression.

✧ ✧ ✧

I HAVE little doubt that the longevity of organists is due largely to the beneficial exercise of pedalling. A good hour of practice at the console has the same tonic effect as a brisk country walk and should appeal to us moderns, now that the automobile has made the roads as dangerous as the front line in modern warfare.

✧ ✧ ✧

CONSIDERABLE interest has been aroused in this country by the announcement of an orchestral concert of Canadian music to be held in Carnegie Hall, New York, on October 16, with Leopold Stokowski conducting his own recording symphony orchestra. The committee in charge of arrangements for the concert is headed by Carl Haverlin, President of BMI Canada, Ltd. and of Broadcast Music Inc., and Kenneth Sobel, President of Station CHML, Hamilton, Ont. BMI Canada has done much to stimulate the acceptance of living Canadian composers, and Miss Jean Howson of BMI Canada was recently awarded a citation in New York for her work in this direction. Miss Howson, who is a native of Peterborough, has recently left BMI Canada, and it is hoped that she will have more scope for her talents in a wider field.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE selection of the works to be performed at the New York concert is being made by a committee which includes Sir Ernest MacMillan, Edward Johnson, Claude Champagne, Wilfred Pelletier, Walter Piston, Aaron Copland, William Schuman, Roy Harris and Henry Cowell. All of these (with the exception of Mr. Johnson) being composers of proven merit. The first five named are Canadians, the other four are Americans.

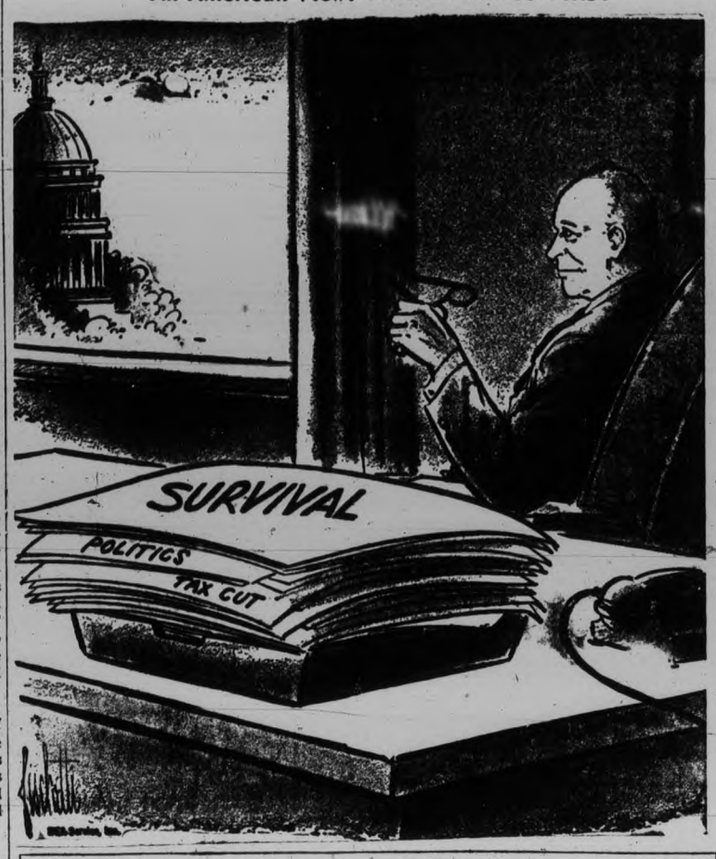
✧ ✧ ✧

AN announcement of the works selected by the committee was to have been made "in mid-September". Presumably the delay in announcing the results of the selection is due to the large number of manuscripts submitted. If so, this is a healthy sign for Canadian music. The composer, ill-paid as he is, is still the king of musicians. The symbols that he scratches on ruled paper will go on existing long after the tones of the most celebrated performer have ceased to be heard except in the pale and secondhand form of the gramophone record.

✧ ✧ ✧

IF THE Americans are interested enough in Canadian music to go to the trouble of putting on a large and expensive concert in Carnegie Hall it is incumbent on us to get to know something about Canadian composers ourselves. The composer lives (or exists) by royalties on the sale of his works and by performing rights. Unless he has private means he must in nearly every case supplement his earnings by some other type of work that takes him away from composing. The younger group of Canadian composers are producing work that has aroused considerable interest in countries that imagined Canada as being totally barren of musical activity. It is too early to talk of a distinctive Canadian style: the heady influence of Schoenberg is still incompletely digested in English-speaking Canada, and Quebec is heavily indebted to Paris. But these composers of ours deserve our encouragement.

An American View: FIRST THINGS FIRST



Check-Off For Farmers?

(SASKATOON STAR-PHOENIX)

IN 1945 Mr. Justice I. C. Rand of the Supreme Court of Canada was appointed to arbitrate a dispute over union security between the Ford Motor Company of Windsor and its employees. He resolved it with a formula which, while rejecting the employees' demand for the union shop required that all workers in the Ford plant, whether union members or not, should pay union dues under a compulsory check-off system.

The Rand formula made Canadian labour history. It was generally regarded as a reasonable method of meeting labour's legitimate demand for security (including the security of union finances) without denying the equally legitimate objections of management to the closed shop. But Mr. Justice Rand himself expressed doubts as to the applicability of his formula to industrial labour-management relations generally. He must be astounded to learn that the Saskatchewan Farmers Union is now seeking to have the fomula applied to agriculture.

✧ ✧ ✧

His astonishment is shared by this newspaper and, we suspect, by a good many other people. For one thing, it is difficult to see that the farmers of Saskatchewan and the workers in an industrial plant have much in common when it comes to organization for the improvement of working condtions. The industrial employee works for someone else, for the owner of his plant or, if it is under corporate ownership, for its officers. The farmer can find his employer simply by looking in a mirror. True, the farmer cannot establish the size of his income simply by talking to himself; but neither can he fix it by bargaining with his employer. In a very real sense the farmer works for the people who consume the food he produces. Some of these are fellow Canadians. Others are scattered across the globe. If the farmer wants an official intermediary between himself and the consumer, an "employer," he must look to government. We find disturbing the possibility that, because farmers are members of an organization which calls itself a union, they may come to regard themselves as employees—especially employees of the government. That way leads to the graveyard of independence, to socialized agriculture.

The Hunting Boom

(OTTAWA CITIZEN)

A THREE-QUARTER-PAGE advertisement in The Citizen the other day was chock full of nothing but hunting rifles, carbines and shot guns. It represented a sure sign that the hunting season has arrived and a sign too that interest in hunting is growing.

Statistics from the fish and wildlife division of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests bear this out. In 1940, for instance, the department issued some 20,000 resident deer licences; in 1950, the figure leaped to more than 72,000. Camp licences for the same period were up from 310 to 800. Duck and partridge licence figures showed the same trend.

Naturally, the sale of sporting guns has kept pace with the licence increase. Everything from the .22 calibre rifle to the 12-gauge shotgun is being sold over the counter in great numbers. Prices in most cases have dropped in the last two years after an earlier rise. This year, some rifles are down as much as 10 to 15 per cent in price compared with 1951.

Sporting rifles have a character and a history all their own and this is sometimes hinted at by the numerals describing the gun in question. The Winchester 73, subject of a recent motion picture, dates from 1873; the Winchester 94, a carbine, was developed in 1894. For the British Small Arms 30.06, the "30" indicates the diameter of the bullet and the ".06" the year of development, 1906.

Why is hunting on the upgrade? Have full employment and bigger pay envelopes made it possible for more people to buy the equipment? Are more people anxious to get out-of-doors to toughen up after the ease of city living? Or are they working off their emotional frustration in sorties into the bushland? Whatever the answer there is one thing certain: the need for emphasis on conservation of game is greater than ever now that hordes of happy hunters are on the prowl.

Maritime Individualism

(Halifax Chronicle-Herald)

There is a spirit of independence and self-sufficiency about the Lunenburgs of this part of Canada. Perhaps their spirit is a reflection of a certain yet undefinable something which seems to cling to peoples who live on islands or near-islands. Such people, wherever one may look, always seem to find an individualistic and internal strength which enables them to stand up with credit against the vagaries of fortune and against the gibes and comments, on occasion, of "mainland folk" who have delusions of their own superiority.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And in the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith his spirit was troubled, and his sleep brake from him. Then the king commanded to call magicians, and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to shew the king his dreams. So they came and stood before the king . . .

Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriack. O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation.

The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, the thing is gone from me: if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ye shall be cut in pieces, and your houses shall be made a dunghill . . .

Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went in and said thus unto him, Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will shew unto the king the interpretation.

Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, shew unto the king: but there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these. . .

Thou, O king, sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible. This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay. Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth. (Dan. 2: 1, 2, 4, 5, 24, 27, 28, 31-35.)

✧ ✧ ✧

And the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low :and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. And the idols he shall utterly abolish. (Isa. 2: 17, 18.)

Not Above The Law

(New York Times)

Joseph R. McCarthy and his followers, hangers-on and coat-tail riders have long assumed that if a Senatorial inquisitor is vociferously opposed to communism he is released from the obligations of fair play, integrity and truthfulness that bind lesser men. The Senator from Wisconsin has now taken another step. He has arrogated to himself the right to make public a document, issued by the Department of the Army, that was "restricted" in the interests of national security. In making this release Mr. McCarthy gave two different and inconsistent versions of the fact. The public, to which Mr. McCarthy has offered to submit the question of whether he is or is not above the law, may wish to decide also the relation of his loyalty to the truth.

There are many millions of people in this country who hate communism just as much as Mr. McCarthy does — probably close to the total adult population of the country They don't assume that hating communism gives them a right to cheat, misrepresent, bully their neighbours and ignore the laws of the land. Sooner or later Mr. McCarthy will have to accept those limitations, too.

Camels Bring Prosperity To Oasis Of Bou Saada

J. H. Crang & Co. was founded by Mr. Crang in 1929. The firm, whose head office is located at 40 Adelaide Street, West, Toronto, has two seats on the Toronto Stock Exchange and is a member of the Montreal Stock Exchange, the Canadian Stock Exchange, the Vancouver Stock Exchange, the Calgary Stock Exchange, and the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. It conducts a general commission business, specializing in investment accounts, and also acts as broker for numerous other dealers.

The firm operates a private wire system to its four branches and eleven correspondent brokers in various Ontario centres as well as a direct connection to New York and Montreal.

Mr. Crang is a director of the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair and operates his own farm, "Glenville Farms", west of Newmarket. During the war, he was Deputy Director-General, Army Technical Development Board. *

WASHINGTON—For their new-found prosperity, inhabitants of the desert oasis of Bou Saada in Algeria credit an old friend—the camel.

The upsurge in tourist trade in this northern Sahara village, 155 miles south of Algiers, began seven years ago when enterprising Arab innkeepers took the camel out of the caravan and put it under the visitor.

Bou Saada's population has since risen from 4,000 to 10,000. Four new hotels have been built. Tri-weekly flights from Paris to the near-by Biskra airfield are filled.

CAMELBACK LESSONS

It costs $2 per day to hire a camel at Bou Saada. The fee includes instruction in the techniques of mounting and dismounting and the services of a guide. The latter's duties are twofold: to keep camels awake and to prevent picnickers from getting lost in the dunes.

In the evening, when Bou Saada's "ships of the desert" are bedded down in their stables, vacationers feats at a diffa—an Arab banquet — or watch the Ouled Nails dancing girls.

At the diffa, usually held in a tent, guests sit on richly carpeted floors and eat from two-foot-high tables. Barbecued lamb, roasted on outdoor spits, is eaten with the fingers. It is served with couscous, a dish of highly spiced mixed vegetables piled on rolled wheat. Dessert may be either zlabiaa, a type of pretzel filled with honey and fried in fat, or pomegranates the size of grapefruit.

The Ouled Nails mountain tribe to the south is renowned for its performers. The girls wear bright costumes with heavy silver waistbands. Around their necks they carry their fortunes in gold coins strung together with black ribbon.

WATER IS VITAL

Like all oases, Bou Saada owes its existence to the water which flows from a series of springs on the western rim of the village. Using an intricate network of dams and ditches, the Arabs have been able to wrest some 4,000 acres of fertile land from the desert.

Truck gardens carpet shaded plots beneath the palms. Apple, almond and pear orchards thrive. The town is the market centre of an area larger than the eastern shore of Maryland.

The vast North African desert is not always hot and dry. In the months of December, January and February, Bou Saada is deluged by violent rainstorms. Gullies surrounding the aosis are turned overnight into torrents, but the water soo nsinks into the porous soil.

Sand, not heat, is the scourge of Bou Saada. Tons of it have been blown from a nearby range of dunes into the northern edge of the village. Residents fear that some day the shifting sands may choke the springs and wipe out the entire oasis.

Windsor City Workers Accept New Contract

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Board of works employees at nearby Riverside, who were to have gone on strike at midnight Sunday, Saturday night accepted a contract proposed by town council at an emergency meeting.

The strike deadline was set 10 days ago when council turned down the employees' demands for a union shop. This demand was granted Saturday night when council met with officials of local 205, Municipal Employees Union (TLC).

The employees also were granted a wage increase of five cents an hour, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1953, with an additional five cent hourly increase next Jan. 1.

Five Welland Women Hurt As Car Rolls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Five Welland women were admitted to hospital here early Sunday after their car rolled over in a ditch on the Thorold Stone road about two miles west of Niagara Falls.

Police said the six were on their way to work at a district canning factory. The driver, Austra Barkams, suffered broken ribs and a possible fractured sternum.

The others injured were Frances Syabat, Abaraba Lipak, Barb Kirkoick and Val Tarksems.

Attempted Murder Charge Follows 'Shoot-Up'

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Thomas A. Elliot of Lucknow was charged Sunday with attempted murder in connection with the shooting up of a farm home near here Saturday.

Police said Elliot is also believed to be one of a quartet that attempted to rob an Embro co-operative store earlier in the day.

A second man, Robert Longchamps, 19, of Ottawa, stationed at the Wolseley army barracks at London, Ont., has been charged with breaking and entering in connection with the attempted robbery.

Police said Elliot was arrested at Wingham and brought here for questioning.

The farm home of George McBurney was riddled Saturday with bullets fired from a Sten gun. McBurney said he answered a knock at his door and found a man standing with a gun. He said he slammed the door shut and ran to an inside room and lay on the floor. He escaped unhurt when the man fired 17 shots into his home. His dog was killed.

The shooting occurred shortly after constable Cecil Pollock surprised four men robbing the Oxford farmers' co-operative store at Embro. Pollock said two of the men fled in a car leaving one behind and a fourth man escaped on foot.

Meanwhile, motorist Arthur F. Doy of Woodstock reported to police that he was forced to drive a hitch-hiker from Embro to a service station outside Stratford Saturday. He said the hitch-hiker left him at the station and warned him to "turn around and keep going."

Police said they have found a Sten gun with 17 shots fired from it lying in a ditch near here.

Canadian Reds Reach Low Ebb, Says Croll

HANOVER, Ont. (CP) — Communism in Canada today is staggering towards oblivion, David Croll, Liberal member of Parliament for Toronto Spadina, told district C of the Canadian Legion here Sunday.

Addressing more than 600 veterans, Mr. Croll said:

"The low ebb to which communism has fallen in this country is not because of decreased effort on the part of its propagandists, but because we Canadians have gone a long way towards eliminating the discontent upon which the communist ideology thrives."

Orfuns Down Cobourg Ghosts In 13-3 Football Fixture To Keep Atop ORFU Group

Playing smart, methodical football before a hefty grid crowd in Cobourg on Saturday afternoon, the Peterborough Orfuns downed the Galloping Ghosts by 13-3 to stay in front of their ORFU intermediate "A" group race. It was their sixth win in as many starts this season and the second Cobourg loss to Tony Kotowski's crew. Orfuns have now beaten each of the other three clubs in the group twice at the halfway mark of the schedule. Toronto Marauders come here Wednesday night for a loop fixture under the lights in Morrow Park, and Orfuns are away next Saturday to play the Raiders in Oshawa.

AN EARLY LEAD

The powerful Peterborough pack got a single point in the first quarter on Don Bark's kick to deadline. They made it 7-0 at the half on a converted touchdown by Bill Huntley, and the same player added six more points in the third with a converted major. Cobourg's three points came in the third on a field goal by Art Jones, neither side counting in the close fourth frame.

Orfuns had 12 first downs to 10 for the losers. Jim Milligan threw 11 neat passes, but just three were completed. Don Hatt tried 17 in a desperate attempt of Ghosts to get the victory, but only completed four. The only costly fumble was by Cobourg, th Orfuns recovering. Don Bark had a good margin in kicking over Jones. The visitors' line outplayed Ghosts most of the way, and the backfield clicked better, though the Ghosts drove dangerously at times in the last half. They had several fine scoring chances ruined by smart Orfun interceptions on passes.

KICKED A POINT

After a neat Reeves' runback in the first quarter, Orfuns drove on bucks by Jensen and Huntley. Later, a Jones' lateral to Sillers got eight but they lost on downs. Naismith took a long pass from Milligan after Groves got six on a reverse, and Don McGillis took another good pass. Seale then smothered the passer and Bark kicked a point. Huntley and Brioux were driving at the whistle.

Bark intercepted a pass in the second and, following a series of bucks and a kick, Beatty tackled a Ghost for a big loss. Berry ran back the Jones' kick 10, Jensen knifed for five, Huntley got yards but they were stopped cold a few yards from a major, and a pass gamble didn't pay off, Orfuns losing possession. Alexander went for five and Huntley got Reeves for a loss. Jerry McGillis had a 15-yard runback, and they rolled again, Huntley, Jensen, Brioux and Groves working it right to a yard one, Huntley going over on a handout, and then booting the convert.

Ghosts swept up early in the third after Alexander's runback and plunges by Reeves and Sillers, plus a Petes' penalty, but Jerry McGilis stopped them with a pass interception. Jensen got six and Bark got away a real long kick. Hatt then hit Hircock with a lengthy pass, Reeves and Alexander moved the sticks and Magee reeled off 10 on a reverse. But they were stopped cold 11 yards out and Jones had to settle for a placement kick. Sillers later intercepted a pass and Reeves went for a first down. However, Berry pounced on a Cobourg fumble and Orfuns were off again. Groves went 15 on a reverse, a penalty was given Cobourg for roughing, Jensen, Huntley and Brioux kept forging forward and Huntley romped over for another major which he converted for the final score.

McIntyre got Hatt for a loss on an attempted pass in the fourth but play was mostly in Orfuns' area. They tried many passes but missed the mark usually. Jensen intercepted one, Berry later grabbed another pass try, and Bark got one to break the Ghosts' hearts when they were well into paydirt. Fowler and Russelle were the main Petes' ground-gainers in the fourth as Alexander, Reeves, Magee and Sillers led the desperate and dangerous Cobourg attack in the air and along the ground. Those interceptions by an alert Orfuns pass defence beat them in the keen fourth quarter. Blair Thomson missed this game owing to a sore leg. Teams:

Orfuns: Hope, Jensen, Jim Conlin, Beatty, Huntley, Berry, Bark, Naismith, Russelle, Holman, Kirkwood, Beavis, Ouellette, Langhorne, Fowler, McIntyre, Howe, Newark, Milligan, Giardino, Trimm, Foster, O'Reilly, Brioux, J. McGillis, D. McGillis, Groves, Berthelot.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

With October edging onto the scene in a couple of more days, and daylight saving washed out till next Spring, we're definitely into Autumn now and will soon be thinking of Winter. The baseball world series winds up summer sports. Local golfers officially concluded their season Saturday with closing-day dinners at Peterborough and Kawartha Clubs after some afternoon competition. Prizes were presented and good fellowship fun wrapped up a fine year at both clubs. Largest memberships yet, plenty of good golfing weather the through summer months, and no complaints heard at all. Diehard golfers will patrol the links till snow smothers the greens, but officially it's all over for '53.

Petes' Trailermen came home Saturday to a rousing and well-earned welcome by the citizens and lacrosse fans. Thrice in a row winners of the Mann Cup and Canadian senior lacrosse title, the Trailermen were a happy bunch as thousands of folks lined the streets or drifted into Miller Bowl for the official civic welcome by Ald. Doug Miller, as acting Mayor. Fitting enough, as Doug played lacrosse for years, too, and was a driving force in keeping the game going here and having the bowl built. Other aldermen were on deck, also, with girl cheerleeders, etc. George Ludgate, the leaning tower of disa and data, introduced the champs. Prexy Bob Peirson and players thanked their supporters. Sponsor Harry McGinness said he'd again sponsor the club in 1954. A good show organized by Jim Fraser, Gord Dobbin and their committee.

Orfuns Keep A-Rolling

We took in the grid game at Cobourg in the aft and saw a smart scrap as Orfuns dumped the cocky Galloping Ghosts 13-3 before their disgruntled fans. The Ghosts made it a real battle in the last half but were outplayed all the way by a sharp Orfuns' aggregation. Local line was solid again, the backfield rolling nicely, even with Blair Thomson an absentee with a sore leg, and our pass defence was almost perfect. Ditto with the kicking of Don Bark, and the passing of Jim Milligan. Orfuns have excellent receivers but they did miss several feather passes. Art Jones kicked well enough for the Ghosts, but they weren't the best of passing from Don Hatt till late in the game.

* * * * * *

Coach Jack Wedley had a full team out, including Seale and Taylor, but they didn't have quite enough for the Orfuns. We think the local gridders are better than a year ago when they went to Canadian finals. Tony Kotowski is a man of mighty few words but he seems to have a solid squad clicking well again. With six straight wins they're practically a cinch for group playoffs now. Leading the loop, and they should knock off the rough Toronto Marauders here Wednesday night to make it seven victories in a row. Like our champ lacrossers, these footballers should have plenty of fan support at all home games.

Re High School Football

High school football will be in full swing here shortly as the various teams round into shape for their short, sharp schedules. PCVS squads dropped two exhibition decision here Saturday to strong Toronto Humberside crews. Coach Don McHoull (formerly of Peterborough) fielded a potent outfit from Toronto in the senior tilt to earn the win handily. Larry Forbes of the Garnet and Gray was lost through an injured shoulder. Bev Goulding has some promising material and the team will show plenty as the season unwinds, we expect. Local juniors are pretty green yet, most of 'em being grid newcomers, but they will be heard from, too, in schedule play. Haven't much on the Kenner lads yet. John Lynch's SPS boys lost an exhibition last week in Oshawa and suffered several injuries which will hurt. Frank McGillen may be out several weeks.

In minor lacrosse up this way, Ed Woodcock's bantam Petes are a goal down in OLA semi-finals, losing 9-8 in a nifty struggle here Saturday. Game was moved ahead to the afternoon, owing to the "do" at night in Miller Bowl. Young Petes made an excellent showing and hope to sweep the set in the return of the two-games series in Port Dalhousie next weekend. Bill Post's local midgets are up two goals in provincial finals and will be trying to protect that margin in the return game at St. Kitts. Our peewees, under Bob Curtis and Bob Allen, turned in a whale of a try in the all-day OLA playoff tourney on Saturday in Burlington. They ousted Orillia and then Roden neatly but fell in the Ontario final to Brantford.

After Albert's Dismal Show Fans Ponder Future

By LORNE BRUCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP)—Western Interprovincial Football Union fans today pondered the future of Frankie Albert in Canadian football. To many, his days are numbered, probably until the Oct. 1 deadline when clubs must cut their import list to eight.

The one-time fabulous southpaw-tossing quarter who had seven years of glory and financial profit with the San Francisco 49ers, hasn't lived up to his press notices with Calgary Stampeders and his famous sweater, No. 13 may be hung up for good this week.

Frankie, who worked magic with the football in a career dating back to 1940 when he led Stanford University to a Rose Bowl victory over Nebraska, put on a dismal performance Saturday night as Stampeders bowed 15-6 to the high-flying Edmonton Eskimos. He was yanked by coach Bob Snyder after two quarters during which Eskimos intercepted four of his passes, three in the Eskimo end zone.

SHOWS BADLY

It was the second straight time in an Edmonton appearance that the 32-year-old Albert showed up badly this season, necessitating a switch to Keith Spaith, former Honolulu Warrior who led Stampeders to their only Canadian championship in 1948.

Edmonton's victory, fashioned mainly on a powerful ground offensive, shot Eskimos into a clear six-point lead over runner-up Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who lost 21-15 to Saskatchewan Roughriders at Regina.

The same clubs go at each other again tonight in the back-breaking WIFU week-end doubleheaders. Eskimos meet the Stampeders at Calgary and Blue Bombers are at home to the Roughriders.

The sweeping all-round power of Eskimos has been the highlight of the schedule, now at its half-way mark. Relying mainly on a ground attack directed by Oklahoma quarter Ed Crowder, Eskimos struck for single converted touchdowns in each of the second and third quarters and a second-quarter field goal by Ted Tully, Vancouver product.

SCORES FIRST

Steve Mendryk, Edmonton homebrew flying wing, plowed over from the Calgary six for the first major and halfback Don Simon carried a Crowder handoff four yards for the other. Both were converted by Tully.

Spaith completed six passes, carrying Calgary from its own 21-yard line—89 yards—for the lone Stampeder touchdown, snagged by Pete Thodos, Vancouver-bred halfback, in the Edmonton end zone. Glen Christian converted.

Eskimos completed six of 12 passed for 98 yards, but crunched out 365 yards on the ground to Calgary's op.

Saskatchewan spotted Bombers an early field goal by flying wing Bud Korchak and struck for three converted touchdowns and a single to pile up a 19-3 lead in the third quarter.

JACOBS HOT

Bobby Marlow, Mac Speedie and Herbie Johnson were the scorers. Del Wardien converted all three touchdowns and kicked a single. Winnipeg quarter Indian Jack Jacobs conceded a safety touch for Roughies' other point.

Bud Grant and Andy Sokol earned Winnipeg's majors. Korchak converted both.

The Roughrider offensive was led by quarter Glenn Dobbs who completed 16 of 23 passes for 214 yards and who directed the ground attack that netted 168 yards to Winnipeg's 30.

Jacobs consolidated his reputation as a superlative passer, leading the Winnipeg club to majors in both the third and fourth quarters. He completed 25 of 39 forward attempts.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Should we have fine weather on Tuesday evening, it's just possible that we will have a nice entry for the Review trebles tournament; already chairman Bill McCreary has close to 20 in.

It's the last men's tournament for this season, and if you have not made up a rink you have plenty of time left yet. It's all over in one evening and starts at seven o'clock sharp.

The ladies are hoping for fine weather, also. Their "last fling" trebles tournament is set for 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

The ladies have a few games left yet in their singles and doubles competitions; as for the men, they have run out the string and with these two tournaments coming up this week we can call it all off until May 24, 1954.

The date for the men's annual meeting has not been announced as yet, but the ladies are holding their "pot luck" supper and annual meeting, in the club's parlors, on Monday, October 5, and it all commences at six o'clock.

Stratford Rams Edge Niagara By 12-10

WELLAND (CP) — Stratford Rams entered the victory column for the first time Saturday with a 12-10 decision over Niagara Redskins in an intermediate Ontario Rugby Football Union game. It was their fourth straight loss for the Redskins.

Don Peart of Port Colborne, a former quarterback with the University of Toronto and St. Michael's College, spearheaded the Stratford attack with a touchdown and a convert. Hutchinson scored their other touchdown.

Bruce and Rysdale shared the Redskins' scoring with two touchdowns each.

PCVS Gridders Defeated By Humberside

PCS unveiled its two COSSA football contenders to the public gaze at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon in an exhibition doubleheader against two teams from Humberside Collegiate.

It was a fierce bloodletting for the local teams who were outplayed in every department by the classy Toronto squads. Humberside won the junior contest 42-0 and the senior 47-5.

Coach Don McHoull, a graduate of Queen Alexandra school and PCI used the two platoon system to good effect with the Humberside seniors. Sparked by the brilliant quarterbacking of Merv Zasitkowich, the visiting backfield gave a versatile display.

On plunges, the strong Humberside line opened huge gaps in the PCS front wall and Peterborough's secondaries were slow getting in on the tackles. In fact, the home club's tackling was weak at all times although Tom Crogh at end somehow managed to bring a number of Humberside's gains to a halt.

Peterborough was weakened in the first quarter when snap Larry Forbes was taken from the game with a dislocated shoulder.

Chuck Geale, at flying wing, was a triple threat stand-out for the locals while Barry Hollingsworth made nice gains on his plunges and George Nickson was fast in the open.

Fullback Al Morris and halfback Bob Steele made large gains on the ground for Humberside and Morirs found his mark with several long passes.

SENIOR LINE-UP

PCVS — McKenzie, Eastwood, Weir, Pullybank, Krogh, ends; Lynch, McGrath, Hilliard, Pollard, middles; Palmateer, Whitnell, Hall, Macklin, Little, Walker, insides; Forbes, snap; Roberts, quarterback; Geale, flying wing; McKinney, Goodson, Nickson, Livingston, halfbacks Hollingsworth, full back

The Hunmberside juniors had the advantage of experience over their local opponents. While most of them had previously played bantam in their first year, Ken Beck and Bob Baker were the only two on the PCS squad who had ever played organized football before.

As a consequence, the locals lacked Humberside's snap and drive. They were not aggressive enough in getting their plays under way or meeting the enemy attack and were outcharged on the line every time.

Humberside lost no time taking the initiative and the locals lost heart early in the game, although, with the field a patchwork of water hazards, especially in the south end which PCVS defended

Bantams Lose First Tilt Of OLA Playoff

Port Dalhousie squeezed a narrow 9-8 victory over Eddie Woodcock's bantams Saturday at Miller Bowl, in the first game of a home-and-home. goals to count, bantam "A" OLA lacrosse playoff series. The return match will be played Saturday, October 3, in Port Dalhousie.

The visitors held command in the early stages, but the locals showed power both ways in the second half of play, particularly in the fourth, when they blanked the Ports 3-0, and came close to victory in a real battle.

LED AT FIRST

Ports enjoyed a 3-1 edge at quarter time and a 6-3 margin at half. Led by Ricky Pace and Bill Mahoney, locals outscored their rivals 5-3 in the final 30 minutes of play. Pace scored all three markers in the final frame, but honors were well distributed among the entire team, according to Coach Ed. Woodcock.

"The boys all played well," remarked Eddie after the game. "Baker gave a remarkable exhibition in goal; the boys gave it all they had, and hope to win Saturday."

Carrupe and Stockwell led the Ports' attack with four and two goals respectively.

Port Dalhousie — Goal, McCreedy; defence, Peterson, Dorne; centre, Bryson; wings, Berge, Cheevers; rover, Carrupe; alternates, Stockwell, Inglis, Leinert, Coull, Manning, Marlowe, Weirhien.

Petes — Goal, Baker; defence, Mahoney, Pace; centre, Grant; wings, Stewart, Robinson; rover, Anthony; alternates, Quinlan, DeNoble, Simpson, Barnes, Dannaghy, Ashbee, Villneff, Gaudrey.

Individual Baseball Champs Rarely Figure At Beginning

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

Baseball in 1953 produced a pair of short-priced pennant winners and a host of long-shot individual champions. New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers clearly outclassed their opposition. The Yanks, winning a record-breaking fifth straight American League crown, led for all but nine days of the season, finishing 8½ games ahead of Cleveland Indians.

Brooklyn clinched its second successive National League flag, unique in Dodger history, Sept. 12, earliest date in league history. The Dodgers ended 13 games in front of the surprising Milwaukee Braves.

But the individual winners, particularly the batting champions, rarely figured in pre-season calculations:

Carl Furillo of the Dodgers, who during the winter gambled his career on a delicate eye operation to improve his vision, won the league batting title with an excellent .344 average. A year ago he hit a weak .247.

VERNON JUMPS

And in the American League, Mickey Vernon of Washington, whose 1946 batting crown was viewed by many as more luck than skill, jumped from .251 last season to .337, one point ahead of Al Rosen of Cleveland. It was the first time since 1946 that Vernon has hit over .330.

Rosen won both the homer and runs-batted-in crowns in the American League. He hit 43 home runs, 15 more than last year, and drove home 145 runs. His desperate try to add the batting title failed by a single step. Needing one more hit to win, he apparently beat out an infield hit in his last time at bat. But his last-second jump missed first base and he was out.

BREAKS MOST

Roy Campanella of the Dodgers broke almost every record available for a catcher, both offensively and defensively. His 142 runs batted in gave him the league title.

The most impressive pitchers were Warren Spahn of the Braves who won 23 while losing only seven and Bob Porterfield of Washington with a 22-10 record. Robin Roberts won more than 20 games for the fourth straight year, finishing with a 23-16 mark after a rough final six weeks. Carl Erskine of Brooklyn and rookie Harvey Haddix of St. Louis Cardinals were the National League's other 20-game winners. In the American Bob Lemon of Cleveland, Virgil Trucks of Chicago and Mel Parnell of Boston hit the 20-game circle. Lemon won 21.

It was a poor year for last year's stars. Bobby Shantz of the Athletics, last year's most valuable player in the American League, was plagued by serious arm trouble. He won only five games and lost nine after a brilliant 1952 season when he won 24. Hank Sauter of the Cubs, the National League's most valuable player, also courted injuries most of the year. He batted only .263, hit 19 home runs and drove in 60.

LOSES 20

Harry Byrd of Philadelphia, selected as the American League's rookie of 1952, was the circuit's only 20-game loser this season. Joe Black of Brooklyn, the National League star rookie, also found it rough. He won six and lost three, but never approached the effectiveness he showed a year ago.

An 8-2 final day triumph over Philadelphia enabled the Dodgers to break an all-time Brooklyn club record with 105 victories. The Yankees, who had figured to win 100, missed by one when they

Montreal Takes 3-0 Series Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Royals virtually knocked Rochester Red Wings out of the picture with an 8-2 victory Saturday night in the International League Governors' Cup playoffs.

The triumph at Montreal gave the Royals a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven final series. Sunday's game was postponed because of rain. The next game is tonight in Montreal.

Hamp Coleman went the route for the winners Saturday, allowing only five scattered hits, fanning five and walking four. Five hurlers toiled for the Wings, Niles Jordan, Cot Deal, Dennis Reeder, Jack Crimian and Bob Hoch. Starter Jordan was tagged with the loss.

The Royals scored three times in the fifth inning, with outfielder Ken Wood powering a two-run homer. They added five more tallies in the sixth, on three hits, two walks and an error.

Toronto Cadets Win Cutter Race

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto's Haida sea cadet corps nosed out the defending champion Drake corps of Oshawa by one second Saturday to win the senior championship cup for ten-oared cutters.

The winner's time was two minutes and 50 seconds for the half mile course. The Lion corps of Hamilton was third, five seconds off the pace.

In the junior championship race the Haida juniors won with the Drake juniors second.

In a ten-oar cutter race for girl sea rangers the Oshawa Crusader corps defeated the Princess Royal corps of Toronto.

Baseball Crowds Decrease Again

NEW YORK (AP)—Major league attendance showed a decrease for the fifth straight year, with the 1953 gate almost 250,000 under last season's total.

Last season, 14,633,044 fans attended the games as against this season's total of 14,393,145—a drop of 239,899.

The National League enjoyed a sharp increase of more than 1,000,000 but the American League fell 1,317,467. Milwaukee Braves helped the National League by breaking the league attendance record in their first year in Milwaukee. The Braves were watched at home by 1,826,397.

Every club in the American League showed a decline from their 1952 attendance while the National League had only Brooklyn and Milwaukee in the plus column.

Browns Told To Stay In St. Louis

Veeck Bitter

NEW YORK (AP)—The impoverished St. Louis Browns, denied permission to transfer to Baltimore are still in St Louis, but the club appears headed for the west coast by 1955.

Vice-President Del Webb of New York Yankees, leader in Sunday's successful fight against Baltimore—that city's second rebuff in six months—is prepared to lead the way westward, with Los Angeles the preferred spot.

Webb was one of four American League club owners who told Brownie president Bill Veeck that for the time being he must stay in St. Louis, where he lost upwards of $750,000 in 2½ seasons.

The vote, in which a two-thirds majority was necessary, was four in favor of moving to Baltimore and four against. The ballot was secret but it was learned that Philadelphia, Boston and Cleveland sided with New York against the move. Cleveland was one of the two clubs which voted for Veeck last March when he first sought permission to move to Baltimore.

The league's decision proved a crushing blow for both Veeck and the Baltimore delegation.

Webb and vice-president Calvin Griffith of Washington said Veeck announced at the meeting he would sell the Browns to a St. Louis syndicate seeking the club, but Veeck denied this.

Later, after he had discussed the matter with his associates, Veeck appeared more bitter than ever.

"This is personal," he said. "They're trying to squeeze me out of baseball. I'll decide what to do Monday. I may do something that could be called regrettable."

Veeck declined to disclose his plans, but Rudy Schaeffer, general manager of the Browns, indicated Veeck might sue the league.

"The next step could be a law suit," Schaeffer said. "We may bring a $2,000,000 suit against the league for the stock that has been subscribed by the people of Baltimore and damages for commitments made."

Mayor Tom d'Alesandro of Baltimore charged the club owners with treating his city unfairly.

"This is a shattering blow to Baltimoreans," he stated. "We did everything asked of us. We provided all necessary backing ($1,115,000 plus a promise of another $500,000 loan and a potential of 2,000,000 fans, but we could not compel the American League owners to give Baltimore its rightful recognition."

Webb from the start championed the bid of a Los Angeles group headed by mayor Norris Poulson. This delegation put up a cash offer of $2,500,000 for the franchise and said up to $6,000,000 could be raised within 10 days. It said the Los Angeles Coliseum, which can seat 101,000, would be available for us as a baseball park.

"Expansion of major-league baseball to the west coast is inevitable," Webb said.

Los Angeles and San Francisco currently are members of the Pacific Coast League. To move a major-league franchise to either of these cities, the majors would have to inaugurate the regular draft procedure and pay prescribed damages to the rest of the league. Such a move can only be made between Oct. 1 and Dec. 1.

Webb said the owners would use the next 30 days to investigate other cities.

"Montreal, Kansas City, Los Angeles, San Francisco and the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, besides a special contingent from St. Louis, have presented their petitions," he said. "I believe we should investigate all of them before we come to any decision."

Toronto, one of the cities mentioned in the running for a major-league franchise, was not represented at Sunday's meeting.

Aggies Wallop RMC Cadets 33-5

GUELPH (CP)—Ontario Agricultural College Aggies crushed Royal Military College, Kingston, 33-5 in an intermediate exhibition football game Saturday.

The Aggies, with a powerful air and ground attack from a split-T formation, moved practically at will against the inexperienced Cadets.

OAC quarterback Ed Wladyks scored a touchdown himself on a quarter sneak and tossed to end Phil Green for another. Wayne Gerrie, sharing the passing with Wladyks, pitched to Green for a major and scored a touchdown on a pitchout from Wladyks.

Dick Roelofson plunged over the RMC left end for the other Aggie major. Harry Stuart converted three touchdowns and kicked a field goal. Dave Mitchell and Bob Martin kicked for single points.

A pass from quarterback Bill McMurty to end Pete Niemy early in the first quarter accounted for the Cadets' points. Fullback Sam Sutar and halfback Pete Howe shared the main cadet offensive load.

Rangers Much Improved Club Confident Showing Be Better

Editor's Note: This is the first of a Canadian Press series on pre-season prospects in the National Hockey League. Today's story is about New York Rangers. Tuesday: Toronto Maple Leafs.
Written for The Canadian Press

By CAM McKENZIE

SASKATOON (CP)—The combination of a physically-sound goalkeeper, improved defence and two top-flight centres should give New York Rangers a "reasonable chance" of hitting the National Hockey League playoffs this year.

Frank Boucher, who doubles as manager and coach this season, made the prediction here as Rangers, bottom-place club in the league the last two seasons, broke off training camp and embarked on an eight-game exhibition tour.

"I believe we have a sound team this year," said Boucher, who took over the coaching last month from Bill Cook, his playing partner on a great Ranger line of another day. "Barring unforeseen injuries during our exhibition tour, I'm confident we'll make our best showing in years in the NHL. We're much improved over a year ago."

TRAINING ADVANCED

Boucher, returning to rinkside coaching duties after nearly a five-year absence, said Rangers were "at least 10 days ahead in our training over other years, and I'm sure our exhibition tour against teams in the Western Hockey League will do us a world of good."

Rangers start the season at Detroit Oct. 8, the earliest opening in the league's history. They play five road games before appearing before home-town fans at Madison Square Garden Oct. 22, but even with this rugged schedule Boucher has hopes of a successful start.

Boucher considered his biggest "catch" of the summer season was centre Max Bentley, purchased from Toronto Maple Leafs.

Plagued with an ailing back when he departed from Toronto last spring, Bentley appears to have regained his old-time form and was among the most impressive candidates striking for places with the New York team.

SMART GOALKEEPER

Boucher was high on Johnny Bower, former Cleveland Baron goalkeeper who came to Rangers this year in exchange for two players and an undisclosed amount of cash. Bower, native of Prince Albert, Sask., led the American Hockey League team to three league championships and two playoff titles in four years.

His understudy will be Bev Bentley, a nephew of Max.

Lorne (Gump) Worsley, NHL rookie award last season who replaced the injured Chuck Rayner in the Rangers goal, is reported ready to line up with Vancouver Canucks of the WHL.

The New York manager is also banking heavily on a good season from centre Don Raleigh, hampered throughout the 1952-53 schedule with a fractured wrist. Now fit, "Bones" figures as one of the Rangers' key men this year.

But Max Bentley and Raleigh are by no means the only bright spots Rangers have along the forward lines. Veterans Nick Mickoski, Paul Ronty, Wally Hergesheimer, Eddie Kullman and Jack Stoddard have impressed since the Rangers started training Sept. 6.

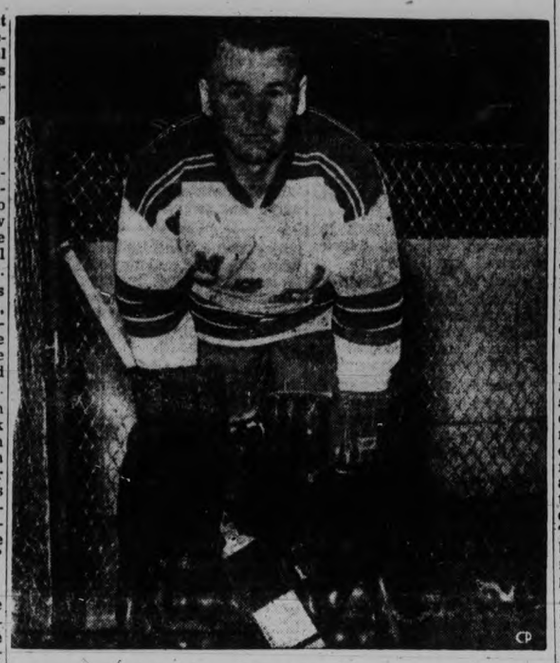
OTHERS IN FORM

Sophomores such as Dean Prentice, Ron Murphy, Aldo Guidolin and Andy Bathgate have been kicking up their heels and showing good form, too.

Also in camp were forwards Bill Dea, who helped Lethbridge Native Sons in the western Canada junior final last season, Camille Henry, last year with Quebec Citadels, and Ike Hildebrand of Cleveland Barons.

There seems no doubt that New York will be powerful at defence. Leo Reise, Harry Howell and Hy Buller, all with Rangers last year, have definitely clinched spots.

The other two berths are open to the best among Allan Stanley, New York veteran; Mid Houghton, junior from Calgary; and Ivan Irwin, Bob Chrystal and Jack Evans, who all had good seasons in minor professional leagues last winter. Irwin was with Victoria Cougars of the WHL, Chrystal with Cleveland Barons and Evans with Saskatoon Quakers of the WHL.



RANGER GOALIE—Johnny Bower, new goalkeeper with the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, is expected to give the Rangers, last-place club in the league the last two seasons, a new lease on life. Frank Boucher, coach-manager, says the team is "much improved over a year ago."

Howe Nets One As Wings Tied

PEMBROKE (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings fought to a 3-3 tie here Saturday night in the second of a two-game exhibition series between the two National Hockey League clubs.

Chicago sought to avenge a 6-0 win by Detroit at Sudbury Friday.

Gordie Howe was the Detroit star, scoring a second-period goal and assisting on the other two Red Wing markers by Red Kelly and Earl Reibel.

Pete Conacher, Gus Mortson and George Gee notched the Chicago goals.

Buffalo Bisons Win 4-2 Over Senators

OTTAWA (CP)—Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League downed Ottawa Senators of the Quebec Hockey League 4-2 here Saturday night in an exhibition game.

Callum MacKay paced the winners with a pair of markers, while playing-coach Frank Eddolls and Pierre Pilotte notched singles. Gerry Moore, up from junior ranks and Jackie Giesebrecht sniped for the losers.

Scots Lose Out In 4-3 Go To Bowmanville

The local Scots climaxed an excellent soccer season Saturday afternoon when they entertained Bowmanville All-Stars (picked from a nine-team league) in King Edward Park, before a good attendance of fans. Bowmanville won 4-3. Venning of the vistors was smart, tricky and elusive while in possession of the ball, along with Johnson and Muir who were best for the winners; while R. Croll, Burnett and Biddle of Scots (late of England) later showed the finer points of the code in offensive and defensive tactics in scoring positions. Referee E. Cotton was efficient.

Right from the kick-off, the visitors indulged in a long swinging style of play to put the Scots off-stride as Venning side-tapped a cross from the right wing into the net. Thereafter, the Scots introduced short-passing tactics to baffle the Bowmanville aggregation as they forced the issue inside their goal territory to gain the equaliser as Dunn headed the ball. The custodian saved the sphere but Croll headed it back into the net. Play continued at a rapid pace with the half-back divisions good until near the interval. The Scots combination play brought them success when Gilchrist beat three men in a row and punted forward to Croll who met the sphere with a first-timer that bulged the rigging.

CAUTIOUS PLAY

On resuming, both elevens were cautions. The tackling put up by the half back line of Daly, Burnett and Dibble featured. The latter being conspicuous with his plays to the wings that caused Bowmanville anxiety. Hoyle, of centre-forward, did everything but score as he tore in repeatedly. After 20 minutes, Bowmanville's centre broke through to tap the ball back to Venning who quickly connected from a scrimmage in front of goal to make it read 2-all. Later the visitors put on the pressure to find Hutchinson, Scots goalie, unbeatable as he saved shots from all angles. Eventually Hutchinson had to admit defeat when Baker headed the ball out of the custodian's hands after he had saved the ball once. Within a minute, the same performance was enacted at the other end when Croll headed the sphere out of the hands of the Bowmanville custodian. Five minutes to go, Bowmanvile registered to gain a win.

Bowmanville: M. Yeo, goal; J. Baker and R. Sharp full backs; A. Lobb, B. Muir and B. Coverley half backs; L. Phillips, G. Chant, R. Johnson, J. Venning and J. Munday forwards. Subs: R. Griffin, G. Gilroy, H. Balsan, T. Graham.

Scots: J. Hutchinson, goal; W. Allan and A. Boyd full backs; J. Ballantyne, A. Burnett and J. Daly half backs; M. Rice, R. Croll, A. Dunn, J. Gilchrist and J. Caldwell forwards. Subs: J. Dibble, G. Hoyle, T. Hammill, D. Downer.

Peewees Beaten In OLA Final By Brant Crew

Brantford Mohawks defeated Peterborough 14-4 to capture the OLA peewee final game of the championship tournament on Saturday at Burlington and take the provincial lacrosse title in that class. But the young Petes made a great showing in the tournament in eliminating a strong Orillia crew 16-7 and then dumping Roden A.C. 16-2 in Ontario semi-finals. In the finals, they found the experienced and bigger Indian lads from Brantford too good for them.

Dave Drummond paced the Peterborough peewees in the Orillia game with a five-goal effort, as well as aiding on another. Two goals each were counted by Wade Anthony, Ken Ruttan and Grant Heffernan, the latter also getting an assist, as Ruttan aided on two. Single goals went to Joe Todd, Paul Cannon, John Parry (who got two assists) and Bywater. Carl Jacque, who also helped on one, as did Terry Downer. Morris had four for Orillia, Frot two and Morris one in a clean game.

LED IN SCORING

Drummond and Parry led the local lads in the game with Roden, each scoring three goals, Drummond also having three assists and Parry one. Ruttan was tops in point-getters with a goal and six assists. Davis, Heffernan and Downer counted two each, and Jacques, Cannon and Todd one each, the latter, Downer, Heffernan and Beavis each earning an assist. Rooney and Grove scored for the losers in another clean tilt.

The final game saw Anthony, Heffernan, Shaughnessy and Drummond scoring for the losing Petes, Heffernan and Todd each gaining an assist in the scrappy but clean fray. The husky Indians piled up an early lead and added to it in a good showing. Hess, Lickers and Hill lit the lamp three times each for them, Farmer and Powless had two apiece and Martin one. Goalie Russ Dunn played a good game in this one, too. The Petes' players were: Dunn, Ruttan, Drummond, Todd, Cannon, Anthony, Daynes, Heffernan, Beavis, DeNoble, Shaughnessy, Jacques, Kinniburgh, Milburn, Davis, Heard.

Last year the Sox finished sixth in the American League. This season he raised his youthful team to fourth.

Terms were not announced, but Boudreau said he got a raise. The figure was estimated at $60,000 a year, but Lou scoffed that off.

Expect Furillo, Woodling Ready For Series' Opener

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—Carl Furillo of Brooklyn and Gene Woodling of New York Yankees, injured world series outfield regulars expect to be ready for the opening game Wednesday at Yankee Stadium.

Furillo took batting practice Saturday night at Philadelphia for the first time since he broke a finger in a fist fight with Leo Durocher Sept. 6.

"I'll be ready," he said. "It hurt a little, but not much. I was favoring my hand a little, but I've got time to get set. I'll be okay."

Furillo used a sponge in the sensitive portion of his left hand while he swung.

Although benched for three weeks, Furillo won the league batting title with .344 as a late surge by Red Schoendienst of St. Louis Cardinals fell two points short.

The Dodgers were scheduled to workout at Yankee Stadium this afternoon following a morning practice session by the Yanks. The Brooks were due to limber up at Ebbets Field Tuesday, the Yanks taking it easy while the stadium turf was prepared for the big series.

HAND PROTECTED

Woodling has played since he hurt his left hand by banging into the railing while making a catch. But his hand is swollen and super sensitive, making it painful to grip a bat. Gene worked out Sunday before the Yanks' final game using a sponge taped to his bat. He hit the ball hard.

Loss of Woodling would be a stiff blow to the Yanks because he is a fine outfielder, expert at judging a ball in the tricky left field shadows at the stadium. He wound up with a .306 batting average, tops on the club. In case the hand forces him out of the line-up, Woodling's replacement will be Irv Noren, a .267 hitter.

Gil Hodges, still handicapped in his throwing by a rib injury, was back on first base for Brooklyn in Sunday's finale, an 8-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies, when the Dodgers set a club victory record of 105, beating the 1942 mark. Gil hit two doubles off Robin Roberts and boosted his season runs batted in total to 122.

SURE MOUND BETS

Carl Erskine (20-6) of the Dodgers and Allie Reynolds (13-7) of the Yankees were regarded as a sure bet for the starting assignments in the opener. The pitching line-up for the rest of the series was clarified by Sunday's results.

Whitey Ford, wild in recent starts, came up with a good job against Boston, probably clinching the starting job in game No. 4 for the Yanks. Ed Lopat and Vic Raschi are expected to follow Reynolds in the first three.

Russ Meyer may have lost the No. 3 game assignment for Brooklyn by walking five men in a three-inning stint against the Phillies. Preacher Roe was believed set for the second game with Meyer, Bob Milliken or Billy Loes in No. 3. Erskine was in line for three starts, if possible.

The game schedule calls for the first two at New York, three at Brooklyn and the last two at New York until one team wins four. All games start at 1:05 p. m. EST except Sunday when law requires a 2:05 p. m. EST start. The Yanks, shooting for an unprecedented fifth straight series triumph, are 6-to-5 favorites.

TORONTO (CP)—An apprentice jockey, owner and trainer were suspended by the stewards after the eighth race at Woodbine Saturday. The case was referred to the Ontario racing commission.

Apprentice jockey George Wardrope was on R. W. Greenwood's Paoalga, trained by T. A. Butler. He was brought before the stewards after the starting crew discovered him in possession of a nail in the starting gate.

When starter Douglas Haig ordered it taken away from him, Paoalga refused to break from the gate.

Cats Grab Big Four Lead Win Over Roughriders

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There are some queer goings-on in big-time football these days. Take the week-end for instance:

At Hamilton, American import Tex Coulter stood by helplessly behind the Montreal Alouettes goaline and watched Cam Fraser, young Hamilton Tiger-Cat kicker, race in to recover his own kick for a last-minute touchdown that gave Tiger-Cats a 20-15 decision and a two-point Big Four lead.

At Ottawa, Don Moomaw provided 15,000 incredulous fans with one of the strangest sights in football history—an apparent job of convincing officials that his Toronto Argonauts were wrong and Ottawa Rough Riders were right on a disputed forward-pass ruling. Argonauts won that thriller 18-17.

At Kingston in an exhibition game, a Toronto Balmy Beach player pulled a "Pete Karpuk" by dashing off the Toronto bench to tackle a touchdown-bound Queen's University player on the Toronto 10-yard line. Officials awarded the Intercollegiate team a touchdown and Queen's went on to beat the Ontario Rugby Football Union club 20-10.

ALBERT COOLS

At Edmonton the one-time fabulous Frankie Albert, playing his first season of Canadian football after a nationally-prominent seven-year career with San Francisco 49ers almost convinced fans he didn't have it for Western Conference play. The southpaw Calgary Stampeder quarter was yanked after Edmonton Eskimos intercepted four of his passes, three in the Edmonton end zone, and won their seventh straight game 15-6.

Out of the heavy week-end schedule, the Big Four race showed Tiger-Cats with eight points. Alouettes, Rough Riders and Argonauts are tied for second place with six each.

Eskimos, not given much chance in pre-season guessing, lead the Western Conference with 14 points, six up on the runner-up Winnipeg Blue Bombers who lost 21-15 to Saskatchewan Roughriders at Regina. The Roughriders trail by another two points and Stampeders are in last place with only four points in eight games.

IMPS WIN 32-0

Sarnia Imperials smothered the last-place and winless Brantford Redskins 32-0 in their ORFU game at Sarnia. The victory pulled Imperials to within two points of the league-leading Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen.

Eric McKeever and Bobby Lee each scored two touchdowns and Jim Burr also tallied a major. Jack McKelvie, who fired two touchdown passes in the first half, converted four majors, and also scored a field goal. The Imps completed 10 out of 28 passes against five out of 30 for the Redskins.

Play opened on the Senior Intercollegiate front at Montreal with McGill Redmen defeating the newly admitted McMaster Marauders 13-12. The Redmen withstood an 11-point last-quarter drive to get the decision.

Hal Biewald took a forward pass for a touchdown for the Redmen. George Klein plunged for another McGill touchdown. Fred Wilmott converted both and also kicked a single.

Max Woolley and Lorne Wrigglesworth scored majors for McMaster. Wrigglesworth also counted a single and Jim Dodds made one convert good.

MUSTANGS THROWN

University of Toronto Blues took advantage of mistakes by University of Western Ontario Mustangs to trim the 1952 intercollegiate champions 11-1 in an exhibition game.

Bobby Dale notched the game's only touchdown. Steve Oneschuk counted a field goal and Al Haig scored three singles. Western's lone scorer was Jack Thompson with a kick from the Varsity 35-yard line.

The Coulter boner was the prize of the season, and it came on a play seldom seen these days—the return of a punt. Coulter, import from New York Giants, kicked from behind his own goal line with seconds remaining in the game.

It was taken at midfield by Ray Truant, former University of Western Ontario college star who lateralled to Fraser and the 21-year-old Hamilton-born player kicked and followed through with the move that caught Montreal, particularly Coulter, flat-footed.

Truant was the goat of the game up to that point with two fumbles that led directly to Alouette touchdowns.

Moomaw's move was made in the fourth quarter with Argonauts ahead 18-11 but retreating before the heavy Ottawa offensive. Riders' Tom O'Malley pitched a pass to end Paul Salta who appeared to scoop the ball off the ground.

Officials called it incomplete and Moomaw, who boarded a plane a few hours later for the United States headed for a life in the Presbyterian ministry, moved in on the officials and the pass was ruled complete with play at the Toronto 21. As it turned out the Ottawa wave receded.

Coach Frank Clair of Argonauts said after the game that Moomaw admitted to him he thought the pass was good. To the 16,000 fans he appeared to be talking to the officials about it but a Toronto paper quoted referee Seymour Wilson as saying that the Argonaut player didn't influence the officials, or try to.

"KARPUK" PLAY

The "Karpuk play" occurred at Kingston when Queen's halfback Al Kocman intercepted a Toronto pass at the Kingston 36 and was headed in the clear for the Beach line when guard Jim Weller galloped off the Beach bench and dumped him on the 10-yard line. Officials awarded the touchdown.

(In an Ottawa-Toronto Big Four game two years ago Pete Karpuk, Rider back, sparked a near-riot by jumping off the Ottawa bench to tackle touchdown-bound Ulysses Curtis on the Ottawa 25. Riders received a half-the-distance-to-the-goal-line penalty and Toronto went on to make the touchdown and win the game 23-18.)

Albert's showing Saturday night was the second straight time in an Edmonton appearance that he has shown up badly and western fans wondered today whether he would be around after the Oct. 1 deadline when clubs must cut their import list to eight.

Albert came to Canada this season in a widely-heralded move. Stampeder officials figured he would prove one of the greatest attractions to play in Canadian football but his performances have been anything but spectacular.

PCVS Gridders

in the first quarter, the visitors had a hard time hanging on to the greasy bal.

Fullback Bill Selkirk led several wide sweeps around the end for the winners while halfback Eddie Mitchell's plunging and broken field running accounted for several long gains, as did fleet-footed Tacky Tackasaki's running. Mitchell also found his mark with several passes and starred on the defensive, tackling and knocking down Peterborough's pass attempts.

The slow-moving affair was called at the end of the third quarter to make way for the senior nightcap.

Restricted Diets Easy with NEW Wafer

Satisfies Food Craving Eases Hunger Pangs During Prescribed Diet

Diet Successfully Yet Satisfy YOUR Appetite

Are you among the 20% of all Canadians over 30 that are said to be OVERWEIGHT?

At a recent convention of the Canadian Dietetic Association reported by Canadian Press, Dr. E. Gordon Young, director of the Maritime Regional Laboratory, National Research Council, Halifax, estimated that a fifth of the Canadian population over age 30 are too heavy. At the same convention Dr. Rachel Beaudoin of the Institute of Dietetics and Nutrition, University of Montreal, said obesity is endangering a quarter of the American population.

"25 of 32 Sudden Deaths Heart Cases, Overweight Blamed in All of Them."

Never before has there been such awareness on the part of the general public of the danger attached to being overweight, particularly after the age of 30. More and more people are turning to their physicians for guidance as to the cause of their being overweight.

There appears to be two primary causes of overweight due to excess fat. The one referred to as exogenous (without) results from over-eating or from ingesting food of high caloric value; the second, endogenous (within), may be attributed to glandular dysfunction. The majority of overweight people may be considered as the exogenous type; they consume not only too much food but frequently choose or have a craving for the foods ranking high in caloric values.

There is no royal road to losing weight. If you happen to fall into the endogenous category your physician, after a diagnosis, will prescribe for you the proper glandular medication and observe its effect. This medication may be dangerous if taken by a person of the exogenous type (too fat from eating too much). The exogenous type may lose weight safely as a result of following a diet adequate in vitamins and minerals, high in protein content and low in carbohydrates (sweets, flour products and starchy-type vegetables).

Diettes are a new type of wafer. One Diette containing less than ten calories, taken with a glass of water about a half hour before meals satisfies that craving for food so common in the exogenous type of person; it enables you to adhere to your diet at meals with a minimum of discomfort. Diettes contain Methylcellulose, an inert, harmless substance which may be taken before or with food in wafer form to decrease hunger pains arising in an empty stomach and give you that feeling of satisfied fullness.

People following a diet prescribed by their physician and failing to lose weight should blame themselves. They don't follow the diet closely because they become ravenously hungry and with the craving for food the temptation to over-eat is too great to resist. With Diettes it is easy to follow a diet. Diettes keep you feeling comfortable, satisfied and pleased with yourself because you see that the diet is actually working and the excess pounds are dropping away.

THIS IS DANGEROUS! ← After thirty the first puffiness, chubbiness around stomach, shoulders and seat, are dangerous. Insurance companies rate excess weight the All-American killer. Follow an approved diet for health and figure.

ATTENTION PHYSICIANS

Each Diette contains 15 grs. Methyl Cellulose; 28 grs. Dextrose; 5 grs. Plantago Flour; 5 grs. Oatmeal Flour; 5 grs. Soya Flour, plus binders and flavors. Contains less than 10 calories.

One Diette taken with a glass of water provides approximately 200 cc. of bulk, about 1/5 of the average stomach content.

MISSES BAG AND CROWN

CLEVELAND (AP)—Al Rosen's foot missed the first base bag on the last play of the season Sunday.

That kept him from winning the three-way batting crown of the American League—runs batted in, home runs and batting average.

He had the RBI and homer titles in his grasp, but he needed to catch first baseman Mickey Vernon of Washington on the averages.

Vernon ended the season with .33717.

It was the bottom of the ninth, two were out, and it was Rosen's last chance. He had singled in the first, doubled in the third, hit into a force-out in the fifth, and beat out a bunt in the seventh.

Pitcher Al Aber served three straight balls, then Rosen fouled off four straight.

On the final pitch, he bounced a rather slow grounder to Jerry Priddy, playing deep at third base.

It looked as though Rosen had beaten Priddy's throw to first, but when his foot missed the bag he made the last out of the season.

If it had been a single, his average would have been .33722.

Rosen won the home run crown with 43 and the RBI title with 145.

HARTFORD, Conn. (CP) — A well-known, Canadian-born U. S. industrialist said today that a single newspaper want ad and a magazine want ad which grew out of it increased his business from a first-year $8,500 to one with current annual sales of $50,000,000.

The industrialist is Alfred C. Fuller, founder and chairman of the board of the Fuller Brush Company, Hartford, Conn., and of the Fuller Brush Company Ltd., Hamilton, Ont.

The newspaper want ad appeared in the Syracuse, N.Y., Post-Standard Dec. 14, 1909, and was followed by a solicitation from the old Everybody's Magazine for another want ad, which he inserted. Since then the company has used newspaper want ads regularly. The occasion of Fuller's statement was the placing in the museum hall of the company's home office in Hartfort of photostats of the two original want ads.

Fuller was born in Nova Scotia, near Grand Pre, in 1885. His ancestors were of Mayflower descent and went to Nova Scotia's Annapolis valley in 1760. The Fuller family seat there is still maintained by him as part of a 1,000-acre farm for dairying, cattle-raising and apple-growing.

TURNING POINT

Fuller sid: "This little Syracuse want ad was the turning point for this company."

"It was so successful I used others and the company has kept on using newspaper want ads ever since to bring us dealers. That single want ad started the conversion of our company from a one-man show to a continent-wide organization, and our policy of using want ads has resulted in $490,000,000 in sales since that first one was printed.

The Fuller Brush Company now has a total of 6,800 dealers, 1,000 in Canada. The Canadian company with its main office in Hamilton, has branch offices in Calgary, Edmonton, Halifax, London, Moncton, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec, Regina, Saskatoon, Sherbrooke, Que., Toronto, Vancouver and Winnipeg.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

It is inevitable when the super-stars of hockey meet in the annual all-star game, that there will be thrills and drama. For here is the cream of the crop, players who represent literally millions of dollars spent in recruiting, developing and drilling them into the polished finesse that major hockey requires.

But, though the all-star game is now an annual affair, we doubt if it will ever produce such throat-catching drama as developed in the very first of such spectacles. It was on a February night of 1934, in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens, the night of the Ace Bailey benefit game and the first time, we believe, there ever was an all-star hockey battle.

A few weeks before, Leafs had played in Boston. What was just another game had suddenly belched forth grim and sinister tragedy; conjured up the chill black spectre of death in the evening, death in a hockey game.

Eddie Shore, powerful star of the Boston Bruins, most-idolized in Boston, most-hated elsewhere, had, from behind, roughly hurled his brawn into Bailey, a slim, fast-skating, hard-shooting right-winger, as Bailey turned from an abortive play, and was moving back. Shore never asked, never gave, any quarter in hockey. He played hockey as Dempsey fought, with an inborn savagery, a burning lust for victory.

So, in his own rugged fashion, Shore plunged into Bailey, to shoulder him out of the way. Bailey, off-balance, pitched forward on his face, his head struck the ice with fearful impact, he lay there in a suddenly nerveless, inert heap. You can usually tell these major crashes in hockey, and the crowd, the players, instantly sensed that here was injury and damage beyond the ordinary. His skull was fractured. For days, it was a toss-up whether Bailey lived or died.

The sports world turned bitterly against Shore. He was suspended by League edict, while the mob clamored that he should be barred for life. Others suggested he be jailed and tried for assault—perhaps for murder. The anti-Shore feeling was tremendous.

But Bailey recovered. And when it was decided to stage an all-star game for his benefit, Shore was one of those selected to face Maple Leafs. Before the game Bailey stood in mid-ice, shaking hands one by one with the players who were to perform in his behalf. Finally, it came the turn of Shore, the man whose check, good or bad, had caused all this, the man who had just missed plunging a fellow-player to death. A great crowd sat silent, hushed suddenly by the sheer gripping drama of the situation. You might have thought Shore's head would drop a bit, that he would have faltered or hesitated or glanced about. But he did none of those things. Chin up, eyes clear, he wheeled up to Bailey, stuck out his hand. Bailey shook it warmly. And a sudden roar of pent-up emotion, that burst with the sudden force of the Johnstown flood, shook the great building to the very rafters.

That was drama. We doubt if any other all-star game will ever produce its equal.

U.K. Ship Turns 'Pirate' For Day

NEW YORK (AP)—The uniform of the day aboard HMS Superb Sunday was "piratical," and the kids had a wonderful time.

From stem to stern, the 8,000-ton British cruiser was decked out for piracy. Some 300 handicapped and orphaned children, ranging in age from 5 to 13, came aboard for the gun.

The sailors wore smudged faces, eye patches and tattered clothing. The capstan, normally used to hoist the anchor, became a merry-go-round.

Two glowering pirates fought atop the cabin of a launch circling the river, and the loser walked the plank into the Hudson River.

But the most rewarding concession was the torpedo workshop, which became a realistic pirates cave. Children who found their way there were given "pieces of eight" and declared to be "Terrible Pirates."

The sailors said it is an old English naval custom to stage such parties in major foreign ports for "the most deserving children." Generally, they said, this means the underprivileged.

Civil Servants Seek Pay Boosts

OTTAWA (CP)—Chairman C. H. Bland of the civil service commission said Saturday what the commission is planning to recommend pay boosts affecting the majority of the 130,000 federal employees in Ottawa and across the country.

Mr. Bland, in an interview, said that the commission's studies likely will be completed in about a month when the recommendation will go forward for cabinet approval. He believed the boosts likely will become effective next December.

The commission chief said the pay boosts probably will go to the lower echelons of the civil service, such as clerical staff. He observed that the professional classes such as scientists and engineers, got pay boosts last spring.

One Person Injured In Strike Scuffle

HANOVER, Ont. (CP) — One person was injured in a series of scuffles that developed in the crowded yard of the strikebound Grey Mist Hosiery Ltd. plant early Sunday when picketers and sympathizers tried to stop loading of a truck.

Three local policemen managed to break up a crowd of several hundred persons who milled around the plant in a downpour. By 2:30 a.m. the crowd was dispersed and police stopped several fights.

The injured man was one of two unidentified men trying to load $7,000 worth of stock from the plant. He was treated for a scalp wound.

New UN President Spent Total of 32 Months In Jail

By MEL SUFRIN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—The new president of the UN General Assembly is a handsome, grey-haired woman of 53 who has had a liberal education for her important role in world affairs ranging from the cold reality of a jail cell to the gentler atmosphere of a Swiss finishing school.

She is Mme. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, sister of India's Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and a woman of many firsts in the fields of domestic and international politics.

An aristocratic rebel who dedicated herself to the fight for Indian independence with such fervor that she was three times jailed for participating in civil disobedience campaigns against the British rulers, she was India's first woman cabinet minister, her country's first woman ambassador to Washington and Moscow, the first woman to head a UN delegation, and now the first woman president of the UN assembly.

NOT INTERESTED IN CLOTHES

But while leading her sex in so many fields of international affairs, she prefers to be considered first as an individual, second as a woman. She claims little interest in clothes and likes to dress in conservatively colored saris or simple but tasteful suits.

A widow with three daughters, she devotes much of her time at home to her four grandchildren, an interest which has revealed to her a shortage of good books for children in India.

She says her spare-time preoccupation is "getting people to write wholesome books that children can understand and then seeing that they get published."

She adds that she is thinking of writing some such books herself.

"My idea is to give them an international twist so that young Indians will learn not only to love their own country, but also to have a world view."

Born Aug. 18, 1900, she was christened Swarup Karumi—beautiful princess. As is the custom among Kashmir Hindustanis, she was rechristened when she was wed May 10, 1921, to R. S. Pandit, a Sanskrit poet, scholar and law student who died in 1943. Her name now—Vijaya Lakshmi — means "goddess of victory." Her close friends call her "Nan," from the days when she cared for her younger sister after the death of their mother.

SOME CONFUSION

The fact that Mme. Pandit's last name is the same as used in referring to her brother, Pandit Nehru, often leads to some confusion in the minds of non-Indians. The explanation is that in Prime Minister Nehru's case, "Pandit" is a title, much like "professor." In India, it also appears as a last name, similar to such situations where "doctor" or "duke" can be last names or titles in Anglo-Saxon countries.

Mme. Pandit's family was once fairly well-to-do. The three Pandit children had private tutors; learned to ride; had an English governess and she had finishing school education in Switzerland. But the family lost much of its wealth as the price for passionate participation in the Gandhi - led movement for Indian independence.

BADGE OF HONOR

She fought alongside her brother in the independence movement and went to jail for the first time in 1932 for taking part in a demonstration against British and Indian government police. In all, Mme. Pandit spent a total of 32 months in prison. Her servitude is considered a badge of honor by Indians.

A woman of many interests, she loves flowers and good food and likes Broadway plays. She dislikes cats but tolerated them in prison because they killed rats. She speaks English melodiously and flawlessly and makes hard-hitting speeches at home in Hindustani. She knows the classics in ancient Persian-Urdu.

One thing dimmed her anticipation of coming back to the UN for this session: "Parties, how I hate them; one long agony. Day after day, the same talk, same food, same drink, and of course, the same people."

SURPRISE TO MANY

The fact that she was not given a cabinet post in the present Nehru government was a surprise to many who thought she wanted such a job. But she maintains that she prefers international affairs.

The important part she plays in India's role in world affairs is a reflection of the broader participation by Indian women in politics that is true of most other countries.

Noting that there are 10 women in the upper house of the Indian Parliament and 15 in the lower chamber, Mme. Pandit explains that it develops from the emphasis Gandhi laid on "equality for women in the national struggle."

Gas Attendant Shot In Stomach

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Ray Brown, a 54-year-old service station attendant, was shot in the stomach early Sunday by a masked robber who said he shot "to show that I mean business." Hospital officials said Sunday night his condition was fairly good.

However, an operation for removal of the bullet was unsuccessful.

The bandit escaped with about $200 after threatening two youths who were in the service station office with Brown.

According to Kenneth Plumb, 17, a part-time helper in the service station which is owned by his father, the masked man pushed past Brown and then turned and shoved a revolver in his back.

Brown made no attempt to resist but when he turned to face the man, one shot was fired and the attendant fell.

"That was to show that I mean business," said the bandit to Kenneth and Jim Plumb, both of whom were in the station office.

Doubts Reds Own Atom Artillery

HEIDELBERG, Germany (AP) Gen. Charles L. Bolte, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Army in Europe, said Sunday it is doubtful the Soviet Union has atomic artillery.

Six 280-m.m. atomic guns, now being shipped to his American forces in West Germany, "won't be put on a shelf," the general added.

"I doubt that the Russians have such artillery. For our own preparedness and training, however, we must always assume they do. The worst military offence is to be surprised.

"I don't think there's any imminence of war in Europe. But we have to keep on our toes. We have to keep a sense of urgency and go on the assumption that trouble could happen anytime—or else we are in danger of being surprised."

Gen. Bolte, 58-year-old veteran of two world wars, is leaving his headquarters here Tuesday to become the army vice-chief of staff in Washington. But he has prepared for the integration of the new big guns in Allied defences after his departure.

Charge Laborer Stabbed Doctor

ROUYN, Que. (CP)—Mike Kozar, 26-year-old laborer, was charged with murder Saturday in connection with the stabbing of a Rouyn doctor Friday night.

Kozar was charged following a coroner's inquest.

Police said Kozar stabbed Dr. Andre Ozegonski, 40, after the doctor refused to treat him because he had no money. Dr. Ozegonski died en route to hospital.

Mrs. C. Czerniak, a patient, was waiting in the doctor's office when the attack took place. She said she saw Kozar and the doctor fighting and then Kozar ran past her out of the office.

Kozar was arrested later as he sat in a car talking with a priest, Rev. Luc Muenier. Police said Kozar, previously employed in Virginiatown, about 27 miles from here, had been in Rouyn for about 10 days without a job.

Islands Refuge For Turks From Istanbul

WASHINGTON—Hundreds of Turkish business men and women commute daily from the hurley-hurley of Istanbul to the Kizil Adalar, the scenic Isles of the Princes in the Sea of Marmara.

These balmy islands are only about 10 miles from the heart of the ancient and busy city, says the National Geographic Society. Even so, they have kept their villas and casinos are interspersed with secluded retreats in cool pine groves. No automobiles are allowed.

There are nine of the red-rock islands in the Sea of Marmara near the Anatolian coast. Five are uninhabited. The four main islands —Buyuk Ada, Heybeli Ada, Burgaz and Kinali—have a permanent fishing and farming population of some 16,000, swelled in summer by 30,000 part-time residents.

For many Byantine emperors they were places of exile, hence their name. Some of the royal personages became monks, entering monasteries within sight of the Constantinople palaces where they formerly reigned in splendor. Because of the monasteries and their inhabitants, the islets also have been called "Isles of the Priests."

Formerly called Prinkipo, Buyuk Ada is the largest of the group. A hilly island nearly nine miles in circumference, it was once the retreat of hermits but is now a place of high fashion with a Riviera atmosphere.

From the monastery of St. George, crowning a 655-foot peak, there are striking views of the coast of Asia Minor. In the ruined Monastery of the Holy Virgin three of Constantinople's most famous empresses were exiled.

ISLAND GEM

Even more scenic and secluded is near-by Heybeli Ada, formerly called Khalki, site of the Turkish Naval College and of a theological school. Its forest-fringed shores, indented with tiny bays, formed a setting for the tender love of Emperor John VIII and his Empress Maria. As the Byzantine Empire tottered towards its end early in the 15th century, together they built a monastery. She died alone while he was away seeking Western aid against the Turks.

Pine-crowned Burgaz, originally named Antigone after the father of one of Alexander the Great's generals, has elegant homes. Kinali, smallest of the inhabited islands, suggests in its barreness the tragedies it has seen. Three Emperors and three empresses of Byzantium were among its royal exiles.

Struggles Into Port

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)—With her hold half-full of water, the 449-ton lumber freighter Launa arrived at Montego Bay Saturday after a 12-hour battle with 75-mile-an-hour winds in the Caribbean. A sister ship, the 318-ton Margarita Ana, has not been heard from since last Monday and is long overdue.

In the harbor the Launa rejoined another sister ship, the Selena, which had been with the Launa when the hurricane struck Wednesday. The Selena was forced to jettison her lumber cargo and came in eight hours before the Launa.

Korea Has Long History Of Peace And Independence

WASHINGTON — Although for the last eight years Korea has been a land divided, until half a century ago it was one of the world's most independent, homogeneous and stable nations.

When the industrial north was split from the agricultural south by the 38th-parallel division in 1945, Korea's economic life line—exchange of power, lumber, minerals and paper from the north for south-grown rice — was severed. Since that time, neither region has been able to benefit from its resources.

A narrow mountainous peninsula, Korea stretches 660 miles south of the Manchurian border between the Yellow Sea and the Japan Sea to within 110 miles of Kyushu, Japan's southernmost island. The country covers 85,270 square miles, about one and one half times the size of Florida, which it roughly resembles in shape, says the National Geographic Society.

RICH IN POWER, MINERALS

Before World War II, Korean industry—concentrated mainly in the north—was larger than that of either Mexico or Turkey. Its hydro-electric potential was estimated at 5 million killowatts, more than the 1937 electrical output of either Italy or France.

The land is known to hold highly strategic mineral reserves, largest in the Far East outside Manchuria. Fifteen years ago Korea produced about one-third of the world's graphite. Gold production ran as high as $50 million a year. Coal reserves are well over 1½ billion tons, and the iron ore reserve is estimated at more than a billion tons.

But despite its industrial potential, four-fifths of Korea's people are farmers, committed to rice agriculture on the fertile mountain slopes. In 1940, the nation was the world's fourth largest rice producer.

Korea also ranked third in the world in commercial fishing in 1939. Some 75 kinds of edible fish are found along its 11,000-mile coastline, where warm and cold currents meet. The country has 10 major all-weather ports, 29 secondary ones, and 139 other offshore anchorages.

ANCIENT HERITAGE

Korea's legendary history goes back about 4,000 years. Its independent kingdoms were well known to the Chinese 3,000 years ago. From an early base of imported Chinese culture, the Koreans developed an individual civilization with a separate language. Nicknamed the "Irish of the Orient" because of their spirited, independent nature, they have been engaged in a tragic struggle for freedom, unity and independence for half a century.

A "hermit" nation during most of the 19th century when communication with the rest of the world was discouraged, the country was claimed as a protectorate by the Japanese in 1905. Five years later it was annexed into the Japanese Empire, and its name changed to Chosen, which means, ironically, "Land of the Morning Calm."

In 1919 Korean nationalists staged a "passive revolution." A republic-in-exile was established under the presidency of Dr. Syngman Rhee. In 1948, the Rhee government was recognized by the United Nations, although the northern half remained under Russian domination.

In 1950, Korea's population was just under 30 million, ranking 12th in the world, with two-thirds of the populace in the area south of the 38th parallel.

During the war, an estimated 1 million in the southern zone were killed and another million permanently injured. North Korea is reported to have lost over 1½ million.

According to the Korean delegation to the United Nations, at least 1,200 of the nation's 5,000 villages have been wiped out, and 52—all but 3—of the major cities critically damaged. The homeless and refugees in South Korea alone may number 8 million.

Reveals Facts About Human Hair

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK (AP)—Try a little quiz about human hair:

Does shaving make hair grow back coarser?

Does shaving make hair grow faster?

Does a beard grow faster in hot weather than cold?

Does each hair keep growing all the time?

Can hair turn white or grey overnight?

The answer each time is no, say most of the scientific studies of hair.

Many women refrain from shaving their legs in belief it will make the hair tougher and make it grow faster. That's a fallacy.

And young men, eager to sprout a dashing moustache, shave their upper lip repeatedly hoping to speed the goal. That's also a fallacy.

The complaint of some men that their beards grow faster in summer than winter also appears untrue. Climate has no effect.

HALF AN INCH MONTHLY

Generally, the speed of hair growth and type of hair which grows in any one area of the body do not appear to be influenced by outside factors.

Beard and moustache fanciers may be interested to know that the average rate of growth of beard hair is about 1-64th of an inch a day, or about half an inch a month. One study reports scalp hair usually grows about an inch in 100 days.

Hair doesn't grow steadily, but goes to sleep or rests. All hairs have a life span of fairly uniform growth, followed by a resting period. Then the hair falls out, to be replaced by a new hair growing from the same hair follicle. Unless, of course, you go bald.

These findings about hair were summed up by Dr. Chase B. Jones in a radio talk over the General Electric Science Forum program.

Hair color, he explains, is due to tiny pigment granules in the cortex of the hair. White hair has no pigment granules.

"Hair does not turn grey or white overnight. The granules already present in hair do not disappear. The greying of hair consists in the falling out of pigmented hairs, and their replacement by hairs containing little or no pigment granules."

RESTING STAGE

Dr. Jones reports that more than half of all hairs over most of the body are in the resting stage at any one time. The growing stage thus accounts for less than half the life period of most hairs. Hair on the head has a relatively longer growing period and shorter resting stage than body hair, while beard hair seems to be in the growing stage most of its lifespan.

The lifespan of individual beard hairs probably varies, but is usually on the order of several years.

As you probably suspect, beard hair is much coarser than scalp hair. Scalp hair is usually about 2-1,000ths of an inch in diameter, while beard hair ranges from 4-1,000ths to 9-1,000ths.

A cross-section of scalp hair is usually oval, but beard hair comes in a vast assortment, with triangular cross-sections, kidney-shaped sections and many shapes that don't fit any geometrical patterns.

ORION IS BACK

The return of the clock-hour that was transposed last spring, disclosed at Sunday midnight the chilling fact Orion is farther up the eastern sky than may have been expected. The huge winter constellation moves up over the eastern horizon around 10.30 or 11, and will dominate the sky until spring. That was a wonderful show east of the meridian Sunday night centring around the waning moon.

'World Champs' Welcomed By City Crowds

The World's Champions!"

That how's the Peterborough Trailermen were billed Saturday night on their homecoming from a victorious Mann Cup series in the west, and Peterborough gave them a welcome world champions deserve.

Cheering throngs lined George St., as the Petes rode to a civic reception at Miller Bowl in open convertibles, their names painted on large posters.

The parade, which started from the Armories, and wound down George St., was led by Judy Welsh, drum majorette, and Rupert Brady, bearing the Union Jack. Following behind the pair was a truck carrying the PCVS Dixie Six which provided non-martial tunes for the procession.

In convertibles loaned by Peterborough car dealers were the players while other cars bore civic officials, wives of the players, and club executive members.

MINORS INCLUDED

A fire truck carried not only its regular load of aerial ladders but dozens and dozens of minor league lacrosse players while the shiny silver trailers built by H. B. McGinness made up the rest of the entourage.

After the parade's arrival at Miller Bowl, the first part of the welcoming ceremonies was conducted by cheerleaders from Kenner Collegiate and PCVS who bore the player identification markers in the parade.

The eight from Kenner and trio from PCVS collaborated on one cheer then each group did a solo performance. CHEX announcer George Ludgate acted as master of ceremonies.

Ald. Doug Miller, representing the mayor, then extended official congratulations to the team and recalled how, upon entering the Senior "A" grouping in Ontario, the aggregation was looked on askance. Peterborough since then, he said, has shown itself capable of supporting lacrosse and producing players and now has a team second to none.

SAME SPONSOR

One of the biggest ovations of the evening was received by Harry McGinness, sponsor of the club, when he promised he would "again extend an offer to sponsor the world's champions." Prior to the evening there had been some conjecture that the Petes would be looking for a new sponsor.

Other speakers included members of the club executive while players, civic officials and newsmen were introduced to the audience of approximately 1000. Each player was presented with a shirt by Don Prestwell of the Collis Department Store. Each of the players spoke briefly but it was Nip O'Hearn who summed it up for them: "It was nice to go out west," he said "but it's wonderful to be home."

Rambling Reporter

After a good talking-to by Fire Chief William Sorrie, seven-year-old Jimmy Heard, of Nassau, will likely steer clear of fire alarm boxes when he feels in a frisky mood. Two false alarms were turned in at Box 5—across from the Canada Packers plant—in a little more than two hours Saturday night. Young Jimmy was pointed out as the mischief maker who rang the alarm at 4.45 p.m., and Chief Sorrie gave him a talking-to about his misdemeanour. Two unidentified girls were reported to have turned in the second alarm at 6.55 p.m., as the crowd was gathering to welcome Peterborough's champion lacrosse team.

Ford Lays Off 955 Workers For Changeover

WINDSOR (CP)—The layoff of 955 hourly-rated employees of the Ford Motor Company of Canada at the end of this week was announced today by Ford President Rhys M. Sale.

Mr. Sale said that the movement of assembly operations to the new Oakville plant will necessitate the layoffs following the taking of annual inventory Thursday and Friday.

He stated that many of these men being laid off will be back at work before Christmas as production gets into full swing on the 1954 models.

Plant changeover from 1953 to 1954 models is to begin in November and during the changeover more layoffs are to be expected.

Mr. Sale stressed that layoffs beginning late in October will have no relationship to Oakville operations, but will be purely seasonal.

ONE OF BEST YEARS

This year has been "one of the best in the history of Ford of Canada," Mr. Sale also stated.

He said that 27,237 more cars and trucks have been produced so far in 1953 than during the same period in 1952 and that sales of passenger cars to date are 86 per cent above those during the same 1952 period.

Final assembly operations on some Ford and Meteor cars is to continue here until next May, although it had previously been planned to move all Ford and Meteor production to Oakville at the time of model change.

Mr. Sale said expansion work is still going forward in Windsor and that eventually there will be more employees at Ford than ever before.

Union Accepts Board's Report

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) have accepted two conciliation reports as a basis for further negotiations with Upper Canada Mines Ltd. The reports are wide apart on wages and union security.

The majority report recommended an eight-cent wage increase or, alternatively, a reduction of the work week from 48 to 44 hours without loss in take-home pay. It also supported a voluntary, revocable checkoff of union dues provided the members voted for it.

The minority report rejected the checkoff as "the first step towards a closed shop and compulsory unionism."

Instead of an immediate wage increase, the minority report recommended extension of the last contract for one year with an "open-end" wage clause pending a jump in the price of gold.

The mining company has not commented.

Board Defers Application Of TV Station

Second Application For Same Area To Be Considered

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC board of governors today recommended that the government licence television stations in Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Kingston and Kitchener.

The board also recommended, following public hearings in Winnipeg last week, that new radio stations be licensed in Brampton, Ont., and Montmagny, Three Rivers and Chicoutimi, Que.

The board picked Sunwapta Broadcasting Company Ltd., operators of radio station CFRN, for approval of a television licence in Edmonton. The company was one of three which applied for a licence on channel three.

Recommendation for approval of a television licence in Saskatoon was made on the application of A. A. Murphy and Sons Ltd., operators of radio station CFQC. This application also was one of three.

The application of Central Ontario Television Ltd., for a television licence on channel 13 was recommended for approval while a similar application by Grand Television Ltd., a group including Senator W. D. Euler, Senator Arthur Hardy and others, was recommended for denial.

Both the Central Television and Grand Television applications were for stations in Kitchener.

BROOKLAND APPLICATION

The application of Brookland Company Ltd., composed of Senator W. Rupert Davies, Roy Thomson and associates, for a television station in Kingston on channel 11 was recommended for approval.

However, an application by the same group for a television station in Peterborough, was deferred by the board to permit consideration of another application "represented as now almost complete for the same area."

The board also recommended deferment of an application from Island Broadcasting Company Ltd., operators of radio station CFCX Charlottetown, for a licence on channel 13 in the P. E. I. capital. The board said recommendation was "for provision of full necessary information by the applicant."

Application from Calgary Television Ltd., formed by Calgary radio stations CFCN, CFAC and SKXL, for a television station on channel two was recommended for approval.

The Brampton applications for a new radio station, recommended by the board for approval was by E. F. Job of Brampton, president of the Peel Gazette, for a 250-watt station.

The board also recommended that St. Lawrence Broadcasting Company Ltd., be permitted to establish a frequency modulation station with 250 watts power in addition to the station it now operates in Kingston.

BETTER SERVICE

In its recommendation on the Kitchener applications, the board said that after weighing them carefully "the board is of the opinion that that of the Central Television Ltd. gave indication of better service for the area."

The announcement said the board "noted that part of the ownership and the main management of Grand Television Ltd. would be provided by persons connected with interests having a large share in the television station recommended by the board for Kingston and in an application for another television station at Peterborough and having wide interests in a number of sound broadcasting stations."

The board said it also took into account the fact that half Central Ontario Television is controlled by interests with a half share in a television station recommended for Quebec to operate chiefly in French.

Dealing with other applications, the board recommended:

Power increase to 5,000 watts from 1,000 in daytime for station CFOR, Orillia;

A power increase for the Windsor, Ont., television station of Western Ontario Broadcasting Company Ltd. to 250,000 watts video and 140,000 watts audio from 103,000 watts video and 61,800 watts audio with a higher directional antenna.

Two Courts In Session Tax Capacity of County Building

Both Supreme Court and County Court are being held today in the Peterborough County Courthouse, taxing that building's facilities to the utmost. Mr. Justice Wilson is presiding as the fall assizes open at 2 p.m. in the main court room. No criminal cases are listed but there are five civil actions entered for trial with jury, and 14 actions entered for trial without jury.

Six of the non-jury cases are divorce actions.

At 2.30 p.m. the trial of Leonard Taylor, 21-year-old Curve Lake Indian, continues after being adjourned from Thursday afternoon. Taylor is charged with robbing 80-year-old Charles Smith of Lakefield of some $50 in cash and giving him a brutal beating.

Taylor, who goes into the witness box on his own behalf at 2.30 p.m., had previously elected speedy trial in county court before Judge Hugh de N. Kennedy.

The Taylor trial has already gone on two days and the highlight is expected today when the stocky young Indian tells of his movements on the morning of Friday, May 1, when Smith was struck over the head with a hammer or spike and knocked unconscious.

TO CALL WITNESSES

After Defence Counsel Edward Fanjoy has completed his case Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw is expected to call some witness in rebuttal. Six Curve Lake Indians, including Taylor's father, gave defence evidence Thursday afternoon.

Because the main courtroom is being used by the Supreme Court the county court will have to be held in the County Council chambers.

The grand jury will not have any "bills" to consider because there are no criminal cases, but Justice Wilson will probably instruct them to inspect the jail and a number of city and county institutions.

Fall Fairs Near End Of List

The calendar is gradually striking off the dates of the fall fairs as September gives way to October. Lindsay closed with a big crowd Saturday midnight. Four hours later the Conklin outfit was ready to roll out its midway trucks for some other pasture.

The list that was topped with Belleville, Aug. 17-20, is now down to Kingston, opening Tuesday, September 29 and running to Saturday. Campbellford is Wednesday this week; Bobcaygeon and Roseneath are Oct. 2 and 3.

Here is a whole circuit of ambling around in the autumn air and sunlight: Roseneath and on to Cobourg for the opening of the first world plowing match Oct. 6 to 9, and then back to Norwood Oct. 9, 10 and 12, with Thanksgiving Day offering the major program in the greatly improved grounds of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society.

In the meantime Madoc is Wed. Oct. 7; Warkwork was last Friday; Blackstock is Oct. 17. Finally there is the Ottawa Winter Fair Oct. 27-31, and the Royal at Toronto Nov. 13-21.

A Cobourg report says more than 200 firms have taken space for the exhibition of machinery and the great variety of displays that are seen at the International.

The Canadian entry in the competition for the world title will be decided by a preliminary round confined to plowmen from British Columbia, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

Oldsters' Haven

DORCHESTER, England (CP)—Dorsetshire attracts "too many retired persons," says Dr. A. A. Lisney, county health officer. One in seven of the population is over 65, and he estimated a quarter of the total would be pensioners within 20 years.

Can Of Paint Explodes On Kitchen Stove

A can of paint exploded Sunday afternoon when it became overheated on an electric stove, and it started a fire causing $750 damage to the kitchen and contents at the home of Gordon Wright, 56 Sophia St.

Green paint spattered around the walls of the kitchen and the resulting fire damaged the electric refrigerator, clock, radio and other contents, to the extent of $500. The room will have to be replastered and renovated, boosting the damage bill to an estimated total of $750.

Wright, a mechanic, was going to spray-paint his car. Before thinning it out he put the can on a metal plate covering the element. Then he went outside.

The paint overheated and exploded. The blast was strong enough to blow out the window on the east side of the kitchen. There were no injuries as nobody was in the kitchen at the time.

City firemen responded to the call at 4:44 p.m. and used a booster line to put out the kitchen fire.

Toronto Man Hurt In Crash

LINDSAY (ENS) — A Toronto man, 50-year-old Daniel Young, of 282 Sherbrooke St., Toronto, was taken to Civic Hospital early Sunday morning after he was injured in a two-car collision, east of Omemee. He has a swollen right leg that was believed to have been broken, and cuts on his forehead.

Hospital authorities said today that his condition is satisfactory.

OPP Constable Clive Naismith, of Lindsay, who investigated the accident, said that Young's car was parked on Highway 7 so he could get directions from a resident who lived just outside the village.

An eastbound car, driven by Lawrence Fontaine, 23, of 146 Aylmer St., ran into the rear of the parked vehicle. Young was hurt and taken to hospital but his nephew, who was in the car, escaped injury.

Fontaine was shaken up and suffered a cut lip.

Driverless Truck Skidded By Upset On Road

Gordon Simpson, RR 3, Peterborough, could hardly believe his eyes Saturday evening when a driverless pick-up truck skidded past and rolled upside down on the side of the road.

Mr. Simpson had just pulled into the lane leading to the CGE property south of Nassau on the river road about 6:30 p.m. when it happened. He rushed over but the driver was nowhere in sight.

He made a quick search of the area but couldn't see anyone so he ran to Nassau and phoned the OPP, telling them to send an ambulance. Constable Wallace Mohns and the Nisbett ambulance arrived shortly after.

NO ONE FOUND

By that time about a dozen cars had stopped and Constable Mohns and a number of occupants of the cars made a search of the river bank. Still no one was found.

The truck, belonging to Harold and Joseph Wiggins, had been proceeding north and had just come over a rise when it skidded about 100 feet before upsetting beside the road, spilling a quantity of plumbing tools and equipment on the ground. The left front hood, fender and windshield, the left door and right front fender were damaged.

The only clue as to who the driver had been was a red army beret with a Hastings and Prince Edward badge on it lying beside the truck. The badge had been bent slightly.

On Sunday the OPP identified the driver as Wayne Brown, 18, 453 Wellington St., who was home on leave from his regiment. He told police he wasn't in the truck when it came to rest; he had bailed out and left the scene. He was uninjured.

Constable Mohns said charges would be laid against Brown.

Two Youths Jailed For Guelph Breakin

GUELPH (CP)—Kenneth Orr, 19, of Pleasant Valley, Sask., and Donald Martin Lillow, 18, of Stratford, were sentenced today to three months in jail after they pleaded guilty to breaking into a Guelph park booth with intent to steal. The pair received a concurrent three-month term on a charge of possessing shop-breaking tools.

Man Drowns In Otonabee In Heart Of City Pulled From River Before

Found By Firemen With Flashlights Inhalator Fails To Revive Victim Helped From Water Earlier By Passerby

Firemen recovered the body of 46-year-old Michael J. McNamara, 193 Lake St., from the Otonabee river, due east of the market hall clock, shortly after 9:30 p.m. Saturday. Working in the eerie light of flashlights on the narrow shelf of land between the river and the steep, rubbish-strewn bank, a detachment from the fire department administered oxygen by means of a resuscitator for 50 minutes before Dr. H. S. Dunham pronounced McNamara dead at 10:30 p.m.

Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw said today that there would be an inquest into the drowning. A definite date has not been set, but it is believed it will be held Wednesday afternoon, October 14.

Although the man's head was lacerated with superficial wounds, Coroner Dr. H. G. Carleton said these were not connected with the death, which a post mortem examination by Dr. John Whiteside showed was due to drowning. It was thought that McNamara, who had only one arm, may have struck his head against a rock as he attempted to struggle up the river bank.

Dr. Carleton said he would discuss the matter of an inquest with Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw today.

Fears for McNamara's safety were first felt when a man named Roy Bath walked into the fire hall at approximately 8:30 p.m. seeking a handout. Bath, who had frequented the fire hall on several previous occasions, talked with some of the firemen in the apparatus rooms on the ground floor. Then, after some trivial talk, he showed Capt. Victor Barry some blood stains on his jacket and his water-soaked shoes and socks.

PULLED MAN OUT

He told Capt. Barry he had pulled a man of the water but didn't say where. He said the man was all right but wouldn't give any details as to where the incident took place.

Aware that Bath had been drinking, Fireman Clarence Campbell suggested that the other man might have fallen in the creek near the Queen's Hotel. Bath was questioned further on this point but would give no definite answer. He merely repeated that the man was all right.

Alarmed by the blood on Bath's jacket and fearing that if the other man had been injured he might bleed to death, Campbell took a hand lamp and explored the creek from the rear of the Bridgeway building on Charlotte St. as far as Hunter St. but saw no sign of anyone.

Meanwhile, Bath, who had left the station, re-appeared and reassured the firemen that the man was all right. He said the man was with a friend.

Capt. Barry then warned Bath of the seriousness of leaving a man in a condition where he might bleed to death and persuaded him to accompany Fireman Allan Burdett to the scene.

The two started walking towards Charlotte St. and Bath asked Burdett if he had a car. Burdett said he hadn't and so Bath led him back past the fire hall and down Simcoe St. to the Quaker Oats Co parking lot. He said his friend was down by the first woodpile south of Simcoe St.

Burdett walked over to the spot where he heard someone coughing and retching but he couldn't see anyone. So he went to the CPR roundhouse and borrowed a flashlight. He returned and shone the flashlight around the vicinity of the woodpile but couldn't see anyone. Bath then asked him to shine the flashlight towards the river and he saw an object floating in the river but couldn't tell what it was.

PHONED FOR HELP

Burdett then raced to the Quaker Oats Co. boiler room where he phoned assistant chief Stewart Foster who immediately came down with a pumper and boat. Burdett's phone call was logged at 9:25 p.m. He had left the station at 9:03 p.m.

In the boat were City Constable Louis Roderique, Acting Captain Hubert Kennedy, Campbell and

Two Children Slightly Hurt Hit By Cars

Two children sustained slight injuries in auto accidents during the weekend on Peterborough streets. They were Wayne Primeau, three, of 651 Donegal St., and Christopher Neck, five, of 660 Ross St.

John Outram, 20, of 728 Water St., was driving east on Parkhill Rd. Saturday evening when the Primeau lad ran out from the curb into the fender of his car. He received only a foot bruise when bowled over by the vehicle.

Marmion Clements, 65, of Warsaw, was driving south on Roger St. about the same time when the five-year-old Neck child ran into the fender of his car, receiving a bump on the head.

In neither case were damages sustained by the autos.

HIT PARKED CAR

A crash Friday night resulted in heavy damage to two cars when a 15-year-old driver lost control of his vehicle and smashed into the side of a parked car. The youth, John Mason, of 1353 Monaghan Rd., driving his father's 1951 model vehicle, told police the car started to pull to the right and he could not stop in time to avoid an accident.

Damage to the Mason car was estimated at $450 while the parked vehicle, owned by Carl's Auto Service of Long Branch, was damaged to the extent of $800. The accident, on Water St., was investigated by PC William G. Scott.

Damage was set at over $100 in an accident involving a novice driver, Jean Findlay, 22, of 176 Brock St., and William St. Thomas, 28, of 304 Brock St.

St. Thomas was stopped at Aylmer St. facing west on Brock when the Findlay car swung widely off Aylmer St. to proceed east and caught the left side of the other vehicle. The accident, which occurred Sunday afternoon, was investigated by Constable Scott.

Traffic Causes 17 Deaths Over Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traffic accidents accounted for 17 of the 22 violent deaths throughout eastern Canada during the week-end.

With the highway toll at 17, a Canadian Press survey revealed the five others attributed to falls, a fire, asphyxiation and a heart attack during a regimental parade. All occurred in Ontario and Quebec.

In Ontario, Mrs. Clara Cases, 70, of Westmount, Que., was burned to death when fire early Saturday destroyed the Sunnybank Hotel at Waupoos near Picton. Mrs. Arne Hautamaki, 29, of Port Arthur died after slipping in a steam bath. Police are holding her 25-year-old husband suspecting foul play.

Michael MacNamara of Peterborough died Saturday after falling down the steep banks of the Otonabee river there. He landed on stones along the river's edge.

Joe Mousseau, 19, a worker at the Dome gold mine in Timmins, was killed near there when the car in which he was riding hit a bridge. Rupert Hewlett, 63, of Renfrew died in hospital after being fatally injured when his car skidded on wet pavement Saturday and hit a parked tow truck.

TWO-YEAR-OLD DIES

Two-year-old James Jordan was killed Saturday when he ran into the side of a passing truck in front of his Richmond Hill home. Robert Brethette, 45, of Searchmont, 30 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie, was killed near there Saturday when he fell from a moving truck. He was the father of six children.

At Brockville, 32-year-old Bernard Anderson of Winnipeg was killed Saturday night in a head-on collision along the River road. William Love, 21, died in a Hamilton hospital after being fatally injured Saturday when his car rammed into the rear of a truck at nearby Aldershot. Rose Bruesler, aged 22 months, died in a Toronto hospital after being run over Saturday by a car at her parents' suburban Cooksville farm.

In Quebec, Maj. R. A. Brown, 43, second-in-command of the Hull Regiment, collapsed and died Sunday while taking part in the regiment's annual memorial parade.

Annette Vezina, 38, and Raymond de Carufel, both of Hull, were killed Saturday night in a two-car crash near Lachute.

Hear Evidence In Charge Of Bootlegging

COBOURG (ENS)—Evidence in a charge of keeping liquor for sale against Andy Armour, of Cobourg, was taken in police court here, and Magistrate R. B. Baxter reserved his decision until next Friday.

Evidence revealed that police had been keeping Armour's house, a small dwelling in which he lived alone, under surveillance for some time.

Chief H. Pearse testified that, to his knowledge, Armour was not employed during the period on which the charge was based, three months up to September 12.

On August 30, a Sunday, he saw a car pull up at Armour's house at 4.20 p.m. A local resident, William Neherniak, entered and came out five minutes later. He went south to Water St. where the chief stopped the car, searched it and found a bottle of wine on the back seat, covered with a blanket. The seal was not broken.

LED TO FINE

Constable Robert Caldwell testified that on the early morning of September 10, on College St., he stopped a car which five minutes before he had seen in front of Armour's house. He searched the car and found a bottle of rye. As a result, one of the occupants, a man named Flesch, was fined $100 and costs for having liquor not obtained on his permit.

When Armour was arrested he had over $400 in cash on his person.

Constable E. Butler testified that on August 30 he was on patrol with Constable L. Huskilson and arrested Tom Munroe in a taxi which had been at Armour's house and left again. Butler took possession of a bottle of rye which was in Munroe's possession. Munroe was later fined $100 and costs for having liquor not obtained on his permit.

Constable Butler told of going to Armour's house with a search warrant at 11.50 p.m. September 12. The search revealed 16 bottles of wine; six 26-ounce bottles and three "mickies" of rye, all the same brand as seized at the time Flesch and Munroe were stopped and searched.

Eric Niles, assistant vendor at the liquor store in Cobourg, produced wine slips showing that Armour had purchased 53 bottles of wine during the three months period referred to in the charge.

Crown Attorney Harry Deyman said that it was significant that Armour's place was frequented at hours when legitimate outlets were closed.

Trying To Give Charles Carefree, Normal Boyhood

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

LONDON (AP)—Prince Charles, Duke of Cornwall, heir apparent to the throne, has retired, to grow up.

There's no iron curtain here, but a veil almost as impenetrable has been draped around the chubby, sunny-haired boy whose very existence is assurance that there will always be an England.

The lively, interested little boy was deliberately placed in the background after the gush of Coronation publicity last June. Photographs have been discouraged and so have chronicles of his activities.

Explanation in court circles of this veil is that his parents, the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh, thought it was time he got out of the public eye for awhile.

They are trying, under all the difficulties of royal position, to give him at least a few short years in which he can grow up like any other little boy.

NO ACTION TAKEN

There are indications they paid attention to tart observations in some quarters that a steady diet of adulation might make a little smarty of him. It's as easy to turn a princely head as to spoil any other youngster with overdoes of applause.

The Queen has received a number of petitions to create her son Prince of Wales soon. Many Welshmen, particularly, thought it would be fitting to have him elevated this Coronation year.

But the Queen, it was reported, thinks he is too young to be the focal point of a great ceremony at Carnarvon Castle in North Wales, where sovereigns traditionally create the Princes of Wales.

In Charles' rearing there is an obvious effort to forestall any feeling that he is an exceptionally important little boy.

The Prince made a tremendous impression on emotional crowds at the Coronation of his mother. He did it by being a most natural youngster, intensely interested, lively but well-behaved, in the royal box at Westminster Abbey. He saw his mother crowned, then sat very quietly through a religious service and the ceremony of homage.

Later, giddy thousands cheered him at Buckingham Palace. Some thought he seemed to like it too much. This view was expressed by the labor newspaper Daily Herald, which observed:

"From the balcony of Buckingham Palace or from the royal cars, he already has become accustomed to seeing the British people as a cheering, adulatory throng.

"DELIGHTFUL BOY"

"By all appearances he is a delightful little boy.

"But is it fair to him, or to the generation over which he will one day reign, to subject him to these repeated doses of mass emotion?"

So since the splurge of the Coronation, Prince Charles is being shielded from mass displays. He is quietly acquiring a tan and getting in a lot of practice with a toy rifle on the secluded grounds of Balmoral Castle in Scotland.

There is no more speculation about his being made Prince of Wales soon, and it appears that he will be old enough to appreciate what it's all about when he assumes that dignity. The last Prince of Wales, now the Duke of Windsor, was 16 before he was elevated.

In court circles it is said that plans for the prince's education have not been settled. Before making decisions his parents want to see in what direction his talents may incline.

But heirs to the throne face a formidable amount of schooling, with emphasis on history, languages, economics and complex constitutional questions.

DIFFICULT LIFE

Much of their teaching, normally, is by private tutors because a young prince thrown into an elementary school with a lot of other youngsters is marked child. Either he is fawned upon too much, or he has to live up to his station by being brighter and tougher than anyone else.

But recent heirs to the throne have had short interludes at Oxford, Cambridge and other universities. And, as the son of a sailor duke, there is a likelihood that Charles will be steered into Dartmouth Naval College, where the Duke of Edinburgh learned about the sea and ships.

In one place or another, Charles is going to be exposed to a lot of education. So for the time being, it's maybe just as well that he's exposed to just being a boy.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM GARTH MANLEY, the bride formerly Miss Beverley Pomeroy, as pictured at the reception following their marriage Saturday in Bethany United Church. —(Parks Studio Photo)

Manley-Pomeroy Wedding

BETHANY — (ENS) — Amid a lovely setting of autumn flowers and ferns in the United Church at Bethany on Saturday afternoon, Beverley Geraldine, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Pomeroy, Bethany, became the bride of William Garth Manley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Manley, Bewdley. The Rev. H. A. Wolfraim, of Lakefield officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of white nylon net over taffeta floor length skirt, with strapless bodice of Chantilly lace and a matching net jacket. A pearl tiara held her fingertip veil of tulle illusion and she was carrying a bouquet of red roses.

Maid of honor, Miss Marie Carr was frocked in rose net over taffeta with bouffant floor length skirt and strapless bodice of matching lace. Mrs. Murray Manley and Miss Peggy Reynolds, who were the bridesmaids wore gowns alike in blue net over taffeta. They all wore matching net jackets and headdresses and carried baskets of pink and white gladioli and asters. The tiny flower girl, Lois Andrus, cousin of the bride, was frocked in pink taffeta with net overskirt. She also carried a basket of autumn flowers.

Mr. Murray Manley was groomsman for his brother and the ushers were Ronald Pomeroy, brother of the bride, and Ted Manley, brother of the groom.

Wedding music was played by Miss Betty Waddell, Lindsay. Before the ceremony, Mr. Hilton Manley of Lindsay, uncle of the groom, sang "The Lord's Prayer" and during the signing of the register he sang "Because."

The reception for about 70 guests was held in the Sunday school hall, where the bride's mother received in a gown of royal blue nylon lace with navy hat and accessories and wore a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother assisted and was wearing a dress of grey bengaline ottoman with black velvet hat and black accessories and a corsage of deep red roses.

Later the couple left on a motor trip to Quebec and the United States. For traveling the bride chose a suit of powder blue French poodle cilth with pink feathered hat and navy accessories. Her corsage was of pink sweetheart roses.

They will live at 659 George St., N. in Peterborough.

Ahrens-Harrison Wedding Rites At Mark St. Church

In Mark St. United Church the marriage took place Saturday of Ruth Agnes, daughter of Lillian V. Harrison and Everett R. Harrison of Peterborough to George Henry Ahrens, son of Mr. Arthur Ahrens of Elmwood, Ontario, and the late Mrs. Ahrens. The Rev. Dr. N. D. Patterson officiated.

Pink and white gladioli decorated the church. Music was played by organist Mrs. Cecil Searles and before the ceremony Mrs. Jessie Spencley sang "Until." During the signing of the register she sang "I'll Walk Beside You."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of imported brocaded satin over nylon tulle made with a scalloped decollete which was brought into a pleated front. It had long pointed sleeves and a tightly fitted bodice which fell into a Victorian style train over a pale blue organdy and nylon tulle skirt. Her fingertip veil was of nylon illusion net and was caught to a headdress of pearl orange blossoms. She carried a cascade of white gladioli, pink sweetheart roses and white stephanotis.

Miss Sallie Weiss was her maid of honor and was frocked in misty blue taffeta. The dress was made with a princess pleated bodice and shawl collar and full skirt and she wore a white feather headband. She carried a cascade of yellow gladioli and talisman roses.

The groom's brother, Gerald Ahrens was groomsman. Ushers were Jack Hamlin, cousin of the bride, and Carl Rody, brother-in-law of the groom.

At the reception following, in the church parlor, the groom's sister, Mrs. Carl Rody received, wearing a dress in winter white with red velvet trim and a red velvet hat. Her corsage was of garnet sweetheart roses.

The bride and groom left later for a trip to the central States. For travelling the bride wore a French styled wine iridescent tweed suit with black accessories and her going-away corsage was of Johanna Hill cream roses.

They will live at North Bay.

The Olde Curiosity Shoppe, an annual project of the 57th Regiment of the IODE, will be open until Wednesday this week. It is under the capable convenership of Mrs. Claire Stuart and the conveners assisting her last week were Mrs. George Moore, Mrs. R. Payne, Mrs. Cy Whatley, Mrs. A. Hempstead and Mrs. E. Graham.

MR. AND MRS. LESLIE GRAHAM are pictured cutting their wedding cake, Mrs. Graham is the former Miss Louise Leslie. —(Roy Studio Photo)

Graham-Leslie Wedding

A very lovely wedding of wide interest took place at the Trinity United Church on Saturday afternoon. Miss Mary Louise Leslie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Leslie of Peterborough, became the bride of Mr. James Charles Leslie Graham of Westport, Connecticut, in a ceremony in which the Rev. Gordon S. Maxwell officiated. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Graham, also of Peterborough.

Baskets of white 'mums and talisman gladioli and palms and ferns banked the chancel of the church. Mrs. Hugh Redmond was at the organ playing traditional wedding music and she also accompained Mrs. Charles Holmes who sang "The Wedding Prayer" preceding the ceremony and "Love never Faileth" during the signing of the register.

The brides gown of de-lustred peau-de-soie was a slim sheath with intricate back flowing into a short train. The deep scoop neckline was filled and softened with folds of nylon tulle and the tiny jacket was topped with an Elizabethan collar. The jacket had over-the-elbow sleeves and she wore tiny matching mittens. French illusion veiling was caught to a cap which matched her gown and she was carrying a showered cascade of red Garette rosettes.

She was given in marriage by her father and her attendants were her sister Miss Kathryn Leslie as maid of honor, the groom's sister Miss Isobel Graham of Montreal and Mrs. Harold J. Taylor of Hamilton as bridesmaids.

Cardinal red bengaline taffeta was chosen for the attendants' frocks and they were fashioned with figure moulding bodices with sweeping portrait necklines and tiny sleeves formed of folds of the taffeta and they had very bouffant skirts. Each wore a matching pleated headband and carried a bouquet of white pom poms and Talisman roses.

Mr. John Turner of Peterborough attended the groom. Ushers were David Reinhardt and Arthur Foster of Toronto, Bruce Donaldson of Hamilton and Mr. R. B. Telfer of Detroit.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 451 Weller Street. Guests were present from Owen Sound, Preston, Brantford, Toronto, Montreal, Hanover, London, Hamilton, Detroit, Wichita, Kansas and Lindsay and Peterborough.

Honored guests were the maternal grandmother of the bride and groom, Mrs. D. Bauslaugh of Preston and Mrs. J. M. Fanning of Peterborough.

Mrs. Leslie received in a floor length gown of cloud grey sheer crepe made on slim, moulded lines and she wore a white feather hat studded with rhinestones and a corsage of red Garnette rosettes. The groom's mother was in a floor length gown of faille and lace in Trafalgar blue shade and she wore a matching velour hat and a corsage of bronze pom poms.

For their wedding trip through the New England States the bride chose a beau-blue colored suit of French imported wool, a soft feathered hat and accessories of British tan.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham will live in Westoprt.

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK S. HEFFERNAN, who will live in Douro, were married Saturday morning at St. John the Baptist Church. The bride is the former Miss Elizabeth Muldoon. —(Roy Studio Photo)

Heffernan-Muldoon Rites

St. John the Baptist Roman Catholic Church was scene of the wedding on Saturday of Elizabeth Janice Frances, the only daughter of Mrs. Celia Muldoon and the late Michael James Muldoon, to Frederick Sylvester Heffernan, the son of Mrs. Marie Heffernan and the late William Joseph Heffernan, of Douro.

The church was decorated with red and white roses. The Rev. Dr. F. M. Grant officiated and Mr. Herbert Michel was organist. Miss Helen Cummings sang "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother," and "Mother Dearest and Mother Fairest." At communion she sang "Oh Lord I Am Not Worthy" and during the signing of the register she sang "Panis Angelicus."

The bride, given in marriage by her cousin, Mr. Victor Amyotte, was lovely in an original gown of Chantilly lace over pleated nylon net skirts. The neckline was scalloped and the sleeves came to points at the wrists. Her Juliet cap was of French lace with seed pearls. The veil was ballerina length with a French lace border and she carried a cascade of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. Roderick J. Moloney, sister of the groom, as matron of honor, was gowned in gold nylon net over matching taffeta, with matching headdress, and she carried a cascade of white and bronze 'mums. The bridesmaids were Miss Eileen O'Brien and Miss Teresa Sullivan, who were similarly attired in strapless gowns of moss green nylon net over rust taffeta. They wore matching Queen Anne stoles and headdresses, and carried cascades of bronze and yellow 'mums. The two flower girls, Jean and Theresa Moloney, nieces of the groom, were similarly attired in moss green net over taffeta and wore green flowers as headbands. They carried colonial bouquets of yellow poms.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Leo Heffernan, and the ushers were Roderick Moloney and Ambrose Heffernan.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Assumption Hall, where the bride's mother received, wearing a grey gabardine suit with navy accessories and a corsage of red roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, wearing a beau bleu Tricatina crepe and lace dress with black accessories and her corsage was of red roses also.

The fitted jacket of matching lace had a stand-up collar and long tight sleeves. Her fingertip veil was of silk illusion enhanced with a border of Chantilly lace and adorning her head was a Juliet cap of the lace, edged with a row of tiny orange blossoms. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and gardenias.

As maid of honor for her sister, Miss Joan Leonard was gowned in green taffeta with a dark green net overskirt. Bridesmaids Miss Veronica Jenkinson and the groom's sister, Miss Henrietta Vysoki, were frocked alike in green taffeta with light green net overskirts. All wore matching green feather headdresses. University Women Open Program With Fall Tea

The fall program of the University Women's Club of Peterborough commences each year with a tea to which women graduates of all universities who may be living in the city or district are invited.

This year's tea was held Saturday afternoon in the YWCA Green Room with very lovely tea appointments making it a most delightful affair. Mrs. G. R. Langley, hospitality convener, was at the door to give the prospective members a special welcome and to provide all guests with decorative name slips so that friendships might be more quickly made.

President Miss Katherine Macdougall and first vice-president Mrs. A. H. Heideman received and hostesses in the tea room were Mrs. A. Purdon, Mrs. W. B. Gordon and Mrs. Harry Cherney.

Four past presidents of the club who filled the tea cups were Mrs. C. G. Boyd, Dr. Agnes K. Moffat, Miss Verna Burgess and Mrs. J. E. Watters. The servers were Mrs. D. R. McGregor, Miss M. Hicks, Mrs. John Holt, Mrs. R. G. Corneil and Miss Ila Giles.

Mrs. E. B. Toller was in charge of the tea arrangements, assisted by her social committee including Mrs. Alexander Fleming, Mrs. M. Campbell, Mrs. Herb Rogers and Mrs. H. J. Warner.

Highlights of this tea was the floral arrangements provided by Mrs. Heideman. To centre the tea table she made a mound of Queen Elizabeth white asters and spiked it at the top with deep red roses in full bloom. For the mantel she arranged pink and mauve asters in a delicate pink shell and she put several other bouquets around the room. All the flowers were picked in her garden at Chemong Park.

The table setting was effectively completed with tall white tapers and silver tea things.

New Husband Resents His Mother-In-Law

DEAR MISS DIX: Since our marriage a year ago, my wife and I have lived with her mother, a widow of 60 with no income, though she owns the house in which we live. My wife has supported her mother for the past few years. My mother-in-law considers herself the head of our household; nothing can be done without her permission. She runs the budget, decides what friends we should entertain, how we should spend our spare time, etc. My wife is used to this bossing, and gets along with it, but it's something new to me. We've tried to find things to occupy my mother-in-law's time and attention, but nothing interests her except our affairs. I realize that I am presenting only one side of the story, but I do feel we are entitled to some life of our own.

Tom K.

ONE SOLUTION FOR PROBLEM

ANSWER: When a son or daughter is responsible for a completely dependent parent—whether the dependency is for emotional or moral support—the fact is usually quite well known to a prospective mate. The complication should be thoroughly thrashed out before marriage, and any compromise settled then. No such situation is eased after the wedding bells' peal has died down; if anything, it becomes worse, and the time to face it is before, not after a third party enters the scene.

The arrangement of your household is so thoroughly established that you will never be considered anything but an intruder into a mother-daughter relationship. The problem might be resolved with the arrival of a fourth party. Should your wife have a child, a financial readjustment, at least, would be necessary, since your wife couldn't continue to work and care for a baby, too.

If you should be blessed with the determination to take a firm stand in your domestic entanglement, it would be the best thing you could do for all concerned. Both you and your wife would be happier, and your mother-in-law's disposition would be forcibly improved. The likelihood however, is that you won't be too successful in any attempt to establish yourself as head of the house. The matriarch influence has been too deeply imbedded and nothing short of your absolute insistence will change it.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My girl friend and I are very much in love, but I am jealous of her in every way. I don't like to share her with anyone. It bothers me if she sends cards or letters to friends. I am 17.

P. B.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You have a lot of growing up to do, son, including a considerable battle against a very futile emotion—jealously. One way to overcome it is to stop being so self-centered yourself. Increase your own circle of friends; then you won't object so strenuously to your girl's friendliness.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: After three years of marriage, I realize that I don't love my husband. He's good to me and works hard, but I know now that my heart is with a boy I used to go with. I admit I married too young, at 17, but must I suffer always for this mistake?

Mrs. R. A.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: If you can bring yourself to the realization that had you married the other boy, it would be your present husband who would have the hero role in your dreams, you'll be able to overcome your romantic illusions. Yours is a very commonplace problem among wives who married too young; its solution is not in a childish yielding to sentimentality, but in adult reasoning to overcome it.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Turning Dessert Habits To Fresh Fruit

You watch me like hawks to see if I'm going to give you any sweets. But it is like pulling teeth—I don't yield easily.

By some of the home Ec. girls I'm told it is a losing battle to try to coax you away from sugar products for health's sake, but being a born optimist I never agree.

You are slowly—too everlasting slowly—turning your dessert habits to fresh fruit dishes, and some of you even send me your fruit combination ideas for salad plates and fruit cups. I treasure these and pass them on.

But I have a little collection of sweets that serve special purposes.

There is a butter cookie for reducers believe it or not, and simplified Butterscotch Rolls that are ideal for unexpected guests in the evening, plus a different date oatmeal square.

BUTTER COOKIES
(low calorie)

If these cookies were made with sugar each one would give you 86 calories. When made with a non-caloric sweetener they contain 50 calories—that is if you cut the roll into 24 cookies.

Mash 10½ sucaryl tablets to a fine powder and sift them with ½ teaspoon baking powder, 1 cup sifted flour, shake of salt; ½ cup butter is then creamed very well and ⅛ teaspoon vanilla added. Sift dry ingredients over butter and cream the whole business until smooth. Shape into a roll and wrap in double thickness of wax paper and chill thoroughly. When hard and thoroughly cold slice with sharp knife into 24 cookies. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 12 to 15 minutes.

SIMPLIFIED BUTTERSCOTCH ROLLS

Sift together 2 cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons sugar, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt. Into these cut ¼ cup good quality shortening until it is fine and crumbly. Beat 1 egg and add to it ½ up milk. Quickly stir this liquid into the mixture. Turn out on very lightly floured board and knead for about ½ minute, then roll into a rectangle. Brush with 2 or 3 tablespoons melted butter and sprinkle this with ¾ cup brown sugar, dot with more melted butter then sprinkle generously with cinnamon. Roll up like a jelly roll but quite tightly, then cut into 1-inch slices with a sharp knife. Place cut side down on buttered baking sheet and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 12 or 15 minutes. Actually you need not pass butter with these, because they contain so much.

DATE OATMEAL SQUARES

This is a large recipe, but these things are so popular half of the pan will be demolished at the first meal.

One and one-half lbs. dates (pitted), 1½ cups boiling water, ½ teaspoons each vanilla and lemon juice (or 1 teaspoon vanilla), 2 cups unsifted but stirred flour, ¼ teaspoon each salt and baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda, 2½ cups rolled oats, ½ cup brown sugar, 1 cup shortening. Gently cook the dates and boiling water together until they are soft, then add the vanilla and lemon juice to them. Mix and sift together the flour, salt, baking powder and soda, then add the rolled oats which should be put through the mincer first. Add brown sugar. Cut the shortening into this mixture preferably with a pastry blender. When well mixed spread one-half of it in a greased 12-inch pan; spread over that all of the dates evenly. Cover with remainder of mixture and pat smooth. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr.—they require about an hour for this is rather thick.

While still warm mark and cut into squares. Brushing the top of these with 1 beaten egg to which you have added 2 tablespoons water before they are baked, helps to prevent them crumbling while they are very fresh.

WHOOPING COUGH!
DIPHTHERIA!
SMALLPOX!

THESE diseases attack all ages—but often people acquire immunity to them by the time they are adults. Babies and little children lack immunity—are easy victims of infection. Whooping cough is especially dangerous to very young children and causes more deaths among babies under one year of age than any other contagious disease. Diphtheria causes the highest death rate among children under five years of age.

MEDICAL science has the means to prevent these diseases. Every child should be given this protection by the age of one year . . . or earlier. Toxoid to prevent diphtheria; whooping cough vaccine to protect against whooping cough; smallpox, which is a constant danger, can be prevented by the use of smallpox vaccine. Parents, do not delay!

Man Drowns

Burdett. All were searching the bank when, about two minutes after the boat was launched, Campbell happened to flash his light away from the bank and saw the body floating just beneath the surface of the water about 30 feet from shore.

The body was towed to the bank and the resuscitator was brought to the spot and carried down the steep bank, which was a tangle of light metal stripping, weeds and willows. Dr. Dunham was called and injected a hypodermic but McNamara failed to respond, although his body was still slightly warm and it was thought a slight pulse could be felt.

About 10 p.m. there seemed little hope for McNamara and so the Rev. John J. Hickey, of St. Peter's cathedral was summoned and administered the last rite of the church. Dr. Dunham pronounced McNamara dead at 10:30 p.m. and the body was taken to Nisbett's funeral home.

The attempt at resuscitation was conducted by Assistant Chief Stewart Foster, Acting Captain Hubert Kennedy, Firemen Chris Cummiskey, Clarence Campbell and Allan Burdett, with the assistance of the Nisbett ambulance staff and Constables Louis Roderigue and William G. Scott.

Interviewed later by police, Bath, who gave his age as 42 and his address as 365 Leslie Ave., said he had gone for a walk about 7.30 p.m. down Simcoe St. towards the river. He went south to the city wood piles where he saw a man whom he didn't know.

The man offered Bath a drink and, while they were talking, fell over the edge of the river bank. The bank at that point is high and steep. There are some broken pieces of concrete at the bottom near the water.

Bath said the man was floundering around and getting further out into the water so he went down and pulled him up the bank. Bath wanted to get someone to take care of him but the man said not to get anyone, he would be all right.

Bath then walked out Charlotte St. to Bethune St. and borrowed some money to buy tobacco. After buying the tobacco, he went to the fire hall.

On Sunday morning, Inspector of Detectives W. A. Clarke and Detective Dennis Traynor examined the scene and discovered what they believed to be two spots of blood on a piece of concrete embedded in the bank about three feet from the water where McNamara is thought to have fallen in.

Mr. McNamara was born in Kinmount, son of the late David McNamara and the former Teressa Bowron. He has lived in Peterborough for the past 14 years and before that in Kinmount. He has been employed with the Canadian General Electric Company for the past 12 years as a leader in the Wire and Cable Department.

Mr. McNamara is a member of the Sacred Heart Church and belonged to the Holy Name Society. He was also on the Advisory Board of St. Peter's Athletic Committee.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Mary Coffey, three children: Gail, nine, Madonna, six and Jack, five months; three ssiters: Mrs. Joseph Doherty (Hannah) of Kinmount, Miss Pearl McNamara of Rochester, Minnesota, Mrs. Charles Woodcock (Maggie) of Lindsay and four brothers: David, of Kinmount, Charles, of Weston and Joseph and Martin of Peterborough.

The funeral will be held Tuesday from the Duffus funeral home to Sacred Heart Church for requiem mass at 9 a.m. Burial will be in St. Peter's cemetery.

Egypt Prepares To Confiscate King's Holdings

CAIRO (AP)—Egypt's revolutionary council made a dawn decision today to confiscate all Farouk's holdings in Egypt. But a spokesman for the office of the custodian of the former king's estate later said it will be no easy job to take stock of the fortune.

Farouk was still sailing to his exile in July, 1952, when investigators started delving into his apparent and hidden riches.

Farouk inherited the greatest part of the fortune piled up by the Mohammed Aly dynasty during more than 140 years of rule over Egypt. But during his 16-year reign he was reported to have swollen this fortune by undertakings of all sorts.

Farouk owned several palaces and other buildings and possessed around 12,000 acres of Egypt's best cultivated land. He also left behind an incredible number of art treasures, antiques and other valuables, and also was known to be part owner of several commercial and industrial concerns. All now becomes state property.

Traubel Splits With Opera Co.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Metropolitan Opera and foremost Wagnerian soprano Helen Traubel came to a parting of the ways Sunday in a dispute over her budding career as a night club singer.

The breach was disclosed in an exchange of letters released by a spokesman for Miss Traubel, who recently made her night club debut at the Chez Pare, Chicago. The exchange was climaxed by Miss Traubel's refusal to sign a new contract to appear in the opera.

The first letter, dated Sept. 25, was written by Rudolf Bing, general manager of the Met.

Bing, taking note of Miss Traubel's night club activities, called attention to the fact that she had not returned a contract, offered some time ago, to participate in the opera season starting next month.

He asked assurances that Miss Traubel would not sing in New York night clubs before the opera season starts nor for one month afterward.

In a letter dated Sunday, Miss Traubel replied:

"To assert that art can be found in the Metropolitan Opera House but not in a night club is a rank snobbery that underrates both the taste of the American public and the talents of its composers."

UN Protests Red Jets Fly Over South Korea

PANMUNJOM (AP)—The Allied command protested today that two Communist jets flew across the neutral zone into South Korea Sept. 20 in violation of the armistice.

The protest was lodged at the meeting of the joint secretariat of the military armistice commission.

Capt. B. M. Coleman, secretary for the United Nations side, expressed regret that three Allied jets had flown over the demarcation line Sept. 1 and that four other Allied jets crossed the line Sept. 4. He denied a Red charge that two more jets crossed Sept. 4.

Ban On Export Of Game Cost Ontario $2,000,000

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario lost at least $2,000,000 in 1952 because United States hunters were not allowed to take back home the deer and moose they killed in the province.

The ban, now lifted, was imposed by the U.S. authorities following an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in Saskatchewan.

This year, with the outbreak ended, inquiries for deer hunting by American hunters have reached near-record numbers, Lands Minister Welland S. Gemmell said.

Figures released by his department showed that in 1951, when non-resident licences cost $26, 10,400 of these were issued.

In 1952, with the foot-and-mouth ban in force and licences costing $30, the number issued dropped to a mere 870.

This year is expected to go well above the 1951 figure. Lost in that year, in addition to the licence fees was the $150 to $200 that each U.S. hunter is estimated to spend during his stay in the province.

At $200 the total loss to Ontario would come to $2,291,900, including licence fees.

Mr. Gemmell said his department looks for a larger number of American hunters coming into the province each year. There now are no restrictions on taking game back to the U.S. other than Ontario bag limits.

A survey by the department showed hunting prospects to be excellent in most areas of northern Ontario this year. The decline in hunting last year, allowing an increase in animal life, is believed to be a factor.

Canada's Ideal Student Ambassador Of Goodwill

MONTREAL (CP)—A 24-year-old University of Montreal student sailed for Germany recently as Canada's ideal student.

After a country-wide search, Paul Poitras of Montreal was selected as the young man most suited to fill the role of ambassador of goodwill to Germany.

German officials in Montreal have been looking for a Canadian student "ambassador" for some time. Their idea was to send him on a year's tour of Germany to see how the people there live, work and play.

With the co-operation of the German ambassador to Ottawa, Dr. W. Dankworth, and heads of universities throughout the country, a search was started for the "ideal student."

Requirements were ability, character and background.

First a big list of names was compiled by the sponsors. Then the long process of elimination began. Finally Paul was chosen.

He sailed on the German cargo liner Birto Hugo Stinnes. Part of his year will be spent at Munich University, the balance in large German engineering plants.

During the summer holidays Paul will stay with German families in various parts of the country.

Germans here hope he will help Canadians to understand the German way of life better when he comes back. That, they think, will lead to improved relations all round between the two countries.

A German official in Montreal said Paul's trip is "just the beginning. There will be more to come as time goes by."

200 Slide To Safety As Tanker On Fire

GLASGOW (Reuters) — More than 200 workers slid down rope ladders into rescue tugs here today when a dockside fire set gangways ablaze and threatened to trap them in a newly-built tanker.

The blaze began in a shed where newsprint was stored and spread quickly. A pile of oxy-acetylene cylinders blew up with a series of roars that rocked the waterfront.

Firefighting units from all parts of the city managed to confine the blaze to one dock. The tanker, The Alva Bay, launched a month ago, was not damaged.

Vietminh Reject Bid For Peace

SAIGON, Indo-China (AP)—The Indo-Chinese rebel radio today rejected French suggestions of a negotiated peace to end the seven year war.

Maurice Schumann, French foreign secretary, told the United Nations that France is willing to negotiate with Russia and Communist China for an end to the conflict. Radio Nambo, which speaks for the Communist Vietminh command replied that "all Utopian hope for an illusory peace must be ruled out."

"The enemy is preparing to strike us even harder," it continued. "That is why we should fight him with more vigor until he is totally defeated."

The broadcast ended by citing the words of Vietminh leader Ho Chi Minh: "We are for peace but we understand perfectly that without the victory of our resistance, we cannot achieve it. Only unity and real independence can bring us this peace."

CPR Interested In U.K. Comet

HATFIELD, England (CP)—Two high-ranking Canadian transport representatives today went for an hour's spin in the Comet II jet airliner. The flight may prove a prelude to dollar orders.

G. W. G. McConachie, president of Canadian Pacific Air Lines, and C. E. Jefferson, traffic vice-president, Canadian Pacific Railway, had their demonstration ride over the De Havilland company's factory here. The Canadian company has an option for a number of comet IIs, expiring in October.

The president of the CPR, W. A. Mather, and Allan C. MacDonald, managing director of Canadian Pacific Steamships, are also in Britain. British newspapers forecast that the visit of the four Canadians will result in large dollar orders.

Cancer Society Issue Folders

Mrs. Eve Collins, co-chairman of the Lay Education Committee, of the Peterborough Unit of the Canadian Cancer Society, reported Thursday at their first fall meeting that 4,000 pieces of literature on cancer was distributed at the Peterborough and Lakefield Fairs.

Mrs. Maurice Holt, president of the Society was in charge of the meeting and reported on the Women's Service Committee activities. Other reports were made by Mrs. John Bradshaw, chairman of the Welfare Committee and Frank Foster, QC, reported on the recent conference held at Club Whitesands.

Mrs. Bradshaw reported that dressings for three new patients had been given out and transportation arranged for another patient and boarding out expenses paid for another cancer sufferer. A new film on Cancer has been made available called, "The Warning Shadow", a public education film on lung cancer. All requests for the film should go through the Peterborough unit.

TCA Plans Low-Fare Domestic Service

MONTREAL (CP)—G. R. McGregor, president of Trans-Canada Air Lines, said today that subject to tariff approval a low - fare coach (tourist) service will be inaugurated by Feb. 1, 1954, on domestic main line routes.

He said fares will be reduced by 20 per cent with the new service supplementing first class service.

North Star aircraft would be adapted to the high density seating arrangements required for the new type of service. There would be increased cabin seating and some reduction in passenger service refinements.

Mr. McGregor said the introduction of coach fares in Canada is being undertaken to broaden the economic base of air transportation.

'1 More Chance' Magistrate Tells Offending Youth

Robert Stewart, 17-year-old ward of the Bowmanville Training School for Boys, was sentenced to one month in jail on two charges of taking motor vehicles without their owners' consent.

Delivering the sentence this morning, Magistrate R. I. Moore of Lindsay warned the youth he would get "one more chance; that's all".

The charges were laid after a Lindsay truck was taken and abandoned here, and a car belonging be Norman Nisbett taken from the Nisbett funeral home.

The youth originally pleaded quilty to a theft charge but it was dismissed and two charges of joyriding substituted.

Stewart was apprehended September 18 after the funeral home's ambulance chased him through downtown traffic.

WORKING ON FARM

Appearing for the training school, H. A. Cuthbertson outlined the youth's juvenile record and said he was working on a farm in the Dunsford area when he took the two vehicles. The incident occurred on the accused's 17th birthday.

The crown asked Magistrate Moore to consider a short jail sentence in order to give Mr. Cuthbertson a chance to place the lad on a farm.

The Magistrate complied in giving Stewart a month on each charge, to run concurrently. While the youth is in jail here, Major Harry Everitt of the Salvation Ammmy will visit him in order to try to show the lad "there's a better way of life".

Landing Field For Jets Along Cliff Clustered Fjord

By ELTON C. FAY

GOOSE BAY, Labrador (AP)—The only landing field for jet fighter pilots making the first cross-water hop of the transAtlantic ferrying flight is in a cliff-clustered fjord where blinding Arctic fog drifts in and out.

It is Narsarssuak, code name BW-1, 812 miles across the icy water from here, nestling at the southernmost tip of Greenland, the first of the stepping stones for pilots headed to Europe.

The jet pilot flying his fuel-eating plane has no choice once he has passed the half-way mark between Goose Bay and BW-1.

If he cannot reach BW-1 or storm makes landing there impossible he must parachute into the sea in his 'immersion suit" designed to keep him alive for from five to eight hours in the freezing cold water, or land on the Greenland ice cap, "bellying in" with his landing wheels still up to slide to a stop.

But the pilots on "high flight," the current ferrying operation to air-deliver jet fighters to NATO nations, so far have never been forced to use either of the emergency procedures. Two or three pilots have gone down in previous operations however.

An elaborate system of weather forecasting and guardian planes and ships gets them to BW-1 safely. They don't take off from Goose Bay if the weatherman is doubtful.

When a ferrying flight is under way three triphibian rescue planes (they can come down and take off on land, in the water or on snow) take up aerial stations. One orbits 290 miles east of Goose Bay, another 220 miles from BW-1. The third stays close to the mouth of the fjord. Airmen have nicknamed them 'Duckbutts." Equipped with the best of blind-flying equipment, the third plane is the "seeing eye dog" for a jet pilot in trouble. This plane, like the others, can locate the position of a jet plane by radio and electronics. The BW-1 Duckbutt coaches a jet alongside him, then leads the jet up the winding fjord to the airstrip—if weather permits.

The going is better once the BW-1 hop is over. Next stop is Keflavik, Iceland, another 800 miles, but with better weather and better landing approach. And beyond Iceland is an easy, 850-mile jump to Prestwick, Scotland—and Europe.

Visiting Driver Jailed Before Accident

Apprehended by officers "before she got in an accident," Mamie Campbell, 30, of Buffalo, N. Y., pleaded guilty to a charge of drunk driving this morning and was sentenced to seven days in jail.

According to Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw, QC., the accused was in an "extremely intoxicated condition when arrested Saturday on the charge. The vehicle she was driving wasn't impounded because "she didn't know whose vehicle she was driving, where she got it or how."

A second offence intoxication charge against Percy Crummey, 39, of 224 Lansdowne St., was adjourned until Wednesday. Crummey told Magistrate R. I. Moore that "haivng just been released from the hospital, I would like to be granted a week's adjourment to consult my legal counsel.'

OLD FRIEND

..Crown.. Attorney Bradshaw agreed to an adjournment of two days. "The accused is an old friend of ours and unfortunately, he wont run away."

Facing a third offence intoxication charge, Stephen Sweeney, 43, of 145 Simcoe St., was remanded until tomorrow. Not only did he plead not guilty to the charge laid Friday night but he denied two prior convictions alleged by the crown.

Pleading guilty to a charge of having liquor in a plaec other than his residence, Morley Montgomery, 23, of 710 Monaghan Rd., was fined $20 and $4.75 costs by the magistrate.

The crown attorney described how the accused was found in Lakefield Saturday with 17 pints of beer in a car. He also expressed suspicions that it was bootlegged beer, too. The extra $2.25 costs were to pay for the Lakefield police chief's rental of a taxi to bring the accused to Peterborough.

Michael O'Brien, 39, of 637 Water St., was fined $10 and $2.50 costs on a drunk charge laid on September 12. He pleaded guilty on the count.

The only non-liquor minor charge dealt with today involved Norman Howe, 34, of 533 Brioux Ave. who pleaded guilty to a charge of causing a disturbance. He had been picked up at a downtown hotel Saturday night during a fight and was fined $10 and $2.50.

Think Oxygen May Blind

LONDON (CP)—Oxygen used in delivery of premature babies may cause blindness, says a report to the British Journal of Ophthalmology.

Doctors at the University of London report experiments with immature animals indicating that high concentrations of oxygen tend to indace an eye disorder similar to the disease called retrolental fibroplasia, main cause of blindness in babies.

The disease, characterized by formation of fibrous tissue behind the eye lens, principally affects premature babies starting life in hospitals. The London doctors, Norman Ashton, Basil Ward and Geoffrey Serpell, suggest it is highly likely that their findings apply to human beings as well as animals.

Queen Charlotte's maternity hospital in London, sometimes called "the cradle of obstetrics," has decided to restrict use of oxygen except in the most essential cases.

Car Fire Kills 3

CHICAGO (AP)—Three persons burned to death Sunday night in an automobile which caught fire after a collision with a taxicab on the south side. The victims were burned beyond recognition. One was believed to be Edward Sidebotham, 18-year-old high school student, who, his stepfather told police, had borrowed the car. The cab driver and passenger received minor injuries.

Men Pool Funds, Labor To Build Cheaper Houses

TORONTO (CP)—If a group of would-be home owners pool their funds and labor, say the Mount Dennis Co-Operative Builders Incorporated, they can build a $15,000 house at less than half price and for only $700 down—but it takes work.

The group's 12 members in a Toronto suburb contributed $700 each and were sold a block of 10 lots at builders' terms—$200 deposit on each lot with the balance payable on completion of the house.

The remaining $6,400 was used to build the first house. The plans call for mortgaging each house as it is completed and using the money to build the next one.

The group says mortgaging is the biggest headache. Of 26 Toronto companies approached, only one would consider putting a mortgage on the first house.

The amateur builders feel their first house should dispel all doubts. The brick bungalow has a large living room, three bedrooms, kitchen, four-piece bathroom and an additional three-piece bathroom and an oil furnace in the deep, divided basement.

Only two members of the group are professional builders, a plasterer and a carpenter. Occupations of the rest range from customs officer to garage mechanic, but they built the house in eight weeks on spare time labor.

Only jobs sub-contracted were plumbing, wiring and drains.

Labor Party Chairman Asks End To Interparty Quarrels

MARGATE, England (CP)—Arthur Greenwood, chairman of the British Labor party, opened the party's 52nd convention today with an all-out plea for an end to interparty bickering.

Greenwood, 73, told nearly 1,300 delegates here that the convention is "on trial" and "disruption would be treason to our cause."

Sitting in the front row of the platform, "rebel" leader Aneurin Bevan and five of his left-wing lieutenants listened with impassive faces to the unity plea, then heartily applauded.

Clement Attlee, 70, party leader and ex-prime minister, then launched the delegates into debate of two foreign-policy planks which go squarely against Conservative Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill's policy and against United States foreign policy.

These planks were brought before the convention first because they are more liable to bring a show of unity between Attlee's delegates and the Bevanites. The biggest split in the party ranks has been on socialization of industries and other domestic matters.

As 3,000 delegates cheered, Bevan at a party meeting Sunday paid homage to Churchill's call last May for high-level Big-Three talks with Russia, but added:

"We think it is a disaster that the initiative started last may has not been followed up. And we say that the future of the human race cannot be jeopardized because the British prime minister is sick and that if Churchill is unable to do his duty, he should resign.

"We say, therefore, to the Conservative party that if you cannot get leaders who are capable of leading this country in the counsels of the world, clear out."

Bevan has long been an advocate of direct negotiations with Russia.

First foreign-policy amendment before the delegates today demanded that the cold war be slowed down by halting the rearmament race. It said the Labor party "deplores" the diversion of British industrial effort into arms production.

The second amendment called flatly for an end to the present United Nations curbs on trade with China and Russia's East European satellites. Churchill's government has carried out the UN embargo on trade in strategic materials.

The board appointed Tom Patterson of Stratford, originator of the festival, as director of planning. Dr. Tyrone Guthrie of London, internationally known theatrical producer who directed last summer's plays, was appointed director of production.

Lowly Towboats Surpass Old Steamboats

WASHINGTON—New king of the Mississippi is the snub-nosed towboat. Pushing trains of steel barges up and down the big river and its tributaries, the sturdy vessels hauled 33 million tons of revenue freight last year—three times the amount carried by more glamorous steamboats at their zenith a century ago.

Like a tugboat pushing an ocean liner, the towboat is the river's version of the railroad locomotive. Its blunt prow permits one boat, with one crew and one engine, to manoeuvre barge fleets hauling 15,000 or 20,000 tons, the equivalent of 400 to 600 railway freight cars.

TWO-WAY TRADE

Headed Gulfward, the leviathan barge fleets carry coal from West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Kentucky, grain from the North Central States, structural steel and iron pipe from Pittsburgh and Illinois mills, for the industrialized South and transshipped to foreign ports.

On upstream runs, the barges bring coffee, nitrates and bauxite from South America, canned goods from the Pacific Coast, sugar from Cuba, hemp from Manila, burlap from India.

Mark Twain marveled at river pilots who manoeuvred packet boats around tight bends, through eddies and narrow channels. The towboat pilot is no less skillful.

His "locomotive" is 100 to 300 feet long with up to 2,000 horsepower, and it pushes as many as a dozen barges. Barges vary from 175 to 280 feet in length, from 26 to 48 feet in width. Most are 11 feet deep. Capacity is 850 to 2,000 tons each.

Big business today, river shipping is being modernized. Most sternwheeler towboats have been supplanted by diesel - powered twin-screw propeller ships, many of them streamlined. Aboard, cabins for crew and officers are comfortable and spacious; galleys boast tiled floors and electric freezing units. Barge line offices have moved from waterfront shacks to city office buildings.

VITAL IN WARTIME

A few towboats and barges churned the Mississippi during the packet boat era of the 19th century, but with the advent of the railroads, river shipping languished for more than 50 years.

World War I provided the impetus for a revived river fleet. To assist the railroads in carrying wartime cargoes, the government established a common carrier barge service between St. Louis and New Orleans. The service persisted and grew when peace cam.

During World War II, river traffice again was militarized. Essential war material flowed through the central basin, including some 4,000 submarines, destroyer escorts, landing craft and tankers, enroute from inland shipyards to the open sea.

Today, the Mississippi River system is the most extensive and highly developed waterway in the world. There are 25 locks and dams in the Upper Mississippi from Alton, Illinois, to St. Paul, Minnesota; 46 in the Ohio River from Cairo, Illinois, to Pittsburgh; and 11 in the Illinois Waterway which connects the Great Lakes with the Mississippi basin.

To Aid Belgium In Atomic Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Belgium and the United States are reported near agreement on a proposal under which the U.S. would assist Belgium to develop an atomic power plant for industrial uses.

Such a step would mark a new phase in U.S. atomic policy, but it is understood that the United States has already given Belgium some assurances with which key members of Congress are sympathetic.

Belgium, through its control of the Belgian Congo in Africa, has been the chief U.S. supplier of uranium, the raw material of atomic weapons and atomic energy. Top U.S. officials are known to feel that it is time Belgium's own desire for some return other than money payments be satisfied —and what Belgium wants is the development of atomic energy as an economically-practical source of power.

Other real or potential suppliers of uranium—Canada, South Africa and Australia—likewise have indicated they need new power sources and whatever is worked out in the secret negotiations between Washington and Brussels may establish a precedent for action in other cases.

CANBERRA (CP) — An Australian team of government aircraft engineers has won first prize in a competition conducted by the Royal Aero Club of Britain for the design of a light aircraft. Scientists Check On Plasma Substitute

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — American scientists, seeking to determine the safety of a proposed plasma substitute called PVP are checking on German soldiers who were treated with it in the Second World War.

The scientists are trying to decide whether PVP is entirely safe for medical use in the event of atomic attack. They are convinced that it is effective as a substitute for blood plasma. But they fear that, because human tissues tend to store up the substance, it may have a long-term harmful effect.

To find out, the U.S. national research council has enlisted the help of German researchers to obtain samples of human tissue from German people who may have received PVP as long as 10 years ago.

SYNTHETIC SUBSTANCE

PVP, nickname for "polyvinyl pyrrolidone", is a synthetic substance made from readily-available acetylene, ammonia and formaldehyde.

It was developed by the Germans early in the war and was used in treating thousands of battlefront casualties. It proved effective in maintaining circulation and restoring lost volume of plasma within the body.

After the war, it was widely used in surgical clinics in Germany because of the shortage of blood and blood plasma there. It also has been used extensively in France.

But it has not yet received approval for general use in North America because doctors say there is evidence that some of the injected PVP remains "stored" within the body for many years. For this reason, doctors say, they have feared it might have harmful effects on human tissue in the long run—although there is no established evidence of this as yet.

HAS POTENTIALITIES

However, the U.S. national research council says PVP has potentialities as a stockpile item in preparedness for atomic attack. In fact, says the NRC, the material has already been stockpiled by the government to some extent but, because of the still-unsettled question of possible harmful effects, has been restricted "for emergency use only."

This is in contrast to the situation regarding dextran, another plasma substitute, which is derived from bacterial action on ordinary sugar. Dextran already has been accepted as a standard treatment by the armed forces and is being stockpiled, without any restrictions as to use, by the U. S. department of defence and the federal civil defence administration.

GOOD STOCKPILE

The NRC says that, if PVP should prove entirely safe for use, there would be two effective plasma substitutes in stockpile reserve.

NRC representatives told a reporter that it's always desirable to have two sources of material in case one, for some reason, should fail. Also, each of the plasma substitutes may have advantages over the other in certain instances.

As of today, PVP is much cheaper than dextran, which costs the government $5.50 a pint. PVP costs $1.52. However, the cost of dextran soon may be reduced to the point where it will be close to that of PVP.

Sees More Work In Palsy Field

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Health Minister Martin said Sunday there is much still to be done in the field of assistance for victims of cerebral palsy despite the fact much has been done in recent years.

Addressing the annual conference of the Ontario Federation for Cerebral Palsy, he said more than $100,000 in federal funds was spent in Ontario during the last five years to cater to the needs of cerebral palsied children.

"With the aid of these grants special training centres have been set up in Chatham, Ottawa, Hamilton and Toronto. Substantial support is also being given to local parent groups in various cities."

Taking Nitrogen From Air For Fertilizer, New Industry

WASHINGTON — One of the world's fastest-growing industries uses ordinary air as its main raw material. Its product is that extraordinary element, nitrogen.

In hundreds of different forms, nitrogen works for man. It makes high explosives for peace and war. Chemistry and manufacturing use it in many new ways. But its most important job by far is in fertilizers that enrich the earth.

SYNTHETIC NITROGEN

"Synthetic nitrogen," the industry calls its products. Their output is increasing rapidly all over the world. For the first time in history, nitrogen fertilizer plants operate in every inhabited continent. Africa now has a factory in Egypt, producing a quarter-million tons of fertilizers-from-air annually.

Today 95 per cent of fertilizer nitrogen, nearly 5,000,000 tons this year, is man-made. Yet 40 years ago science did not know how to take it from the air.

Invisible, tasteless, and odorless, there are four pounds of nitrogen for every pound of oxygen in the atmosphere. But food crops obtain their main supply of essential nitrogen-bearing nutrients from the soil instead of the air.

The path between the two is a difficult one, for nitrogen is among the most stable of elements —it combines or is "fixed" into plant foods only under certain conditions.

Lightning marries nitrogen to oxygen, and rain carries a hundred million tons of valuable nitrogen down to earth and sea each year. Barnyard fertilizers supply additional nitrogen, and U.S. farmers spread a billion tons of it annually. Some plants, such as the legumes, take nitrogen directly from the air; they may be plowed under as "green manure." But intensive farming and erosion usually depletes the nitrogen supply in the soil faster than it can be replenished.

Until World War I, the only source of nitrates for supplementary fertilizers lay in the high, arid pampas of northern Chile. From vast natural deposits of nitrate of soda, Chile supplied the whole world.

MAN-MADE LIGHTNING

Then scientists found a way to take nitrates directly from air. To do it, they used artificial lightning — an inferno of electric sparks. The story of their feat stretches from Scandinavia to Germany to Muscle Shoals in this country, and then to hundreds of air nitrate plants the world over.

New methods have been developed since then. One uses natural gas from the oil fields of the southwest to produce ammonia, a compound of nitrogen and hydrogen. Now this humble household cleaner is rapidly becoming a fertilizer in its own right. Farmers pump it into irrigation water or inject it directly into the soil with knifelike nozzles to speed growth of crops.

Nitrogen itself has become an amazing jack-of-all-trades. In gaseous form it protects vitamins and vegetable shortenings during processing, inflates plastic toys, pressurizes coffee cans and telephone cables. High-pressure nitrogen pumped fuel into the rocket engines of the first plane to surpass the speed of sound. Liquid nitrogen, offering a temperature of 320 degrees below zero, freezes face powder, plastics, drugs, and spices for fined grinding in various manufacturing processes.

There is small chance that the world's supply of nitrogen will ever fail. Plant life supplies it to the atmosphere, but even if this were not the case, the air now contains about 4,650,000,000,000,000 tons of nitrogen—enough to last 930,000,000 years at the present rate of consumption.

Big Cats Retreat Before Advance Of Civilization

WASHINGTON — In mesquite thickets along the Rio Grande and in the lonely mountains of southern New Mexico and Arizona, the jaguar, ocelot, and jaguarundi still roam. But their last hunting grounds are shrinking.

Mountain lions have vanished east of the Mississippi, except in Florida's Everglades. The lynx has been retreating steadily northward, until now it prowls only the remotest wilderness regions of upper New England and the Adirondacks.

Of the six cats native to the United States only the wild and ferocious bobcat still inhabits the midcontinent from coast to coast. Naturalists report its numbers have increased markedly in recent years.

JAGUAR RANGE SMALL

Largest and rarest of all within this country's borders is the brawny, leopard-spotted jaguar. Though once it ventured as far north as the Grand Canyon, and west to southern California, today only an occasional hungry wanderer crosses from Mexico to the mesas and forested hillsides of the border country.

A jaguar skin at the University of Arizona measures seven feet four inches from nose to tip of tail. Such a cat has strength enough to break the neck of a horse or ox at one leap, then drag it away to devour. Fortunately, jaguars so far north have never been known to attack a man unless attacked first. But caged jaguars are rated by circus trainers as extremely dangerous and unreliable.

Ocelots, by contrast, are almost friendly. They tame easily, even to pets, despite their wild jungle markings and nicknames of "tiger cat" or "leopard cat."

A creature of the tropics, the ocelot penetrates this country only in the broiling brush-choked lower valley of the Rio Grande in Texas. Once fairly numerous, they have almost disappeared as their cover is cut back for new farmland.

RED AND GRAY "OTTER-CAT"

In the remaining Texas wilderness of tangled thorn-wood and mesquite lives the mysterious jaguarundi, more like an otter than a big cat and by far the least-known American feline. Sleek, unspotted, seldom over four feet long, jaguarundis are either rusty red or a smoky gray, being a two-color or dichromatic creature.

Whatever the color, they are rarely seen at all. Twisting and climbing through thickets impenetrable to less lithe animals, they live on birds, rabbits, mice and rats, monarchs of their thorny kingdom. In this one region, they may be more numerous than sightings seem to indicate.

Rather than these jungle cats, it is the mountain lion that most Americans associate with their own country. Creature of many names —puma, cougar, panther, painter, catamount, and many others— felis concolor fights encroaching civilization and with some success.

For Blind Natives

CAPETOWN (CP)—At the request of the government of South Africa, the national council for the blind is devising a braille system for principal native languages. The section for the Zulu group has already been completed and the others will be done soon.

Scuffles Halt "Peace" Rally

TORONTO (CP)—A peace rally at Massey Hall Sunday night was interrupted by scuffles and fist fights when an anti-Communist group in the balcony showered leaflets over the auditorium.

Dr. James G. Endicott, the principal speaker, was speaking when about 20 men in the front row of the balcony suddenly stood up and loosed a paper snowstorm. They immediately moved to leave, but on the way got in several scuffles as ushers attempted to speed them along.

The pamphlets identified the men as members of the Association for the Liberation of the Ukraine in Canada.

Dr. Endicott spoke on the theme that the only road to world peace lies in negotiation.

Russia Proposes Conferences Of Big 4, Big 5

PARIS—(AP)—Soviet Russia today answered a Western Big Three proposal for a foreign ministers' conference on Germany with a counter-proposal for two big conferences. In the next-to-last paragraph of a 10-page note, Russia proposed a meeting of the Russian, United States, British and French ministers with the foreign minister of Red China to try to ease international tension. The Russians also proposed a Big Four ministers' meeting on Germany.

However, in neither case did the Russians suggest a place or a date. The Western Big Three had suggested a Big Four meeting on Germany for Oct. 15 in Lugano, Switzerland.

The Russian note also contained an inexplicable reference to the fact that representatives of both East and West Germany should be present, but it was not even clear that this applied to the proposed Big Four meeting.

MEANING VAGUE

Diplomatic sources said here unofficially that the U.S., Britain and France will probably have to put their heads together jointly to try to figure out just what the Russian note means.

They said, however, that it did not appear to be the acceptance of any meeting, but some kind of counter-proposal.

The bulk of the Soviet note consisted of a review of past diplomatic exchanges between the East and West over the German problem and world tensions.

The U.S., France and Britain in identically-worded notes Sept. 2 invited the Soviet Union to join in the Oct. 15 foreign ministers' conference in an effort to achieve "real progress toward world peace."

CURBS PROPOSAL

The Western powers restricted their proposal to talks on the future of Germany and Austria but noted that a solution on Germany would provide "an essential part of a world settlement" by paving the way for discussions on other outstanding world problems.

In a previous exchange of notes, Russia had suggested that the Big

Timmins Mayor Meets Daley, Seek Strike End

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal officials of the strike-bound Timmins mining area met today with Premier Frost and Labor Minister Daley.

Mayor J. W. Spooner of Timmins, head of the delegation, said purpose of the talks is "to explore ways" of ending the strike which has made some 5,000 miners idle at six mines in the Timmins area.

With Mr. Spooner are Reeve Victor Evans of Tisdale township and Reeve R. James of Whitley township.

Mr. Spooner said the delegation has no specific strike solutions to propose.

"We are just going to discuss the various things that could be done."

Upwards of 4,000 Timmins gold miners are on strike at six mines. A seventh mine employing 250 was put out of commission Friday by an explosion.

CONDITIONS WORSE

The strike started in July at three of the mines. Merchants say economic conditions in the town of 30,000 have become steadily worse as the union closed down mine after mine. There is no industry other than gold mining in the northern district.

So far, neither side has shown any inclination to yield from its original stand. The union seeks a reduction in the 48-hour work week without a cut in take-home pay and deduction of union dues by the company. Conciliation boards have recommended pay increases of seven and eight cents an hour and the union has said these recommendations are acceptable.

PRESENT WAGES

Wages now range from $1 an hour for surface workers to $1.30 an hour for underground miners, plus production bonuses.

Timmins residents and organizations Monday night sent scores of telegrams to Premier Frost, asking him to use his influence to bring about settlement of the strikes.

Meanwhile in Toronto, William Sefton, international representative of the striking union, said at a meeting of the Toronto Labor Council (CIO-CCL) that the mine operators of northern Ontario and Quebec are using the dues check-off issue as a blind in an effort to destroy trade union organizations in the mines. He said the Ontario government prefers to see Timmins turned into a ghost town rather than take any action to bring about settlement of the dispute.

U.K. Times Urges Recognition Of Red China

LONDON (Reuters)—The Times says today that Communist China is here to stay and therefore must be recognized "as one of the preconditions of trying to live in the same world with it."

In its leading full-column editorial the newspaper contrasted British and United States diplomatic history, and found the U.S. wanting in consistency.

This is the current British view, the Times said:

1. Recognition is "a question of fact, implying neither praise nor blame for the government recognized."

NOT A REWARD

2. Recognition "should not be offered as a reward for good behavior or withdrawn as a punishment for bad behavior," nor "as a counter in diplomatic bargaining."

The Times said that "to many Americans this point of view appears cynical or even immoral." But it pointed out that Thomas Jefferson had said the U.S. "could not refuse to recognize for any nation the right on which our own system of government is based, that each nation is free to govern itself according to the forms it pleases, with the freedom to change these forms according to its wishes."

Need Foreign Experts To Run Oil Industry

TEHRAN (AP) — The government of Premier Fazzolah Zahedi told the Iranian people today the nationalized oil industry is more than $87,000,000 in the red and foreign experts will be needed to get it in operation again.

A government statement said it will be impossible to carry on much-needed reforms intended to aid the Iranian people "without solution of the oil problem."

SIU Strike Deals Hard Blow To Canada's Deep Sea Trade

MONTREAL—(CP)—Canada's deep-sea trade has been handed a staggering blow through the decision of the Seafarers International Union (AFL-TLC) to strike in support of shorter hours and better pay. The strike machinery went into motion at noon Monday after last-minute negotiations failed to bring about a settlement of difference. The union has 8,800 members in Canada and 93,000 in the United States within the ranks of the Trade and Labor Congress and the American Federation of Labor. Union officials said approximately 35 vessels, some of them on the high seas, and more than 1,000 crew members may be affected.

The strike started off quietly here. When the noon deadline arrived, crews of four ships in Montreal harbor walked off carrying their gear. Police were on hand, but no trouble was reported.

Strikebound here were the Canadian Pacific immigrant liners, Beaverbrae; the Canadian Leader and the Canadian Constructor, operated by Canadian National Steamships, and the Canuk Line freighter, Seaboard Trader.

REPORTS NOT CLEAR

Reports from outside sources still were not too clear. Vancouver said two ships may be tied up there, but union officials said they were awaiting word from Montreal headquarters.

In Montreal, there was little comment from union officials apart from a brief statement following the strike.

One of the ships in Vancouver, the Sunwhit, was discharging cargo at Kitimat, the Aluminum Company of Canada's port in northern B.C. The other vessel, the Sunjewel, was scheduled to reach Vancouver Oct. 7.

Both vessels are operated by Saguenay Terminals and are registered at Port Alfred, Que.

From Churchill, Man., it was reported the far-northern port will be little affected.

There was some fear that the end of navigation Oct. 15 might strand some ships in the port which has no facilities for wintering large vessels. They would be frozen at dockside.

Only ships there at present were one Panamanian vessel with a Greek crew and three British ships.

GAVE NOTICE

The union served notice Friday it would strike Monday if its demands were not met. Representatives of the Shipping Federation of Canada, the federal labor de-

Woman Prays, Kidnaps Son Of Kansas City Millionaire

KANSAS CITY—(AP)—A mysterious woman who first offered up a prayer kidnapped a millionaire's son Monday after slipping into his private school on a ruse. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cosgrove Greenlease, said they would go to any lengths to get their six-year-old boy, Robert Jr., back safely, but no ransom note had been received.

The woman gained admittance to the exclusive school, Notre Dame de Sion, by telling a nun that Mrs. Greenlease had suffered a heart attack and the boy had to be taken to the hospital. She said she was the boy's aunt.

The nun suggested the woman pray for Mrs. Greenlease in the school chapel while she waited for the child to be called from his class. The woman walked into the chapel and knelt.

On leaving the school with Bobby, the woman remarked:

"I'm not a Catholic, but I hope God heard my prayers."

AWAIT REQUEST

Eugene M. Pond, chief of detectives, said police are following all normal processes in the investigation and added:

"We are awaiting a request from the parents before starting an intensive investigation."

He said no request for such an investigation had been received, apparently out of concern for the boy's safety.

Announcement of the kidnapping was withheld from the press and radio for three hours. Police chief Bernard C. Brannon explained authorities feared earlier disclosure might result in death or injury to the child.

Greenlease, 71, is a distributor for the Cadillac Motor Co.

"FOOLISH RISK"

"I don't know why anybody would do anything like this," he said. "There are so many reasons why anybody would be foolish to take such a risk. It just doesn't make sense."

The woman, described as chunky, about 35 years old and having reddish-brown hair, left the school with the boy in a taxi.

The nun then telephoned the Greenlease home, talked with Mrs. Greenlease and learned she was not ill. Then it was discovered the boy had been taken from the school on a ruse.

Later the taxi driver, Willard Creech, 62, told police the woman and the boy left his cab at a parking lot only a few blocks from the school. They got into a late-model blue sedan and drove off.

A nun, Sister Marthanna, speaking in absence of the mother superior of the school, emphasized that the school was careful about visitors. She said there are double front doors that are always kept locked.

"But there was nothing to make us suspicious about this," she said. "One does not look for trouble."

Then she added, reflectively, "the world is much closer to falling apart than we sometimes realize."

Just Speculation

LONDON — (CP) — The Anglo-Iranian company today described as "pure speculation" newspaper reports that it will decide in a few days whether to enter the Canadian oil field. A spokesman said a two-man investigating team has made a report on the Canadian situation. However, he said, no decision is indicated immediately.

Confirm Records Set By U.K. Jet

LONDON (AP) — The International Air Federation today officially confirmed the world speed record of 727.6 m. p. h. set up by British test pilot Neville Duke Sept. 7.

The federation also confirmed Duke's record of 709.2 miles an hour over a closed 100-kilometre (62.13 miles) circuit a few days later.

Both records were made in a scarlet Hawker Hunter jet near Littlehampton, on the south coast of England.

Duke's mark of 727.6 miles an hour is not expected to stand long. Fellow test pilot Mike Lithgow, flying a Supermarine Swift, was clocked at 737.3 miles an hour in North Africa last Friday and is planning a second assault on the record.

And a United States navy pilot, Lt.-Cmdr. James Verdin, averaged 742.7 in four passes of a three-kilometre (1.863 miles) course on the California desert Monday, but international rules require a record to be at least one per cent higher than the old mark.

Seasons Battle

CALEDONIA, Ont.—(CP)—Spring and autumn apparently are competing for the favor of an apple tree in this district. On one side the tree bears fully ripened apples, while on the other a small branch of blossoms can be seen.

Avro Buys $17 Million Malton Plant

Huge Hawker Group Provides Capital For Deal

TORONTO—(CP) — A. V. Roe Canada Limited, makers of the CF-100 all-weather jet fighter, announced today that it has bought the government-owned jet engine plant at nearby Malton in "a multi-million dollar deal".

Avro president Crawford Gordon, Jr., said the purchase was "made possible by British capital" from the parent Hawker Siddeley Group, one of the world's biggest aircraft manufacturers.

(In Ottawa, a defence production official today said negotiations for the plant involved about $17,500,000).

MAKES JET ENGINES

The jet plant, about 14 miles northwest of here, was operated by the company for the federal government on a management-fee basis since it was opened a year ago today. It builds the Orenda turbojet engine for the CF-100 and the F-86 Sabre jet being made at the Canadair plant in Montreal.

Mr. Gordon said in a statement: "Acquisition of the engine plant brings the whole Malton aircraft and engine operation under private ownership of A. V. Roe Canada Limited, except for certain machine tools and specialized equipment provided under the (government's) capital assistance program."

The big aircraft plant, which produces the jet fighter for the RCAF, has been owned by Avro since 1945, when it was bought from the federal government for an undis-

Child Killed In Front Of Home

MARMORA ((ENS). — A 15-month-old boy was instantly killed at noon today when struck by a car just a few yards from his home on Highway 14, two miles south of Marmora.

Ross Everitt Tandy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Tandy, was playing in front of the house when the accident occurred. Driver of the car was Gordon Thompson of Trenton.

The car was northbound toward the town when the child was struck. Details of the fatality are sketchy, however.

Coroner Dr. S. Beatty pronounced the child dead at the scene. Opp Corporal J. M. Hatch and Constable R. J. Devey of the Madoc detachment investigated.

BULLETIN

BERLIN (AP)—Mayor Ernst Reuter of West Berlin died unexpectedly at his home tonight, city officials announced. He was 64.

Ottawa Minister, Port Hope Man Fatally Injured

COBOURG—(ENS)—A Port Hope man and an Ottawa clergyman died in Cobourg General Hospital Monday night from injuries suffered in an accident involving four cars and a light truck on Highway 2, two miles east of Cobourg. The dead are William Nix, 31, of Peter St., Port Hope, and the Rev. Lyden Barclay, of Woodlawn Ave., Ottawa. Miss Geraldine Rogers, of York Mills Rd., Toronto, driver of the truck, suffered shock. She was released from hospital after treatment. Police said Nix's car, travelling east, struck Miss Rogers' westbound truck.

The Nix car glanced off the truck, caromed into cars driven by Vincent Burnet of Toronto, and Ariel Ferguson of Port Hope, and slammed into a car driven by Mr. Barclay.

ALL WEST-BOUND

All three cars struck were heading west.

The Nix car came to a stop some 600 feet from the point of original impact with the truck, police said.

The axle of Miss Rogers' truck was broken. Only other serious damage was done to Mr. Barclay's car which was almost off the highway on the north side at the time of the impact.

OPP Cpl. Douglas Wilson and Constable Stan Judson are investigating.

Enthusiasm Low For Release Of Atom Secrets

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several key senators display a lack of enthusiasm for furnishing atomic weapons information to United States allies.

There have been strong indications that the Eisenhower administration will ask Congress next year for authority to do so. Policy-making officials are pictured as believing the international effort to build up Western Europe's defences requires sharing of some weapons information which under present U. S. law is kept secret.

But Senator Bourke Hickenlooper (Rep. Iowa), a member of the joint Congressional atomic energy committee, said in an interview that he will have to be shown that it is necessary to furnish secret data to friendly powers.

ESSENTIAL?

"I am perfectly willing to look at any proposed changes which are considered to be absolutely essential in the interest of American security, but at the moment I see no necessity for any revision of the law in the interests of the security of the United States," he said.

While none of the legislators interviewed was willing to discuss it publicly, there was evident feeling on the part of some that any information furnished U. S. allies would be likely to find its way to Moscow more swiftly than if there were no such disclosures.

RCAF Delivers Planes To NATO 3 Months Early

BADEN-SOELLIGEN, Germany (CP)—Canada fulfilled a two-year promise three months ahead of time Monday when another three squadrons of Sabre jet fighters were handed over to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

While the flags of the 14 NATO countries fluttered above this base beside the Rhine, No. 4 wing of Canadian-built and Canadian-manned fighters was consigned first to Canada and thence to NATO in a ceremony marked by a fly-past and addresses from the countries involved.

"It is not without emotion that we see Canadians cross the ocean once again to mount guard with us along frontiers in danger," said Andre Francois-Poncet, French high commissioner to the French-occupied zone of Germany in which the base lies.

NO FINER AIRMEN

U.S. Gen. Lauris Norstad, deputy to Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe, told the nearly-1,000 Canadian personnel that "there are no finer airmen or troops than in the 1st Canadian Air Division."

The German-built base, provided by France, was accepted on behalf of Canada by T. C. Davis, Canadian ambassador to the West German republic. Davis noted that it was fitting on this occasion to realize that France, Britain and Germany provided the three main races in Canada.

Airliner Crash Kills 22 Aboard

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A chartered airliner nearing the end of its journey with a load of Puerto Rican soldiers crashed late Monday at Louisville's Standiford field, killing 22 of the 41 persons aboard.

The survivors were reported in critical condition.

The C-46, one of five chartered by the army to transfer 140 soldiers from Camp Kilmer, N. J., to Fort Knox, Ky., nearly touched ground when undetermined trouble developed on landing.

After being pulled up to about 400 feet, the liner nosed down and crashed with a terrific impact. Bodies were scattered as far as 100 feet from the twisted ruins of the twin-engined plane. Some were decapitated.

It was Kentucky's worst aviation disaster. The state's last major crash was in 1943 when an American Airlines plane crashed at Trammel and killed 20 persons.

Ex-President Says:

U.S. Needs 'Strong Defence', Willingness To Negotiate

NEW YORK (AP)—Former president Harry S. Truman says the United States must build "a really strong defence" and, from a position of strength, show willingness to negotiate "in all sincerity" for a solution of its differences with the Soviet bloc.

Truman, urging non-partisan support for this program, says the negotiations should be "in firm agreement with our allies and from a position of united strength."

He urged a battle for freedoms both at home and abroad in an address Monday night at a dinner of the Four Freedoms Foundation, where he received the foundation's fifth annual Four Freedoms award.

Fourteen hundred persons attended the dinner, established to work for the freedoms defined by the late President Roosevelt in 1941, freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want and freedom from fear. An award plaque cited Truman for "inspiring leadership in the cause of the four freedoms at home and abroad and his valiant and unyielding struggle in the cause of civil rights."

In calling for a fight for freedoms, Truman said: "All across our country there are people at work, stirring up suspicion of the United Nations, of our allies, of our own public servants, of our fellow citizens. All across our country there are zealots who are clamoring for somebody's head."

He called his targets "old isolationists" who have become "the new isolationists, the new imperialists"—and at one point, "morticians of the mind."

Truman declared there now is an "investigating frenzy" in the U. S., and the forces behind it were also seeking an American isolationism which would eventually doom the free world if put into effect.

"Only the whole free community, we and our allies together, our resources and theirs combined, is strong enough and big enough to meet the threat to freedom and give us victory for freedom's cause."

Truman did not name any of the people he criticized. Neither did he directly attack the Eisenhower administration or Republicans as such.

Win Larger Party Vote

Bevanites Retain Six Executive Seats Won In '52 Election From Moderates

MARGATE, England (AP)—Aneurin Bevan and his left-wing followers easily held their beachhead today on the Labor party national executive committee.

The party conference returned the Bevanites to the six seats they won last year from Clement Attlee's moderates.

The fiery Bevan and his followers remained heavily outnumbered, however, on the 28-member committee, the party's top policy-making committee.

The committee is made up of representatives of trade unions, co-operatives, a women's branch and local organizations of the party. Moderates dominate all these sections except the last.

The local party organizations have seven members on the committee. All but one of these seats went to the Bevanites last year. The voting this time produced no changes in this section. Bevan himself polled the highest number of votes of any of the 19 candidates.

The delegates, voting under a system based on the membership of their organizations, returned these successful candidates:

Bevan 1,142,000 votes; Mrs. Barbara Castle 1,026,000; Harold Wilson 934,000; James Griffiths 913,000 Tom Driberg 842,000; Richard Crossman 788,000; Ian Mikardo 637,000.

All but Griffiths are Bevanites. Moderate Hugh Gaitskell, chancellor of the exchequer in the old Labor government, failed to win a seat. There had been some speculation that he might unseat one of the Bevanites.

Each of the Bevanites increased his votes as against last year. Political observers interpreted this increase, coupled with the fact that moderates Gaitskell and the former defence minister, Emanuel Shinwell, were again defeated, as a sign that the right wing wasn't making any noticeable headway against left wingers in the political section of the party.

Bevan for the first time topped the million mark in the voting. Last year he polled 965,000.

Return of Bevan and his followers to the policy-making body did not produce much excitement this time. Bevan himself had given the impression that he wants to be considered a good party man rather than a rebel.

A segment of the party that stands well to the left of the Bevanites touched off a 15-minute row over a foreign-policy statement made public last Saturday by the national executive committee. The far-leftists demanded the right to amend this document.

During the uproar on the floor there were cries from the moderates of "chuck them out" and retorts of "come and try it." The conference finally decided not to open the statement to amendment. It will be debated fully Thursday.

The foreign-policy statement said:

"Labor pledges itself to make every effort to foster improvement in international relations and to end the cold war.

"The conference urges renewed efforts to convene, at the earliest date, a four-power conference at the highest level in order to seek out any possibility of agreement on outstanding issues."

No Criminal Case Justice Receives White Gloves

Sheriff J. A. Harstone presented the Hon. Mr. Justice Wilson of the Ontario Supreme Court with a pair of white gloves on Monday afternoon.

The brief ceremony took place at the opening of the autumn assizes in the court room of the county building and symbolized the fact that there were no criminal indictments listed at this sitting.

"Peterborough county is to be congratulated on the absence of any crime of a sufficiently serious nature to require hearing at the assizes," Mr. Justice Wilson said. "This is always a matter for congratulation.

"There are a number of counties in the province that would like to be able to boast of this but unfortunately they cannot."

OUTLINES DUTIES

His Lordship also instructed the grand jury in their duties, following their selection of Walter R. Blackwell, Peterborough architect as foreman.

"Although you have no criminal indictments to consider, you can render a valuable public service in your inspection of public buildings," he told them. He listed Anson House, St. Vincent's Orphanage, the Children's Shelter, the House of Providence and the county gaol as buildings to be inspected by them.

While in modern times the government retains a staff of building inspectors, nevertheless grand juries were still able to perform valuable service in their reports to the public, he said. He cited recent instances in which grand juries had reported deficiencies in the maintenance and repair of public buildings.

He particularly cautioned the jurors to make a careful inspection of the county gaol, and, briefly outlining the early history of the jury system, warned them to make certain there were no person in custody except those under sentence or remanded for later hearings.

WE WONDER how much finer you can get than the aluminum wire used in delicate apparatus which records the earth's tremors. Drawn out almost to the vanishing point, it is about one-twelfth the diameter of a human hair. One pound of aluminum would make enough of this unbelievably fine wire to stretch 20,000 miles!

We know no more striking example of the way people make use of the lightness and strength of aluminum for all sorts of jobs. Our research and technical men are constantly tackling new questions brought to them by Canadian manufacturers who look to aluminum in developing new products, or better products, or products that cost less. Continent-Wide Radar System Air Raid Defence

MONTREAL (CP)—The Gazette says today in a front-page story that scientists at McGill University have designed a continental air raid warning system that may form a major part in North America's protective system against invading aircraft.

The system, known as the McGill Fence has been in the planning stage for some time at McGill's electronics laboratory, the Gazette says, and is under strict secrecy on orders from the federal government.

The story says the plan will be submitted in October to a joint meeting of Canadian-United States defence boards.

McGILL FENCE

The McGill Fence, if accepted, would replace the Lincoln Line, designed by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to protect the vast northland of Canada, the paper says.

It adds that the Lincoln Line was designed to link a radar network being built around Alaska with the warning system of the U.S. Air Force base at Thule, Greenland.

Gale Troubles NATO Operation

LONDON (Reuters)—The attacking fleet taking part off south Iceland in the big NATO operation, "Exercise Mariner," is having more than theoretical trouble with 80-mile-an-hour gales and mountainous seas, U.S. Vice-Admiral Thomas S. Combs said Monday night.

Admiral Combs said his flagship, the 45,000-ton battleship Iowa, had rolled as much as 26 degrees, and the smaller ships, especially the destroyers, had had "an exceedingly rough day."

Huge waves smashed over the bow of the American cruiser Worcester, tore gear loose from the decks and caused the ship to take water.

Only casualty reported was a Royal Navy plane, which crashed at sea eight miles off Le Havre while operating with forces in the English channel. The pilot is missing.

The Canadian aircraft carrier Magnificent and the cruiser Quebec are taking part in the exercise.

Latest reports from the striking fleet show that the "Blue" force is under attack by "Orange" enemy submarines and that destroyers and escort vessels are counter-attacking.

Little Evidence Of Impairment Court Decides

Dismissing a charge of impaired driving against Norman Graham of 599 Water St. today in court, Magistrate R. B. Baxter concluded "there must be some evidence of impairment to support this charge."

Digested, evidence pointed out the accused smelled strongly of alcohol, staggered in walking, had bleary eyes and spoke thickly when arrested on the charge July 17.

The arrest was made after city police officers were attracted by the shout: "Stop that stolen truck" at the corner of George and Hunter Sts. on that date. Turning, they saw Graham behind the wheel of a panel delivery truck, just before it swung left after coming south on George St.

TOOK AWAY KEYS

The accused was quoted later as saying: "If the police can take my truck, I can take someone else's." He referred to an incident earlier that day when, according to PC Victor McConnell, Graham's truck keys were taken from him in a downtown hotel. PC McConnell described his condition then as "drunk".

The truck the defendant was driving at the time of his arrest belonged to Spencley's Florists and Nursery Co. and when police stopped him, he stepped from it apparently "under the influence of liquor," in the words of PC McConnell.

When the truck was first seen by the constable, it appeared to be "sort of weaving." PC McConnell had, about three or four hours earlier, seen the accused in a hotel and, in the witness box, described many symptoms he attributed to intoxication.

His eyes were described as "bleary. . .bloodshot," his walk, "unsteady. . .staggering" and his speech, thick. The officer took Graham's truck keys at that time.

PC Don Erskine, the other investigating constable, substantiated, for the most part, the first officer's testimony but also stated "I don't believe my attention would have been attracted (to the truck) if I hadn't heard the shouts."

He quoted Graham on his excuse for driving Spencley's vehicle.

The constable defended his action by suggesting the cells of the city jail would be filled to overflow point if police picked up every drunk in the city's beverage rooms.

Magistrate Baxter suggested to Mr. Carley that he not labor the point too much: "It looks to me like a special privilege was extended to Mr. Graham in this instance."

PC McConnell agreed, however, the accused turned the corner of Hunter and George Sts. correctly, did not drive at an excessive speed and stopped the truck correctly.

Desk Sergeant Leo Murphy, on duty when the accused was arrested, also testified but said only Graham appeared "highly nervous."

Mrs. Florence Spencley in testimony said her truck had been parked near her floral shop with the keys in it. She had not given the accused permission to take it, Mrs. Spencley said.

Applying for dismissal of the charge, Mr. Carley said there was little evidence that Graham's driving indicated he was impaired and suggested it was even to the contrary, that he drove very carefully.

He reminded the court the charge was impaired driving and not intoxication.

Agreeing, Magistrate Baxter said there was not sufficient evidence to place the accused on his defence and dismissed the charge.

GetsReformatoryTerm On 12 Fraud Charges

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP)—In Chatham police court Monday, Ray Ulch, 31-year-old Thamesville auto dealer, was sentenced to the Ontario reformatory for two years less a day when he pleaded guilty to 12 separate charges of false pretences.

All charges arose out of investigation into business transactions by Ulch in Ray Ulch Limited with Traders' Finance Corp., from March 1952 until May 1953.

Ulch admitted obtaining cash and credit from the finance company to the amount of more than $19,000.

Defence Experts Study Continental Defences

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian and American defence experts, sharing concern over Russia's growing atomic striking power, are studying "intensively" expansion of their continental defences.

An authoritative source said Monday joint discussions are under way to determine what steps, if any, will be taken to improve the existing warning system in Canada's northland, and to build up retaliatory power.

Canada now pays one-third of the cost of the northern defence network and the United States the remainder. Both Canadians and Americans man look-out stations across the country.

partment and the union met Sunday but failed to reach agreement.

A shipping federation spokesman said if the strike persists "it will mean the finish of the deep-sea merchant marine of Canada."

He said Canadian companies "could not compete with foreign lines whose wages are only a fraction of those paid here."

He said the average basic wage is $198 a month with free board, lodging and medical care. He said the union had lowered its original demand for a 40-hour week—instead of 56 hours—and a wage increase of $50 a month to a 48-hour week until new negotiations in April, 1954, and an increase of $30 monthly.

But, the spokesman said, a reduction in the work week alone would ruin the industry.

EXPANDS FACILITIES

Mr. Gordon said the purchase brings Avro holdings in development, research and production facilities to more than $40,000,000.

"Necessary funds were provided Avro by the famed Hawker Siddeley group," he said. "This is the world's greatest array of aircraft and aero-engine designers and manufacturers and represents 40 per cent of the British aircraft industry. A. V. Roe Canada is the youngest member of the group."

Included in the deal are two big hangers, a storage building, several small buildings and 30 acres of land.

Creditors Handle Haymes' Money, Owes Thousands

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A creditors' committee is going to exercise control of the finances of singer Dick Haymes, who married Rita Hayworth last week.

The singer's lawyer, Robert Eaton, said Monday night that Haymes has no assets although he earns about $150,000 a year and figures to boost his earnings to $200,000 this year.

Eaton met with the creditors Monday and presented a plan to budget Haymes' earnings as an alternative to bankruptcy. Present at the meeting were about a dozen of the singer's bigger creditors and a representative of the department of internal revenue. No names were disclosed.

BIGGEST $30,000

Eaton said the claims of all creditors filled eight typewritten pages, that he owed $55,000 in taxes, and that the smallest debt was $2.50 to a drug store and the largest nearly $30,000.

Haymes' lawyer told the creditors he believed the debts could be reduced considerably within a few years and that if he should be ordered deported it might be two or three years before all appeals were exhausted in behalf of the Argentina-born crooner. Immigration officials say he violated the McCarran Act for failing to get a re-entry permit after visiting Miss Hayworth last summer in Honolulu.

PROTECTED HERS

Miss Hayworth's wealth, lawyers say, has been protected in her marriage to Haymes by a pre-nuptial pact.

The creditors' committee will have to allow for $1,200 monthly alimony support for previous wives and children, plus money set aside for income taxes, Eaton said. They plan to put him on a personal allowance basis.

The government's deportation hearing against Haymes was adjourned to Oct. 28 in Los Angeles. The government contends Haymes lost his chance for American citizenship by obtaining a waiver of military service as an alien neutral.

Hopes Meeting To End Strike

TORONTO (CP)—James Y. Murdoch, president of the giant Noranda Mines Limited, said today he hopes the strike of 1,500 miners at Noranda will end after union-company discussions later this week.

"I'm hopeful a settlement will come from a meeting at Noranda, Que., this Friday," he said. The strike now is in its sixth week.

Mr. Murdoch said the meeting was arranged recently in New York talks with David J. McDonald, United States president of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) representing the workers.

He said he told Mr. McDonald the company would not consider granting the union the checkoff, one of the points at issue, but instead would negotiate on wage increases. He said Mr. McDonald agreed to ask Noranda union officials to negotiate on this basis.

C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the steelworkers, could not be reached for comment.

LackOfGood Tomatoes Closes Canning Plants

LEAMINGTON (CP)—Major tomato processing plants in Essex county will close Wednesday because of the lack of good tomatoes.

Farmers delivering tomatoes to loading stations and plants have been rejected to the point where they have stopped picking tomatoes. Corn ear-worms have invaded these crops and are responsible for most of the rejections. Inspections show from six to nine ear-worms in 200 tomatoes. Ordinarily, the tolerance for this kind of infection is limited to one per cent.

Entomogolists said weather condition plus the shift of corn crops to other areas, have left the tomato plants as the most hospitable host for the worm.

Neutral Agency Sees Delay In Repatriation

PANMUNJOM (AP) — The neutral repatriation commission said today that explanations to Allied and Communist war prisoners who have refused to go home may be delayed again, this time by a dispute over facilities.

Explanation teams which will attempt to persuade the PoWs to return home were scheduled originally to start talking to prisoners last Saturday, but the talks were postponed until Thursday because of a dispute over rules.

An Indian spokesman for the commission today said the meetings may be pushed back again unless the Reds and Allies accept explanation centres already constructed.

WANT CHANGES

He said both sides want extensive changes. The Communists, he said, object to centres built by the United Nations command because Red teams would have to pass through all the PoW camps to reach them.

"They want to avoid them because of hostile prisoners," the spokesman said.

Allied dissatisfaction centred on explanation booths and compounds built by the Reds. They say both are too small.

The Allied objection apparently stems from the dispute over whether prisoners should be interviewed individually or in groups. The Allies want group explanations while the Reds insist on individual interviews.

NEW RULES

The Indian spokesman said rules for the explanations to prisoners—the other matter holding up processing of 22,600 Red and more than 300 Allied PoWs—may be announced Wednesday.

Meanwhile, three more reds, two North Koreans and one Chinese, who changed their minds about repatriation, were returned to the Reds Tuesday, raising to 101 the number sent back since the conclusion of operation Big Switch.

The three, at a Communist-conducted press conference, claimed they had always wanted repatration but were forced to remain behind by anti-Red prisoners.

Four meeting be broadened to discuss other world problems. The Russians had demanded the presence of Red China at such talks, but this met with Western rejection.

The Soviet Union has indicated it does not want to take up the Austrian treaty of independence until an agreement is reached on Germany. The Western powers have insisted upon both treaties being considered at the same conference.

FOLLOWS REQUESTS

The latest Soviet note comes as requests for a Big Four conference to iron out world tensions are being made at the United Nations. India's V. K. Krishna Menon Monday night urged a personal meeting of the Big Four chiefs of state.

Prime Minister Churchill let it be known Monday that he still feels a top-level meeting of Big Four leaders would be a good idea. But the U.S. has remained cool to such proposals. The U.S. state department said Monday it did not see how Big Four talks could accomplish results different from those being sought through conferences now in prospect.

Farmer Charges Neighbor Stole Wife's Affection

Arthur Roland Boyce, a 53-year-old Smith township farmer, claims that a former neighbor, 34-year-old Francis Earl Loyst, alienated the affections of his wife and broke up his happy home life.

Boyce is suing Loyst, a Peterborough punch press operator, for a total of 10,000. He is claiming $5,000 damages for alienation of his wife's affections and another $5,000 for criminal conversation. In his statement of claim Boyce claims that Loyst committed adultery with his wife between March 1946 and August 1951.

The civil action is being heard before a jury sittings of the Supreme Court in Peterborough. Mr. Justice Wilson is presiding.

The plaintiff, Boyce, a slim bespectacled man with only one eye, told the jury today that his health has suffered since his wife's alleged disaffection. He can no longer work his 100-acre farm in Smith township because of his ill health.

DAUGHTERS LEFT

He is now living on the farm alone. His three girls, that he tried to bring up "respectable", went with their mother when he finally locked her out of the house in August, 1951, he said. They are aged 18, 21 and 22.

Boyce said that he married his wife, Frances Hilda, in July, 1930. They lived in Lakefield for four or five years, he said, and then moved to the Smith Township farm, a mile west of the village.

From 1946 on, Loyst's visits increased.

"He was coming every day or so," said Boyce. "When the girls were away he came to see the wife. So I knew he was after the wife."

STARTED ARGUMENTS

The visits of Loyst started arguments between husband and wife and in March, 1946, Mrs. Boyce moved out of the bedroom she had shared with her husband. She slept after that in a spare bedroom downstairs. Normal relations between him and his wife ended at that time, Boyce told the court.

Boyce admitted he was not as strong as Loyst; nor was he a match for his wife. He repeatedly told the unwanted visitor "to go home and stay there."

He once resorted to physical violence, a week after warning Loyst: "If I ever see you in here again I'll break your damn neck."

"Next Saturday he was there and I grabbed a poker and went for him. She grabbed my arms to free Loyst. Then they left. She took my car and he went after her in his."

Later that day his wife came back to the house and belted him a couple of blows on the face with her fists, he said.

"Did fighting do anything about stopping him coming?" asked W. J. Arthur Fair, QC, counsel for the plaintiff.

"Yes, for about a month." Then the defendant started coming again.

Boyce said that for three years running his wife, along with his daughters, went away for trips to the United States. When they were ready to go on the last trip, in July, 1951, he told her she couldn't come back if she went this time.

When she went despite his warning, he locked the door on her, and she has not lived there since.

The case is continuing.

"We have carefully selected these animals for value, and guarantee them in every respect. We believe that buyers today will be so satisfied that they will be back again next year."

"I guess there were a few bargains," Mr. Shaw remarked to the Examiner at the close, "but there were some pretty fair prices too. However, we were doing some advertising of our Peterborough Shorthorns in this sale, and we've good Shorthorn breeding in this county. This is one way of making ourselves better known and distributing some of our good cattle."

Associates Honor Hy Wood On Retirement At Outboard

With company officials from the Canadian and parent American industry present, Hy Wood, manufacturing supervisor and director of Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co. was retired in grand fashion, Monday night at the Empress Hotel.

A veteran of the company since its second month of operation in Canada, Mr. Wood was honored by approximately 70 fellow employees and officials.

Replying to addresses expressing congratulations and best wishes in his retirement, Mr. Wood recalled his 25 years with Outboard Marine and described it as "one of the best organizations in Canada, if the whole of North America."

He was presented with several gifts from the company and fellow workers, including an easy chair and portable bar.

PRESIDENT

Among the guests present for the banquet were J. G. Rayniak, president of the parent American firm, C. B. Neal, president of the Canadian section, Steve Briggs, Jr., vice-president of the U.S. group, and Herb Fisher, secretary-treasurer of the American Outboard.

After their opening in February, 1928, with a staff of five full-time employees, Mr. Wood saw the Peterborough firm grow until now, when its payroll is "crowding the 900 mark."

Mr. Neal officially announced during the evening Mr. Wood's successor, Tom McMillan, as director of manufacturing.

Also called to the dinner was Hugh Campbell, former president of the Canadian Outboard Marine, who jokingly expressed his sentiments regarding the retiring official with the statement: "I wanted to fire Hy many times but he was the only one I could depend on to come up with an answer."

Mr. Neal pointed out that manufacturing department is the most important of any organization and Mr. Wood directed Outboard's manufacturing operations most successfully.

He recalled the early "trials and tribulations when our problems were many .. . there was required a lot of ingenuity, innovations and substitutes in order to get a job done . . . I offer congratulations for a job well done."

The president summed up his feelings by saying he, and everyone in Outboard Marine "always had the very highest regard for Mr. Wood's capabilities."

Belgian Unions Protest Pact

BRUSSELS (AP)—The International Confederation of Free Trade Unions called on its American affiliates today to protest viorously against the American-Spanish "bases for aid" agreement.

The agreement, signed Saturday, grants economic aid to Gen. Franco's government in exchange for American use of military bases in Spain.

A statement from ICFTU headquarters here said the pact "will inflict serious moral and political damage on the community of nations united in the defence of freedom and democracy."

Terming Franco a "blood-stained dictator," the statement said: "To refer in the same breath, as the published text of the agreement does, to the United States, Spain and other nations which dedicate their efforts to the same high purpose is an insult which will be bitterly resented by the organized workers of America and Western Europe.

"It will be equally resented by the Spanish people, who will again feel themselves betrayed and deserted in their struggle for freedom."

Strike At Airport

SAIGON (AP)—Striking workers at the airport in this Indo-Chinese city today decided they would no longer assist in the landing of aircraft. The strike is now in its third day. At its start, the strikers, seeking a 70-per-cent wage boost, refused only to help in take-offs.

Need Complete Secret Exchange

CANBERRA (AP)—The fullest possible interchange of atomic information between the United States and the British Commonwealth was urged today by Prime Minister R. G. Menzies on the eve of the British atomic tests at Woomera rocket range.

He told a press conference: "Since we are all in the same boat, the fullest possible exchange is indicated; but obviously there are difficulties such as the United States McMahon Act. That act need be amended before anything could be done. But as a general principle the extent to which information is not exchanged is a measure of the extent to which there is duplicated effort and lost time, effort and money.

"The same arguments apply to the exchange of guided-missile information.

"It is a great mistake to overemphasize the idea that we are in competition with each other because we all have a vital interest in this matter."

Church Publisher Ends Service

TORONTO (CP)—Elmer Davis of Kingston, Ont., retiring chairman of the board of publications for the United Church of Canada, was honored Monday night at a dinner here.

Premier Frost was the principal speaker, paying tribute to Mr. Davis as "a great Canadian, a fine citizen and a loyal churchman.'

He said Mr. Davis "added greatly to the life of his church, the province and the nation" during his tenure with the board. Men in all walks of life respected his judgment and sought his advice.

Rev. Gordon Sisco, secretary of the United Church's general council, described Mr. Davis as "one of the real characters of the United Church of Canada and of the Methodist church before union."

The gathering presented Mr. Davis with a testimonial bound in leather.

Sumatra Rebels Flee To Hills

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Fanatical rebels in Sumatra's wild, northernmost province of Atjeh are fleeing to the mountains as the government campaign against them gathers momentum, Interior Minister Hazairin said today.

He claimed that the government will soon settle the Atjeh rebellion, which broke out Sept. 21. The situation, he said, is not serious since only about 10,000 of the province's 500,000 population are taking part in the rebellion.

Qualified sources pointed out, however, that strong local feelings against the central government in Jakarta, the great distance between the capital and Atjeh and the many complex political and economic factors involved all will greatly handicap settlement attempts.

The aim of the uprising is to make Atjeh a part of a "Moslem state of Indonesia" (Darul Islam) led by Kartosuwirjo, whose roving headquarters are somewhere in the mountains of West Java.

Beaverbrook Retires As College Chancellor

LONDON (CP) — Lord Beaverbrook issued an announcement today saying he has retired from his position as chancellor of the University of New Brunswick.

The Canadian-born publisher, who leaves Wednesday for a visit to Canada, said in a brief statement: "My great age and the natural consequneces of a busy life render it necessary for me to retire from many activities. I have retired from the chancellorship of the University of New Brunswick."

Lord Beaverbrook is 74. He was born in Maple, Ont., son of a Scottish minister from Newcastle, N. B., and has long taken a special interest in the University of New Brunswick. There was no hint in the statement of any other posts he may be relinquishing.

Supreme Court In Cobourg

COBOURG (ENS)—Fall sittings of Supreme Court opened Monday afternoon before Mr. Justice Wells.

Two criminal indictments went to the grand jury for consideration. Four civil actions were on the jury list, Earle vs. Webster was traversed to the November non-jury sittings. Kerr vs. Linton and Traini vs. Linton, a damage action arising out of a Cobourg motor fatality, and Brookdale vs. Tomlinson are on the civil list for trial after the criminal cases have been dealt with. There are six divorce cases.

Two charges against Sherman Anderson, of Toronto, of rape and carnal knowledge, involving a Clarke township schoolgirl under the age of 14, went to the grand jury after court opened. The grand jury also took under consideration an attempted murder charge against Stanley Cowling, of Tyrone, near Bowmanville. There are two other charges against him of poisoning with intent to endanger the life of Yvonne Saunders, his stepdaughter, and a third charge of intent to injure and annoy Miss Saunders. It is alleged by the Crown that the accused sent Yvonne Saunders some poisoned chocolates.

For the first time in local court history, a woman sat on the grand jury. She is Mrs. Helen Bickle, of Hamilton township. The grand jury was briefed on its functions in determining whether or not there is enough evidence to warrant putting an accused person on his trial and also its duties in regard to inspection of public institutions.

Twelve women were called for petit jury duty but as they are not obliged to serve on the jury, the list was narrowed down to four women, Sadie McBain, of Cavan township; Jeanne Allen, of Cobourg; Eleanor Bates, of Haldimand township; and Elsie Halford, of Port Hope. They are subject to call when the petit jury is empanelled.

See Meteor

BALTIMORE (AP) — A bright blue meteor flashed across Maryland skies Monday night and was visible over a wide area. The control tower at Friendship International airport said it got reports from various fliers on the meteor. The pilots said it trailed off into amber sparks after rocketing from east to north. It was visible over this region for about 20 minutes.

Consul Lauds Canadians For Attitude To Immigrants

"New Canadians Day" was celebrated Monday at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club by having several Peterborough Dutch families as their guests and Netherlands' Vice-Consul at Toronto, L.G.N.M. Ravesloot as their guest speaker .

The fact that this is New Canadian Day explained Mr. Ravesloot, proves that you have accepted the newcomers and are willing to extend your friendship and sympathy to them. "I do not want to see your attitude as a local demonstration of goodwill."

On the contrary your attitude towards us is a willingness and aptness to understand all our problems—problems which sometimes make our world so confused."

Mr. Ravesloot went on to explain that throughout Holland's history its inhabitants have been migrating. The last war with all its consequences made it, however, necessary for the government to take an active hand in the promotion of emigration.

In the area, twice the size of Lake Ontario, live some ten-and-a-half million people.

While in the Netherlands, the most densely populated country of Western Europe, the population per square mile is 769 people, there are five persons on a square mile in Canada.

If there were the same density of population in Canada said Mr. Ravesloot, well over two billion people would scramble around in Canada.

Holland prides itself on a very low death rate of seven-and-a-half percent and a relatively high birth rate of approximately 24 per cent. But that very increasing population makes it more and more difficult for the individual to build a future for himself in Holland.

"You cannot contine to split the family farm into countless lots for every new heir."

ABSORBED IN INDUSTRY

Holland, being a highly industralized country has done a tremenodus job in absorbing it's excess of population in new industries. But the problem of overpopulation continues to exist.

For that reason the Netherlands Government is happy that there are countries like Canada, that are in need of immigrants. Some 22,000 Hollanders enter Canada yearly.

"Your country," explained Mr. Ravesloot, "is very popular in my fatherland. I may add to the common bonds already mentioned, that there exists an infinite gratitude from the people of the Netherlands for the liberation of Holland by Canadian troops. But mind you, migration means more than packing your suitcase, buying a steamship ticket and being sea sick for a week or two. Often it means leaving behind a job, a house, relatives and last but not least, a treasured culture."

"In most instances Hollanders come to Canada for their children's sake.

FAITH IN CANADA

"They come to Canada because they have faith in your country, because they know that the principles of the United Nations Charter: freedom of fear, religion, thinking and of speech, are treasured by every Canadian."

"But the beginning is often difficult. There is the language barrier, the different habits and customs, in short, the change of atmosphere.

The Canadian Government does not want the immigrant to assimilate, but rather wants him to become a new Canadian citizen by integrating in the Canadian way of life. That is a most wise policy, which will eventually add to Canada's stature in the world. This policy also gives the immigrant confidence in the citizens, amongst whom he has come to live.

"For that reason, I know, that all newcomers and most certainly my own compatriots, are grateful for this New Canadian Day organized by the Rotary Club of Peterborough."

Lost Control Driver Hits Pole

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS)—Eric Arthur Gardner, 27, of 74 King St., Oshawa, escaped injury on Saturday evening, when his 1946 model car went out of control and struck a telephone pole, breaking it off near the base on Highway 45 about a mile north of Hastings.

Gardner came around a curve on the highway and met another car that was crowding the centre of the roadway. Gardner swung to the right to avoid colliding with the other car, lost control of his own vehicle, and struck the pole, breaking it off.

His car came to rest back on the highway. The car suffered damage estimated at about $150, but the driver was not injured. OPP Constable George Rose of Campbellford investigated.

HORSE SHOT

A horse was injured and had to be destroyed as a result of an accident near Campbellford a couple of hours later the same evening.

A car driven by Kenneth Towns of RR 1, Campbellford struck a horse owned by J. Herr of Percy Township.

The horse was one of a team that had been put to pasture in a field, but the team had broken out and had become frightened by passing automobiles. The front of the car was damaged and the windshield broken.

It is believed the head of the horse burst into the car through the windshield. When the horse was located a short time later, the right side of its face was found to be so lacerated that it had to be destroyed.

Mr. Herr was not aware that the horse had broken out of the enclosure until he was informed of the accident. OPP Constable George Rose investigated.

Strike In The Gold Mines

The strike in the Northern Ontario gold mines is a very serious matter for the strikers and the mine owners, but at present it is not intensely serious for the country at large. The day may come when our northern gold will be an immensely important natural resource, but at present that is not the case. Few gold mines are making much money; few Canadians who hold gold stocks are getting much from them; many Canadians still remember with sadness the money they have lost by investing in gold. The miners who are striking are not poorly paid in comparison with other industrial workers; if they want to strike for higher pay and a check-off, that is their business. If they do not get what they want, and several of the mines close, the people of Canada will be in pocket.

* * *

Canada's gold mines at present are existing by means of subsidies which they receive under the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act. Without it, and with gold at its present world price, they could not keep going. Even with government assistance (which comes out of the public purse, of course) there are only 56 mines in operation, as compared with 144 twelve years ago. Gold mining is not an industry which is making anybody rich.

* * *

The real calamity, if the strike fails to achieve its ends, will fall upon the gold-mine towns — Timmins, Kirkland Lake, Noranda, Malartic and the like. They are in the perilous position of settlements which are dominated by a single industry. If several mines close, they could become ghost-towns within a year.

* * *

The justice or injustice of the miners' case is open to argument. But let no one be deceived into thinking that the mine workers are trying to get more money out of a wealthy industry; if they get more money, most of it will come out of the public assistance which has kept the gold mines operating for years.

Quiet Danish Elections

On September 22nd Denmark went to the polls to elect its first one-chamber Parliament since recent constitutional reforms dissolved the Upper House. The Constitution was altered also to permit female succession to the Throne. And for the first time Greenland, recently given independent status, is to send two Deputies to the Parliament. Another new element is the representation of German minorities in northern Schleswig. The voting age was lowered from 25 to 23. Thus the elections had the earmarks of being among the most important held in Denmark for many years. The importance was reflected neither in the election campaign nor in the world's notice of its results.

The voters decided that the representation of the old House was good enough for the new unicameral Parliament. There were few changes in the relative strength of the country's eight political parties. The moderate Liberals and Conservatives continue to form a coalition government, although the Social Democrats (the strongest single party) increased their representation slightly. The coalition parties have a general policy of goodwill towards all and excesses towards none. They advocate restrained State expenditure, full co-operation with NATO, and increased expenditure on defence. It will be seen from these policies that Denmark continues her middle-of-the-road course and in a direction pleasing to her Western allies and friends. The Communists have won a handful of seats, but are no more powerful or important than they were in the last Parliament.

If television could span the Atlantic, people on this side of the water might have been more interested than they were in the Danish elections. Denmark is the only Scandinavian country having television, and the election was televised.

Communism Fights The Church In Poland

The trial of Monsignor Czeslaw Kaczmarek, Bishop of Kielce in Poland, followed a familiar pattern. The Bishop was accused of espionage and activities against the state. He pleaded guilty, but during a cross-examination which lasted for two days, he did not once admit to the charges brought against him. It is unlikely that he had any opportunity to plead not guilty, and we must salute his courage in standing firm under questioning. He was sentenced to twelve years imprisonment which is, under the circumstances, a light penalty; such a sentence suggests that the Polish Communist government is not sure enough of its power to risk a death sentence against a Roman Catholic bishop.

The Polish government has been working hard to break the power of the Church of Rome within Polish borders; six bishops have been in prison for some time, but now only Bishop Kaczmarek has been tried. Perhaps his trial is meant as a warning to the Church that other reprisals may be expected if the Church does not moderate its anti-communist attitude. Particularly this may have been directed at Cardinal Wyszynski, who leads that fight, and who has refused even to see officials of the communist government. Within the last two days the Cardinal has been placed under a form of arrest, and confined to a monastery.

It is not generally realized that there is a portion of the Catholic Church in Poland which favours the communist regime, and there are priests of some influence who have denounced the Vatican and its representatives as tools of the Western powers. But since the death of Stalin the Catholic hierarchy in Poland has strengthened its opposition to communism, and it appears to be gaining ground. It is understandably hard to estimate its strength; certainly the communists are not able to do so. But the failure of a communist court to sentence Bishop Kaczmarek to death, after a spectacular trial, suggests that the communist government does not dare to push its anti-Catholicism too far for fear of losing ground.

Some Converts Must Be Expected

Alarm has been expressed by some people in the U.S.A. because a few prisoners of war have refused to return to the States, preferring to ally themselves with the Communist cause in Asia. The number is not large; twenty-three men out of the total is not a great many. But while we sympathize with people who are distressed because their relatives have apparently been converted to Communism, we think that such an outcome might have been foreseen.

Communism is not an utterly unreasonable or unthinkable scheme of government; it has, indeed, certain resemblances to primitive Christianity, with the worship of God rigorously cut out. What we oppose in Communist countries is not pure Communist doctrine, but the perversions of that doctrine. Pure Communism is virtually impossible, because mankind cannot come up to its high standards of unselfishness; what we see in Asia is tyranny disguised as Communism.

Of course Asiatic Communists do not agree with us, and we may be sure that when they talk to prisoners of war they put Communism in its most flattering light. We must not be surprised if some soldiers accept the new teaching.

Far more people than we realize are ready for revolt against the life they know; their discontent is not specifically the result of a grievance against their country and its government; often it is the outcome of a family grievance, perhaps of long standing, which they are not prepared to face, and which they transform into a grievance against the world around them—very often a grievance with a political edge to it. These people are not reformers or progressives; they are just 'agin the government' in one way or another. Their problem is complicated by the fact that they will not admit to themselves where the real trouble lies.

Sometimes such people embrace strange religions. Communism, for all its alleged godlessness, has many of the characteristics of a religion. In particular it offers its supporters a way of changing what exists, and substituting for it a new and ostensibly better way of life. Communism appeals also to people who are consumed with the urge to do good to their fellow-men. This urge, admirable as it is when it is honest and controlled, is extremely deceptive. Many people conceal their desire to destroy what exists under the cloak of an urge to improve the lot of mankind; sometimes the pity which they feel for their fellow-men, and their desire to right the wrongs of the oppressed, are simply disguises for their deep pity for themselves, and their desire to show the world what they can do, and to put their stamp on the fate of nations.

Lots of people suffer from these urges, to a greater or less degree, and we should not be amazed that twenty-three of them have turned up among the prisoners of war.

NOTES AND COMMENT

An English judge has said that landlords who rent to young couples on the understanding that they shall have no children are exacting "a covenant which is against the public interest." In effect, against the continuance of the race.

A branch of the Musician's Union in Winnipeg has admitted a bagpiper, and the cry goes up that this officially establishes the status of the pipes as a musical instrument. But only within the jurisdiction of the Winnipeg branch, cautious critics will add.

The American Scene:

Mr. President Likes His Golf

By ALISTAIR BUCHAN

ONE of the most intriguing aspects of President Eisenhower's character is that unlike so many ambitious men who have striven hard all their lives, he really enjoys leisure. Although he is highly strung, or perhaps because he is, he insists on more recreation and outdoor life than most public figures feel they can afford. Thus, when he is in Washington he plays golf with unfailing regularity every Wednesday and Saturday. Last week he returned from a holiday in Colorado which had been originally publicised as lasting three weeks, but which had in fact lasted six.

* * *

THE President's leisurely habits have created a slight but detectable current of criticism in American public opinion. No nation devotes more time, effort and money to its leisure and vacationing than does the United States; and few people are small-minded enough to begrudge the President some time off. But the endless series of photographs of him teeing-off on some delectable green golf course, or catching rainbow trout in a decicious gin-clear mountain stream while the rest of the nation, having had its two weeks beside the sea or in the mountains, is back at its collective desk in sweltering weather, has caused a noticeable reaction among Press and public.

* * *

IT IS TRUE that the most recent Gallop Poll of public opinion shows that seven-five per cent. of Americans approve of the way the President is handling his job; yet with his summer holiday not long over, there is in Washington some feeling of anxiety among officials of the Administration about the amount of time that Eisenhower plans to spend away from the White House during the autumn. He will be gone on a two-week trip to the south west during October, may spend another week or so at his winter golfing resort in Augusta, Georgia, in November. The President's officials, knowing how efficiently he organises his day and how easily he deputes work, do not begrudge him his golf and trout fishing; but they are concerned that his absences mean the postponement of important decisions.

* * *

A GREAT MANY decisions of the first importance face the Eisenhower Administration. There is the question of whether it shall attempt to balance next year's budget —which must be decided within the next month or so, and which demands a number of important subsidiary decisions on the level of defence next year, the size of the aircraft programme, how much money shall be spent on accelerating the atomic energy programme and the continental defence of North America. There is a tug-of-war within the Administration between the advocates of a balanced budget at all costs, and those who feel that defence and strategic considerations must come first and that if the American budget cannot be balanced then fresh taxation— probably a national sales tax— must be imposed. In the last analysis this dispute can only be resolved by the President himself.

* * *

HE gave a broad hint in his speech to the Republicans at Boston on Monday (Sept. 21) that defence will take priority over lower taxes, although this was partially contradicted by the speech of his Secretary of the Treasury to the American Banker's Association on Tuesday, when he implied that no attempt would be made to prevent the lapsing of the taxes which end automatically at the end of this year. In addition to this decision there are a number of others to be made in foreign affairs, regarding Germany, Indo-China and the Far East in general, which demand a firm hand at the helm.

* * *

ONE decision however, is said to have been made by President on his return from his (summer) holiday. This is a decision to tell the American people and the world the main relevant facts about the relative strengths of the United States and Soviet Russia in the development of atomic and thermo-nuclear weapons. In a speech which is at present due to be given at the beginning of October it is understood that he will present the full facts of the two nations' stockpiles in order to bring about a greater sense of realism about the vulnerability of the United States itself to atomic attack, and of the diminishing lead which she now has in atomic arms race. This is not intended to be alarmist, but is designed partly to remind Russia of the enormous American strength in atomic weapons, and partly to gain greater public support in the United States for a continuation of heavy taxation to finance the defence programme.

WASHINGTON parents of small children who are compelled to lead social lives face an awkward, if familiar, problem. Washington's routine includes a great many social functions in the evening. Not many people can afford servants who live in, and so the demand for baby sitters exceeds the supply. At one enterprising secondary school they have started courses in baby-sitting for twelve-year-olds. These include all the technique of giving babies their bottles, answering the telphones, putting small children to bed and attending to their needs, while parents are out. The course was originally designed for girls until it was found that twelve-year-old boys were just as anxious to learn this art, and just as apt as their sisters. In fact, says the woman in charge of the instruction, "the boys take the course more seriously, and are less giggly than the girls."

We have a baby in our family, and my wife and I are wondering whether, next time we have to go out, we shall summon the courage to commit it to the tender care of some freckled warden of twelve. We are inclined to think that a serious twelve-year-old might do a better job than some eighteen-year-old bobby-soxer whose thoughts are of film stars instead of diapers.

NEXT MONTH, ornithologists and conservation officials, helped by radio stations in the mid-west of Canada and the United States, will begin an anxious scrutiny of the skies in order to protect the last of the handful of one of the North American continent's most beautiful birds— the whooping crane. This elegant white bird, five feet tall and with a seven-foot wing spread, spends the summer in Northern Canada, flying south in winter to the Texas marshes. Through the depredations of farmers and hunters along the route, the species has dwindled alarmingly and this autumn only twenty-one birds will travel south. Last year two were shot on their journey despite the fact that it most States this is now illegal. This year, owing to the efforts of the Audubon Society and the State Governments, their progress is going to be as well advertised as one of the President's tours, in the hope that publicity will stay the killers.

AN AMERICAN OPINION OPERATION RECESS

Stephen Leacock Shrine At McGill

(MONTREAL GAZETTE)

A Stephen Leacock Shrine is being set up in the new library at McGill University. As the Librarian, Mr. Richard Pennington, says: "Whether we like it or not—and we do—the name of Leacock is inseparably connected in the minds of many with McGill. The first inquiry of the American pilgrim is always for our Leacock shrine; and their astonishment at not finding it just about equals our embarassment at not having one."

So the new Leacock Shrine is taking form. A charmingly panelled room will contain his books and manuscripts, with his portrait in oils over the mantelpiece. And the Librarian is looking for other things for the Shrine. He would like to have Leacock's slippers or tobacco jar—something that would give a sense of human association to the collection.

Certainly anyone who thinks back on his memories of Stephen Leacock will think most of his humanity. If he was felt to be a big man on the campus, it was because he was big in human things—big in humour and character, big in eccentricity and wilfulness, big in knowledge and intelligence, and big in his sense of the wistful sadness that makes our human lot touch the heart.

* * *

THOSE who were among the students who attended Prof. Leacock's courses may have had some curiously confused lectures. But there was always a sense of something greater in life than text books (though he had written them). As they looked upon that strong gnarled face, and tried to follow his curiously assorted statements and recollections, they felt that life was not something small, and cabined and confined, but something ample, and spacious —rich with the past, and full of interest in the present, and that it was important to see something of the greatness of life before the light was gone and it was night.

And Stephen Leacock was always the compassionate humorist, dealing good-heartedly with human beings. He was never the satirist. There was so much good feeling in his laughter that he made human frailties seem somehow less bad and life's ironies somehow less bitter. What is more, he was never the man to seek refuge or superiority by merely poking fun at others. He was big enough to include himself in his humour and to laugh at himself. In other words, he laughed at humanity, and he himself was very human.

Montreal and McGill have never been quite the same since Stephen Leacock went. He seemed such a familiar figure on the campus or on the downtown streets. No man was more easily recognized, with his rugged, square face, his unusual stride, the battered felt hat to which he remainded so attached, and always his walking-stick.

It seemed a breaking of old ties, on a March evening in 1936, when his students, new and old, honored him with a banquet at the time of his retirement from McGill. The words with which he made his farewell seemed to speak of his own feeling that his life was drawing to its inevitable close.

"When I was lecturing at McGill on winter afternoons," he said, "the gathering of the twilight would give me warning that my time was up, and that I must say 'Good-night, gentlemen.'

"And now I can see that the sky has darkened, and the light has faded from the windows, and I know that the time has come when I must say, 'Good-night, gentlemen—forever'."

* * *

THE Librarian of McGill is quite right in seeking some personal mementos of Stephen Leacock for the Leacock Shrine—perhaps his slippers or his tobacco jar. But what the Shrine needs most as a memento is Stephen Leacock's old walking-stick. To him that walking-stick was a comforting symbol of courage. Many a time it tapped its way down the concrete walks of the campus, and along Sherbrooke Street.

Like Dr. Samuel Johnson, Stephen Leacock had a profound sense of the mysterious darkness that surrounds our mortal life and of the courage that man needs to face it. He wrote an article on his 70th birthday. He realed that he was indeed growing old. The taxi-drivers were beginning to call him "Dad."

He knew that Cicero has written an essay on old age and had tried to make it out as a fine thing. But he did not agree with Cicero. It was sad to look back upon so long a way that had been travelled, and to look forward and to find the darkness so near at hand.

But his article ended on the note of rugged courage. "Give me my stick," he said. "I'll face it!"

Perhaps in the Leacock Shrine in the new library visitors may yet find on display among the mementos the stick that companioned him on the long journey and that comforted him at the end.

And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

LINDSAY EXHIBITION SUPERIOR

Sir: When are the Peterborough Exhibition executives going to get smart and model the Exhibition on the Lindsay Fair

Anyone attending the Lindsay Exhibition will without a doubt tell you it is superior in every way compared to Peterborough Exhibition.

If parents pay admission they can take the whole family into the grounds free if under 12 years, and the same applies to the grandstand. Speaking of grandstand, the performance lasts 90 minutes and also fireworks, and no cattle or horses paraded up and down for entertainment.

The Peterborough Exhibition is losing its punch, and the fact that Peterborough people would rather go to Lindsay Fair than Peterborough Exhibition speaks for itself.

Rockefeller Grants

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

The appropriations made by the Rockefeller Foundation in 1952 have been announced. They include funds for a new venture in economics in Switzerland, increased aid to agricultural projects in South American and a translation of western classics into Arabic. The sum of sixteen and a half million dollars was spent by the foundation from January to December of last year.

The Swiss grant of two hundred thousand dollars will underwrite a five-year project of research and training in monetary and credit economics at the Basle Economic Research Centre. The Centre is a laboratory where students may study economic problems at the highest level and European economic reconstruction can be viewed at close range.

Mexico and Colombia received a total of two and a half hundred thousand dollars for their agricultural programmes. Other years have been marked by growing interest of the foundation in world food problem. Its contributions to the world-wide race between population and production have been recognized as one of the most vital services it is performing.

In the field of the humanities and cultural understanding, the usual long and inclusive list of scholars has benefited from the generosity of the administrators of the fund. Many of the classics of western culture are being translated into Arabic (with the blessing of the American State Department), and will play a part in bringing together the culture of Islam and that of the west even more closely. Health grants, medicine, the natural sciences and other vital aspects of the whole field of learning and research have drawn their share.

Misguided Sunfish

(Winnipeg Free Press)

The Vancouver Island fishermen who recently thought they had caught Cadborosaurus, the famous sea serpent, in their nets were relieved to find that their captive was only a gigantic sunfish from California.

Why a sunfish should venture into British Columbia waters where there seems to have been little sun this summer is not explained. Perhaps it had been reading the tourist advertising of the Victoria and Vancouver Chambers of Commerce. That mistake cost the creature its life and one hopes that it has been given at least a public apology and decent burial.

The important fact, however, is this confusing story is that Cadborosaurus remains, uncaught and free, in his native haunts—that is to say in the Gulf of Georgia and in the local press. So long as he clings to that congenial habitat he will be safe; the human inhabitants of the neighborhood will be happy and the newspapers will always have a good warm weather story on tap, provided they can find any warm weather out there. Like the fishermen, the Canadian nation at large will be relieved to find that the nets contained only a misguided tourist, vainly searching for the sun.

Lindsay Starts Fist Fight In Exhibition

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (CP) Ted Lindsay, fiery captain of Detroit Red Wings, Sunday night touched off a bare-fisted brawl during an exhibition hockey game that eventually involved two city policemen, five other players, a spectator and general manager Jack Adams.

The fight started in the second period of a game between the National Hockey League team and the Wings' Edmonton farm club when Lindsay dumped Jim (Red Eye) Hay with a body block.

Hay, a defenceman who played briefly with Detroit last year, jumped from the ice, shook off his gloves and started after Lindsay.

The two exchanged blows for about six minutes before they were separated. Both then were banished to the penalty box and patrolman Weldon Nelson was assigned to sit between them.

Then, after a heated verbal exchange, Lindsay lunged at Hay. During the fracas, Lindsay lost his balance, fell down a short flight of stairs and was grabbed by policeman Keith Ewing.

Nelson went to Ewing's aid when Lindsay attacked the latter. At this point Gordie Howe, a close friend of teammate Lindsay, led a charge of three other Red Wings over the boards to Lindsay's assistance.

Police soon got the upper hand in the battle and restored order after Lindsay retreated to the penalty box.

No one was injured.

Top Astronomer Dies In California Home

SAN MARINO, Calif. (AP)—Dr. Edwin P. Hubble, 63, one of the country's foremost astronomers, died Monday of a stroke suffered at his home here.

Dr. Hubble was on the staffs of the observatories on Mt. Wilson and Palomar mountain.

Under Dr. Hubble's direction, the heavens were charted anew after the 100-inch telescope was put into operation on Mount Wilson in 1917 and the 200-inch telescope, the world's largest, began scanning the skies in 1948 from the top of Palomar mountain.

Kitchener TV Starts In 10 Months: Owner

KITCHENER (CP)—Carl Pollock president of Central Ontario Television Ltd., said Monday operation of a Kitchener television station should begin in nine or 10 months "at the outside."

Mr. Pollock made the comment after it was announced in Ottawa that the CBC board of governors has recommended a television station licence for his firm.

The company was one of two applicants seeking a licence here. The other was Grand Television Ltd.

Probes Report Krol Scored Officiating

MONTREAL (CP)—W. C. Foulds referee-in-chief of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union, said Monday he is investigating reports that Joe Krol of Toronto Argonauts was quoted "in a highly critical vein" on a radio-sports program Saturday night, following the Montreal-Hamilton Big Four football game.

Foulds, who also is chairman of the IRFU's board of officials, said he is checking allegations that Krol was quoted as criticizing the officiating in the game at Hamilton, which the Tiger-Cats won 20-15 on the last play of the contest.

The officials were Charlie Prince, Johnny Munro, Bob Lye, Harry Bowden and Jimmy Simpson.

Foulds recently circulated an IRFU bulletin through the Big Four, and one of the items dealt with "rules on conduct," adopted by the union June 21, 1952. The rules apply to all persons connected with the union and its clubs.

The item in question reads:

"In connection with the rules of conduct, it should be noted that the board of reference had interpreted the last paragraph of those rules to include—remarks over the air, and-or quoted comment in the press that may be considered as prejudicial to the best interest of the union."

Foulds said the penalty for infraction of the rules is a fine of $50 to $100.

Krol, veteran punter and star halfback with Hamilton and Toronto for many years, has been assigned to scouting chores by the Argonauts' coach, Frank Clair. In this capacity, he watched Saturday's Alouettes-Tiger-Cats game.

ORDER RACEWAY PROBE

NEW YORK (AP)—A full-scale investigation of Roosevelt Raceway at Westbury, Long Island, was announced Monday following published charges that labor leaders extorted up to $350,000 a year from the track employees.

District attorney Frank A. Gulotta said he has issued a subpoena for a number of leaders of unions with members at the track.

Gulotta said he had also subpoenaed books and labor contracts of the Old Country Trotting Association and the Nassau Trotting Association. Both groups operate harness races at the track.

The New York World-Telegram and Sun published a story Monday saying most of the track's 1,200 workers had to kick in $8 to $16 a week to labor bosses to keep their jobs.

The investigation of Roosevelt Raceway followed the developments at the Yonkers Raceway, whose licence was suspended last week by the state harness racing commission on orders of Governor Thomas E. Dewey.

The Yonkers Raceway failed to open Monday night for its 42-night fall meet after the commission rejected a number of re-employment applications for the track's workers.

Herald-Trib. Offers To Purchase Eagle

NEW YORK (AP)—Negotiations for sale of the Brooklyn Eagle to the New York Herald Tribune are under way, it was reported Monday.

A bulletin board notice posted at the Eagle offices by two employees said they had conferred with publisher Frank D. Schroth, Sr., about reports that the paper was being sold.

"Mr. Schroth said that the Tribune had approached him about the proposition and it was under consideration," the notice continued.

Herald Tribune officials had no comment.

Avatus Stone Leads Big 4 Scorers With 42 Points

TORONTO (CP)—Avatus Stone, 24-year-old halfback who jumped Chicago Cardinals for Ottawa Rough Riders this season, is hitting a seven-point-a-game average to lead Big Four scorers.

Statistics compiled by The Canadian Press show the Negro triple-threat with 42 points in six games, three up on Ray Poole, field goal specialist from Montreal Alouettes and 10 more than Ottawa's Gene (Choo Choo) Roberts.

Poole, playing his first season of Canadian football after six years with New York Giants, has scored two touchdowns, five field goals and 14 converts for a 39-point total. Roberts, native of Bonner Springs, Kas., and a three-year back in Canada, holds a two-point edge over Chuck Hunsinger who joined Alouettes this season after three years with Chicago Bears.

From there in, the scorers range from Canadian-born Tip Logan's 19 down to single points by three players. Logan, who graduated from Queen's University Golden Gaels to Hamilton Tiger-Cats three years ago, has scored all his points with his kicking—two field goals, two singles and 11 converts.

John Mancos of Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen is making a runaway of the Ontario Rugby Football Union race. The import from Kent State University in Ohio has 37 points in four games, almost double the total of Jack McKelvie, Sarnia Imperials backfielder. McKelvie has 19 points in five games to hold the No. 2 spot.

New York Series Notes

By ED CORRIGAN

NEW YORK (AP)—There must be considerable interest in the world series outside of New York too. . . Every major hotel in the city is jammed and an estimated 750,000 visitors already are here. . . The hotels are honoring "confirmed reservations only."

As usual, some tickets are in the hands of scalpers and they are asking $80 to $150 for a strip of four to the Yankee Stadium games . . . Looks like they'll sell them all this time. . . They sometimes are stuck with plenty of pasteboards and wind up practically giving them away.

Everyone has been warning Jackie Robinsoon that the left-field shadows in the stadium will have him running in circles when he goes after a fly. . . But Jackie's not worried—"They're no worse than any other I've played."

The weather bureau predicts fair and warmer for the city at least for the first day of the series.

If Dressen pitches young Johnny Podres in the Ebbets Field opener Friday, it will come as an open "surprise." . . . Chuck has been threatening to use Johnny.

Allie Reynolds, who is scheduled to pitch the opener, was the only Yank hurler to be excused from Monday's drill. . . He attended a meeting of the executive council on behalf of the players. . . Reynolds, by the way, will have something to shoot for. . . If he wins one game, he will tie Red Ruffing's record of seven world series triumphs.

The word is that Stengel and his brain trust really are worried about Mickey Mantle's ailing right knee. . . Mickey took batting practice Monday. . . "It felt pretty bad," he admitted.

Kesselring Turns Pro To Follow Tournament Trail

TORONTO (CP)—Gerry Kesselring of Kitchener, one of Canada's best amateur golfers, announced today he is turning professional and will follow the United States tournament trail for the next two years.

Kesselring told Royal Canadian Golf Association officials that his decision was prompted by an offer of financial support and sponsorship by H. W. (Bud) Knight, Jr., Toronto sportsman and financier.

It is expected that in his tournament play, the 24-year-old free-swinging Kesselring will be attached to Toronto's new Downsview Golf Club of which Knight is part owner. As an amateur, he has been attached to two Kitchener clubs—Westmount and Rockway where he got his start under the tutelage of professional Lloyd Tucker.

SPENDS TWO YEARS

Terms of the sponsorship agreement call for Kesselring to spend two years on the U.S. tournament circuit, playing in both winter and summer events. He is the first Canadian golfer to plunge into such a long campaign against the best in the U.S.

He will get a car for travel and receive enough money to pay expenses with some left over. A condition of the arrangement is that his wife, Helga, and their four-year-old son travel with him.

Although he has never won the Canadian amateur championship, a match play event, Kesselring is regarded by many experts as Canada's best amateur, particularly at medal play.

DOMINATE ONTARIO

For the last two years he has dominated Ontario golf, winning the provincial amateur and open titles in 1952 and repeating this year. He also won the Ontario amateur in 1949 and 1951 and took the province's junior crown in 1945, 1946 and 1948. In 1946 and 1947 he was Canadian junior champion. For years he has been a member of Ontario's four-man team in the Willingdon Cup inter-provincial team matches.

He is no stranger to international play. In 1951 he was a member of an eight-man Canadian team which played informal matches with a United States team at Bethlehem, Pa. In 1952, he was a dominant member of the Canadian team in the Americas Cup matches at Seattle against the United States and Mexico, beating Harvie Ward, then British amateur champion, in a match decided on the 38th hole.

Eskimos Wallop Stampeders For Eighth Straight Win

WINNIPEG (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos crashed through a faltering Calgary Stampeder line for two touchdowns in the last quarter and a 21-12 victory Monday night, their eighth straight win in the Western Interprovincial Football Union.

As the Eskies roared from behind to victory at Calgary, Winnipeg Blue Bombers swept to a convincing 19-2 triumph over Saskatchewan Roughriders at Winnipeg.

More than 12,000 eager Calgary fans at Mewata Stadium saw the Stamps hold Edmonton to two points in the first half, build up a 12-8 margin in the third quarter and then run out of gas as Eskimos' powerful ground attack finally got rolling.

Quarterback Keith Spaith, who led Stamps to their 1948 Grey Cup win, called the signals throughout. The much-heralded Frankie Albert, quarterback from San Francisco 49ers who has failed to impress in recent games, was used exclusively to hold the ball for converts.

Stamps lost fullback Johnny Bright when he went out in the third quarter with an injured collarbone.

ARNOLD QUARTERS

Claude Arnold was in the quarterback slot for Edmonton and halfback Rollie Miles carried the ball for three touchdowns.

Esks had to be content with two points gained on rouges in the first quarter. The second quarter was scoreless.

Calgary's John Henry Johnson took the opening kickoff of the second half and, behind some good blocking, went 105 yards for a major, giving Stamps a 5-2 lead. Glen Christian converted.

Backs Billy Vessels and Miles then opened a power-drive and Miles went over for a major which Wilbur Snyder converted.

Homebrew guard Bill Pullar put Calgary ahead when he scooped up the ball after end Sugarfoot Anderson had knocked down an Arnold pass and went over for a major. Christian again kicked the convert.

Rod Pantages gave Edmonton a single early in the last quarter when he booted over the Calgary goal line and Pete Thodos was rouged. Miles went over twice for majors in the continuing Edmonton attack, both converted by Snyder.

CRAIN SMOOTH

Coach George Trafton watched from the press box as 22-year-old Geoff Crain masterminded Winnipeg to their victory. Guiding his squad by field telephone, Trafton and more than 16,000 fans were treated to a fine exhibition by the former McGill University quarter.

Monday's game was the last chance for Trafton and Regina coach flinging Frankie Filchock to look over their American talent before import-cutting day Oct. 1. After that date, each team may carry only eight Americans.

Crain tossed two touchdown passes to end Bud Grant, formerly with Philadelphia Eagles. Canadian half Len Meltzer plunged for the other major. Flying wing Buddy Korchak converted all three and accounted for a third point on a field goal attempt that went wide.

KICK POINTS

Regina's points came on lofty kicks by quarterback Frank Tripucka as Winnipeg halves Davey West and Gerry James were rouged. Tripucka played in place of veteran Glenn Dobbs who guided his club Saturday to a 21-15 win over the Bombers.

Two other Winnipeg signal-callers saw action but not in the pivot slot. Indian Jack Jacobs trotted into the game for kicking purposes and import Joe Zaleski played a defensive role as Trafton stuck by his Canadian protege.

Filchock moved into the game in the fourth quarter to fill the air with passes but found few receivers. In the fourth quarter, halfback Herb Johnson, a Rider mainstay, snared a pass by Winnipeg's Andy Sokol intended for Grant and romped over but the Riders were called for illegal interference.

Tom Casey played a sharp game on the Winnipeg defence, intercepting three Rider passes and knocking down several more.

Expect Beliveau To Sign Friday

MONTREAL (CP) — All the guessing about the hockey plans of Jean Beliveau will end this week, with every indication the Quebec star will sign a Montreal Canadiens contract Friday.

"We are not far apart and I am going to talk with Beliveau again Friday," managing director Frank Selke of Canadiens told The Canadian Press Monday.

"You know," added Selke with half a smile, "he won't be eligible to play in the all-star game Saturday unless he is signed by then."

Hornets Whip Leafs 5-3, Second Straight

BRAMPTON (CP) — Pittsburgh Hornets, American Hockey League farmhands of Toronto Maple Leafs, Monday night made it two in a row when they downed their parent National Hockey League club 5-3 in an exhibition game here.

In the season's first exhibition clash with Toronto, Pittsburgh came out on top 6-4.

Bob Sabourin fired two goals for the Hornets. Singles by Willie Marshall, Andy Barbe and Jim Morrison completed the total.

Rookie Bob Bailey, Tod Sloan and Harry Watson tallied for Toronto.

Six More Named To Hall Of Fame

NEW YORK (AP)—Six new names were voted into baseball's Hall of Fame at a meeting of the new committee on old timers at commissioner Ford Frick's office Monday.

The six are umpires Bill Klem and Tom Connolly, managers Ed Barrow and Harry Wright, and players Charles (Chief) Bender and Bobby Wallace.

Wright was player-manager of the fabulous Cincinnati Reds back in the 1870s, and Barrow, later general manager of New York Yankees, had a notable career as field manager, chiefly with Boston Red Sox.

Wallace, a shortstop, was a major leaguer for 25 consecutive seasons. He played for Cleveland, St. Louis Cardinals and the Browns, and wound up his career with the Cardinals in 1918. Bender long was a pitcher for Philadelphia Athletics.

Russian Increases Chess Tourney Lead

ZURICH, Switzerland (CP) — Vassily Smyslov of Russia increased his lead in the challengers' tournament for the world chess championship Monday night by drawing an unfinished game from the 15th round with Tigran Petrosian of Russia after 48 moves.

Smyslov leads with 10 points. Samuel Reshevsky of the United States adjourned his postponed 15th-round game with Mark Taimanov of Russia after 41 moves. Reshevsky has pending an unfinished game with David Bronstein of Russia from the 13th round.

Miguel Najdorf of Argentina drew his 15th-round match with Paul Keres of Russia. Keres defeated Petrosian in the 16th round.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Intense rivalry exists—nay, flourishes— on the gridiron between the Galloping Ghosts of Cobourg and the champion Orfuns of this fair borough. For a spell after the war, those packed Cobourg crews were too good for Peterborough and other clubs, as they drove through to several Ontario and Eastern Canada intermediate "A" football titles. Last year 'twas different as the Ghosts began to fade slightly and the bolstered Orfuns rode through to the Canadian final. It looks so far as though the Kotowski club is a little too strong again this semester for the Rapid Wraiths, Orfuns having met them twice to date and twice defeated the lakeshore lads, made up largely of Toronto players.

* * * * * * *

Cobourg columnist had a few things to say previous to the Saturday scrap. For instance: "Only the difference of one point separated the Gallopers last fall from a second chance at the Petes, and the way they were going on the last day they would have mangled Orfuns so badly there would have been a different set of faces heading west for the final had that second chance come. This year there will be a second chance, if Ghosts need it. That two-game play-off, points to count, is something the Peterborough outfit do not like and it's quite possible they will live to regret it before the curtain rings down. The Gallopers, with a full team on hand, are better than any team yet to come out of Peterborough."

* * * * * * *

So, Ghosts Are Better, Eh?

Well, Well, fancy that. Could it be whistling in the graveyard? The Ghosts were at full strength Saturday on their own gridiron, yet Orfuns (minus several key players) trimmed 'em 13-3. Which must mean the loop leaders didn't get there by accident. They have won six in a row and hope to make it No. 7 at the expense of the rough Toronto Marauders here tomorrow. It's an 8.30 touch under the arcs at Morrow Park. Those Orfuns are really strong this season and dish up some dandy, diversified plays behind a stone wall. We trust football fans will turn out in force and support 'em the rest of the short season.

Jack Gatecliff writes in the St. Catharines sheet: "Like the Yanks in ball, the Petes' Trailermen just keep rolling to lacrosse championships. In winning their third straight Mann Cup they have proven conclusively that they are the best team to come along in the past nine or 10 years. Two of their three championships were won on the west coast. Usually an eastern team must be up to 25 per cent superior to win the west. Certainly, Petes have established Ontario lacrosse as superior to that played in B. C. Sincere congratulations. For the record, Doug Favelle is the only player to win the Mann Cup series most valuable player medal twice." Tut, tut, man. Moon Wootton won it in 1950 and '51. Also, we'd say the Petes are the best boxla team to come along since the Orillia Terriers of the middle 30s.

For The Figure Filberts

Elsewhere tonight appears the financial statement of the Peterborough Minor Hockey Association for last season. It shows the PMHA-ers to be in pretty fair shape for the coming campaign, a strong executive looking after their interests well. The Ontario minor puck setup plans to put in effect again blanket insurance coverage for players. 'Twas quite successful last year with 3,658 boys insured and 40 claims paid. Ten of these were for dental treatment, the largest amounting to $168. The coverage in effect last season of course doesn't hold now, and new club policies will be required when the lads get on skates again. The cost is just a dollar a player. Al Watkins of this city, on the OMHA executive, will have the necessary info.

Mabel Gillen advises us that the annual open meeting of the Girls City Basketball League will be held tomorrow (Wednesday) eve at seven in the YWCA. It is open to anyone interested, especially those figuring on entering teams or playing this coming cage semester. Five entries played last winter, Civic Hospital, Lindsay, Black's, Collis and CGE. All are invited back. Officers may be elected at this time, entries accepted, and general plans for the coming season made. Some interesting angles will be discussed, one hears. Play should commence sometime during November. Won't be long ere the YM and high schools will be re-organizing for the hoop game, too.

Alouettes Get Backfielder

MONTREAL (CP) — With only three days remaining before the ax falls on surplus American imports, Montreal Alouettes of the Interprovincial Football Union Monday night announced the acquisition of a new backfielder. He is Jimmy Joe Robinson, 192-pound Negro, dropped by Pittsburgh Steelers prior to their National Football League opener last Sunday.

"We are giving Robinson a try-out and we'll see how he goes in practice before reaching a final decision on the boy," said general manager Lew Hayman.

Bell Defeated By IOF, 7-6 In Third Fray

Ralph Parnell's battling Foresters remained in contention for the men's Civic League softball championship by virtue of a thrilling 7-6 victory over Bell Telephone, Monday night at the East City Bowl. Bell held a 2-0 edge in games, prior to the third sizzling battle of a best-of-five set; but Foresters fought back strongly, and thus the hectic series will continue Thursday night when the two strong rivals clash in a fourth vital contest.

Paul Maloney toiled the distance for the winners, and proved more effective than in the second game as his southpaw slants subdued the heavy bats of Chum Gillespie's boys fairly well over the route. On the opposing hill, Bert Harrison also pitched a fine game, particularly in the late stages. One bad inning, the first, proved Harrison's worst as the fraternity lads, led by Hall, Quigley, Stewart and Schweir, scored four runs for a strong start.

Bell fought back, however, and tied the score in the fourth inning. A ding-dong battle ensued to the final frame when Bell again tied the game at 6-6. But the Parnell lads put over the winning run in the home half when Jim Murray reached first on an error, and later scored when Ron Tyndall bounced a high one over the mound that went for an infield single. It was a clean, crowd-pleasing game throughout, possibly the best of the series to date.

Injuries Bar 8 From Playing

KINGSTON (CP) — Injuries to eight Queen's players in Saturday's game with Toronto Balmy Beach will keep several of them out of the opening Intercollegiate Football Union game between Queen's and University of Toronto next Saturday, Dr. Hal Dunlop, the Gaels' physician, said Monday night.

Doug Hargreaves, centre from Sault Ste. Marie, underwent a minor operation in hospital Monday and likely will miss the game.

Don Dowdy of St. Thomas, a guard, suffered pulled knee ligaments and Joe O'Brien of Ottawa and Lou Bruce of Toronto have wrenched ankles.

Pete Zarry, fullback from Ottawa, has a wrenched shoulder as has Sherman Hood, tackle from Sault Ste. Marie.

Tackle Bob Macrae of Ottawa has an infected forearm and Greg McKelvey, Toronto, still has an injured leg resulting from a pulled muscle.

COACH AND ROOKIE—Rookie Bob Bailey, 22, first-year centre player with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, talks to coach Frank (King) Clancy, former NHL great, who also is making his big-league coaching debut with the Leafs. Bailey, last year with Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League, is six feet and weighs 185 pounds. He was born at Kenora, Ont., May 29, 1931. Clancy was promoted to the big team in the Leafs organization after coaching Pittsburgh Hornets in the AHL, a Leaf farm club.

Leafs' Kids Grown Up Expect Big Things This Year

Editor's Note: This is the second in a Canadian Press series on pre-season prospects in the National Hockey League. Today's story is on the Toronto Maple Leafs. Tomorrow: Chicago Black Hawks.

By JIM BASTABLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—"If I didn't think we could make the Stanley Cup playoffs I'd go home."

Frank (King) Clancy, the quick-tempered little Irishman, thus summed up his observation of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, the team he played with 23 years ago and will coach this season for the first time.

"They've got class written all over them," Clancy said as he whipped Leafs into shape for the 1953-54 season at their training camp here. "They're big time from the water boy up."

Clancy, one of hockey's most dynamic players and later its most colorful referee, isn't worried by the fact that he's working with substantially the same Leaf club that missed the playoffs last year after shooting the works on youth and a new goaltender.

KIDS GROWN UP

"The kids have grown up and the veterans are hungry," he says. "This may be one of the best Leaf teams in years. Why, we've got depth, a hot goaltender, a good defence and fast, classy forwards."

That's a pretty good run-down from any coach. But, coming from the 51-year-old Clancy—a fellow who brought the highest price ever paid a hockey player in his day when the Leafs bought his contract for $35,000 in 1930—it's that much better. He played 16 seasons in the NHL, turned to refereeing and eventually switched to coaching Pittsburgh Hornets, the Leafs' American Hockey League farm club.

However, Clancy won't guess just how good the Leafs will be when they open the 70-game schedule against Chicago Black Hawks at Toronto Oct. 10.

Neither will managing director Conn Smythe. "We'll have to wait and see," he said. "I figure we have 75 per cent of a hockey club now. We must get the other 25."

KENNEDY MAIN COG

One thing is certain, though. The Leafs, who finished fifth in the six-team league last year, will build their offence around captain Ted Kennedy, a mainstay 177-pound centre for years.

"Kennedy looks better now than he ever did in training," Clancy said. "He's practically down to his playing weight of 175 pounds. And he's scoring plenty of goals."

Joe Primeau, who retired as coach at the end of the 1952-53 season, relied on Kennedy to lead the crop of youngsters last year. Clancy will go along with him this season.

There are holdovers Bobby Hassard and Tod Sloan and Danny Lewicki at the centre spots. Hassard may go with Gord Hannigan, a driving left-winger, and Eric Nesterenko, rookie right-winger who postponed a college education to play in big-time hockey.

NEWCOMER PLEASES

Clancy may find a spot for John LeClair, 24-year-old native of Quebec City who came up from Ottawa Senators of the Quebec senior loop. He is a centre but was used on the wing here.

Clancy said he was "very pleased" with the way LeClair and Solinger worked in training.

The fate of right-winger Howie Meeker, plagued with a recurring back ailment last year, is uncertain. Meeker, with the Leafs since 1946, injured the back again in practice last year.

The defence chores will be handled by four holdovers—Tim Horton, Jim Thomson, Fern Flaman and Leo Boivin. Either Hugh Bolton or Frank Mathers, up from Pittsburgh, will be the fifth rearguard.

Harry Lumley is slated for goal-keeping duties again. Lum, who came to the Leafs in a four-player swap with Chicago late in 1952, didn't hit his stride with Toronto until the middle of last season. Clancy says he looks ready for a "great year."

Reynolds' Arm, Carl's Finger Keys To First Series Game

NEW YORK—(AP)—Allie Reynolds' right arm and Carl Furillo's aching finger may hold the key to the New York Yankees-Brooklyn world series opening Wednesday at Yankee Stadium. If Reynolds can flash his 1952 form against Carl Erskine in the opener, the 6-to-5 odds favoring a fifth straight Yankee championship probably will lengthen.

Reynolds simply blew his fast ball past Dodger sluggers like Jackie Robinson, Roy Campanella and Gil Hodges last year. But until the final weeks of the '53 season, he was only a pale carbon of his old self.

"We'll know after the first two innings whether he still has it," said Dodger manager Chuck Dressen at Monday's stadium workout. "I saw him pitch last week when he struck out 11, but he was throwing the curve—not that 1952 fast ball."

SEVERE BLOW

If Reynolds should be knocked out early, it would be a severe blow to manager Casey Stengel's chances of an unprecedented fifth straight. He wasn't going to use Reynolds in the first game until Whitey Ford's late-season wobbles made him change his mind.

Stengel's pitching plans are set with Reynolds, Eddie Lopat and Vic Raschi in that order although he hedges on a "Raschi or Ford" call for the No. 3. Obviously Casey counts on Reynolds to come back for No. 4 and possibly even for No. 7 if it goes that far. If Stengel gets a chance to close it out sooner, Reynolds will be in the bullpen.

But that is based on a 1952 Reynolds. A first-game knockout could scramble the entire plan.

FURILLO TO PLAY

Furillo, who tested his well-bandaged hand in a special 15-minute batting practice, fully intends to play. There always remains the possibility that he might re-injure the hand or find it impossible to swing hard in a real ball game.

Broken in a scramble after an argument with Leo Durocher Sept. 6, the finger was doubly protected in the batting drill. In addition to the bandage, a foam rubber pad was taped to the handle of his bat. Dressen hopes he'll be able to discard the pad and some of the bandage by game time.

If Furillo must miss the series, the Dodgers would be seriously crippled. Carl is a fine defensive player with a terrific right arm in addition to being the National League batting champion. Many fans remember well his sensational catch to rob Johnny Mize of a home run at the stadium last year.

Dressen said Monday he would play either Don Thompson or Dick Williams in right field if he has to replace Furillo. Gil Hodges, who played right on a trial basis, will remain on first base. Neither Thompson nor Williams is close to Furillo.

The Yanks still are a bit concerned about Gene Woodling whose hand was swollen from an injury received two weeks ago. Gene also used a padded bat in batting practice. It didn't seem to hamper him much, for he hit two or three balls into the right-field seats.

Despite higher prices, the usual sell-out crowd of about 70,000 is expected by 1:05 p.m. EST Wednesday when the 50th series will get under way. There will be radio (Mutual) and television (NBC) network coverage, with the $1,125,000 fee going into the player pension fund.

See Browns' Shift Possible To Los Angeles

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP)—Co-owner Del Webb of New York Yankees, representing a western group, is set to resume negotiations to purchase St. Louis Browns, with hopes of transferring the franchise to the Pacific coast.

If Webb is successful, it virtually means Baltimore is out of the picture. The Baltimore group, still battling bitterly for a major-league franchise, also has a strong bid in for the Browns' controlling stock. Webb was instrumental in blocking Baltimore's attempt to buy the Browns' franchise Sunday.

Unable to come to a decision Monday night regarding the fate of the Browns, the American League owners were scheduled to tackle the problem again this afternoon. It was to be the circuit's third meeting in three days.

The league did come to two concrete decisions Monday night after four hours of bickering and haggling with Brownie president Bill Veeck and his associates, who own the majority stock of the Browns.

1. It authorized Webb to negotiate on behalf of unnamed interests for the 79-per-cent control of the Brownie stock held by Veeck.

2. It announced, through president Will Harridge, that there definitely will be no American League baseball in St. Louis in 1954.

The beleaguered Veeck, balked in his efforts to move the Browns to Baltimore, expressed readiness to sell out, providing his price of $2,400,000 is met.

There was a possibility the league might settle for Kansas City if Los Angeles and Baltimore lose out. Kansas City, an American Association farm club of the Yankees, has made a formal application for the St. Louis franchise.

Webb declined to disclose the identity of the group he is representing, but it is generally presumed he is negotiating for buyers from the west coast. A Los Angeles group, headed by mayor Norris Poulsen, promised to put up $2,500,000 within the next few days and said it could raise $6,000,000 within 10 days.

The tall, bespectacled Yankee vice-president makes no bones about the fact he wants the American League to expand to the Pacific coast. He is waging a determined battle to bring major-league ball to Los Angeles next year with San Francisco to follow in a year or two.

Harridge, however, was not as optimistic about the far-western picture.

"All I can say for sure is that St. Louis definitely is out of the picture," he said.

Melis KOs Terry In Montreal Bout

MONTREAL (CP)—Paolo Melis of France Monday night knocked out Cuban Mario Terry in the fifth round of a feature 10-round boxing match.

Melis, who took a split decision from the Mexican lightweight titleholder here three weeks ago, absorbed Terry's blows in the first two rounds before staging a strong attack of his own.

It was Melis' sixth straight win without a loss on this side of the Atlantic. In the fifth, a hard right hand to the mid-section, followed by a solid left hook, sent the Cuban to the canvas. He got up after an eight count but went down beneath Melis' next flurry for the knockout at 1:26. Both weighed 148 pounds.

Marcel Assire of France stopped Ernie Drummer of Syracuse, N.Y., in the fourth round of their scheduled 10-rounder. Assire weighed 160½, Drummer 158½.

In a third 10-rounder, Bryant Kelly of Niagara Falls, Ont., knocked out Ray Powell of Pittsburgh in the first round.

Both lightweights, Kelly weighed 138 and Powell 137.

The knockout blow came at the 2:55 mark. Kelly staggered Powell with a series of punches and then flattened him with a left hook.

Gariepy Joins Bruins' Defence

Gariepy, veteran of five professional seasons—three of them with Hershey—will play with the Bruins for the remainder of their National Hockey League training period here.

The stocky, 185-pounder forcibly attracted the attention of Bruins' coach Lynn Patrick two years ago in an exhibition game when one of his checks fractured the collarbone of Bruins' Jack McIntyre.

The Bruins' coach will give tall Ellard O'Brien, another Hershey product from St. Catharines, a trial at right wing in the next exhibition Wednesday night.

Al Lopez Signs To Run Indians

NEW YORK (AP)—Al Lopez signed a two-year contract Monday to manage Cleveland Indians at a reported $40,000 a year after leading the club to three straight second-place finishes.

General manager Hank Greenberg announced the signing at a press conference after reaching terms with the 45-year-old manager.

"We've always been completely happy with Al Lopez and at no time has there been any consideration given to not renewing his contract," said Greenberg. "We think he is the finest manager in baseball and that he has done a splendid job with our club."

Montreal Nips Rochester 3-2 To Make Series

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Royals Monday night earned the right to represent the International League in the junior world series, disposing of Rochester Red Wings in the Governors' Cup finals.

The Royals, behind the neat pitching of lefty Tom LaSorda, edged the 1953 league champions 3-2 to take the best-of-seven playoff affair four straight.

The Royals now await the winners of the American Association finals between Toledo Sox and Kansas City blues. The Sox edged the Blues 5-4 at Kansas City Monday night to cut the latter's lead in the best-of-seven series to 3-2.

Rochester, who finished third in the International League in 1952, went on to win the little world series title the same year. The triple "A" club defeated Kansas City.

YIELDS NINE HITS

Monday night, 9,150 fans saw LaSorda go all the way for Montreal, yielding nine scattered hits, fanning seven and walking only one. The ace lefthander topped the Royals' pitching staff during the regular season, finishing with a 17-8 record.

Floyd Wooldridge, a young righthander up from Houston of the Texas League, went the distance for Rochester with a seven-hitter. He fanned four and walked the same number.

The Royals scored twice in the sixth inning and once in the third. The Wings tallied once in the opening frame and again in the sixth.

Allie Clark and Lou Ortiz of the Wings and Don Hoak of the home club accounted for the three extra-base blows in the game—all doubles.

Dana Andrews' Young Brother Makes Own Way

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Folks generally take a second glance when they meet a young actor who calls himself Steve Forrest. They think he reminds them of someone they know.

That's only natural. Steve is Dana Andrews' kid brother Bill. Steve or Bill, is determined to make his own way in the movie world without the help of his famous brother. So far, he's been doing all right.

I first met Steve back in 1946 when he was visiting Dana on the set of "Best Years of Our Lives." The lad was just out of the service and in a quandary. He didn't know whether he wanted to be an actor or a writer.

I ran into Steve again on the set of "Phantom Ape" and he told me what has happened to him in the years between, after he left college.

"I graduated in 1950. That summer I went down to the La Jolla Playhouse to work behind the scenes. I got a chance to do a bit in the last play of the season, and Gregory Peck said I ought to be an actor. He phoned 20th-Fox and a test was arranged.

"I did the test with Barbara Bates, but they didn't want to sign me to a contract. They wanted to give me a little part in 'Frogmen.' When I heard that Dana was going to be in it, I turned it down. If I was going to get ahead in Hollywood, I was going to do it on my own.

"For the next year, I tried my hand at writing, but it wasn't enough to live on. A friend from UCLA had become an agent and offered to take me to M-G-M. I saw Lucille Ryman in the talent department, and she took me right up to see Dore Schary. He told her to test me."

The story goes that when Schary saw the test he said: "This boy reminds me of someone, and I think it's Dana Andrews." Anyway, that's the story.

Steve was signed by M-G-M, but on one condition—that he change his name. He rebelled at first.

"After all, your name is something sacred to you," he reasoned. "But they wanted it changed. I picked Forrest, which is my middle name, and they gave me the Steve."

Steve's career began with a 30-second part in "The Bad and The Beautiful," in which Lana Turner tossed a cocktail in his face. He languished in a series of walk-ons until Warners borrowed a Fox test of Barbara Bates.

The studio made some inquiries about the boy in the test and signed Steve for a big part in "So Big." He returned to M-G-M for "Take the High Ground" and is now lent to Warners again for "Phantom Ape."

Steve, 27, is taller and blonder than Dana, who is 16 years older. They come from a big family of 13 kids, of which Steve is the youngest boy.

Strikes Shut 40 B.C. Lumber Mills

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pickets shut down 40 lumber mills Monday in the northern sector of British Columbia's timber-rich interior.

The International Woodworkers of America (CIO) called 2,000 members off the job following a government-supervised strike vote after rejection of a conciliation board majority award by the interior Lumber Manufacturers' Association. The award was for a six-cent hourly pay increase.

Present basic wage in the interior is $1.29½ hourly.

A spokesman for the lumbermen said the vote was held in 31 mills and that men in 19 of these voted to strike.

"As a result, the IWA called out 40 mills in the northern interior," he said. "The vote was 809 for a strike, with 400 against."

MONTREAL (CP)—Dr. R. B. Y. Scott, professor of divinity at McGill University, has returned here from Britain without a 7,000-year-old ornamented human skull he was commissioned to bring back.

However, Dr. Scott found that in London, where he was supposed to pick up the skull, it had been reserved by the Jordan department of antiquities.

Queen's now must wait until one of the other six is treated with preservative, Dr. Scott said.

Gerard Bernard, 41, of Stamford; Hector Cameron Graham, 56, and his wife, both of Niagara Falls, Ont., were killed when their automobile hit a gondola car being pushed across Highway 58 south of here on a company spur line.

Mr. Justice A. M. LeBel awarded $7,000 to Bernard's widow and $4,500 to be paid into court in trust for his two-year-old daughter. John R. Graham, executor of the Grahams' estate, received $1,000 and another $500 was paid into court in trust for the Grahams' son, Stanley 19.

Credit Not Up In Comparison

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—There is no more credit out in Canada now than there was in 1939 in relation to the Canadian income today, and the Canadian economy is far from a depression, credit bureau officials were told here Monday.

Canada's economy is on an upward march that should last at least 25 years without anything more than minor setbacks, G. Don Smith, general manager of the Credit Bureau of Montreal, forecasts.

Addressing the Credit Women's Breakfast Club of London, attended by more than 60 members of 38 Ontario credit bureaux, Mr. Smith said the current total of consumer credit in Canada was about 10 per cent of personal disposable income, which ranks closely to the 9.5 per cent and the 8.9 per cent ratios in 1938 and 1939.

Credit bureaux from Fort William to Kingston and Windsor, are represented.

FAR AWAY TREES

The Dorset Road in its rich autumn coloring of the trees is said to be a seasonal spectacle worthy the fairly long trip up from Peterborough. Cows and calves kept up a continuous chorus of cacophony against the auctioneering of W. S. O'Neil of Denton selling the Scottish Shorthorns in the new barn at Morrow Park. City Decides To Demolish Turner House

Could Find Room In City Hall For Health Unit

The old Turner house on the north-east corner of the city hall property is going to be advertised for demolition after all.

City council a week ago decided to defer a recommendation of the property committee to demolish the house and grade and landscape the property for use as parking space. It was thought at that time that the building might be needed for office space in the event of a county health unit being established here.

Board of Health Chairman Ald. J. A. Dewart said at that time that, although the health department's present facilities in the city hall were adequate, if a county health unit were to be formed, more accommodation would be needed.

At Monday night's Board of Works meeting, however, Ald. Dewart said he had discussed the matter with the Medical Officer of Health. Contrary to what Ald. Dewart had said, Dr. Wells was of the opinion that a county health unit could be fitted into the department's present quarters.

MANY IN FIELD

Dr. Wells had pointed out that many staff members of the health unit would be in the field a great part of the time and all that would be required for them would be desks to keep records in.

The property committee's recommendation was based on a report by Ronald Winter, consulting architect, who said it would cost $14,662.50 to repair the house and convert it for office accommodation. The building originally cost the city $16,000.

Mr. Winter estimated that the net usuable office area in the building was only about 3,000 feet. His estimate of the cost of repairs did not include the cost of alterations and partitions. He didn't think the space could be rented at a rate to give a reasonable return on the investment, taking heat, light, water and other costs of upkeep into account.

City Clerk E. A. Outram told the Board of Works Monday night that another architect had gone through the building with Librarian William Graff and his estimate of the cost of repairs was "amazingly similar" to Mr. Winter's. The Public Library Board is apparently not interested in the house.

"I move we go ahead and tear it down," Ald. A. B. Burrows said.

"Well, gentlemen, is there any point in delaying it?" Ald. T. D. Miller asked.

FLOORS GOOD

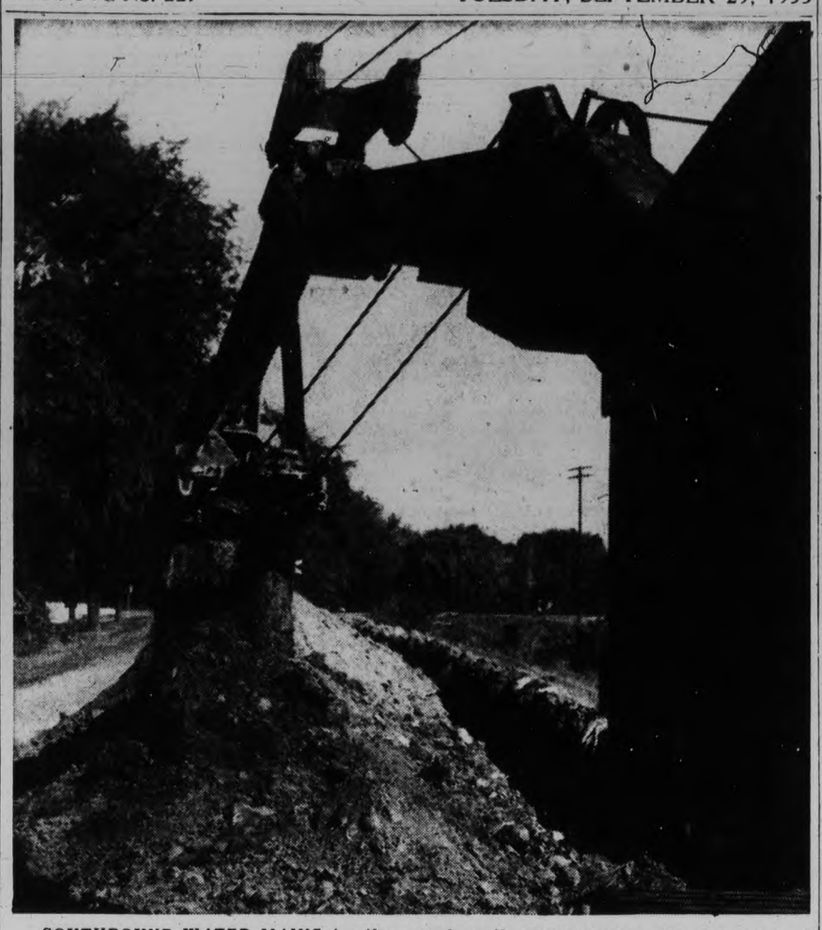
Ald. Dewart commented that the floors were in "surprisingly good condition" in view of the fact that the radiators had been drained last winter.

"Could the floors be salvaged?" Ald. Burrows asked.

"No. They're sanded right down to the nails," Ald. N. G. Graham replied.

The Board accordingly decided to go ahead and advertise for tenders to demolish the house but deferred action on future use of the property. The motion included no mentioning of a parking lot. "We can discuss that at a further meeting," Ald. Miller suggested.

The property committee's intention was not to have a metred parking lot in the immediate future at least, the clerk explained. The property would be used as free parking space for the present.



SOUTHBOUND WATER MAINS for the south-east Downer's Corners section of the city started south last Thursday as Utilities began digging and pipe-laying south from Maniece Ave., under the C.P.R. right of way and south along Armour Rd. The operation has reached Maria St., opposite the Trent Canal swing bridge today. The new water service will eventually cost about $75,000. —(Examiner Staff Photo)

Simpson-Sears Seek Tenders For Initial Work

Tenders close tonight for the first phase of construction of the proposed Simpsons-Sears building on Lansdowne St.

Footings and the foundation generally are the section of the work for which plans have been completed and on the basis of which contractors have been invited to tender. Eastwood Construction Co. and Walter Mortlock were recently reported as interested and studying the specifications.

As reported several months ago, Simpsons-Sear purchased the property at the southwest corner of Monaghan Road and Lansdowne St. for the erection of one of a chain of departmental stores across Canada. It was their reported intention in regard to the Peterborough unit, at the top of their list, to break ground on their local site about the beginning of October. Apparently the preliminaries are moving according to schedule.

Representatives of the company were here last week in their special interest in the dinner for the Ontario Post Masters. Three of them were on the Lansdowne St. grounds the next day where stakes have already been set, presumably for tentative placing of buildings.

No information has been heard yet as to the extent of the cluster of merchandizing interest which may become associated with Simpson-Sears in their group project. Realty representatives have been here several times in the last three or four weeks, and there have been some rumors of the kind of business that is contemplated for going in with this shopping centre.

Presumably, the company decided not to wait for the entire plans of their own building, but wished to get work under way as soon as possible, asking for bids on the foundation without waiting for working details of the rest of the structure.

135 Students Register For Term At Bible College

Back to school bells rang again Monday at the Eastern Pentecostal Bible College with about 135 students registering for the new term. Classes don't officially begin until Wednesday, but most of the first year students have arrived and are already being adjusted to their new surroundings.

All students live right at the college and officials expect that the college will be packed to capacity this year. They can accommodate 150 students comfortably. Besides the 60 first-year students who have registered, 75 second and third-year students will also be returning. Most of them have been out teaching and preaching during the summer. This year there are practically an even number of men and women.

Besides all the after-school activities such as discussion groups, corn roasts and various clubs, each student will have 25 hours a week lectures, which will include Bible study, psychology and various types of religious studies.

So far there is a student from every province in Canada except Prince Edward Island. There is also a girl from South America. They are also expecting a boy from Turkey to arrive later on in the week.

The principal of the college this year is the Rev. C. A. Ratz; president, the Rev. W. H. Found; the dean of men, the Rev. N. E. Schlarbaum; dean of women, Miss Salome Cressman; and the other four members on the staff are: the Rev. F. Parlee, the Rev. G. B. Griffin, Mrs. R. B. McAllister and the Rev. H. Bronsdon.

City Will Replace Retaining Wall

The board of works Monday night approved the tender of W. H. Mortlock for reinforced concrete work in connection with repairs to the retaining wall on the bank in front of W. C. Ackerman's property at 380 Park St.

When the street was originally built it went over the hill at this point but a cut was later made in the hill and a retaining wall constructed. This wall has since threatened to give way.

Mr. Mortlock's tender of $1,148 is for the preparation of forms and actual pouring of the reinforced concrete. It includes the lumber required for the forms, as well as the cement. The $102 worth of reinforcing steel has already been bought and will be supplied by the department of works.

City Engineer E. A. Chalmers explained there was no-one in his department qualified to do reinforced concrete work. Excavating is already under way.

Awarded MBE In Korea

Captain George Stewart Blake, RR 2, Ida, has been granted the award of Member of the Order of the British Empire for outstanding service in Korea while serving with 191st Canadian Infantry Workshop RCEME.

Capt. Blake, MBE, CD, 40, served during the Second World War with the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps in Northwest Europe. He joined the active army on his return to Canada in 1946 and held several appointments in the Ordnance Corps before proceeding to Korea.

His citation reads in part:

"By his untiring efforts, his ability, and his strong personality, he (Capt. Blake) has done an excellent job in securing the assemblies and parts required by the workshop from United States Army sources and from the base ordnance depot in Kure. This officer has also assumed other responsibilities within the unit is addition to his normal duties. These responsibilities included the control of the Quartermaster stores, control of local purchase account, president of the audit board for three messes, and ensuring the smooth operation of both the officer's and men's messes."

The citation also states that, "many times his staff has been well under strength and on many occasions he has had to do clerical work himself to make a success of his section."

"The success of the workshop and the respect that it has throughout the Commonwealth division is due in no small part to the effective and hard work of this officer."

Taylor Freed Of Charge Of Robbery

Some Doubt of Guilt Judge Says In Lakefield Theft

Leonard Taylor, 21-year-old Curve Lake Indian, went back to the reservation on Monday night —a free man for the first time in nearly four and a half months. Judge John de N. Kennedy, shortly after 5 p.m., found him not guilty of robbing 80-year-old Charles Smith, of Lakefield, with violence.

Dressed in the same neatly-pressed grey suit he has worn throughout the trial, the stockily-built Indian youth smiled happily as he shook hands with some 30 members of the Curve Lake band who were present in the courtroom and heard the verdict.

WANTS A JOB

"I want to get a job," he said, when the first wave of excitement was over. "I'm a bricklayer." After thanking Crown Attorney John Bradshaw for a fair presentation of the Crown's case—and another "thank you" to Defence Counsel Edward Fanjoy for winning his case—he left with the other members of the Curve Lake band to celebrate his release.

Judge Kennedy, presiding at the county court trial, said that the Crown had not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Taylor was the man who entered the A. J. Hudson second-hand furniture store, Lakefield, on the morning of May 1, struck Smith over the head with a hammer or iron spike, and then robbed him of some $50.

The trial was adjourned from Thursday afternoon to 2.30 p.m. Monday. During that interval Crown Attorney Bradshaw had time to prepare a rebuttal of defence evidence and "do a little checking" on some of the stories by defence witnesses.

Strongest point for the Crown was Smith's statement that Taylor was the man who entered the Lakefield store on Friday morning, May 1. He said he glanced up from the bench where he was sitting in the rear of the shop, recognized Taylor as the man who had come in just the day before to ask for a job, and said "good morning".

ALONE IN STORE

The 80-year-old pensioner, who was alone at the time, said he didn't pay much attention as the man whom he identified as Taylor walked around behind him. He added that he didn't remember being hit. Nor did he see the assault weapon or the person who struck him.

Crown Attorney Bradshaw also pressed for explanation of how Taylor could have $31 in his wallet on Saturday (the day after the assault) when he had no steady job and only 95 cents in his pocket the previous Monday.

Taylor entered the witness box Monday afternoon in his own defence. In short, his testimony was that he was not in Lakefield on the morning of May 1, and he had earned the $31 by illegal fishing.

Five Indians from Curve Lake had previously testified that they had seen Taylor in his tent on an island in the Reserve, 15 miles by road from Lakefield. However, one of them, 16-years-old Roy Taylor, had admitted when questioned by Crown Attorney Bradshaw that he would "tell any story" to protect a member of the Indian band.

"You've heard the evidence, did you attack Mr. Smith"? asked Mr. Fanjoy.

"No sir," said Taylor.

He swore that he slept till 9.30 or 9.45 a.m and was then wakened by his father who paddled over to the island and shouted at him They had a conversation, and Noah Taylor, the father sat in the canoe while they talked

BORROWED SPEAR

Stanley and his 16-year-old son came to borrow a fishing spear about 10.30; and another friend Ray Taylor was discussing blueprints of a building with him at the time

Later, Albert Taylor, a guide, came to borrow a casting rod, he said.

Taylor said he left the island 11.30 to 11.45 a.m. to take" a few things" over to Mrs. Jimmie Johnson to be washed. Then he walked up toward the Whetung store. On the way Mrs. Amos Johnson asked him to fix a bicycle chain.

"Have you ever seen Charles Smith before you saw him in court"? asked Mr. Fanjoy.

Curb Smoke

The CPR have announced that, effective October 3, their yard engines will not operate in the Peterborough yard on Saturdays. In a further attempt to co-operate with the city in curbing smoke nuisance they are making periodic checks on smoke from their engines. The first check was made September 18.

Revision Court Officers Get Increase

The board of works Monday night recommended increases in the annual remittances to members of the court of revision.

Subject to approval of city council, the increases give Chairman J. A. Harstone an annual payment of $500, and $450 each to the two other members, T. E. Ephgrave and F. L. Finnie, effective October 1.

At present the chairman receives an annual stipend of $250 and each of the members $200. These rates have been in effect since they were raisd by $100 in 1945. City Clerk E. A. Outram informed the board that the work of the court had increased considerably since that time and would be much heavier with the re-assessment this fall.

Since the passage of Section 51 of the Municipal Act, the clerk said, the assessor returned a roll every quarter, which created more court sittings than previously. Business tax adjustments and vacancy appeals were constantly coming up, he added. As a result, the court sat almost every month of the year.

LITTLE DISSENSION

He said in his opinion the decisions of the court were received with a minimum of dissension from the parties appearing before it and there had not been an appeal to the municipal board in 15 years.

City Engineer E. A. Chalmers pointed out that all applications under the Local Improvement Act came before the court.

Ald. T. D. Miller said the proposed increase had been considered for some time. He pointed out that in many cases court members used their own cars to inspect properties under study by the court.

"Certainly in the case of Mr. Ephgrave," Ald Miller said, "if we paid him on the basis of his professional fees, it would be greatly in excess of what the whole court gets now. But he told me he was acting on the court as a public service."

The chairman, Mr. Harstone, was appointed by the provincial government. Mr. Finney was appointed by the mayor and Mr. Ephgrave by the council.

White Girl, 8, Found In Native Reserve

DURBAN, South Africa (AP)—Police said today an eight-year-old white girl was found in a remote native reserve in northern Natal where white men rarely visit. She speaks only Zulu and answers to the name of "Queenie."

Police believe she had been "boarded out" in the village. She was living with an old woman whose hut was much better supplied than those of her neighbors. A children's court will decide her future if no one comes forth to claim her.

Second Body Found In Pigeon L.

Body of Glenn South Comes To Surface After Companion

LINDSAY — (ENS) — OPP officers from Lindsay recovered the body of Glen N. South, 38, of Toronto, Monday night from Pigeon Lake, four days after the discovery of the body of his companion, Lillian Watson, 31, of York township.

The two were drowned on September 20, when their fishing boat overturned in the rough waters of the lake.

Provincial Police Corporal Ken Dennis in charge of the search for the bodies, said that South's body had been seen by an American tourist from the east shore of the lake, about a quarter of a mile south of Pine Tree Lodge, and near the spot where Miss Watson's body was washed to shore last Thursday.

IDENTIFIED

Cpl. Dennis and Constable Jim Plumtree were called to the scene and dragged the body to shore. It was identified by South's brother-in-law, from Toronto, after examination by Dr. W. R. Crowe, coroner of Lindsay. It will be returned to Toronto for burial.

The discovery ends the case which brought an intensive search of the waters of the lake and the surrounding area, after the couple's boat was found, overturned, by a guide. They had rented it to go fishing in the lake. Their fishing tackle was found in the boat at that time.

Provincial police officers gave up dragging operations after one day, because of heavy weeds, but kept a watch on the lake, and concentrated their efforts to find South's body in the east end of the lake, after the discovery of Miss Watson's body last week.

Corporal Dennis said that a search of the area had been made Sunday with no results.

Man Found Guilty Of Manslaughter

WINDSOR (CP)—Donald Simmons, 32, was found guilty by a Supreme Court today of motor manslaughter in the death of his common-law wife, Thelma Green.

Simmons will be sentenced Monday.

Crown witnesses said Simmon's wife was found dying near an overturned car. In his own defence, Simmons admitted being a passenger in the car just before it left the road and crashed into a ditch. He testified, however, that he was too drunk to drive the car, and that the actual driver had been a Detroiter known to him variously as George, Jim, and "Pauncho."

Simmons said he had not seen the Detroiter since.

4-H Clubs Show Best Cattle Kemptville Principal Says

The best 4-H Club class of beef cattle he ever judged at an Achievement Day, was the compliment of A. M. Barr, Principal of Kemptville Agricultural School, at the Peterborough Achievement Day for rural club members, Saturday at Morrow Park.

In the morning they judged classes of dairy and beef cattle, swine and grain in a test of what they have learned about these products of the farm. In the afternoon the club members' entries were judged, the calves by Mr. Barr, and the swine by James R. Turnbull, federal government grader at Canada Packers.

The class of dairy cattle which the young folks were required to place according to their estimate of merit was provided by Stewart Nelson, of Keene, from his Holsteins; and the beef class was picked from the A. E. DeNure and Son Aberdeen-Angus, North Monaghan.

MUST PREPARE

For calf club work, each boy and girl is required to feed and take care of a calf, keep a record of feed costs, and generally prepare their animals for Achievement Day. The swine club boys undertake a similar chore, each with two pigs.

The beef breed calves which Mr. Barr judged and placed in the final event of the afternoon were Shorthorn heifers and one steer which was shown by Neil Whitfield, of Fraserville.

The order fo Mr. Barr's placing of the beef calves is listed in the names of their owners: Murray Pimmet, Indian River, 395 (out of 400); John Driscoll, Otonabee, 390; Gary Stewart, Otonabee, 386; Beverley Driscoll, 383; Neil Whitfield; William Chamberlain, Otonabee; Grant Elmhirst, Indian River; John Armstrong, Otonabee; Melville Chamberlain; John Allen, Fraser Hamilton.

The awards for showmanship were: M. Pimmett; John Driscoll, Beverley Driscoll; Gary Stewart and N. Whitfield, tied; William Chamberlain; Grant Elmhirst; John Allen, M. Chamberlain, J. Armstrong, F. Hamilton.

Seniors and juniors were together in this competition, and Mr. Barr told the less experienced club members that it was in their efforts in final competition that they gained the knowledge already acquired by the seniors. He congratulated the parents of all the young people taking part in Achievement Day for their interest as reflected in the entries. He particularly mentioned the beef cattle class, and told the dairy clubs they would have to look to their laurels.

DESTINED AS BREEDERS

Lou Shaw, president of the Scottish Shorthorn Breeders, presented the eleven members of the beef club with two dollars each for persevering to Achievement Day. He said he felt certain that some of them would grow up to be breeders of Shorthorns. One of the eleven red animals was a Dual Purpose heifer.

There were 17 boys and girls in the East 4-H Calf Club. The top group, in the placing of their calves, were: Ruth Bolton, Douro, 375; Allan Bolton, 370; Willis Nelson, Keene; Gary Nelson; Mary Jo Doris, Otonabee; James Doris; Clarence Coons, Lakefield; Audrey Bolton. And for showmanship the order was: Gerald Bolton, 90; A. Bolton; W. Nelson, Gary Nelson, Gordon Hope, James Doris, Audrey Bolton, Mary Jo Doris.

There were 14 entries in the West 4-H dairy calf club. Top awards for calves were: Ken Boyce, Smith, 380 (Jersey); Henry Guyatt, Smith, 375, (Guernsey); Dorothy Jackson, Emily, (Ayrshire) and Paul Jopling, tied; George Hancock, Robert Boyce, both of Smith. Results in showmanship: Dorothy Jackson, 90 points; H. Guyatt; K. Boyce; Nola Wilson, Barbara Mann (Ayrshire) D. Boyce, Smith.

Grain club winners on their entries: Walter Clark, Norwood; Neil Whitfield; Melville Chamberlain; William Chamberlain; Ray Allen; John Sanderson; Barry Wilson, Harold Johnston. Their entries were bags of fall wheat.

In the morning judging of dairy and beef cattle, hog carcasses and grain, the results as follows, juniors:

Seniors: Murray Pimmett, Indian River, 377; Gary Stewart, 368; Neil Whitfield, 367; Donald Kindred, Otonabee, 364; Gerald Bolton, Douro; William Chamberlain; Gerald Wood, Douro; John Allen, Douro, and Robert Boyce, Smith, tied; Donald Irwin, Smith.

Entries in the swine club lacked the strength of members of the last two years, with the expansion of club work this season in the Norwood district. Their calf, swine, grain and tractor clubs will be judged at the Norwood Fair.

Placing of the Yorkshire gilts by Mr. Turnbull were: Joseph Milburn, Gordon Bulmer, Gerald Milburn. Tamworths: Alan Storey, Ray Storey and Robert Clarke.

Mr. Barr congratulated Frank C. Paterson, and his assistant, Ken Best, on the success of Achievement Day, and in that recognition were also their assistants John Edmison and Keith McIntyre, club leaders on dairy cattle; Alan Drummond and John Auckland, teacher of agriculture, at Norwood High School; John Waterman, North Monaghan, and Walter Clark, Norwood, beef cattle. And in the judging of hog carcasses: Mr. Turnbull and Charles Lobb, Norwood.

70,000,000 Drink In States Declares Expert

WASHINGTON (AP)—A leading authority on alcoholism said Monday 60,000,000 to 70,000,000 Americans, mostly parents, drink alcoholic beverages and 4,000,000 of them are potential or confirmed alcoholics.

Dr. Selden D. Bacon, director of the centre of alcohol studies at Yale University, also said the ratio of alcoholism by sexes is about six men to one woman. It is most common between the age of 35 and 55, he said.

By racial groups, Dr. Bacon said native white Americans, Irish, Scandinavians, Britons and Poles have a high rate, while the Mediterranean people such as the Italians and Greeks tend to have a low rate.

"The Jews, almost all of whom use alcoholic beverages, have an extraordinarily low rate, a fact which has been recognized for over three centuries," he said.

Dr. Bacon gave these highlights on his studies in a copyrighted interview in U.S. News and World Report, weekly news magazine published here.

He chided schools and colleges for failing to educate youngsters about "some very real dangers attached to drinking."

"Telling them nothing, telling them nonsense, or talking down to them with nothing but negative commands—these are all ineffective and rather escapist types of education, especially since the students want education on the matter."

August Wheat Exports Down 15 Million Bush.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Exports of Canadian wheat during August dropped more than 15,000,000 bushels below the July total.

The board of grain commissioners reported Monday the total for the month was 24,700,000 bushels, 15,600,000 under July. The figure compared with 28,600,000 bushels in August, 1952.

There were 500,000 bushels exported to the United States during August for consumption there or for milling in bond, a 400,000-bushel jump over the July total of 100,000 bushels. This was well below the 2,600,000 bushels exported to the U.S. in August last year.

Fertile Saguenay Area One Of Richest

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP)—Few regions in Canada can compare in natural wealth with the fertile area that borders Quebec's Saguenay river—aptly termed by early French-speaking settlers "le royaume du Saguenay" (kingdom of the Saguenay).

Starting in Lake St. John, the Saguenay flows past rich timberlands, prosperous farms and bustling cities and towns to empty into the St. Lawrence river, 130 miles away.

Towns that were little more than villages 50 years ago have spread all along the upper Saguenay. The population of Chicoutimi now is 24,000. Nearby Jonquiere has 22,000 persons, with Kenogami and Arvida each counting more than 10,000.

The Saguenay region was known even to Jacques Cartier. It's development has taken a long time, but is typical of the opening up of Canada to settlers.

Early explorers, who started coming to the region some 400 years ago, found nomad Indians of the Algonquin tribe trapping and fishing within roughly-marked boundaries and occasionally engaging in intra-tribal warfare.

These early adventurers brought back fine furs and tales of harvests to be had in pelts. A trading post was set up at Tadoussac, at the juncture of the Saguenay and the St. Lawrence, and bartering in furs soon became big business.

For two centuries the canoe was the sole means of transportation. A trip into the region was hazardous and long—average time for the voyage being six months.

With the advent of sailing schooners, trade increased and settlers came to clear the forests and till the land.

The 19th century was well advanced before fur-trading ceased to be the main occupation in the region.

EXPLORED AREA

In 1826 the government of Lower Canada recognized the need for a comprehensive study and the Legislative Assembly voted $2,400 for exploration of the area.

With presentation of a report in 1829, the assembly recommended establishment of settlements "around Lake St. John, the length of the Saguenay and the rivers which flow into it, a vast territory. . . ."

By 1838, the first settlers came and carried names still heard throughout the region—Tremblay, Simard, Harvey, Maltais, Blackburn, Gagne, Lapointe.

Soon pulp mills were established and towns sprang up all along the Saguenay, particularly near Lake St. John.

With development of the forests, fire became an increasing hazard. One blaze in 1870 whipped through a 70-mile-long area from the Mistassini river to Ha! Ha! Bay, burning down whole villages and taking five lives.

By the second half of the 19th century, the upper Saguenay became less isolated. Roads curved through the wilderness and steamboats opened new markets for the settlers' products. A railroad was started from Quebec City, 100 miles south.

Final phase in the development was the advent of electricity. Hydro-electric power has done in 50 years what had not been done in the previous 350.

The names of some of the tributaries of the Saguenay, however, still go back to the old days—the Chamouchouane, the Ouiatchouaniche, the Peribonka and the Mistassini.

Longshoremen Threaten Strike In New York

By EUGENE LEVIN

NEW YORK (AP)—The International Longshoremen's Association, faced with increasing defections to a new AFL union, today threatened a strike which could detonate full-scale dock war with the rival group.

The ILA, ousted from the AFL a week ago for failure to cleanse itself of racketeering, posed the walkout threat for a minute after Wednesday midnight in contract negotiations with eastern shippers.

While the ILA dealt with employers, it also had to meet inroads from the new International Longshoremen's Association (AFL) which was chartered by the AFL after the original ILA was ousted.

LATEST BLOW

Latest blow to the ILA came Monday night when two locals with 1,500 men bolted it to join the ILA-AFL. A third local started the secession movement here a few days ago. There also have been defections elsewhere.

The ILA also was reported in the throes of an intra-union squabble for leadership. ILA president Joseph P. Ryan checked into a hospital Monday for observation.

Violence could explode before the strike deadline as the ILA-AFL pushes its organizing attempts—described as raids by the orphaned ILA; or the waterfront could continue tense with special details of police maintaining an uneasy calm between the two factions.

BREACHES IN FRONT

The defections of locals to the ILA-AFL leaves breaches in the ILA's potential strike front. It means longshoremen following the AFL might be ready to work even if the ILA sets up pickets. The result would be the first direct test of strength between the rival unions.

The ILA, in negotiations with the New York Shipping Association, was reported anxious to come to terms with the shippers, to edge the ILA-AFL out of a chance for a work contract for at least a year.

The ILA had reduced its demands for a wage-welfare package increase from 50 cents an hour to 10 cents. But Monday there were rank-and-file rumblings, handbills appearing on the docks calling for a "no contract, no work" policy. Later in the day the 120-man ILA negotiating committee said it would recommend a strike if there were no agreement by noon Wednesday.

ASK 13-CENT BOOST

At the same time the ILA committee, reversing itself, asked the employers for a 13-cent-an-hour package increase.

The employers have offered an 8½ - cent-an-hour package boost. Longshoremen now earn a basic $2.27 an hour.

The ILA has claimed to represent about 60,000 longshoremen—about 35,000 in New York, 15,000 elsewhere on the Atlantic coast, and the others in Great Lakes and river ports.

Drought Hurts Texas Cattlemen Mercury In 100s

SAN ANGELO, Tex. (AP)—The drought is hurting some west Texas cattle men worse today than it did before widespread rains in August brought temporary aid to the range lands.

Then there was hope the rains would help to make winter pasture. But the rains slacked off. Now, with a searing heat wave setting temperature records under clear skies, it's too late for many pastures to recover this year.

Monday the state drought committee approved resumption of emergency feed shipments to 38 more counties. That means the cattle men will be able to buy government-owned dry feed at less than market price.

The moisture - devouring heat wave sent temperatures past 100 in much of Texas Monday. Seymour in north Texas recorded 107, Wichita Falls and Llano 106, Dallas and Fort Worth 105. Dallas' 105 was nine degrees higher than the previous Sept. 28 heat record, set in 1988. No rain fell.

TOUGH DECISIONS

The hardest decision of his life faced many a west Texas rancher. With only part of his herd left, a big debt at the bank, and the prospect of another dry winter during which his feed bill and bank debt pile up, should he sell out?

One San Angelo stock man who handles thousands of sheep and cattle each year sees strong signs that many are getting ready to quit. Here's the way he put it:

"A lot of ranch men would be out now if it just wasn't so hard for them to throw in the towel. Many of them are hanging on because they don't want to quit on the banker who has stuck with them so long. They know that if they give up now, the banker is in a lot of trouble. They owe more than their livestock could possibly bring."

Whatever happens, there will be fewer cattle and sheep around to see the winter through.

B. C. Donnan, clerk of the peace for Hastings county petitioned for the selection of jurors and it was decided that Reeve West, Clerk Mallony and Councillor Bailey would make the selection.

Several accounts were presented for payment.

Leaders Term London Dam Pilot Conservation Project

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Federal, provincial and municipal leaders Monday termed Franshawe dam a "pilot project" in conservation of resources and flood control in co-operation that may extend across the country as they officially opened the $5,300,000 project in which all have shared.

Premier Leslie Frost cut a ribbon on the roadway over the dam on the Thames river, flanked by the federal resources minister, Hon. Robert H. Winters, and municipal officials of London and area.

Spokesmen on three levels of government applauded one another on the co-operation that had made the present and projected Fanshawe projects possible—through 37½-percent, matching federal and provincial contributions, with the balance from benefiting municipalities.

Credit for the accomplishment was given by Premier Frost to Dr. J. Cameron Wilson, chairman of the Upper Thames Valley Authority, Gordon Pitock, mayor of Ingersoll and vice-chairman, and Watson Porter, editor of The Farmer's Advocate.

Dr. Wilson said the group present was on hand to "dedicate a unique project in Canada's progress." The valley authority was blazing a trail of enterprise to rural and urban persons.

Premier Frost listed the achievements of the authority and said that it not only covered flood control but many other factors in conservation and recreation. Conservation of water, he added, was vitally important in the life of Ontario.

HAS BROADWAY ROLE — Lorne Greene of Toronto, familiar figure in Canadian stage, radio and television, has been signed to play the male lead opposite Katherine Cornell in the Howard Lindsay-Russell Crouse play, "The Prescott Proposals," on Broadway. Mr. Greene has appeared frequently with both the Jupiter Theatre, a professional acting group in Toronto of which he is a founder, and the New Play Society in Toronto. His signing to the Broadway role came after his second appearance on a New York television program.

Cpl. William Smith, 32, Britain's No. 1 "problem repatriate," stepped ashore from the liner Cheshire and was surrounded by reporters.

He should have arrived home two weeks ago with his fellow repatriates aboard the troopship Asturias. But Smith was put ashore at Singapore after brawls broke out between anti-Communist troops and those who had been affected by Communist indoctrination.

"Why were you put ashore?" reporters asked.

The gaunt, confused corporal, captured in the "glorious Gloucester" Regiment's stand on the Imjin river in April, 1951, shook his head sadly. He said his officers had ordered him "for security reasons" not to divulge what happened.

The British government has played down reports of clashes aboard the repatriates' ships. It is hoping soldiers affected by Communist indoctrination will regain their balance through the influence of home surroundings.

Shaking his head, Smith, an ex-fireman, said: "I was a socialist when I went to Korea. What am I now? I don't know."

Are you among the 20% of all Canadians over 30 that are said to be OVERWEIGHT?

At a recent convention of the Canadian Dietetic Association reported by Canadian Press, Dr. E. Gordon Young, director of the Maritime Regional Laboratory, National Research Council, Halifax, estimated that a fifth of the Canadian population over age 30 are too heavy. At the same convention Dr. Rachel Beaudoin of the Institute of Dietetics and Nutrition, University of Montreal, said obesity is endangering a quarter of the American population.

"25 of 32 Sudden Deaths Heart Cases, Overweight Blamed in All of Them."

Never before has there been such awareness on the part of the general public of the danger attached to being overweight, particularly after the age of 30. More and more people are turning to their physicians for guidance as to the cause of their being overweight.

There appears to be two primary causes of overweight due to excess fat. The one referred to as exogenous (without) results from over-eating or from ingesting food of high caloric value; the second, endogenous (within), may be attributed to glandular dysfunction. The majority of overweight people may be considered as the exogenous type; they consume not only too much food but frequently choose or have a craving for the foods ranking high in caloric values.

There is no royal road to losing weight. If you happen to fall into the endogenous category your physician, after a diagnosis, will prescribe for you the proper glandular medication and observe its effect. This medication may be dangerous if taken by a person of the exogenous type (too fat from eating too much). The exogenous type may lose weight safely as a result of following a diet adequate in vitamins and minerals, high in protein content and low in carbohydrates (sweets, flour products and starchy-type vegetables).

Diet Successfully Yet Satisfy YOUR Appetite

Diettes are a new type of wafer. One Diette containing less than ten calories, taken with a glass of water about a half hour before meals satisfies that craving for food so common in the exogenous type of person; it enables you to adhere to your diet at meals with a minimum of discomfort. Diettes contain Methylcellulose, an inert, harmless substance which may be taken before or with food in wafer form to decrease hunger pains arising in an empty stomach and give you that feeling of satisfied fullness.

People following a diet prescribed by their physician and failing to lose weight should blame themselves. They don't follow the diet closely because they become ravenously hungry and with the craving for food the temptation to over-eat is too great to resist. With Diettes it is easy to follow a diet. Diettes keep you feeling comfortable, satisfied and pleased with yourself because you see that the diet is actually working and the excess pounds are dropping away.

THIS IS DANGEROUS! After thirty the first puffiness, chubbiness around stomach, shoulders and seat, are dangerous. Insurance companies rate excess weight the All-American killer. Follow an approved diet for health and figure.

ATTENTION PHYSICIANS

Each Diette contains 15 grs. Methyl Cellulose; 28 grs. Dextrose; 5 grs. Plantago Flour; 5 grs. Oatmeal Flour; 5 grs. Soya Flour, plus binders and flavors. Contains less than 10 calories.

Movie Industry Pins Hopes On 3-D Films

The motion picture industry which was rolling along on prosperous wheels in 1946 fell into what could be called a financial crevasse after the end of World War II. The advent of television and its overwhelming acceptance by the American public seemed for a time a development approaching a disaster for the film theatres. It bore a strong resemblance to the upheaval which afflicted the movies when "talkies" began to displace the silent film back in 1927. Now a new invention or technique which gives a sense of depth to the screen bids fair to pull the near-prostrate industry to its feet, writes George Ericson in The Christian Science Montior.

Stereo vision or stereoscopic photograph, which gives a third dimension or illusion of depth to film images is the bright new gift to an industry which needed to be rescued from deficits and growing unemployment. So now comes the sound of hammers as theatres are being remodeled for the new medium, and the scratching of pens as new contracts are written by the various proponents of different 3-D processes. It took three years for the "flickers" to change over to sound, but the transition from the flatties to the deepies seems likely to occur within a few months.

"FUSTEST MOSTEST"

The haste with which the movie makers are switching from 2-D to 3-D pictures is the usual accompaniment of a situation where the "fustest gets the mostest," and where no producer feels he can afford to be left in the lurch. Illustrative of the value of being first was the showing a year ago of a two-hour series of short subjects in the new medium called "This is Cinerama." At prices up to $2.80 for reserved seats in New York City, the picture was viewed by sell-out audiences and is expected to gross $2,000,000 for the run there.

A similar box-office triumph was recorded for "Bwana Devil" produced by the Natural Vision or truly steroscopic process, requiring polarized glasses. This film took in $100,000 a week in two Hollywood theatres which before that had averaged only $17,000. and in New York it brought in $1,750,000 in eight months. In quick succession came Columbia's "Man In the Dark", Paramount's "Sangaree," Universal's, "It Came From Outer Space", and Warner Brothers', "House of Wax". Predictions in the trade are that the last named picture will bring in at least $8,000,000. Among forthcoming productions are film versions of stage successes, such as "Dial M For Murder" and "Mr. Roberts" by Warner Bros.; "Miss Sadie Thompson" by Columbia Pictures and "Kiss Me Kate" by Metro-Goldwyn Mayer.

"THE ROBE" TEST

Along with the few popular 3-D pictures shown, have been a considerable number of "quickies" of indifferent quality, made to cash in on the popularity of the new medium. But it is realized that if the industry is to prosper and retain its newly won patronage, it must offer something more than sensational visual effects.

The first of what is heralded as a truly quality 3-D film is "The Robe", costing $4,500,000 and produced by Twentieth Centry Fox's own process CinemaScope. This method, invented by a Frenchman, de Chretien, makes use of a wide-angled camera lens that takes a very wide picture on ordinary 35-mm. film. It has a compensating projection lens which spreads out the picture to original width on a curving screen twice as wide as standard. Showing of this Biblical best seller can well be a harbinger of what is in store for the industry.

MANY PROCESSES

Cinerama, which uses three projectors and three lenses, gives clear and sharply defined images said to be superior to other processes giving the illusion of depth, but its cost is considerably greater than that of CinemaScope. The problem that still faces the motion picture industry today is the difficult one of judging which of the many different 3-D processes will eventually come out on top.

Twentieth-Century Fox is apparently wagering a $30,000,000 production schedule on its CinemaScope. But other processes are being pushed by important interests, such as the Vistamara by Dudley Corporation, the Todd-AO by American Optical and Michael Todd, the Stero-Cine by Sol Lesser Productions, the Vectograph by Polaroid Corp., the SuperScope by Warner Bros., and more such as the Glamorama, Superama and the Vitascope.

The industry may know the direction it is going but it isn't yet sure of which road.

Rev. A. W. Smith Inducted At Christ Church

OMEMEE— (ENS)— A capacity congregation witnessed the induction Friday night in Christ Church, Omemee, of Rev. A. W. Smith, newly appointed rector of Christ Church, Omemee, and St. John's and St. James churches in East Emily.

Venerable W. P. Robertson, Archdeacon of Peterborough, and the Rev. Harold Hesketh of Lindsay, rural dean of Victoria, were in charge of the service.

In the processional, led by Christ Church choir, were visiting clergy from nearby parishes. Canon W. J. Gilling of St. Luke's Church, Peterborough, read the mandate of induction, following which the keys of the church were presented to the rector by wardens Walter Reeds and George Stephenson.

As the rector was led to the baptismal font, the prayer desk, the lectern, the pulpit and the Holy Communion rail to be instructed in his obligations, the choir sang an approporiate verse for each, from the hymn "We Love the Place of God."

The Rev. C. H. Boulden of Port Hope, rural dean of Durham and Northumberland, gave the address. He urged the laity to accept their responsibility for the work of the church and in vital issues to take a definite stand.

The reward for faithfulness, he said, was not always measured in dollars and cents, neither was the path of the Christian ministry best with all joys and rewards there was also weaknesses and disappointments. He asked the people to pray for their rector.

In the choir anthem, "The Day is Gently Sinking," the solo was sung by Mrs. A. W. Stephenson.

Following the service a social time was enjoyed in the basement of the church where the Women's Auxiliary served refreshments. Welcome was extended by Walter Reeds, and Miss Ola Gardiner of Perrytown replied. Other speakers were George Stepheson, Alex Carruthers of Perrytown and Archdeacon Robertson.

Visiting ministers not before mentioned were Rev. T. H. Gault of St. Paul's Church in Bethany, Rev. and Mrs. Llyod Delaney of St. John's Lakefield, Rev. Lennox of St. James, Fenelon Falls, Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Scuse of St. George's, Peterborough, Archdeacon and Mrs. Balfour of Peterborough.

New North Road Long-SoughtLink

MATACHEWAN, Ont. (CP)—A 17-mile stretch of gravel road will be officially opened Wednesday by Mines Minister Kelly, cutting the route from here to Kirkland Lake by three-quarters and opening possible new timber and mining developments in northern Ontario.

It will join this town on highway No. 65 and Kenogami on No. 11 with a road link which has been sought for 30 years.

Highway mileage between Matachewan and Kirkland Lake will be reduced to 25 miles, where up to now it has been necessary to drive an extra 100 miles via the connecting link betwen the two highways at New Liskeard.

The road bisects potentially important mineral territory and one firm, Ventures Limited, has already begun large-scale prospecting and developmnet operations in the adjoining area.

The new road will also speed transportation betwen the New Ryan lake mine and Noranda, Que., where its ore is sent for processing and refining.

The department of lands and forests also has started a forestry road to join the Matachewan-Kenogami road with Watabag lake, permitting direct truck transportation of timber to Swastika and Kirkland Lake.

Union Welfare Officers Bid To Ease Strikers' Hardships

TIMMINS (CP) — Efforts are being made to ease the hardships confronting more than 5,000 gold miners on strike throughout this northern Ontario area.

United Steelworkers Union welfare officers are working round the clock caring for union family needs and making sure the walkout which has tied up six of the 11 Porcupine district mines is an orderly one.

Union officials said Monday $40,000 a week is being spent to provide groceries for striking workers at Preston East Dome, Hallnor, Broulan Reef and Delnite mines in and around Timmins and Noranda mines in northwest Quebec. It is expected to jump to about $85,000 a week when an additional 2,600 miners at Hollinger and McIntyre become eligible for aid in two weeks.

Howard Conquerwood, Canadian Congress of Labor welfare director on loan to the steel union, said about 75 per cent of the strikers asked for welfare. Many of the 1,500 pickets needed special funds to help them tour the 17 points on the struck mines. Some pickets travelled up to 50 miles a day.

STRIKE PAY $8-$20

Strike pay averages from $8 to $20 a week, but varies according to the size of the family concerned. Mr. Conquerwood said the union discourages any exodus from the area, but recognizes personal situations which make moving a necessity.

"The departure of employees is one of the risks management has to take," Mr. Conquerwood said. "Unfortunately though, the men most likely to leave are the skilled workers."

A transportation department employing 350 cars and trucks carries men to and from picket lines and transports wood to strikers' homes. It was also used to take a worker's child to Toronto after she contracted polio.

Timber limits have been obtained at Ice Chest lake east of Matheson and 60 union men are living in two camps there, cutting wood which is brought here. Piled at a union woodlot, it is sawn and later delivered to miners' homes.

PLAN HUGE KITCHEN

Plans for setting up a huge kitchen employing 10 cooks and able to serve 3,000 persons at each meal have been formulated.

A personal problems department, headed by Norman McInnis of Preston East Dome mine, assists strikers in rent, fuel and clothing problems. When money is needed, an interest-free loan is made. These come chiefly from funds advanced by other unions.

A special duty squad organized to maintain order has the approval of police here. The squad tours beverage rooms and uses "diplomacy" in preventing incidents and settling arguments there. USWA officials said the union "does not want incidents."

Meanwhile, J. Bartleman, veteran member of Timmins town council, said he doesn't want to be associated with pessimistic remarks made by other community leaders about the length of the strike and its effects.

"I think this strike is going to be settled before very long. If we don't get good results from our appeals to the provincial government, we will have to go to Ottawa and more forcefully than in Toronto insist that something is done fast to rectify the situation here. I don't really think there is anything to worry about, with the exception of the loss of wages to strikers. To restore their prosperity should be our first consideration."

CP Directors Honor Editor Arthur R. Ford

SEIGNIORY CLUB, Que. (CP)—Directors of The Canadian Press today saluted one of their number who this year completes a half century in the newspaper craft.

Arthur R. Ford, editor-in-chief of the London Free Press, started his career in 1903. Today at the CP directors' luncheon A. J. West of the Montreal Star hailed him as "a great editor who has never ceased to be a reporter," and a good-will ambassador of Canadian journalism to many countries.

Mr. West traced Mr. Ford's career from his first newspaper job with the Stratford Herald through posts in Ottawa, New York and Winnipeg, culminating in his 33 years with the London Free Press.

"His devotion to the craft is eloquently expressed in his long and valuable service to The Canadian Press of which he was president from 1942 to 1944. He has been a CP director for 29 years, by far the longest service in the records of the board."

Mr. Ford, who is chairman of the Ontario Cancer Research Foundation and chancellor of the University of Western Ontario, has found time to serve his fellow men in many fields, said Mr. West.

"If a gentleman is a man of compassion and integrity, a man of honor bound by something inside himself to a cause of selflessness, then indeed Arthur Ford ranks high in that chivalrous coterie."

Girl Spends Spare Time Explaining British Ruins

LONDON (CP)—Katherine Capes of Courtney, B.C., works for the British Railways all day, studies in the evenings and spends her week-ends probing for relics left by the dwellers of ancient Britain.

The schedule established by the grey-haired, ex-RCAF radar clerk is premeditated. She drew it up after she'd gone as far as she could in studying archaeology in Canada.

So, to further an archaeological interest whetted by west coast Indian middens—garbage heaps left 100 or more years ago—she came to Britain in 1951, aware she must work her way.

Miss Capes started work in the soil mechanics laboratory of the railways' civil engineering department and found the job fitted well with her studies at London University. It entitled her to the cut-price rail tickets issued to railway workers for private journeys. Thus she spends less on the week-end trips she currently makes to a Roman villa and barn under excavation in Kent.

DID MUCH STUDYING

Miss Capes credits her RCAF demobilization grant with starting her academic career. She took a general arts course at the University of British Columbia, where student "digs" were organized to sift through the Indian mounds. Then she headed east seeking more knowledge.

Veteran courses took her through a diploma in anthropology at the University of Toronto and her decision to come here followed.

"It's worth it," she said in an interview.

Her chief disappointment here has been that London University does not teach the archaeological history of North America, although it touches India, Africa, Asia and Europe.

Miss Capes expects to take her London diploma next June. Then she'll return to Canada in the hope that she can pursue archaeology there.

While she would rather be digging up North American Indian relics, she isn't sneezing at the opportunities she's had to pry into Saxon and Roman ruins in this country.

The Kent excavation she has been busy on is believed to be one of the best preserved in the country. Villa walls are still standing in part and the mosaic floor has tiles apparently as brightly colored as when they were built.

Miss Capes, who can't report any sensational discoveries on her own, adds that traces of a central heating system are plainly evident—which means that even in 400 AD or earlier the Romans were ahead of the Britons in that respect.

WOMEN ON

PLYMOUTH, England (CP) — One hundred men entered a sea angling contest here. But one of the eight women contestants won the best-specimen award with a 19-pound dogfish. The heaviest fish a 108-pound shark, was also hooked by a woman.

MATURE WOMEN are finding that they can create almost new personalities for themselves by playing up their gray hair instead of disguising it. To bring out the silvery beauty of her gray hair, this attractive woman is giving herself a permanent (left) made especially for silver and white hair. During the twenty-minute neutralizing process (centre), she touches up her manicure. The curlers are covered by a perforated turban which keeps the curls uniformly damp. Her curls brushed into an off-the-neck coif, the lady (right) beams her approval of her permanent and her silver personality. Her regular hair care includes frequent shampooing, lots of brushing and use of a post-shampoo lotion which points up the silvery sheen and helps to prevent the delicate strands from breaking during combing.

Grey Hair Can Be Flattering To Maturing Woman

Increasingly, women are discovering that nature may not be playing a mean trick after all when she allows hair to turn gray. Instead, they find, she is tossing them a challenge to make the new hair shade a springboard to new loveliness.

If you can ignore the outdated notion that gray hair is always aging and concentrate on the opportunity it offers, you whose hair is now entirely gray can do wonders with your whole personality.

Properly cared for gray hair rivals platinum for startling beauty, yet it has a softening effect on the mature face than can be achieved by no other shade, including one's natural color of earlier days.

Besides pointing up your womanliness and adding to your dignity, silver hair permits a complete change in your costuming. Colors that you could never wear before will become you and your old favorites probably should be forgotten. You can create an almost new you.

This, one would think, would be an opportunity every woman would meet enthusiastically. Yet so many shrink from the thought of having gray hair. They seem to think that the really lovely silvery hair can be the glory of a lucky few and that the rest must suffer along with dull streaking gray.

Perhaps this was true years ago, but today there are preparations available that are designed specifically for grooming gray hair into enviable silver.

Frequent brushing and careful shampooing, important for all hair, are, if possible, even more important to the delicate silver. To keep the hair shining clean and fluffy you may find it necessary to shampoo it often as every five days.

A cream rinse will bring out the silvery highlights and will also eliminate snarls and tangles, preventing the hair from breaking during combing. There are color rinses that will add a blue or silver cast and will tone down the natural streaks in your hair.

Permanents, too, are being created especially for gray hair. One prominent maker of home permanent kits has brought out a permanent designed to give a softer wave while encouraging the natural beauty of gray or white hair. A blue waving lotion, containing a special new ingredient, is self-neutralizing and, according to the maker, will not cause naturally graying or silvery hair to discolor.

Before giving yourself a permanent you should discontinue using any color rinse for about three or four shampoos. And, of course, you will want to have your hair styled at a good salon.

BULKY SWEATERS are a fashion feature this season, you can retain the textured interest with just a little extra care. After sudsing, rinsing and blotting, lay the sweater flat (left) and beat with quick, light strokes, using a sponge or wash cloth. Your sweater will stay as fresh looking as this one.

Heavy Sweaters Winning Favor

BY ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

The big, bulky sweaters that until now have been reserved for the ski slopes are swooping into the fall fashion scene. They achieve the important three-dimensional look with the liberal use of the cable and nub knits, the beehive, hand-pebbled and Shaker stitches.

You'll be wise to select your sweater carefully. Invest in a good wool that will take easily to soap and water and you will have a well-shaped sweater for innumerable wearings.

When washing the sweater you want plenty of room to squeeze the suds through thoroughly. So, if the sweater is very bulky and the basin small, use the bath tub.

Before submerging the sweater, rub badly soiled spots with a sudsy soft brush or soapy fingers. To guard against stretching and sagging, keep the wool cupped in your hands while washing and rinsing. Use lukewarm suds and rinse at the same temperature.

After you have rinsed away all signs of soap, blot the sweater with a towel and then insert it in a drying frame, laying flat to dry.

If the wool is treated to resist shrinkage it will not be necessary to use a frame. In any case, do not dry near a radiator. If you are in a hurry, put the sweater near a fan.

You might try this beauty treatment to keep your bulky sweater fashion-right: After the sweater has dried, press down on it with a dry sponge or wash cloth, patting it up and down to stimulate the pattern and emphasize its texture.

Corneil-Dickson KeeneRites

In Knox Presbyterian Church, Keene, the marriage took place Saturday of Lois Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Dickson, of Keene, to Lloyd George Corneil, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Corneil of Lindsay. The Rev. Gilbert D. Smith officiated.

Baskets of gladioli and palms decorated the church. Music was played by Mrs. Herbert Thompson and Mr. Francis Taylor was soloist. Before the bride entered he sang "The voice that breathed o'er Eden" and during the singing of the register, "O Perfect Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was in a strapless ankle-length gown of nylon tulle over taffeta, topped with an embroidered overskirt. The bodice and a matching cape were of embroidered net and she wore matching mittens. Her elbow-length veil was of silk illusion, caught to a bandeau of the net with seed pearls and rhinestones and she was carrying a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

Miss Agnes Dickson was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing an ankle-length gown of apple green nylon tulle and embroidered net over taffeta with matching bolero, hat and gloves, and she carried a ballerina bouquet of Gold Coast 'mums. The groom's attendant was his brother Mr. Douglas Corneil and the ushers were William Wood, cousin of the bride, and Hector Corneil, also a brother of the groom.

The reception was held in the Sunday school room of the church. The bride's mother received the guests in a dress of beau-blue crepe and was wearing a black velour hat, black accessories and a corsage of pink pinocchio roses.

The groom's mother assisted, gowned in lady love crepe and wearing black accessories and a corsage of mauve and white 'mums.

Leaving later on a wedding trip to Buffalo, the bride wore a blue grey gabardine suit with navy accessories and had a corsage of pink rosette roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Corneil will live on the groom's farm at R.R. 2, Lindsay.

Treat Husband Like Horse For Happiness – Cowgirls

By DOROTHY ROE

NEW YORK (AP) — Cowgirls make wonderful wives, because the rules for keeping a husband happy are much the same as those for handling a horse, to wit:

1. Don't ride him too hard.
2. Ease up on the curb bit occasionally.
3. Use spurs only when necessary.
4. Give him enough rope.
5. Let him try out greener pastures once in a while—so h be glad to get back to the ba.
6. Feed him plenty of oats.
7. Frequently turn him out to graze.
8. Keep a firm hand on the reins most of the time, but sometimes give him his head.
9. Keep a quirt handy, but use it seldom.
10. Don't fence him in.

I gleaned these interesting bits of information recently while lunching with Lillian Jenkins, publicity director of Madison Square Garden; and five highly decorative cowgirls, all dressed to the teeth in Western attire including tight pants, 10-gallon hats and fancy boots.

The sensation created among the male customers of the midtown Manhattan restaurant as we led the cowgirl brigade to a table was something like an atomic blast, or an unscheduled performance by Gypsy Rose Lee.

As we engaged in light chit-chat, it developed two of the five lovely cowgirls were married, and the others intended to be at the first possible opportunity. It was at this point that Miss Jenkins gave out with her horse-husband analogy.

Lillian uses many of these rules in keeping her own husband happy. He's a sportsman named Fred Podesta, who is promotion director at the Garden. And when he wants to see a fight or a wrestling match with the boys, Lillian lets him go without a murmur. Says she:

"A man has to have some outside interest, to make him an interesting person. I think a man who is interested in sports has a broader outlook, a more easy-going personality and makes a better husband than the hothouse or bookworm type. Me, I like sportsmen."

Lillian has been employed at the Garden in various capacities since 1935, probably has more friends among sports celebrities, performers and fans than any woman in the world.

She has learned the terminology and individual foibles of the circus, the rodeo, boxing, wrestling, the ice show, hockey, basketball, the horse show and all the other sports and spectacles that show up at the garden.

But for a well-known career woman, she has curiously old-fashioned ideas about marriage, such as this:

"I think a woman is silly to keep on working after marriage. I've told my own daughter that when she gets married, she's going to quit work and that's that. Any wife can do more good taking care of her husband and helping him to get ahead than she can holding down a job of her own.

"What about me? Well, I started working young, and now I'm stuck with it."

Twin Sister Attends Willa Westlake

A pretty wedding took place in Bridgenorth United Church Saturday afternoon of Willa Joyce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Westlake of R.R. 2, Peterborough, to Ronald Franks Darling, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Darling, also of RR 2, Peterborough.

The Rev. T. Fleetham officiated in the double ring ceremony. The church was decorated with mauve and white gladioli and 'mums banked with ferns. Wedding music was played by Mrs. Elizabeth Telford. Before the bride entered Mrs. D. Sproule sang, "The Lord's Prayer". During the signing of the register she sang, "O Perfect Love".

The bride was given in marriage by her father and she wore a gown of white nylon net, with Chantilly lace inserts, over satin, and a lace bolero jacket which had sleeves coming to points over the wrists. The Peter Pan collar was embroidered with seed pearls. Her veil was of embroidered silk net caught to a seed pearl trimmed Dutch cap. She carried a bouquet of Bettertime roses.

Only attendent was Mrs. Stewart Bell, twin sister of the bride. She wore a strapless gown of mauve net over taffeta with a fitted bodice and wore a matching bolero jacket. The matching head band was trimmed with yellow 'mums and she carried a nosegay of yellow 'mums.

Groomsman for his brother was Mrs. Gordon Darling. Ushers were Oswald Westlake, brother of the bride, and Harry Irwin.

The reception was held in the church parlours where the bride's mother received, wearing a two-piece teatime dress in hunter's green with black accessories. She wore a corsage of bronze 'mums. The groom's mother received in a suit of pale blue gabardine with navy accessories and had a corsage of white 'mums. Guests were present from Toronto, Taunton, Columbus, Omemee and Fraserville.

Later the bride and groom left on a motor trip to points west. For travelling, the bride wore an English wool corded suit in Coronation blue, with matching accessories and a plum-colored gabardine topcoat. Her corsage was a gardenia.

They will make their home at RR 2, Peterborough.

Conf. Scenes Depicted At YW Meeting

The annual open meeting of the YWCA Board of Directors was held in the Green Room Monday evening. An opening devotional service was conducted by Mrs. C. A. Craig. President Mrs. H. T. Rehill then took charge, welcoming members, electors and friends.

Encouraging reports from all departments were heard. A statement from the World Service committee showed 80 per cent of the 1953 quota subscribed.

Delegates to National YWCA convention held in Quebec City in June gave reports in a novel and interesting fashion. They dramatized the conference in three scenes with a prologue by Miss Hazel Wilson and Miss Jean Hammond.

Scene one depicted a late evening chit chat of delegates in a hotel room on the last evening of the conference. Scene two was a discussion on the train, homeward bound, by Mrs. Rehill and Miss Leta Brownscombe of the values of the conference. Scene three was a pictorial review by Mrs. C. A. Craig of colorful and interesting angles of the conference at which she had taken pictures.

The delegates to the conference introduced were Mrs. Rehill, Mrs. Craig, Miss Brownscombe, Miss Bea Pelsis, Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Stan McBride, Mrs. John Lewis, Mrs. Walter Perks, Miss Orra Henan, Miss Jean McIntyre, Miss Ella Down and Mrs. Paige Rowell, a member of the National Board. Miss Marion Foster also attended.

At close of the program, refreshments were in the library by Miss F. Eastwood of the Y cafeteria.

100 QA Mothers Attend H & S Tea

An informal tea was given on Monday afternoon at the Queen Alexandra School, by the executive of the Home and School Association, at which the teachers, the grade mothers and the mothers of the pupils who are new to the school were guests.

President Mrs. Arthur Black personally welcomed each of the guests, and there were more than 100. She invited each one to be a member of the Association and extended a general invitation to the next meeting when the primary school supervisor Miss Phyllis Moore is to be speaker.

To the grade mothers, she outlined the duties of the position, stressing that they are considered publicity agents of the Association.

Principal Mr. K. McKee contributed to Mrs. Black's welcome with a brief message to the mothers. Mrs. O. Axford, who is convener of the grade mothers, was introduced.

The tea arrangements were in charge of Mrs. W. Turner, assisted by Mrs. Paul Evans and members of the executive. They had laid the tea table with a lace cloth bouquet of shaded asters. Pink tapers highlighted the effect.

Mrs. Ivan Morgan played pleasing background music during the tea hour.

Memberships were taken by Mrs. Robert Sager, assisted by Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. C. Law.

Lancaster-Edgar Wedding

Yellow and bronze gladioli and white 'mums made a beautiful autumn floral setting in All Saints' Anglican Church for the wedding on Saturday of Marilyn June, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edgar of Peterborough, to Mr. Donald V. Lancaster of Oshawa, son of Mrs. Alice Lancaster of Peterborough and the late Harold V. Lancaster.

Their marriage vows were solemnized by the Rev. Maurice P. Poole, rector. Organist Miss Margaret Flowers played the wedding march and during the signing of the register she played "Because."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was in a lovely gown with off-the-shoulder decollete, of white Chantilly lace and nylon net. The bodice was trimmed with seed pearls and the skirt fell over a crinoline into a short train. Her veil of French net was caught to her tiara headdress of seed pearls and rhinestones and she was carrying a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Two sisters of the bride were her attendants, Mrs. Frank Pammett as bridesmaid and Miss Ruth Edgar as flower girl. Mrs. Pammett was gowned in pink net over taffeta and wore a pink feather hat. Miss Edgar was in a frock of blue taffeta and wore matching mittens and headband. Each carried a cascade of pink 'mums.

Mr. Douglas Bright attended the groom and ushers were Donald McMillan and the bride's brother William Edgar.

The Rev. A. M. Butler of St. Andrew's United Church, Millbrook, performed the marriage on Saturday of Elizabeth Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Olan of Millbrook, and Bruce Clinton Wakeford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wakeford of Peterborough.

Baskets of autumn flowers were the setting for the ceremony and Miss Estella Hetherington played wedding music. During the signing of the register Miss Gladys Langton sang "Because".

The bodice was enhanced with all-over embroidery of seed pearls and sequins and was finished with long pointed sleeves of the lace. The bouffant skirt flowed into a long graceful train. Shantz-McGee Wedding

By candlelight, with a floral background of yellow gladioli and rust 'mums, at the altar of the George St. United Church, marriage vows were pledged Saturday afternoon by Eleanor Ruth, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William K. McGee, and Gordon Robert Shantz, B. Sc., son of Mrs. Gordon W. Shantz, and the late Mr. Shantz, all of Peterborough.

The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Arnold Mathews. During the service Mrs. James Goldie sang "The Lord's Prayer" and while the register was being signed she sang "The Wedding Prayer." The music was played by organist Mr. Charles E. Allen.

A beautiful gown with bodice and lily-pointed sleeves of Chantilly lace and full flared skirt of taffeta with overskirt of French nylon tulle falling into a short graceful train was the bride's choice. She wore a shell-shaped cap of matching taffeta and lace and her fingtertip veil was of imported French tulle illusion. Her bouquet was a cascade of gardenias, white 'mums and ivy.

Mr. McGee gave his daughter in marriage. Her attendants were Miss Edith Miller as maid of honor and Mrs. M. J. Walker of Thornhill as bridesmaid.

The attendants' frocks were of antique faille made with low scalloped necklines, short scalloped sleeves and full gathered ballerina length skirts. They wore matching antique gold shoes and mittens and they had shell-shaped caps of taffeta finished with clusters of bead work on either side. Each carried a nosegay of bronze shasta 'mums centred with yellow roses.

The groomsman was Mr. David R. Shantz, brother of the groom. Ushers were Keith S. Boorman, B. Sc., of Toronto and Robert J. Shank, B. Sc., of Sudbury.

At the reception which followed, held in the board room of the church, Mrs. McGee received the guests, wearing a two-piece dress of an imported fabric matelasse in pageantry shade, a hat of black velvet and a corsage of pink 'mums. The groom's mother, who assisted her, was gowned in blue mole crepe with pearl and bead trim and wore winter white accessories and a corsage of roses and stephanotis.

Among the guests were friends from Stirling, Newtonville, Norwood, Sudbury, Oshawa, Bobcaygeon, Kingston, Brockville and Richmond Hill.

The bride and groom are now spending a honeymoon in the Laurentians and afterward they will make their home in Kingston.

For going-away the bride donned a suit of rose wool trimmed with black velvet and black velvet accessories and her corsage was of gardenias.

Elsie Davis Wed Saturday To Donald Byers

The Rev. A. Lloyd Shorten, minister, performed the marriage ceremony and organist Mrs. C. M. Renaud played the wedding music. The bride was given in marriage by her brother Mr. William Davis.

She was wearing a waltz-length gown of white Chantilly lace over satin and net with Queen Anne collar of nylon net and long lily-pointed sleeves. The bodice was scalloped at the top and filled in with a yoke of net. Her veil was of silk illusion enhanced with a border of Chantilly lace and a pointed Juliet cap of satin dotted with tiny seed pearls adorned her head. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Bridesmaid was her sister Miss Muriel Davis who was wearing a strapless waltz-length gown of two-tone mauve nylon net over taffeta with a headdress of matching material. She carried a nosegay of contrasting colored 'mums. The groom was attended by his brother Jack Byers and the ushers were Larry Payne and Leo Gooley.

The reception was held at the groom's home. His mother received in a dress of wine silk and wore black accessories and a corsage of white 'mums. The bride's mother received in a black and white silk gown and wore black and white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Variety Is The Secret Of Good Nutrition

When a little boy of five doesn't know what pear is and a woman of 30 has her first taste of eggplant and a young man of 21 takes his first supicious taste of lobster and a business woman of 45 avoids her salad because it is moistened with French dressing which she has never tried . . .

. . . I say when all of those things happen before my eyes within the space of one week, I begin to wonder some impatient wonderings.

Are folk such slaves to their food prejudices and habits?

Doesn't everybody crave variety? Don't answer. I know. They just don't want to try anything new, for if it's new it's no good.

Bless my soul—what a rough time they would have had of it if they travelled in India or Brazil.

All too well I know a nurse and a doctor who are married. The doctor wants and gets meat and potatoes noon and night. He was a farm-reared boy. He also was a prosperous practitioner, but at 55 he is nearly driven blind (he doesn't like carrots) and is so arthritic he has to be driven by his wife to make his rounds to those patients that still consult him. I am not one bit callous about this sorry state of affairs, but because he now admits the error of his eating ways I am free to point up the folly of such a limited diet.

Don't you remember the man I told you about once whose wife made apple pie for dinner every day for over 25 years? and at the other end of the scale the friend of mine who claims she could cook meals from now until she falls dead without repeating one dish?

Those are two extremes (because I'd hate to think I'd never taste that gal's fried chicken again) but in this land of milk and honey and an unlimited variety of wonderful foods you can keep life interesting if only by the variety in your meals. Vary your meals even if only for the fun of it.

But that's not my big point. My main full-of-punch argument is this: Abundant health is wrapped up and handed to you for free if you serve all of the foods available to Canadians.

The Nutrition Foundation Inc. sums it up this way:

"Variety is the keynote in selecting a balanced diet. In fact, variety in food consumption is the best practical means of providing a nutritious diet. Here are two examples to illustrate the importance of using several foods at one meal:

"Example 1: Flour and cereal products are economical sources of calories. The enriched whole grain products contribute appreciably to the vitamin and mineral intake, but their protein is low in the essential amino acid lysine. However, these foods are usually eaten along with milk or some other animal protein (such as meat or eggs or cheese) which supplies the lysine as well as adding to the vitamin and mineral intake . . . providing complete protein . . .

"Example 2: Citrus fruits and their juices are probably best and most used sources . . . of Vitamin C . . . the same amount of tomato juice provides about half their amount of Vitamin A . . . prunes give insignificant amounts of Vitamin C but are a good source of essential minerals such as iron and copper . . ."

Those examples merely serve to pique your curiosity for the multiplicity of valuable nutrients contained in a variety of foods is almost incalculable.

Don't cripple yourself and your family by buying the same groceries week in and week out. Throw your list away and when you shop and your hand reaches out for a can of peas quickly switch to a beautiful eggplant. In the fruit department change from a can of peaches to fresh pears and grapes. In other words, if it is different serve it.

It takes months to change your buying and eating habits but in a matter of weeks your whole family will feel better because you gave their nutrition careful thought.

Now Ideal Time To Clean Home, Prepare For Winter

By GAILE DUGAS
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA)—Fall housecleaning is as important as spring cleaning in many communities. The weather is brisk and suggests action. It seems the ideal time to turn out closets and store away summer clothing and slip covers.

If, when you remove slip covers, you discover grime that collected at some time previous, go after it. No matter how careful a housewife is about upholstery, it's bound to look dingy from time to time. This is particularly true in a day that favors the clear, fresh, lovely colors of contemporary furniture.

It's best to get after the dirt as soon as it's noticed, since dirt weakens fabric. If you never use slip covers, the furniture that gets the most wear should be cleaned once a week. Generally, all upholstery should have a light cleaning once a month regardless of the spring and fall offensives.

In cleaning your chairs, and sofas this fall, try using one of the new, small hand erasers. Dip it into a safe, odorless home dry cleaner and work in a small area only. Use gentle upward strokes to loosen the dirt. Be sure to overlap areas to avoid streaking the fabric. It's best, before you start, to test an inconspicuous spot for color fastness.

This method is recommended for broadcloth, brocade, brocatelle, chenille, cretonne, damask, frieze, linen, mohair, plush, satin, taffeta, velour, velvet and velveteen.

It's just a step from upholstery to carpeting. There's a long-handled eraser designed especially for carpet cleaning. You begin, however, by vacuuming the carpet thoroughly. Now, dip the eraser into the same kind of cleaner you used for the upholstery and begin to work from one corner. Again, use the eraser in a small area and overlap the areas you're cleaning.

This method can be used once a week or once a month. The fall housecleaning period is a good time in which to set up a regular routine.

Closet cleaning is a task that most women would like to avoid if at all possible. But there comes a time when a closet simply will not hold another old shoe. And autumn's a fine time to clear them out and get them in order. It's the best time, too, to sort out all the clothing (both summer and winter) that your family really doesn't need and send it off to some charitble organization.

Labelling the things that you do store away will make it far easier for you to find things in the future. You might try the transparent plastic closet boxes that make it possible to identify contents at a glance.

Otherwise, tape labels to sturdy cardboard boxes so that next spring, when dad wants his tennis shoes, you won't have to root through four barrels and every cluttered closet in the house to find them.

DOROTHY DIX

Too Young To Be In Love Advised To Delay Marriage

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a 20-year-old girl engaged to a boy a few months younger. I have finished high school and a business course. He had completed a year of college before going into the Air Force. My fiance is now attending school in the service; if he marries, he could live off base, except for school hours. We've been going together for more than two, years, and have been engaged almost a year. We would like to get married now. What do you think of the plan?

Clarice

FIANCE'S YOUTH A DRAWBACK

ANSWER: The problem of service marriage will doubtless be with us for a long time, even though our country is not presently engaged in active fighting. Their success or failure depends pretty much on the same factors that make or mar any marriage—with additional complications. It's these extra involvements that must be considered in your case, Clarice, since you seem otherwise to have a very firm foundation for a good future. The chief drawback to your marriage lies in the youth of your fiance. The double responsibility of married life—and military obligations is about enough for most young folks, but he has the added burden of completing his education—and all at an age when one phase of living is enough to occupy a young man.

Two people of exceptional character, intellingence and emotional stability could make a go of the marriage you contemplate. Judging from your letter I'd say you had the required qualities; if your fiance is as well-balanced as you, there's a good chance for marital happiness, though a year's delay is advisable.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 14 years old, and in serious difficulty for my age. My boy friend, Dick, wants to drive his car wherever he goes, and troopers have stopped us twice because he's too young to drive. My parents don't know of this and Dick's folks seem to think it's all right for him to drive.

Marcia L.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: There's no compromising with right and wrong, Marcia. Both you and Dick fully realize, and have been officially told, that it's illegal for him to drive. time it's shanks mare for your a year or two, and in the meantime it"s shanks mare for your mode of transportation. If the boy is stubborn about the car, refuse to go with him and make it stick. Better a little difficulty with a headstrong lad now, than serious trouble later.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I have had 25 years of happy marriage. Recently a teen-age niece came to live with us while attending school in our town. My husband apparently is quite attracted to her and she does everything to encourage him. Before anything further develops, should I mention to my husband that I realize its seriousness—tell my niece, or her mother?

Nettie

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: If you can possibly find some practical reason why it is inconvenient for you to keep the girl with you, it would be a better way to handle the matter than to make an issue of it with either of the three persons you mentioned. They're quite likely to hoot the notion as a figment of your imagination.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: For several months I have been corresponding with a 39-year-old widow. I am 44 and a semi-invalid because of arthritis. She has asked me to visit her and I'm afraid if I tell her the truth, I'll lose her.

G. M.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Surely you realize how unfair you are to keep so important a fact from your correspondent. Perhaps you may lose her, but deceit won't hold her either. If you are unable to make the trip at all, let her know why. If you can travel, with difficulty, tell her that, too. Perhaps she'll decide to visit you instead.

City Employee 25 Years Retires

With the city's streets department for 25 years, Archie Ackison was presented by the employees of the board of works with a lounge chair at Foresters Hall, Bridgenorth, Friday night. They also paid their respect to Mrs. Ackison with the gift of an electric clock.

Mr. Ackison has been an employee of the board for 25 years. To most citizens he was unidentified as the operator of the department grader, removing the snow from the city streets during winter, and grading the new roads that have been opened. That detail of his work was especially evident and important during the last ten years of Peterborough's expansion through its former suburbs.

In spite of the rain, the social evening was attended by 50 of the city employees and their wives. The program included cards, dancing and refreshments.

No longer with the board of works, Mr. Ackison thanked his recent associates on behalf of Mrs. Ackison and himself for their kind remembrance, and for their friendly relations during a quarter century in the municipal service.

Two Injured In Collision

Two Havelock men were injured Monday evening about six miles south of Havelock on Highway 30 when the car in which they were driving went out of control and swerved into the ditch.

The driver of the car, a 1949 model, Reginald Pollock, of Havelock pulled out to pass a transport driven by Nicholls Pappas. The car skidded on the east shoulder of the road and then shot across the highway in front of the transport and came to rest in the ditch on the west side.

The shoulders of the highway were reported as being soft.

Injured were Bob Revoy who received eight stitches in the front of his head and William Buchanan, 18, with a chipped right elbow. Damage to the car was estimated at $200.

OPP Constable Doug Ross investigated.

Taylor Freed

"Once, On Monday, the 27th of April. He wanted some looking glasses put up and I helped him. We talked about fishing and I asked him about a job."

"Taylor also said he had played pool at the poolroom, next door to and overlooking, the north side of the second-hand store. But he said he was in the poolroom on the Monday—not the Wednesday and Thursday as Crown witnesses claimed.

(None of the Crown witnesses except Smith said they saw the accused man in Lakefield on Friday, the day of the assault and robbery.)

SALE OF FISH

Under cross-examination by Crown Attorney Bradshaw, Taylor accounted for the $31 in his wallet—earned he said between Monday, April 27, and Saturday, May 2—as follows fish sold to Braden Mann of Bridgenorth $3.50, fish sold to Harry McKnight of Peterborough $10, and fish sold to the Hollywood Cafe $10.

After May 1 he said he sold a total of $22 in fish to the Hollywood, Paris and DeLuxe restaurants.

Before giving his testimony on the selling of fish Taylor asked for the protection of the court. Selling of game fish is illegal.

Taylor also said that on May 1 the morning was clear and "the sun was up." Later, in rebuttal, crown Attorney Bradshaw put Chief Constable Price Morris of Lakefield in the witness box. Chief Morris, who keeps a dairy, said that the day was cloudy, windy and rainy.

"If it's raining in Lakefield it isn't necessarily raining in Curve Lake, isn't that right"? asked Mr. Fanjoy.

"That's right said Mr. Morris.

Mr. Fanjoy attacked the identification procedure of the Crown. Witnesses identified Taylor as the accused man sat in the prisoner's box, not from a lineup. On June 1, W. J. Arthur Fair, partner in law practice with Mr. Fanjoy, wrote Attorney a letter asking for a lineup.

Crown Attorney Bradshaw said there was a difficulty in getting a lineup of Indians of comparable size and age to the accused. And, in any case, the Crown is not bound to follow this method of identification.

When freed, Taylor had been in jail since May 13, the day he was arrested on the charge. He had been unable to raise $2,000 bail which was first asked, and he was still unable to raise it when it was lowered to $500. So he had to remain in custody for nearly four and a half months.

Pt. Arthur Man Faces Wife-Murder Charge

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — Arne Kautamaki, 25, Monday was charged with murder in the death of his wife on their farm at nearby Sunshine Monday.

Kautamaki was remanded for preliminary hearing. Police said they found his wife's body on the bed of their two-room home after neighbors told of a quarrel between the two in a steam bath on the property.

Murder Trial Set for November

STRATFORD (CP)—The murder trial of Reuben Henry Norman, charged in the daylight shooting of Jean Marie Satchell in Stratford last Feb. 2, was adjourned Monday until Nov. 9.

Mr. Justice R. A. Denis at opening of a Supreme Court session appointed John R. Stratton and his father K. R. Stratton as defence counsel, although the younger member of the firm protested that his appointment put him in am embarrassing position as he had already been retained by the dead girl's father to sue Norman.

Norman, a former Canadian Army paratrooper, was charged after witnesses said they saw him shoot down the 17-year-old girl as she walked along Wellington street in Stratford's business section.

Norman's family lives at Nithburg in North Easthope township, the Satchells live four or five miles away in Ellice township.

Last May a Supreme Court jury found Norman not mentally fit to stand trial. He has been in an Ontario hospital since. He was brought back to Perth county jail in Stratford about two weeks ago.

Hard Rock Miners' Strike Ties Up 70% Workers Shakes Timmins' Economy

More than 5,000 miners are on strike in the rich gold-mine areas in northern Ontario and in Quebec. The strike involves a big portion of Canada's $600,000,000 gold industry and more walkouts are possible. To find what the dispute is about The Canadian Press sent John LeBlanc, labor specialist on its Ottawa staff, on a tour of the troubled district. Here is his first article, a survey of the situation that has developed between union and management.

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP)—Along the Porcupine gold camp's 35 miles of picket lines, the hard-rock strikers are digging in for the cold weather.

Some of the 4,000 miners here have been on strike more than two months. Others, a matter of days. More walkouts are possible.

The developing tie-ups in the hard-rock areas straddling the northern Ontario - Quebec border point to a finish fight between Canada's biggest labor union and a hefty segment of the $600,000,000 gold industry.

It has been a long and expensive siege since the start July 11. Millions of dollars are at stake. Millions in production are being cut off. Other millions in wages are being passed up for the time.

Focus of the battle between the industry and the 75,000-member Canadian branch of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) is this town, circled by the head-frames of a dozen gold mines.

Nearby across the Quebec-Ontario border, union and company are staging a simultaneous stand in one of the country's biggest gold and base-metal mine - and - smelter operations.

POWERFUL COMBATANTS

Up against the steel union—Canada's best-heeled financially and most powerful labor body—are a dozen or so mining companies. They are largely guided from Toronto.

Seven of them have been tied up with production knocked out at all but one—the relatively small Broulan Reef here, which continues a partial operation peacefully after early violence.

This has chopped off more than 16 per cent of Canada's $150,000,000-a-year gold output. About 12 per cent of the country's copper production has been stopped at Rouyn-Noranda, Que.

In gold, the issues centre on wages, hours of work and the question of union "security."

What this may cost the companies is hard to calculate. The union itself has been throwing in more than $120,000 a month, largely in strike "benefits" to tide strikers and their families over the idle period.

With the addition to the strike list here of the 1,350-man McIntyre mine Sept. 22, and the 1,800-man Hollinger mine Sept. 24, the steelworkers' costs will jump sharply.

On the men's side, they are dropping more than $800,000 a month in wages both in this gold camp and in the gold-copper Noranda strike.

CHECKOFF ISSUE

The miners' demand for collection of union dues by the companies is one that has proved a stumbling block to the companies and union in getting down to brass tacks on wages. While the companies generally have said they can't afford to pay more wages, some of them would negotiate on this issue if the steel workers would drop the idea of having the dues "checkoff" conducted by the operators.

Under the checkoff system, in force through much of Canadian industry, a company deducts dues from the pay of union members—in some cases from all workers in the collective bargaining unit—and turns them over to the union.

In the current disputes, the majority reports of a series of conciliation boards have approved the checkoff. An exception was at Noranda, where the Quebec board turned it down.

Steelworkers' officials argue the checkoff is the mildest form of union "security." On this key issue, company officers say that the security of the union is not their concern and that if the workers won't pay dues spontaneously to the union, that is the union's concern.

Further, some of them point to the close association between the USWA and the socialist CCF, which is pledged to nationalize some basic industries.

William Mahoney, assistant national director of the union, says that concept is wrong.

"The checkoff as far as we are concerned is but a symbol of acceptance of the union," the burly young official said. "Union security is a basic issue, all right, but what the companies are doing is using it to try to chase the union out."

Leo (Buck) Behie, a former underground miner who now is area supervisor for the union, said in an interview that the companies are trying to use the workers in a "squeeze play" to get a higher price for gold.

Gold now must be sold to the mint at a fixed price of $35 an ounce U.S. funds, and that is one of the operators' arguments against higher base pay for miners now. They say the price puts them in a financial strait-jacket. The federal government pays subsidies to marginal mines whose production costs approach the mint price. The McIntyre mine here gets such "emergency" aid.

Despite company claims of inability to pay, majority findings of both Ontario and Quebec conciliation boards generally have recommended wage increases. Some of the boards split up widely on specific figures, but the average runs between seven and 10 cents an hour.

Base wage rates are around $1.05 an hour, depending on the mine, with some skilled workers making up to $1.70 and others working underground getting more on a contract basis depending on their production.

Union and companies split also on hours of work—the USWA wanting the 48-hour week cut to 40 hours—and on a miscellany of issues including paid holidays. McIntyre officials say these side benefits alone—disregarding wages—would cost the company about $1,300,000 a year.

Second-largest of the mines in the 50,000 - population Porcupine camp that sprawls around this bustling town—Hollinger is the biggest—McIntyre turns out about $7,000,000 worth of gold a year.

McIntyre's tie-up and the strike's extension to the Hollinger mine has intensified fears of the strike's impact on Timmins and the neighboring Porcupine communities. It leaves idle more than 70 per cent of the workers whose pay is the basis of the area's economy.

Besides the five Porcupine mines on strike, three others are strike prospects. If they went out, it would leave only about 1,400 miners employed in the district, out of 6,800.

Chamber of commerce officials say that would be "disastrous" and expressed fears of an emigration of workers.

The busy shopping district of this town of 28,000 shows little signs of a slump yet, but the merchants are getting worried. The strikers are getting $10 a week and up in union-paid benefits—depending on family size—but that's far down from the average $60 a week they get on payday in the mines.

Municipal authorities, too, are concerned. Some $500,000 in taxes are due Sept. 30, and receipts will take a nosedive unless work resumes.

EARLY CHRISTIAN ART REDISCOVERED—A young tenant of an old Milan, Italy, building looks at an old fresco which was recently discovered in the building's unused attic. Plaster crumbling off the walls led to the discovery of the well-preserved piece of art, showing Christ on the cross. Experts feel that the figure of Christ may be only part of a large fresco underneath the entire wall of the attic.

Gardiner Asks Trade Harmony

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP)—Agriculture Minister Gardiner of Canada Monday urged closer co-operation between the United States and Canada in setting up trade duties.

Gardiner suggested that international discussions on wheat and cattle between the two countries should produce satisfactory results.

He spoke at the annual convention of the National Association of Commissioners, Secretaries and Directors of Agriculture.

Gardiner described Canada's "seasonal duties" which rise or fall depending on the harvest season and other factors influencing the size of crops.

He said a similar arrangement might be made for exporting grain on a sectional basis.

"There might be an occasion where you would want oats in Maine and New York, but not in Illinois due to the large amount of corn in the midwest," he said.

Thanksgiving Service

APSLEY (ENS)—Thanksgiving service was held in Trinity United Church on Sunday evening. Members of the W.A. had decorated the church with fruit, vegetables, flowers and autumn leaves.

Keene Church Holds Anniversary Services

KEENE (ENS)—Large congregations observed anniversary services at Knox Presbyterian Church Sunday.

The church was beautifully decorated with baskets of gladioli, asters, zinnias and fall flowers. The morning service was conducted by the minister, the Rev. G. D. Smith and music supplied by the choir, with organist Mrs. Herb. Thompson.

Mr. Smith chose his text from Luke 23, verses 42 and 43, and also told a story to the children on the Memorial to John Knox, the great founder by Presbyterianism, and from whom Keene Church gets its name.

The evening service was also conducted by Mr. Smith, assisted by Rev. H. B. Herrington of Keene United Church. Music was supplied by the Junior Farmer's choir, with Miss M. Renwick at the organ. Two anthems were sung Mr. Smith chose his text from the Bible verse: "For the Lord will be your vanguard. The God of Israel will be your rear guard." He referred to life as a fight, a voyage and a march, with milestones hurrying by. It is a good thing to sit down and count our blessings. God closes one door and opens another.

Truck Hits Horse Driver Charged

CAMPBELLFORD — (ENS) — Twenty-nine-year-old Ray Dunn of RR 3, Havelock, has been charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident after his truck struck a horse a mile north of Stanwood, and nine miles north of this town on Friday night.

A truck driven by Kenneth Garfield Hill of RR 6, Brighton, was travelling south on a township road. A passenger in the truck, Marie Morrison, of the same address, was leading a horse by a rope out the right window of the vehicle.

A second light truck overtook the slow moving vehicle and the horse and in some manner the second truck struck the horse with its right front fender. The left front fender struck the rear of the first truck causing about $75 damage to each vehicle, and injuring the horse, but apparently not seriously.

Hill reported the accident to police, and said the driver did not stop. He gave police a good description of the wanted truck, and OPP Constable George Rose located the truck and driver early Saturday morning.

Dunn told police that he did stop at the scene of the accident and talked to the people in the other truck. A hub cap found at the scene of the accident matched those of the Dunn truck and one hub cap was missing from the left front wheel.
